Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES

OF THE

FOURTH SESSION OF THE SIXTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS

· OF

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

VOLUME LXIV-PART 5

FEBRUARY 23 TO MARCH 2, 1923

(Pgaes 4343-5246)

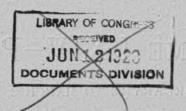

WASHINGTON GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE 1923

Jil set

POURTH SESSION OF THE

ROTATA CROPAL TEL

SURPLUS - 1 LIBRARY OF CONGRESS DUPLICATE

Congressional Record.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SIXTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS FOURTH SESSION.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, February 23, 1923.

(Legislative day of Monday, February 19, 1923.)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order previously entered, the Sergeant at Arms will clear the galleries and close the doors for the consideration of executive business.

The Senate thereupon proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 20 minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT.

While the doors were closed the following agreement was en-

It is agreed by manimous consent that at 6 o'clock p. m. to-day, the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow, and that immediately after the conclusion of the morning business the calendar, under Rule VIII, be called until 1 o'clock p. m. for the consideration of unobjected bills, beginning with Order of Business No. 1057, and that the motion to proceed to the consideration of the shipping bill (H. R. 12817) be considered as pending at the hour of 1 o'clock p. m. on to-morrow.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore announced his signature to the following enrolled bills, which had previously been signed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

S. 462. An act for the relief of Max B. Baldenburg;

S. S.I. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to make set-tlement with the lessees who erected buildings on a five-year lease on the zone at Camp Funston, Kans., and for other pur-

S. 1829. An act for the relief of Walter Runke;

S. 2563. An act to provide for the completion of the bridge across the Little Colorado River near Leupp, Ariz.;

S. 3350. An act for the relief of Alice M. Gorman;

8.3611. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to abrogate a contract lease of water power on the Muskingum River

S. 3614. An act relating to the official bond of the United States marshal for the southern judicial district of the State of

8.3690. An act for the relief of Lowe Hayden Bibby

S. 4061. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to enter into an agreement with Toole County irrigation district of Shelby, Mont., and the Cut Bank Irrigation district of Cut Bank, Mont., for the settlement of the extent of the priority to the waters of Two Medicine, Cut Bank, and Badger Creeks of the Indians of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation;

S. 4113. An act for the relief of Helene M. Layton;

S. 4187. An act to extend the time for payment of charges due on reclamation projects, and for other purposes;

S. 4310. An act for the relief of the owners of the steamship

S. 4311. An act for the relief of the owners of the steam lighter Comport;

S. 4333. An act for the relief of Howard R. Gurney;

S. 4358. An act to authorize the American Niagara Railroad Corporation to build a bridge across the Niagara River between the State of New York and the Dominion of Canada; S. 4411. An act granting the consent of Congress to the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., or either of them, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River in section 17, township 28 north, range 23 west of the fourth principal meridian, in the State of Minnesota; S. 4468. An act to authorize the coinage of 50 cent size.

S. 4468. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the settling of New Netherland, the Middle States, in 1624, by Walloons, French and Belgian Huguenots, under the Dutch West India Co.; and

S. 4522. An act authorizing the Secretary of State to convey certain land owned by the United States in Santiago, Chile, to the municipality of that city, and to acquire or receive in exchange therefor other land located in the said city.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. WARREN presented the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

THE STATE OF WYOMING, Office of the Secretary of State.

United States of America, State of Wyoming, ss:

State of Wyoming, ss:

I, F. E. Lucas, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of Enrolled Joint Memorial No. 1, House of Representatives of the Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, being original House Joint Memorial No. 5, has been carefully compared with the original filed in this office, and is a full, true, and correct transcript of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming. Done at Cheyenne, the capital, this 20th day of February, A. D. 1923.

[SEAL]

[SEAL.]

F. E. LUCAS, Secretary of State. By H. M. SYMONS, Deputy.

Enrolled Joint Memorial No. 1, House of Representatives, Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, memorializing Congress to hasten the enactment of the rural credits act and amend the farmer loan act.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring). That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

"Whereas there is a request from farmers and stockmen of Wyoming for a more adequate system of short-time credits and an increase of the Federal farm-loan limit among the farmers and stockmen of Wyoming; and

Federal farm-loan limit among the farmers and stockmen of wyoming and
"Whereas such adequate short-time credits and an increased loan limit of the Federal farm loan act would be of immense value to the farmers and stockmen of Wyoming: Therefore be it
"Resolved, That the Congress of the United States is hereby urged to secure the passage of laws providing adequate rural credits by providing short-term credits and by increasing the loan limit of the Federal farm loan act from $10,000 to $25,000.
"Resolved, That a certified copy of this joint memorial be forwarded at once to our United States Senators, Francis E. Warren and John B. Kendrick, and our Representative in Congress, Frank W. Mondell."
J. D. Noblitt, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
S. Skovgard, President of the Senate.

Approved 3.30 p. m., February 12, 1923. WILLIAM B. Ross, Governor.

Mr. WARREN presented the following joint memorials of the Legislature of Wyoming, which were referred to the Com-mittee on Irrigation and Reclamation:

THE STATE OF WYOMING, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, 88:

I, F. E. Lucas, secretary of state of wyoming, ss.

I, F. E. Lucas, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of enrolled senate joint memorial No. 2, of the Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, being original senate joint memorial No. 2, has been carefully compared with the original filed in this office and is a full, true, and correct transcript of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Done at Cheyenne, the capital, this 20th day of February, A. D. 1922.

F. E. LUCAS,

Secretary of State,
By H. M. SYMONS, Deputy.

By H. M. Symons, Deputy.

Enrolled joint memorial No. 2, senate, Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming (Senate joint memorial No. 2), memorializing Congress and the Secretary of the Interior to expedite the construction of the Guernsey, Wyo., storage and power dam.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Wyoming (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States and the Secretary of the Interior be memorialized as follows:

"Whereas an appropriation amounting to $1,420,000 has been made by the Congress of the United States for the carrying on of the work on the North Platte project in Wyoming and Nebraska, with allotments to be made by the Reclamation Service for the various works of this project, of which the Guernsey, Wyo., storage and power dam is a part; and

"Whereas this dam is deemed an important feature as a means of water storage and power which will greatly enhance development of the State of Wyoming, furnish water for the further irrigation within Wyoming, and power to develop its natural resources; and "Whereas it is understood that an allotment of but $5,000 has been made for the fiscal year from said appropriation for this unit, and it has been understood that assurances have heretofore been given that construction of said dam would proceed under said appropriation during the present year: Now, therefore, be it "Resolved, That in justice to the State of Wyoming a reasonable amount of this appropriation for the fiscal year be allotted to the Guerisey Dam and made available for immediate use in the matter of actual construction work; and be it further "Resolved, That the senate of the Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming (the house of representatives concurring), do hereby strongly urge that such allotment be made with a view of active construction of the said Guernsey Dam be commenced without further delay, and that a copy of these resolutions be submitted to the Interior Department of the United States, to the United States Reclamation Service, to Senator F. E. Warren, and to Senator John B. Kendrick, and to the Hon. Frank W. Mondell."

8. Skovgard,

S. Skovgard,
President of the Senate,
J. D. Noblitt,
Speaker of the House.

Approved, 9.12 a. m., February 6, 1923:

WILLIAM B. Ross, Governor.

THE STATE OF WYOMING, Office of the Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, 88:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, ss:

I, F. E. Lucas, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of enrolled senate joint memorial No. 4, of the Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, being original senate joint memorial No. 1, has been carefully compared with the original filed in this office, and is a full, true, and correct transcript of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Done at Cheyenne, the capital, this 20th day of February, A. D. 1923.

[SEAL.]

F. E. LUCAS, Secretary of State, By H. M. SYMONS, Deputy.

Enrolled joint memorial No. 4, senate, Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, memorializing Congress to liberalize repayment requirements under the Federal reclamation act.

requirements under the Federal reclamation act.

Whereas it appears conclusively that a considerable majority of unit holders on the Shoshone and North Platte United States reclamation projects in Wyoming are now and will continue to be unable to meet present statutory requirements for repayment of project costs; and Whereas, due largely to adverse agricultural and economic conditions, a majority of unit holders on these Wyoming projects are unavoidably delinquent in relation to payment of current operation and maintenance charges; and

Whereas the Federal reclamation act and acts amendatory thereof impose penalties ranging from 6 to 12 per cent per annum on such delinquent construction and operation and maintenance cost payments; and whereas the French recumation and maintenance cost payments; and the construction and operation and maintenance cost payments; and whereas by reason of conditions herein set forth large numbers of unit holders have been obliged to dispose of their equities at great loss to themselves, and unless substantial and immediate relief is afforded an increasing number of unit holders on these Wyoming projects must inevitably be forced in the future to sacrifice the fruit of substantial investments and many years of hard labor; and whereas the entire scheme or policy of Frederal reclamation will be greatly advanced by proper treatment of unit holders already on Federal reclamation project lands: Now therefore be it Resolved by the Senate of the State of Wyoming (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized to enact legislation the purpose of which shall be:

(a) To provide additional time for the repayment of construction and operation and maintenance charges to the United States,

(b) For the withdrawing of public-land notices announcing the dates and time for the commencement of payment of construction and operation and maintenance charges on reclamation projects; crediting construction charges already paid to delinquent operation and maintenance charges; reducing the penalty for delinquent repayments from 12 to 6 per cent per annum; providing that no public notices be reissued until the Secretary of the Interior by a commission determines through investigations held on the projects the financial and economic conditions of the farm units, and recommends the date on which public notices shall be issued.

(c) That the time of repayment of construction charges as provided for in the reclamation extension act be extended to not less than 40 years, that lands be classified as to producing value, and that the period of repayment be graduated and based upon said classification; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to Senator Francis E. Wanren, Senat

Approved 8.43 p. m., February 8, 1923: WILLIAM B. Ross, Governor.

Mr. WARREN presented a resolution adopted by the Government Club, of New York, N. Y., favoring the erection in the city of Washington of a national archives building, which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. KENDRICK presented a joint memorial of the Legis lature of Wyoming, memorializing Congress to hasten the en-

Interior to expedite the construction of the Guernsey (Wyo.) Storage and Power Dam, and also to liberalize repayment requirements under the Federal reclamation act, which were referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

[Note.—These memorials are identical with those previously presented by Mr. WARREN, which are printed.]

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a petition of sundry members of the Friends in Council, a woman's club of Monroe, Mich, favoring an amendment to the Constitution governing the passage of legislation regulating child labor, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WILLIS presented a resolution of Cincinnatus Council No. 31, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, of Cincinnati, Ohlo, favoring the more adequate restriction of immigration, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. LADD presented a memorial of the Bismarck Trades & Labor Assembly, of Bismarck, N. Dak., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called ship subsidy bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial, numerously signed, of members of the Powers Lake National Farm Loan Association, of Powers Lake, N. Dak., remonstrating against amending the Constitution so as to make the income of bonds issued by Federal and joint-stock land banks subject to State taxation, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMISSION ON POSTAL SERVICE (S. DOC. NO. 306).

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Joint Commission on the Postal Service, submitted, pursuant to law, a report relative to methods and systems of handling, dispatching, transporting, and delivering the mails (with an appendix), which was ordered to be printed.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on February 23, 1923, they presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills: S. 462. An act for the relief of Max B. Baldenburg;

S. 851. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to make settlement with the lessees who erected buildings on a five-year lease on the zone at Camp Funston, Kans., and for other purposes;

S. 1829. An act for the relief of Walter Runke; S. 2563. An act to provide for the completion of the bridge across the Little Colorado River near Leupp, Ariz.;

S. 3350. An act for the relief of Alice M. Gorman; S. 3611. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to abrogate a contract lease of water power on the Muskingum River;

S. 3614. An act relating to the official bond of the United States marshal for the southern judicial district of the State of

New York;

S. 3690. An act for the relief of Lowe Hayden Bibby;

S. 4061. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to enter into an agreement with Toole County irrigation district, of Shelby, Mont., and the Cut Bank irrigation district, of Cut Bank, Mont., for the settlement of the extent of the priority to the waters of Two Medicine, Cut Bank, and Badger Creeks, of the Indians of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation;

S. 4113. An act for the relief of Helene M. Layton;

S. 4187. An act to extend the time for payment of charges due on reclamation projects, and for other purposes:

S. 4310. An act for the relief of the owners of the steamship

S. 4311. An act for the relief of the owners of the steam lighter Comport;

S. 4333. An act for the relief of Howard R. Gurney; S. 4358. An act to authorize the American Niagara Railroad Corporation to build a bridge across the Niagara River between the State of New York and the Dominion of Canada;

S. 4411. An act granting the consent of Congress to the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., or either of them, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River in section 17, township 28 north, range 23 west of the fourth principal meridian, in the State of Minnesota; S. 4468. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the settling of New Netherland, the Middle States, in 1624, by Walloons, French and Belgian Huguenots, under the Dutch West farm loan act, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also presented two joint memorials of the Legislature of Wyoming, memorializing Congress and the Secretary of the

Wyoming, memorializing Congress and the Secretary of the Tools, French and Belgian Haguetos, under the Dutch West India Co.; and

S. 4522. An act authorizing the Secretary of State to convey certain land owned by the United States in Santiago, Chile, to the municipality of that city, and to acquire or receive in exchange therefor other land located in the said city.

AMENDMENT TO DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TOWNSEND submitted an amendment providing for salary increases to certain employees in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, intended to be proposed by him to the amendment heretofore submitted by Mr. Moses, proposing to increase the salaries of certain committee employees and clerks to Senators and intended to be proposed to House bill 14408, the third deficiency appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12817) to amend and supplement the merchant marine act, 1920, and for

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Jer-

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I desire to state—
Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President—
Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I yield to the Senator from Iowa,
Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I am ontitled to the floor at this tim Mr. BROOKHART. I am entitled to the floor at this time, but an arrangement has been made whereby I may yield to the Senator from New Jersey without losing the floor, and I am willing to do that.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, understand-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By common understanding of the Senate, the Senator from Iowa will be recognized upon the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I understand this to be the situation: Last night there was an understanding that the Senator from Iowa should continue his speech this morning. him if he would yield to me for a short time in order that I might make some remarks on the pending motion. me if I would speak to the chairman of the Committee on Commorce, the Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones], who is in charge of the ship subsidy bill, and ascertain if he would object to his assuming the floor immediately after the conclusion of my remarks. I understand that the Senator from Washington made no objection to that arrangement. I also understand that the Senator from Iowa will be allowed to continue his remarks after I shall have finished.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I think in view of the statement just made by the Senator from New Jersey, I ought to say that I knew nothing of any understanding to the effect that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Brookhart] was to have the floor this morning. I understood that last night he had completed one speech; and then, after motions to adjourn and other motions, the Senate finally concluded its session. However, I have no objection whatever to the Senator from Iowa being considered as having the floor and yielding to the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the Senate has agreed to that order, and, therefore, it will be

Mr. FLETCHER. There might be a question, the Senate having taken a recess while a Senator was on the floor, whether he was entitled to resume where he was interrupted.

Mr. BROOKHART. I am entitled to the floor to conclude the speech which I was making on yesterday, for I did not then conclude.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the Senate has by unanimous consent agreed that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Brookhart] may yield to the Senator from New Jersey, and that on the conclusion of the remarks by the latter the Senator from Iowa will be entitled to the floor.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I desire to address the Senate at this time on the pending motion of the Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] to take up the ship subsidy I do not care to become a party in any manner whatsoever to the filibuster that is now going on to prevent the consideration of the bill. I am heartily in favor of the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, in view of my statement that I do not wish to aid or assist those who are delaying the consideration of the ship subsidy bill, I must, for the time being, refuse to be interrupted except for questions.

My interest in the bill is due to the fact that my State is a maritime State and is deeply concerned in the maintenance of a merchant marine, which is most important, not alone to the shipping interests in the State but also for the maintenance of shipyards.

I do not think the bill is a bill to aid private shipping interests. as I shall try to show in the remarks which I shall make, but it is a bill to aid the many thousand workers in my State who are now employed in the dozen or more shipyards which are engaged in repairing ocean-going ships; shipyards that depend entirely not upon shipbuilding, for that industry has ceased, but upon the repair and reconstruction of ships which are now under the American flag Notwithstanding the fact that I am termed a "lame duck," I still, until March 4 next, represent in part a sovereign State in the Senate, and I shall, therefore, speak for her interests, challenging the right of anyone to deny me that privilege.

Mr. President, we have heard a great deal of oratory on the subject of the merchant marine and the pending bill. With the exception of speeches by those closely in touch with the bill, little of it has been really informative. I purpose to take a very brief interval of the Senate's time to state to this body the actual situation, stripped of sectional or party considerations and reduced to cold businesslike facts, facts which can not be challenged by any Senator and which, I believe, the people of this country have not had brought home to them.

Senators on the other side of the Chamber have frequently reiterated that the present measure in ald of the American merchant marine has been repudiated by the people of the United States in the recent elections. It is impossible that the people of the United States can have passed intelligently upon a question in regard to which they were wholly dependent upon statements made to them by others, who themselves can hardly have imparted clear information because of their own lack of understanding.

In the first place, we have certain statutes passed by recent Congresses with regard to our merchant marine. The most important of these, from the standpoint of the difficult conditions created thereby, is section 7 of the Jones Act of 1920. This section provides that the Shipping Board shall establish and maintain desirable trade routes to different parts of the world from different ports of the United States. The theory of this section is that after the routes have been built up by the Government, private capital will step in and buy the ships operating on such routes. In practice this has not so far been realized. The losses on these routes, due to the higher cost of operating American flag ships, are such as effectually to discourage private capital from taking them over. The Shipping Board, therefore, has had to continue at public expense the maintenance of these services.

Although every route is losing money, in spite of the great increase of efficiency since the present Shipping Board took office, I may call especial attention to the routes running out of southern ports. One of the arguments for section 7 of the Jones Act was that it would make possible the breaking up of the so-called monopoly alleged to be enjoyed by New York. idea was to build up the outports, to establish lines from the various harbors of the United States, so that there should be no "bottle neck" in our traffic.

Under section 7 the United States Government is obliged to bear the necessary losses involved in the building up of these southern ports. In other words, this section provides nothing more or less than a subsidy to ports of the United States, of which probably the South Atlantic and the Gulf ports will benefit the most

The distinguished Senator from Louisiana [Mr. RANSDELL], who is so ably supporting this bill, clearly perceived years ago the need of diversifying our commercial outlets. His State, being not only a seaboard State but containing the mouth of a magnificent river system tapping the entire central basin of the United States, should naturally take the lead in recognizing its dependence upon shipping. But Louisiana is not alone in this regard. Other States have splendid harbors and large po-tential interests in shipping. It is amazing to see the Sena-tors on the other side of the Chamber, especially those coming from the seacoast States of the South, fighting so effectively against their own interests in opposing a measure that will make possible the continuance of the services out of their districts which have been established by the Shipping Board, and whose losses must be met from the Public Treasury.

If the Senators from States of the North Atlantic should oppose this measure, those of the country who were informed could, and doubtless would, raise the charge that the great seaports of that coast were jealous of building up possible rivals on the South Atlantic or the Gulf. But the opposition comes from those who are most directly benfited, and who, if they succeed in blocking the present measure, should in all justice go back to their constituents and assume full responsibility for making impossible the establishment of privately owned steamship lines from the ports of their State.

Let me take a few minutes and read to you the services which the country is maintaining out of ports in the Democratic strongholds:

From the South Atlantic there are maintained lines to Germany, to United Kingdom ports, and to Antwerp-Rotterdam range. These are direct services. In addition, these other lines, both northbound and southbound, call when occasion offers at South Atlantic ports. From the Gulf there are maintained four services to the United Kingdom, three to Antwerp-Rotterdam, three to Hamburg-Bremen, two to French Atlantic ports, two to the east coast of South America, two to western Mediterranean ports, one to Spanish Atlantic ports, one to eastern Mediterranean ports, one to the Orient, and one to the West Indies. In these services there are employed 139 steamers, aggregating 1,186,853 dead-weight tons.

South Carolina has allocated to the port of Charleston 15,680 tons of Shipping Board vessels; Florida has, based upon Tampa, 185,474 tons; Alabama has, operating out of Mobile, 195,642 tons; Texas, out of Galveston, has 507,433 tons; and New Orleans has 282,574 tons. This is some measure of the interest of southern ports in American shipping, and particularly in Government aid, because all these services are operated at a loss, and are impossible of maintenance except at Government expense.

I am not entirely convinced that it is possible to deflect the natural channels of trade except at enormous cost. I am not convinced that the operation of many of these costly lines will lead to any permanent result; but I am heartily in accord with the experiment, and I should be willing to support any measure which will improve commercial facilities anywhere in the United States, and hence will increase the general prosperity of the country as a whole. Certainly I should not, even coming as I do from a region where there is no lack of shipping facilities, vote for anything which would tend to discontinue these laboriously built-up services; for, make no mistake, gentlemen of the opposition, you are voting to discontinue these services when you block Government aid to the merchant marine. If these routes are to be maintained, the Federal Treasury must bear the loss, for I assume that your local communities will not do so themselves. The only question is, What will be the most economical way to absorb this loss?

One of the criticisms by the opponents of the bill has been against any encouragement to the larger combined passenger-cargo ships.

What increase in the rate of compensation for faster ships the bill as it is now written contains is practically limited to the needs of liquidating our Shipping Board fleet. This fleet contains, exclusive of the single mammoth Leviathan, a number of combination ships carrying passengers and a large amount of cargo at a higher speed than the ordinary freight ship. It is such ships, for example, that carry the extensive commerce in provisions and dairy produce that we enjoy with Europe. It is such ships that carry large quantities of grain to England and to Germany.

The board has approximately 350,000 tons of such ships, excluding the smaller ex-German vessels. The rate allowed them is only in proportion to their greatly increased differential in operating cost caused by the larger crews that they require. Such ships not only form the backbone of a merchant marine, but would be invaluable in time of war as naval auxiliaries to supplement the very inadequate cruiser strength of our Navy or for transporting troops.

The administration has proposed, after long and careful consideration, a method which, it considers, offers the greatest return for the least expenditure of public funds. In proposing this measure, the President demanded that criticism of it should be constructive and not destructive, and that objectors should offer a workable substitute. So far, we have had a wealth of destructive criticism, but the only alternative that has been offered is Government ownership.

It is in my mind that the United States during a recent administration embarked rather extensively upon Government ownership, and continued this ownership long after any war conditions which might possibly have justified it. We had Government ownership of railroads, of express companies, and of ocean cables, in addition to the enormous Government shipbuilding program and the Government-owned fleet, which is the problem before us. I do not know whether anyone will ever be able to tell us how much our brief experiment in Government ownership cost us, both in dollars and cents and in deterioration of services. I can say that the country was heartily sick of it. I believe I can say that if any opponent of the present measure had gone before his constituents and had told them that the choice lay between the present measure and permanent Government ownership, they would have unhesitatingly indorsed any step which would get the Government out of private business and keep it out.

During the war many nations adopted, or were forced into, a policy of partial Government ownership of shipping. Great Britain, the canniest and wisest of the maritime nations, adopted it with most hesitation and got out of it quickest and best. She placed her Government fleet in the hands of a shipping man—horrible thought!—and this man sold all the ships and realized good prices with an overhead expense amounting to one-eighth of 1 per cent of the amount realized, and with only one instance where a purchase was not completed. France followed suit in acquiring a Government merchant marine. Now they are selling their ships to private French shipowners upon a flexible price and deferred payment plan. Canada contracted the fever and built a fleet of 64 ships. All but about 30 of these ships are now laid up. Even so, Canada managed to lose last year approximately $9,000,000 on this relatively insignificant fleet. Australia was another advocate of government ownership. Her fleet was even smaller than Canada's, but her losses have been staggering in proportion to the tonnage.

One of the pathetically false beliefs of the country is that the war gave us a merchant marine. It is true that after 50 years of utter neglect we suddenly threw ourselves into the work of building, overnight, a stupendous fleet. Faced with a disastrous world situation, we entered into war on the side of the right. We found that without the shlps we had so long scorned to provide for we were as helpless as infants. We could not transport our troops nor feed them after they were transported.

With money lavishly expended—more than $3,000,000,000 of the bonds we now are paying interest on—with the full power of the Government and the people entering into the task, none of the ships contracted for by the board was completed in time to be of use in the war. The fleet we finally achieved included too many of one type, and many of them, due to the haste with which they were built, were of little value.

After the ships were put on the sea there were no records to show the financial relationship between the operators and the Government. Many thousands of voyages were made without the slightest accounting. It was not until the Sixty-sixth Congress had come into power and expressed a vigorous intention of opening the books that an accounting drive was instituted. As a result, 29,500 accounts were found bringing in a revenue of $472,000,000.

Vessels were allocated by the previous Shipping Board to organizations incapable and unfitted to handle them. Ships were operated to meet political and sectional demands, instead of the channels of trade. We never will know what this period of government in business cost us. No adequate records were ever kept. We only know that we paid enough for our lack of a merchant marine to have subsidized an American fleet, at the maximum rate provided in this bill, for a century.

I will take the time here to mention the experience we had during the Spanish-American War, when ships were needed in order to transport our troops to Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines. We had no ships under the American flag efficiently equipped for transport service. We had no ships to carry supplies to Cuba. We went in the open market and bought ships flying the British and the Scandinavian flags, and paid for them five times what they were worth.

We all lauded the heroism of Commander Hobson when he sunk the Merrimac in the Santiago Channel. We all boasted of his heroism, and he was praised from one end of this great country to the other for his heroic exploit, but we failed to call attention to the fact that the Merrimac which he sunk in the channel of Santiago had been an old wreck off the Virginia coast, sold by private interests to the Government of the United States for $350,000, and that all that wreck cost the ship owners was $70,000, plus a paltry sum of about $50,000 to put her in condition. We did not learn the lesson in the Spanish-American War of the need of a merchant marine as an auxiliary to our Navy for national defense.

Mr. CARAWAY. May I interrupt the Senator? Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I yield for a question.

Mr. CARAWAY. If the shipping bill had not been filibustered to death in 1915, we would have had some ships, would we not?

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I am not indulging in a partisan discussion. This question is not a partisan question. I am pointing out the impotency of our policy as a nation in not providing a merchant marine, even at that time.

I care not the source of the opposition, whether it comes from this side of the Chamber or the other; I have nothing but condemnation for any American statesman who opposes Government aid or assistance in order that we might have that essential arm for national defense, a proper merchant marine, and that our commerce should not hereafter stop at the water's edge. Continuing the subject I was discussing, worst of all the ships we possess will form, unless aid is extended to make their purchase and private operation possible, a liability rather than an asset. We have reduced the Government fleet to the minimum necessary to maintain our trade routes. Yet we are losing $50,000,000 a year on this skeleton fleet. Every year these losses will increase as the ships get older. Eventually the fleet will be worn out and America will be again supine at sea.

When the emergency of the Spanish War came our Government was at its wit's end to provide ships. We paid 50 per cent more than their value for some we had to get from the British. I recollect that one of these was a vessel upon which I went with my military unit to Porto Rico. It was not in very excellent condition. It was the transport Massachusetts, bought from under the American flag, and we loaded 1,000 American troops on that vessel with 1,000 horses. It was not in fit condition. It was turned over hastily after carrying its cattle trade to Europe. The converted cruiser St. Paul was supposed to protect us, but did not convoy us any farther than outside the harbor at Newport News. Cervera's squadron was in the vicinity. little more Spanish vigilance and the Senate would now be without the able services of the distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], who was also on his way to help crumple the Empire of Spain, as well as those of the senior Senator from New Jersey.

When the World War was thrust upon us and found us totally unprepared for such an emergency the nations that had carried our cargoes, principally Great Britain, were engaged elsewhere, and while we remained neutral we saw the vessels of those nations sunk by the hundreds by the submarines. We found our selves helpless because we had no self-reliant, independent, aggressive national merchant marine. Our condition was such as to remind us bitterly of the absence of a national pride which had permitted the greatest marine in the world to fall to the weakest. Then, when the desperate need of ourselves and our allies was upon us, after the war we pile billion upon billion in an effort to build merchant fleets which would be capable of serving our military necessities and our commerce. We built ships until we had 16,040,000 dead-weight tons.

That was at the close of the greatest conflict in history. We were enthusiastic about our marine. High wages were paid. Materials were rushed to the shipyards on priority orders. Competition was keen for the reputation of turning out the largest tonnage. We had the mighty purpose of defeating the Germans. and beat them we did, but after we had chased them beyond the Rhine and the armistice had been signed we forgot all about our marine. Great strings of merchantmen, built at enormous cost during the war, still lie off the coast and up the Hudson River. There they slowly deteriorate and help to run up a maintenance bill of $50,000,000 a year for the Government of the United

In view of the attitude of the Democratic Party in this debate to the bill now under consideration, I can not refrain from quoting its declaration in its last national platform of 1920. It says:

We desire to congratulate the American people upon the rebirth of our national marine, which once more maintains its former place in the world. It was under a Democratic administration that this was accomplished after 70 years of indifference and neglect, 13,000,000 tons having been constructed since the act was passed in 1916. We pledge the policy of our party to the continued growth of our merchant marine under proper legislation, so that American products will be carried to all parts of the world by vessels, built in American yards, flying the American flag.

I ask you Senators across the aisle whether this promise was mere buncombe such as the promise of 1912 to reduce the cost of living and the promise of 1916 to keep us out of war, or whether this was some nobler impulse which passed away long before this present opportunity to fulfill the promise presented itself. Your great commoner of sainted memory, William Jennings Bryan, has stated that—the Representative who secures office on a platform and then betrays the people who elected him is a criminal worse than he who embezzles

If you hesitate at the establishment of a subsidy, stop and think of the subsidy of two and a half billions which was exacted of the taxpayers of the country for the construction of the merchant fleets of which you beast in your platform above the billion of real value in them; not the billion of real value; the $750,000,000 of real value, because they have depreciated to that extent. Think of the fact that that subsidy was exacted in time of stress because we had failed to provide such fleets reasonable encouragement before the emergency arose. Think of the subsidies of $238,000,000 we have voted to pay in the last 10 years for river and harbor improvements. Think of the subsidies of $300,000,000 we have voted to pay for good roads for the benefit of the farmers. Think of the subsidy of fight out with her in a friendly way the issue of which is to the development of 200,000,000 acres of the public domain for the benefit of the prosperous farmers who now occupy them. Think of the $30,000,000 appropriated annually as a subsidy to the farmers for eradicating plant and cattle diseases. Think of the subsidies contained in the rural free delivery and the weather and crop reports sent out by radio. Think of the subsidies contained in the land grants to railroads, which helped to build up our country to its present opulence. Think of the $30,000,000 a year paid in mail subsidy every year for the benefit of magazines and farm publications in order that they may spread practical information and publish high ideals to our tillers of the soil.

Without such a subsidy of four to thirty millions of dollars a year what will you do with our ships? How will you explain to the American people your failure to vote to take advantage of the possibilities for the development of our commerce and our prosperity?

There is another consideration, too, which ought to have much weight, and that is the need of national economy. If we now spend fifty millions each year of the money of the people to maintain in idleness a vast array of merchantmen, should we not, in all common sense, reduce the amount to from four to thirty millions per year in an effort to extend and make active those fleets in order to stimulate and carry our ocean-going commerce? Surely they are quite as necessary as battle-ships in the upbuilding of American commerce and prosperity.

Mr. President, I think the past history of our merchant marine fleet shows we made a great effort, but we can not fail to recall the mistakes when we realize the controversy between Mr. Denman and Colonel Goethals as to whether we should build wooden ships or not. I am not criticizing the final policy decided upon, that we should build wooden ships, but I point to the fact that we were unprepared at that time, that we did not know, and that we invested $300,000,000 of the taxpayers' money in worthless wooden ships, which were a total loss, and which had to be sold for $750,000. That is a reflection upon American statesmanship and American vision. If, during this history of failure, we had taken $10,000,000 and applied it to an annual subsidy, we would have entered the war with Germany with a greater fleet of merchantmen than any other country had.

Turn your eyes across the sea and observe how our great trade rivals conduct this vital business.

METHODS OF BRITISH COMPETITION.

The British Board of Trade, similar to our Department of Commerce, with the head of it sitting in the cabinet of the prime minister, appoints assistants who have all to do with shipping. This is a bureau with sufficient authority to shift to changing conditions. It comprises the functions which in this country are widely and unsatisfactorily distributed over the Bureau of Navigation, the Steamboat Inspection Service, the Treasury Department, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, the Immigration Service, the Department of Justice, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, and the Tariff Commission, few of which have any correlation to the others. Besides this, the British Board of Trade frequently enacts what is known as an order in council, and as a matter of fact it functions legislatively. reality an arbitrary ruling sanctioned by law. It is a sort of cracker on the whip of English jurisprudence. Just as the first-class mule skinner in our western country will be able to take his whip and fleck a fly from off his leaders with great detriment to the fly and none to the leaders, so the British trade official with his order in council is able to destroy competition without injury to British interests anywhere, while apparently actually conforming to law.

With some of these orders in council which we considered a little too arbitrary for our national patience to bear we had something to do about the year 1812. Measures were introduced in our Congress in 1916 for the protection of our fishing interests in the Northwest from absorption by Canada through the operation of Canadian orders in council and their interpretation, which were brought into question. A repre-sentative of the American fishing industry discussed the subject with the supervising Canadian officer and told him that the orders were unfair in that they were interpreted differently for Americans than for British subjects. The American pro-tested. The Canadian's reply was, "Well, you must remember that these orders in council are made for the protection of Canadian and British subjects. If you want any protection you will have to go to your own country and have a law passed."

ENGLAND OUR RIVAL

gain the greater portion of the commerce of the world. the calendar year 1920 her imports amounted to $9,425,154,536, as compared to $5,279,398,211 for the United States. exports totaled $7,581,874,259, as against $8,228,759,748 for us. These figures tell a remarkable story of the resuscitation of British commerce, which the peoples around the earth had gained the impression had been practically eliminated by the German submarines. The British do not sleep. Commerce is life and prosperity to a nation, and England never forgets that the chief safeguards of its maintenance are a superior merchant marine and the greatest of navies.

While we have been blowing our horn and wasting money England has silently, but none the less surely, been rehabilitating her merchant marine, which she considers vital to her future. We read all through the war of British ships being sunk by submarines day by day. We read that her total had descended to something like 8,000,000 tons. We said to ourselves, "It will be a long time before England regains her place in merchant ships on the sea." The Germans were delighted at the prospect of the ultimate success of their hellish work. United States then stepped in and saved the cause of civilization, and incidentally of the British Empire. And the day the armistice was signed our English cousins across the sea hardly waited for the formalities of the peace before they turned to the great task of regaining her maritime supremacy. They had a national policy-that England must be supreme on the sea. They maintained a merchant marine in peace and did not have to squander money in an emergency to obtain one. ships they built to replace their losses were built without waste and extravagance; their builders and their labor people got together; the Government put all of its strength into the task. And what is the stupendous result? The total tonnage of Great Britain is now 20,582,000, as compared to 20,523,000 in 1914. It is now 20,582,000, as compared to 16,049,000 for the United States, of which figure nearly half is composed of the Shipping Board tonnage whose problem we are facing now.

I do not believe in having the Government engage in commercial business; I believe in restricting the Government to its proper field, that of governing. But, of all businesses, it is difficult to imagine one in which a government is less fitted to engage than that of ocean shipping. This is an occupation which requires sound judgment, instant decision, splendid imagination, and great initiative. It is a semispeculative industry which can be governed by no set of rules or procedure. To attempt to operate a fleet of our ships in competition with foreign fleets while hampered by the red tape and the system of checks with which we very properly surround our govern-mental administration is an utter impossibility.

I have pointed out that the present policy of the Shipping Board in carrying out the provisions of section 7 of the Jones Act is a subsidy to the various seaports from which Government lines are maintained. I do not need to point out that by maintaining these Government services at a huge annual loss the exporter and the importer are assured reasonable rates and adequate carriage. In other words, the maintenance of this fleet is, in effect, a subsidy to our foreign trade.

My friends from the interior districts feel that the farmer is not interested in a merchant marine. I do not believe for one moment that an American farmer, if he is given facts, will take any such view. The farmer knows that he must export approximately 30 per cent of his production or his local prices will be broken by the unmarketable surplus. The farmer knows that his return from his crop is intimately dependent upon adequate and reasonable transportation to his markets. tinguished senior Senator from Idaho stated on this floor less than two months ago:

Our markets in Europe are indispensable to the prosperity of the American producer. We sell from 23 to 25 per cent of our wheat abroad. Unless that amount finds a market, it is impossible for the American farmer to realize a price which will justify his raising the wheat. (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, December 27.)

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President— Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I yield for a question.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. If the Senator will permit me, I think I ought to correct his impression of the western farmer. The western farmer is highly pleased with the success of a mer-chant marine built by the Government, which has resulted in giving him very much lower freight rates on the ocean at the same time that freight rates on land by private ownership have greatly increased. The one thing of which the American farmer is now getting the benefit is very low ocean freight, and that would not be possible if the Government had not built the ships.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. The Senator does not see the other side of the picture, the fact that the shipping operations were carried on during the previous administration at a cost of about $360,000,000 a year, which is uneconomic. The only way in which we can have ocean freight rates is to continue the industry by governmental assistance to private owners and have sufficient ships so that competition will be keen and the low rates will be maintained and avoid the tremendous taxation involved through Government ownership, which the farmer inevitably pays

Mr. HITCHCOCK. The Senator does not question the fact that everything now is costing the farmer more than it did before the war except ocean freight?

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I question the fact that the American farmer in any district of the United States wants Government ownership at a high cost to the taxpayer, of which he himself is one.

The Budget of the United States provides for $100,000,000 a year in Federal aid to highways, so that, among other things, farm products may be trucked easily to points of shipment or consumption. The regulation of the railroads themselves has been the subject for heated debate and occupies many pages of the RECORD. The farmer is interested in highways and in railroads because they are tangible and he sees them. Ships and the oceans are not under his eye. They are miles away from him. But he is keenly conscious of the importance of the whole chain of transportation to his markets, and when he realizes that sea transportation is a vital link in this chain no farmer will question for a moment his deep and immediate interest in shipping. Here again the farmer has not been given the facts.

During the war the shipper to Russia, France, and England was compelled to pay excessive freight rates, or his efforts to find a market met with failure by reason of the lack of ocean tonnage facilities.

Thus the cotton shipper was compelled to submit to the absolute control of England, who allocated all tonnage facilities for the shipment of cotton, and thereby not only controlled its shipment but its distribution as well.

We are proposing a measure which we believe will create an American merchant marine, even more vital to the farmer than are the railroads. The latter are wholly within the country and easily subject to governmental regulation, but no branch of the Government of the United States can regulate rates charged by foreign-flag vessels, nor insist that they maintain services adequate to meet the needs of American shippers. Regulation of ocean commerce comes through competition, and then only in normal times.

We have provided in this measure that compensated ships must operate out of American ports and serve directly American commerce. In normal times they will be in competition with ships of foreign nations, and this competition will insure reasonable rates, as is demonstrated by the low rates obtaining to-day due to the competition by Shipping Board ships.

But the real value of an American fleet will be shown in those abnormal times which inescapably will come some day. There will be a demand for shipping on the other side of the world, due to a war, let us say, or any other combination of exceptional circumstances. Immediately the ocean link in our transportation chain is threatened. The foreign ships, on which we have been blindly dependent, will be requisitioned by their government or will withdraw to seek greater profits elsewhere. Where, then, would our farmer be without his American merchant fleet? He either must bid against the rest of the world for space on an insufficient amount of tonnage or he must see his surplus production remain on his hands and demoralize his local market. It is to meet this situation that we provided in the measure that in return for the slight amount of aid which American ships receive during normal times they be subject in time of emergency to requisition and control by the United States.

As an example of how other nations have carried out such a procedure let me quote you from a report from our consul general in Hongkong, written in 1915.

During the acute tonnage shortage of the past spring the Japanese Government ordered the Japanese lines, all of which enjoy substantial, not to say large, subsidies from the Japanese Government, to take freight during certain months from Japanese ports only, thus serving Japanese industries and Japanese shippers in preference to other shippers in the Far East, and, of course, without any reference to American interests in the premises.

This is what we purpose to do with our compensated ships Where the emergency warrants if it ever becomes necessary. it, the ships can be operated to serve the trade of the United States and that trade alone.

This measure is a subsidy or, perhaps, it would be better to say, an insurance policy for the American exporter, and two-thirds of our exports are still agricultural products. The counthirds of our exports are still agricultural products. try will pay an almost imperceptible tax in normal times to provide this aid. This is its insurance premium. In abnormal times, by virtue of this premium, it is guaranteed the continuance of reasonable and adequate transportation, without which the commercial fabric and the prosperity of the United States would be shaken to its foundations.

It is true that in normal times the country might save these premiums, just as a householder might let his house go uninsured or save the price of a lightning rod on his barn, but it is false economy. In one or two years of emergency or disruption he will pay in losses manyfold the slight cost of adequate The cotton growers of the South experienced this in 1915, the farmers in the Northwest learned it in the Boer war, and the fruit growers of the far West suffered in the recent railroad strike for lack of adequate water transport. The farmer knows the principle of insurance and he believes in it, and if the Senators who represent agricultural constituencies tell their farmers that this is an insurance policy, I believe those farmers will be for it, and if the Senators do not so inform their constituents, then they have failed to place before them vital facts on which to base their opinions.

However, strong as are my views on the farmer, they may be somewhat academic. There are other interests in the country besides the farmer. The manufacturing and allied indus-The manufacturing and allied industries are probably fully as important. These industries employ millions of skilled workers, and there are hundreds of thousands of them in my own State. I am directly interested in these workers, and I am interested in this bill because, while its results will benefit everyone in the country, the actual money paid out by the Government will be distributed among these workers.

It is both usual and characteristic on the part of the opposition to refer to this measure as a payment from the Treasury to the great shipowner, a graft on the part of the shipping trust, a payment of the taxpayers' money into the pockets of a favored few. Nothing is farther from the truth than this.

There are certain differences in the cost of construction and operation of American ships as compared with those of foreign nations. Each of these higher costs is directly attributable to a requirement imposed by Congress upon the American shipowner for the benefit not of the shipowner but of the people of the I will try to explain this in a simple and easily understandable manner.

Until the World War no ship built in other than United States yards could fly the American flag. Then, as now, ships built in this country cost 25 per cent more than ships built, say, in Great Britain. We built good ships, but so did British yards. There was no difference in value, yet for the privilege of flying the American flag an American shipowner was obliged to pay a tax of 25 per cent of the cost of his ship. Why? Simply to develop the American shipbuilding industry. It did not fully do it, because the ships were built abroad and kept under foreign flags; but that was the intent of the law. Under this bill none but American-built ships can in the future receive

Then it may doubtless be claimed that this higher cost is due to extortion on the part of the great shipbuilding corporations of the country. Let us look into that. Roughly, half the cost of a ship is labor and half is material. Before the war and to-day American shipyard labor received practically twice the wages that was paid to workers in British yards. In other words, the British yards had a 50 per cent advantage in labor cost. As labor makes half the cost of the ship, a 50 per cent advantage on half the cost makes a 25 per cent difference in the entire cost, which is just what existed. In other words, all the higher cost that American shipbuilders charged wasis-passed right on to the labor employed in their yards.

So it is in the case of repairs. In order to give work to American labor, to the skilled artificers of the metal trades, and in order to maintain our desperately reduced shipbuilding industry this Congress wrote into the tariff bill a provision that all except emergency repairs made to American ships in foreign ports should be dutiable at 50 per cent. This is a financial handicap to the shipowner; he can get his repairs done more cheaply in foreign ports than in the United States, but he must take his choice between paying a 50 per cent premium on those repairs or of having them undertaken in American yards at a higher cost. Here again the owner of American ships is being taxed for the benefit of labor of the country. In this bill we provide that subsidized ships must be repaired and reconditioned in the United States.

By our laws-and no one can question the wisdom of this provision—the officers of American ships must be citizens. The ordinary cargo ship carries four engineer officers and four deck For a medium-sized ship the difference between the pay of these eight American officers and eight similar British officers amounts to approximately $0.000 a year. Only as to officers is there to-day a citizenship requirement; but in this bill we have imposed a citizenship requirement for the unlicensed men, and there is no question but that this will make a still greater wage differential.

There is no benefit to the shipowner in this. perfectly competent British officers or German officers or Norwegian officers for half the wage he pays to Americans. We require that he hire Americans, merely that in time of war we may have a trained and loyal force of seagoing officers and men who will carry our vital cargoes through dangerous waters and who can form a naval reserve to reinforce our regular establishment. But again we are taxing or trying to tax the American shipowner for a benefit which really accrues to the country as a whole. We want him to employ high-priced American labor in a business where he can earn no more revenue than is earned by his cheaper-run competitors.

I hope I have made it clear to the other side of the Chamber and to any on this side who have not had opportunity to study the facts that the proposed subsidy is not a subsidy to shipowners. It is made necessary by requirements that we ourselves impose for the general good of the country; it does not exceed in amount the financial handicap which those requirements create; the payments are passed on directly to the ultimate recipient, American labor afloat and ashore, and the fleet that results is of benefit to every person in the country, but especially to producers dependent on foreign markets. shipowner is nothing but a mouthpiece, an agent to achieve the result. In effect we are saying to the steamship men of the country: "We have imposed expensive requirements on American-flag ships and the traffic will not bear their cost. As a result you can not buy American ships. We can not let down our requirements, which are in the interest of American labor and of the country as a whole, but we will make up to you the higher cost which these requirements impose." is there graft in that? There is nothing which prevents an American shipping man from owning foreign-flag ships. Before 1914 most of our American-owned fleets were under foreign registry. If we do not want our fleets to revert to this condition, if we want to sell the Shipping Board fleet and end the Government losses, we must either remove the restrictions imposed on American-flag ships or offset them. We can not make water run up hill, nor attract capital to a losing business.

This measure offsets these restrictions. It has been modified to meet every reasonable objection. For those who exaggerated the amount involved, a maximum limit of $30,000,000 has been inserted. Those who claimed that it was perpetual are answered by the time limit provision. Size and speed maxima have been lowered to answer the alleged fears that the bill would encourage "floating palaces" for the very rich. Aid has been denied the Standard Oil and the United States Steel Co., so that even though their fleets, the greatest private flotillas we have, go under foreign flag, our hands are clean of the imaginary stain of having helped "the corporations."

We have provided that the subsidy shall not be payable unless the board disposed of at least half of its high-grade tonnage, and we have provided against discrimination and unfairness by requiring public hearings and allowing appeal to the courts. Nothing reasonable has been left undone to answer objections to this measure. If it should fail to pass, it will remain as a measure of our effort and our willingness, and I tell Senators who are opposing the pending bill that when the people who depend upon them for their information find out what a sound and safeguarded measure they have spurned, and when they realize the consequences of failure to pass this bill, I think they are going to ask some very embarrassing questions.

I now yield to the Senator from Iowa, under the unanimousconsent agreement.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, I am very grateful. indeed, to the Senator from New Jersey for his handsome contribution to the filibuster. He has consumed a whole hour of time and driven several more large nails into the coffin of the shipping bill. The only chance the shipping bill had was time, and the Senator has taken that away from it.

The Senator has seen fit to condemn all of us who are opposed to the shipping bill, and I am glad that wisdom has reached him even at this late day, because through all his term of office he has not before found out the necessity for this great benefit to the American farmer. I note the subsidies which he has handed out to the American farmer, according to his statement-the subsidies for roads, he says, so that his Rolls-Royce might roll over those roads while the farmers work to pay for them; the rural free delivery, which also opens up the channels for the middlemen who take their profits from the farmer; and the subsidies to destroy diseases in live stock and in crops, so that the farmers might produce more crops at less cost for greater profits for big middlemen. Yes, there is something in the argument, and I wish to call the attention of Senators to how it is affecting the American farmer. I have a little account here of how all of these governmental subsidies work out for the American farmer:

FARMER GETS $1.30 FOR CAR OF POTATOES.

According to the Fargo (N. Dak.) Forum, N. P. Nelson, a farmer living near Leal, N. Dak., received exactly $1.30 as his returns on a carlead of potatoes sold at Minneapolis for $336 through the Minnesota potato exchange.

The Forum, to sustain its story, prints a photographic reproduction of the check with the attached bill of expenses.

According to these exhibits, the railroads got $180.60 out of the $324.70, and the various middlemen got the remainder, minus the $1.30 which went to the farmer who produced the potatoes.

The sacks alone cost Mr. Nelson between $30 and $40. It is said that a number of farmers in the vicinity of Leal have had the same experience.

That may be an extreme case, but the general average of the farming business is standing upon that basis to-day; and while that is going on, the men who reap the profits are crying out: business, and give us a subsidy for doing it."

The farmer has been read for doing it."

about the Government in business, and he is beginning to see that if the railroads had a deficit under Government operation he could pay that deficit by levying an excess-profits tax upon the excess profiteers, and he could collect that tax by making it 100 per cent on the upper brackets, so that it could not be added in and passed on to the consumer in the end. No; the farmer is beginning to think this proposition out for himself in some of its details, and the statesmen of this generation will have to answer to that thinking. They can no longer crawl in behind this specious theory that the subsidy goes for the benefit of the worker who never sees it; and for the farmer who never does anything but pay it. They can no longer get away with that and pass it off upon the "prosperity" of the farmer which does not exist.

In this connection, while the farmers are thus treated and thus crippled under the present situation, we find, in reference to the railroad companies, about which I talked last night, that there is an unusual situation in reference to the salaries of big railroad managers; and I want to review that. I did not have my documents with me last night, and I was in a good deal of a hurry anyhow, but I have found them this morning; and I want to call attention to the salary of Mr. L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson, $25,000, and then it was increased on March 1, 1920, by $12,500 more. That is not all the salary that Mr. Loree received. As president of the Kansas City Southern, his salary was raised from $30,000 to $35,000 a year. In addition to that, he was president or chairman of the board of 34 corporations, and in addition to all of that he was a director in 24 other corporations. I have not his salary in all of those institutions, but I do know his method of charging up profits to the American farmer, and these salaries are largely paid by the American farmer:

There is President A. H. Smith, of the New York Central, who draws a poor little salary of $53,550 a year from that road, and at the same time we find him with another salary of $14,060 from the Big Four Railroad. Then, on the Michigan Central he picks up a salary of $13,890, and on the Boston & Albany another salary of $5,430, and on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie another salary of $5,650; altogether, $92,580 salary as president of those different roads. Then, in addition to that, we find him connected with 87 corporations as against only 58 for Mr. Of course, we do not know what his salaries are in those 87 altogether; but, judging from what has happened in the others, they are a princely tax upon the American farmer:

The biggest single salary received by any of the railroad executives is the $100,000 of Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the board of the Southern Pacific. This is the same Mr. Kruttschnitt who has used up many square miles of perfectly good white paper in newspapers and magazines telling the American people about the outrageous wage demands of the railroad employees. If one had the time, it would be interesting to find out how much time he has spent in the last few years in this kind of propaganda, and how much he had left for the very serious business of looking after the vast empire controlled by the Southern Pacific.

Taking the salaries as a whole, we are struck by the great disproportion that exists between the salaries of these supreme executive officers, who appear to spend so much of their time giving newspaper interviews, attending banquets, and addressing rotary clubs, and the subordinate officials, from general manager down, who see that the traffic gets over the line. If the president gets $50,000, the general manager is likely to get only $10,000 or $15,000; while the division superintendents, who have to sweat blood when anything goes wrong, are lucky if they get over $5,000. These operating officials of the railroads are, as a matter of fact, among the lowest-paid workers in the country when their experience, duties, and responsibilities are taken into account.

Mr. President, I have specially mentioned those few cases, but I want to give a more complete list of these gentlemen. I wish to give their names and the salaries so that the farmers of the United States and the laboring men of the United States can have some idea of the benevolent surroundings of these men who levy these taxes of railroad rates and of excess profits upon the common people of the country.

Salaries of railroad presidents.
		Salary rate January- July, 1921.	Amount of increase or decrease between Mar. 1, 1920, and July 1, 1921.
L. A. Jónes	Alabama & Vicksburg	$20,000,00	Difficulty (ALE
Newman Erb W. B. Storey	Ann Arbor	12,000,00 50,000.00	1 $4, 500: 00
B. L. Bugg *	Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic.	18,000.00	# 6,000.00
J. R. Kenly,	Atlantic Coast	20,000.00	{ 1 2,000.00 2 1,200.00 3 7,500.00
Daniel Willard	Baltimore & Ohio	75,000.00	17,500.00
Percy R. Todd H. G. Hitzler	Belt Ry, of Chicago	7, 500. 00
J. H. Reed	Bessemer & Lake Erie Boston & Maine	44, 500, 00	1 5,000.00 2 10,000.00
W. T. Noonan E. R. Darlow	Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Buffalo & Susquehanna	60,000.00 14,700.00	1 10, 000. 00
N. S. Meldrum	Carolina Clinchfield & Ohio	10,000.00
W. A. Winburn E. C. Smith	Central of Georgia	30, 000. 00
F. B. Grier	Charleston & Western Carolina	10,000.00	1 400. 00
W. G. Bierd W. J. Jackson ²	Chicago & Alton	36, 000. 00	2 4, 800.00
Marvin Hughitt, sr.4	Chicago & North Western	50, 000. 00
W. H. Tinley B. A. Worthington	Cincinnati, Indianapolis & West-	20,000.00
Marvin Hughitt	ern. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha.	5,000.00	of defendant
J. T. Clark	do	25,000.00	1 10 000 0
S. M. Felton H. R. Kurrie	Chicago Great Western	50, 000. 00 25, 000. 00	1 10,000.00
Hale Holden	Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago &	50, 000, 00 14, 060, 00	1 10,000.00
Hale Holden	St. Louis. Colorado & Southern	10, 000. 00
H. E. Byram J. E. Gorman	Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific	50,000.00
L. F. Loree W. J. Harahan	Delaware & Hudson	37, 500.00	1 12, 500. 0
W. J. Harahan A. R. Baldwin ³ W. R. Freeman ³	Chesapeake & Ohio: Denver & Rio Grande Western: Denver & Salt Lake	30, 000. 00 15, 000. 00 12, 000. 00
T. M. Schumacher	El Paso & Southwestern	66, 666. 00	{ 1 10,000.00
W. H. Beardsley	Florida East Coast	14, 400.00	(- 10,000.0
Hale Holden	Georgia, Florida & Alabama	5, 000. 00 5, 666. 00	*1,000.0
Mrs. C. B. Williams H. E. Whittenberger	Georgia, Florida & Alabama Grand Trunk System	14,000.00	1 2,000.0
L. W. Hill	Great Northern	25,000.00 30,000.00	**********
J. S. Pyeatt	Gulf Coast Lines Gulf, Mobile & Northern	25, 000. 00 12, 000. 00	2 975. 0
W. J. Harahan	Hocking Valley	6,000.00	*********
L. F. Lores	Kansas City Southern	75,000.00 35,000.00	1 5,000.0
J. A. Edson S. D. Warriner	Lehigh & New England	35, 000. 00 32, 000. 00 6, 000. 00	1 5,000.0 1 7,000.0 1 7,000.0
Ralph Peters	Long Island	30,000.00
H. Walters 1	Louisville & Nashville	15, 000. 00 23, 333. 00	2 62.50 1 416.60
W. L. Mapother	do	21 St/103 Little	1 5,000.0
Morris McDonald	Maine Central	30,000.00	1 5,000.00 2 10,000.00
W. H. Breinner	Michigan Central	13, 890, 00 26, 000, 00	17,000.0
C. E. Schaff 3 B. F. Bush	Missouri, Kansas & Texas	50,000,00	25,000.0
W. R. Cole	(Nashville, Chattanooga & St.	18,000.00	1 16,000.0
C. M. Depew	New York Central	25, 000.00	1 2 900.0
A. H. Smith	do	53, 550, 00	**********
H. M. Biscoe *	Boston & Albany	5, 430. 00 22, 500. 00	1 2,500.0
A. H. Smith. J. M. Schoonmaker *	Pittsburgh & Lake Eriedo	5, 650. 00 25, 000. 00 20, 000. 00
J. D. 1 OHB	New York, Chicago & St. Lonis	20, 000. 00 16, 000. 00	1 5,000.0
O. P. Van Sweringen 4. J. J. Bernet E. J. Pearson	New York, New Haven & Hart-	35, 833. 00 50, 000. 00	15,000.00
	ford	20, 000. 00	*1,000.00
J. B. Kerr	New York, Ontario & Western Norfolk & Western	60,000.00	1 10, 000. 0
Howard Elliott 4	Norfolk & Southern	25, 000. 00 40, 000. 00

¹ Increase. 2 Decrease.

Beceiver.
Chairman board of directors.

Vice president:

Salaries of railroad presidents-Continued.

		Salary rate January- July, 1921.	Amount of increase or decrease between Mar. 1, 1920, and July 1, 1921.
Chas. Donnelly	Northern Pacific Northern Pacific (land department).	$35,000.00 7,500.00
Samuel Rea. E. N. Brown 1. F. H. Alfred Agnew T. Dice. Eppa Hunton, jr.	Pennsylvania Pere Marquette do Philadelphia & Reading Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac.	56, 822, 00 24, 000, 00 36, 000, 00 25, 000, 00 15, 000, 00	² $4,000.00 ² 6,000.00
E. N. Brown 1	St. Louis & San Francisco	33, 000, 00 44, 000, 00	$ 6,000.00 $ 6,000.00 $ 28,000.00
Wm. Sproule. J. M. Herbert. W. L. Ross 4 C. W. Huntington. W. H. Williams 1 J. E. Taussig. Chas. M. Levey.	Southern Pacific do. St. Louis Southwestern Toledo, St. Louis & Western Virginian Wabash do Western Pacific	100,000.00 75,000.00 35,200.00 25,000.00 25,000.00 25,000.00 30,000.00	(*8,000.00

1 Chairman board of directors. 2 Increase.

3 Decrease. · Receiver.

S. M. Felton, of the Chicago Great Western, who is mentioned in this table, is my own particular friend, you remember. I mentioned him several times last night. He dra $50,000, and got an increase in these hard times of $10,000. He draws

The C. H. Markham mentioned in the table as drawing $75,000 as president of the Illinois Central is another one of those presidents who earns his $75,000 in the newspapers.

Mr. President, my time is cut off this afternoon, and as I have several other important matters I desire to present before this discussion ends, at this point I will yield the floor, this being the end of my first speech.

ADMISSION OF ARMENIAN REFUGEES.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, so many are the subjects of legislation which, under present-day conditions, come before the Congress, that it is often difficult to secure action on measures concerning which there is a consensus of opinion. bill which the Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] has moved to consider actually does not have the support of a majority of the Senate. Some Senators who have voted with the proponents of the bill feel that the measure is of such doubtful value that no public interest would be seriously injured if the bill should fail of passage. As a matter of fact, there is no probability, there is scarcely a possibility, that the ship subsidy bill in any form, however it may be modified by the present Congress, will become a law.

I said in the beginning of the consideration of that measure, when the bill was first brought before the Senate, that it should not be disposed of by the present Congress, reason that a large majority of the American people are not in favor of its provisions; that their opposition to the bill was reflected in the result of the last national election; that it was unwise, to a degree approaching political immorality, to attempt to force the passage of a measure by the votes of Senators and Representatives who have been defeated, in part, at least, because of their support of the measure, and that it was unjust to impose for a period of 15 years the obligations carried in this bill on the American people, when they do not want it, and when the next Congress, elected, in part, upon this issue, admittedly would not approve of the measure.

It is now quite generally recognized, here and elsewhere, among those familiar with the course of the debate on the shipping bill, that the measure stands defeated, and that future efforts to secure its enactment can only result in the prevention of legislation which, if permitted to come before the Congress, would meet with approval and be enacted.

There is a measure which passed the Senate some weeks ago, and which has been amended by a committee of the body at the other end of the Capitol in such a way as to endanger its enactment. That measure passed the Senate of the United States without a single vote in opposition. On February 6 Senate bill 4092, providing for the admission into the United States of certain refugees from near eastern countries, after being discussed briefly by the Senate, was passed without a dissenting vote. The senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge], the leader of the majority, and, I believe, the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood], the leader of the minority, and a number of other Senators, realizing the emergent character of the bill, cooperated to secure its speedy disposition by the Senate, with the very gratifying result that the bill passed the Senate unanimously.

Age-long oppression has culminated in unspeakable cruelties recently inflicted by the Turkish military authorities upon the Armenians. Many families have had their property seized or destroyed and after prolonged torture have suffered death.

The Senate bill above referred to will afford relief to a limited number only, but its passage is very much desired by the Christian population not only of this country but of other civilized countries as well. It will permit fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters of American citizens to enter the United States under proper bond and restrictions.

There is serious danger that the bill will fail to pass, House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization on February 15 reported the measure with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, and it is expected that a special rule for the consideration of the bill may be reported and passed early next

The House amendment is a general immigration bill. It is a carefully worked-out method for simplifying and making practicable the principle of limiting immigration by quota. It classifles immigrants into two general groups-quota and nonquotaand provides for the issuance of certificates of immigration intended to prevent confusion resulting almost every year in exceeding the quota and in hardship to many aliens who are anxious to be admitted to the United States.

While the provisions in the House amendment relating to nonquota immigrants would permit the admission of some refugees provided for in the Senate bill, the terms of the amendment are believed to be so restrictive as to exclude many Armenians who would be permitted to enter under the Senate

With the end of the session near at hand, with business in both Houses of Congress greatly congested, and with the ship subsidy bill before the Senate under conditions known to exist, it is likely that if the House persists in its amendment all legislation will fail. This would be a calamity.

The correct course would seem to be to pass the Senate bill with amendments relevant to its provisions, and they relate to the relief of refugees. In all probability they can be disposed of without objection in either House, if the subject can only be brought before the House for action. The general subject of immigration is of importance. It does require consideration and action, but there are such conflicting views respecting it that little probability exists that a general immigration bill can be passed prior to March 4. It would be pitiable, almost criminal, in view of the conditions in Smyrna, to fail to take some action for the protection or relief of these unfortunate

There has been brought to my attention by Mr. Theodore Bortoli, formerly of Smyrna, the details of incidents affecting himself and coming within his personal observation that are horrifying beyond expression.

Mr. Bortoli six months ago was one of two brothers operating the largest business in Smyrna, engaged in the manufacture of the famous Smyrna rugs. Their investment was the equivalent of $25,000,000. Their property was seized and destroyed, their mother brutally slain in the presence of Theodore Bortoli, his brother beaten until he became insane and died. His two sisters, 17 and 19 years of age, committed suicide to save their persons from forcible defilement. The sole survivor of their family, his fortune gone, his relatives needlessly and ruthlessly murdered, Bortoli came to the United States November 20, 1922, for safety and in the hope that he could render some service to the cause of humanity and alleviate the suffering which curses the Christian population of Smyrna.

Let me read the simple tragic story as told by Theodore Bortoli himself:

STATEMENT PREPARED BY MR. THEODORE BORTOLI, FORMERLY OF SMYRNA. PREFACE AND PERSONAL NOTE.

The statements herewith submitted will have weight only to the extent, of course, that I personally am known and am responsible. Therefore I beg leave to say that I am of Italian birth, my father and mother both being Italians. I am 27 years of age. I was born in Smyrna, but under the conventions my Italian citizenship is recognized by all Governments. I was admitted into the United States upon bond, being my own recognizance, on the 20th of November, 1922. My father was engaged in the manufacture of the famous Smyrna rugs. My brother and myself were conducting this business up to six months ago under the name of the Smyrna Carpet (Ltd.), Bortoli Bros., with factories located at Smyrna. Our capital investment represented 5,800,000 Turkish pounds.

This, as I have already said, is the equivalent of approximately $25,000,000 of American money.

We were the largest manufacturers and exporters of Smyrna rugs. My property is destroyed. My mother was murdered, being shot through the head in my presence. My brother was beaten and bruised to such an extent that subsequently he became insane and died, and my two sisters, 17 and 19 years of age, after barricading themselves in their villa, died by their own hands for fear of outrage and to protect their honor. I am the sole survivor of that family, and I came to America in the hope that I could do something to prevent a recurrence of so terrible a disaster as I have experienced and lived through. The former American consul, Mr. George Horton, who lived at Smyrna, knows me personally, and will vouch for the fact that I am one of the firm of Bortoil Bros., formerly located at Smyrna. Immediately upon coming to this country I took out my first papers and hope to become a citizen of the United States. The following is a statement of the facts as I know them:

and will vonch for the fact that I am one of the firm of Bortoll Bros, formerly located at Sinyraa. Immediately upon coming to this court py frost papers and hope to become a citizen of the them. It is the state of the state o number probably 1,200,000. Their condition is terrible. They had to leave without any property. Families have been separated. They have no means of support. They are herded together under conditions that are horrible to describe.

I am a member of the committee of the Near East refugees. My sole purpose in this situation is to try to help the poor people who have suffered as I have suffered.

There are many citizens in the United States who among these refugees have a father, mother, brother, or sister, whom they would like to help. It would be a humanitarian thing if the United States could permit, through its immigration law, these poor people to come to be taken care of and to be started in life again by their relatives in this country.

The Senate has passed a bill looking to permitting Armenian refugees to enter this country beyond the quota allowed by law. When this bill went to the House it was considered by the committee, and the House Committee on immigration has held extensive hearings and have substituted a complete immigration measure in lieu of the bill as passed by the Senate.

While this bill does not give all of the relief that we had hoped to get, still it does permit fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters of American citizens, under proper bond and under proper restrictions, to enter the United States.

There is a substantial prospect that the Rules Committee will permit this bill to be voted upon and passed by the House early next week.

The only hope of passing this legislation is that the report of the conferees will approve of the House substitute.

Unless permission is given by this Congress for the entry into the United States of fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers of American citizens who are refugees in this horrible situation many thousands of them will die. The relief needed is now. If we have to wait until the next session of Congress relief will be too late.

Here is a copy of a telegram received from Dr. Esther Lovejoy, who is chalrman of the American women's hospitals, which I will read the telegram later.

In the name of humanity, my dear Senator. I hope that you and your distinguished conferees in the Senate can do something to bring about this relief before it is too late.

THEO. BORTOLI.

This and other equally amazing facts, which I do not at this time publish, brought to my attention by Mr. Bortoli and others have prompted me to appeal to the Congress for action in behalf of these oppressed people. We can pass the Senate bill, and I hope that no one will insist upon a course which will defer action upon relief legislation until the next Congress.

In the hope that the emergency feature of this legislation may be cleared of confusion and every obstruction to its passage removed, it is suggested that paragraphs A and B of section 4 of the House amendment be modified so as to liberalize the provisions in important features, and section 8 of the House amendment which relates to the manner of carrying out the relief features of the act be adopted, if it appears that general immigration legislation can not be enacted, which seems highly probable. Otherwise the bill, as it passed the Senate, should be passed with relevant amendments. I will publish at the conclusion of my remarks the measure as it would read if this proposal should be enacted. (See Appendix.)

If relief for the refugees can be passed during the present Congress and the general immigration law revised, as proposed in the House amendment, I have no objection. It would seem calamitous, however, to permit a condition to arise resulting in no legislation, thus dooming the hopes of a people whose present condition is expressed in a telegram from Dr. Esther Lovejoy, of the American Hospitals Association, dated February 14, 1923, and referred to in the statement which I have read submitted by Mr. Bortoli:

[Copy of telegram received February 14, 1923, by Mr. Theodore Bortoli from Dr. Esther Lovejoy.]

Refugee conditions indescribable. People, mostly women and children, without a country. Rejected of all the world. Unable to speak Greek language. Herded and driven like animals from place to place. Crowded into damp holes and hovels. Wet, cold, hungry, sick; suffering very great. Mercy of immediate death withheld. Greece willing, but utterly unable to cope with conditions. Outlook here hopeless. Wretched people anxious to return to Anatolia any terms. Death by violence preferable to death from cold, hunger, or disease. Help from America only hope.

In addition to this the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations should ascertain the status of affairs in Smyrna, particularly as they affect Americans there. The former American consul, Mr. George Horton, whom I am told was compelled to leave the consulate, can be summoned before the committee and directed to tell what he knows of conditions and incidents in Smyrna as they relate to helpless Armenian men, women, and children, and particularly as they affect citizens of the United States. It is possible that some plan may be adopted which will save Christian civilization from the disgrace of seeming to withhold helpful sympathy from the victims of Turkish cruelty.

Is the Committee on Foreign Relations informed as to events, comparatively recent, in Turkey affecting the Government of the United States?

What is the condition of the building in Smyrna formerly occupied by the American consular staff? If it has been destroyed, when was that done, by whom, and what were the circumstances?

Has cruelty been inflicted on American sailors or marines;

and if so, when, by whom, and to what extent?
What action has been taken by the Executive to protect American citizens from injury and death, and what action has been taken to protect the American flag from insult? The delicacy as well as the vital importance of these questions is apparent. There is no disposition to provoke rash action or to inflame public feeling. Certainly, everyone must realize the necessity for caution, both in discussing and in dealing with international conditions admittedly tense and irri-

Whatever may be the details, the world knows that all forms of violence, both to persons and property—arson, robbery, torture, rape, and murder-have converted Smyrna and its vicinity into a realm where brutal barbarism is supreme. that the United States can do is to afford refuge for the op-pressed, and to act quickly. To delay the consideration and passage of the Armenian refugee bill to consider measures like the ship subsidy or general immigration legislation seems to me unjustifiable; not to say unpardonable. The sentiment of a Christian Nation revolts at the thought that the Congress of the United States should pursue a policy of indifference and hesitation respecting such a subject. The people are hopeful now that we will act promptly and effectively. They will be righteously indignant if we fail and leave Armenian Christians to a fate pitiable beyond the power of the imagination to conceive or the tongue to describe.

APPENDIX.

A bill (H. R. 14273) to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States.

A bill (H. R. 14273) to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States.

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "relief immigration act of 1923"

(1) "Refuge" shall mean any person who has fled from his home since the 1st of October, 1921, and was resident prior to fleeing from his home in (a) the territory belonging to Turkey as defined by the treaty of Sevres, or (b) other territory occupied by Turkish military or civil authorities since October, 1920.

(2) "Relative" shall mean a husband, wife, parent, grandparent, brother or sister, child, grandchild orphan niece or nephew, aunt or uncle by blood.

(3) The singular shall include the plural, and the masculine shall include the feminine.

SEC. 2. That any person resident within the United States who is either a citizen of the United States or who has made application for citizenship may petition the Commissioner General of Immigration for the admission into the United States of any relative who is a refugee.

SEC. 3. (1) That the petition for admission must contain: (a) The name and address of the pathip and number of declaration; (c) the name and address of the pathip and number of declaration; (c) the name and address of his employer or the address of his place of business or occupation if he is not an employee; (d) the degree of relationship of the person for whom the application is made and the name of the place where such person for whose admission the application is made and the name of the place where such person for whose admission the application is made, so that he shall not become a public charge; (f) a statement that the person for whose admission the application is made, so that he shall not become a public charge; (f) a statement that the person for whose admission the application is made in homeless at the time of making the power to administer oaths and must be supported by any documentary evidence required by regulations issued under this act.

(3) Application may be made in the same petition for any ordication applica purpose.

SEC. 7. That if the Commissioner General of Immigration shall find the facts stated in the petition to be true, the refugees named in the petition shall be admitted to the United States; except that in case of an uncle or aunt by blood the commissioner general may, in his discretion, refuse admission if he believes that the refugee can be provided for elsewhere than in the United States.

SEC. 8. That any refugee who has been permitted by the immigration authorities of the United States to land temporarily shall be finally admitted if a petition be filed and approved as provided herein in respect to such alien.

SEC. 9. That refugees whose admission is authorized under this act shall be admitted, subject to the immigration laws of the United States, except that the act approved May 19, 1921, entitled "An act to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States," shall not be applied to them, and they shall not be included in estimating the quota established under such act of alien immigrants of the nationality to which they belong who may be admitted to the United States.

States.

SEC. 10. That the Commissioner General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall prescribe rules and regulations necessary to carry this act into effect.

SEC. 11. That any person who knowingly and fraudulently aids in any way to secure the admission under this act of a refugee not properly admissible under it shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment for a term of not exceeding one year, or both $1,000 or by imprisonment for a term of not exceeding one year, or both.

SEC. 12. That this act shall take effect upon its enactment and shall continue in force till June 30, 1924, but no refuges shall be admitted under its terms after June 30, 1924, except those for whose admission petition has been filed previous to that date.

SEC. 13. That this act may be cited as the Near East refugee act of 1922.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have listened to what has been said by the Senator from Arkansas, and I agree entirely with him that the Senate bill for the relief of the Armenians and, perhaps, the additional liberalization of the law proposed by the other House, if it could be added to it, should be passed; but certainly the resolution we passed ought to go through. We must have a revision of the immigration laws, which is, however, a wholly different question but a very important one. I have for many years labored for the proper regulation and restriction of immigration. A bill for that purpose must come before us, if not now then in the next Congress, and be dealt with; but the bill looking to that end now pending in the House is a long and important measure which will require debate. We have only a little more than a week ahead of us, and if such a bill be attached to the Armenian resolution that resolution will fail because there will be no time in which to consider and pass it.

I feel very strongly on the matter, and I very earnestly hope that the House of Representatives may be willing to send us the bill which has been described by the Senator from Arkansas, certainly that they will send us the Armenian bill which we have passed in this body, and if possible the other measure. It ought not be encumbered, however, with general immigration legislation at this time. If we are to perform an act of humanity, as I hope we are, to these poor hunted people, it should be done freely and quickly. "The quality of mercy is not strain'd." We ought not to do anything that will impede a noble purpose, as I think this to be.

So far as the condition of Americans in Smyrna is concerned, I know Mr. Horton, the consul, though I have not seen him recently, but I have known him quite well in past years. I know he is a very competent man. I think, however, that Americans and American rights have been fully protected there. We have had destroyers in those waters-I think 12 were sent from this country, and some are near Smyrna-but it will not be difficult for the committee to make an inquiry, and it will do so: the meanwhile, however, the practical thing to do is to pass the Armenian bill that passed the Senate, if possible, with the provisions which the Senator has described added by the House, as I understand, simply liberalizing the laws a little. In any event, the Armenian bill ought to go through, and go through now, unencumbered by a great general measure which must pass, of course, in the future, which, I think, could not be dealt with in the week that remains.

FEDERAL USURPATION.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President, nearly two years ago there was pending in this body a bill purporting to interdict the use of brewed beverages for medicinal purposes. The importance to the public generally of either permitting or prohibiting the use of alcohol produced in that form for medicinal purposes was, in my humble opinion, less vital, infinitely less vital, than the preservation of rights and privileges hoary with the prescription of centuries. It was practically admitted, and that which was not admitted was left to plain inference, that in enforcing laws materially affecting the domestic and personal relations and habits of the citizen no constitutional safeguard, no common-law right, no privilege, however sacred or however sacredly maintained, was to be permitted to interfere with or to delay or prevent the enforcement of this particular act.

I called the attention of the Senate then to the fact that this was not an act to secure or prevent the use of brewed beverages as a stimulant or as a beverage, but as a medicine. I at some length at that time explained to the Senate the fact that the execution of the law as drawn-inadvertently, I hope, but certainly carelessly drawn-overlooked those safeguards which had hitherto been thrown about legislation of that character. I proposed an amendment very similar to the amendments to acts passed during the war authorizing searches and seizures This amendment was heartily indorsed for certain purposes. by Senators whose devotion to the cause of temperance and to the cause of prohibition could not be questioned, by men who, in season and out of season, during their whole public lives have never failed to vote for any measure designed to regulate or to prohibit the use of alcoholic beverages.

That amendment passed the Senate by unanimous vote, and later the question came up of supporting the conferees of the Senate in their disagreement with the conferees of the House. Again it passed without a dissenting voice. For some reason which I am not disposed at this time to discuss, and which it is not necessary that I should discuss at any great length, that amendment was defeated; and the effect of the whole argument justified the inference, and the effect of the attitude of the opponents of that amendment was to notify the country, that any power, any authority necessary to the enforcement of the act would be assumed, whether it was in accord with or in derogation of the solemn provisions of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. President, without regard to the merits of that act, I can not without serious and painful apprehension view the attempt on the part of officers of the law to disregard these solemn injunctions. I can not without the gloomiest forebodings for the safety and happiness of my country behold a deliberate usurpation and a deliberate exercise of tyrannical power solemnly interdicted by the Constitution of my country, the invasion of rights hoary with the proscription of centuries, maintained by our heroic fathers, by Continental heroes who fought for those rights 15 years before they raised the standard of rebellion to the mother country.

On the 22d of this month the Senate solemnly listened to the golden words of wisdom of its greatest citizen, its loftiest patriot, its sage adviser, to the most solemn words and the last solemn words uttered by him who was, "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen"; and I felt deep in my heart an earnest wish that he might return from the abodes of rest to the scenes in which he was once an inspiring figure, and in person utter again the solemn admonitions of his Farewell Address.

I recall these words:

This Government, the offspring of our own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence m its measures are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government. But the constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacreedly obligatory upon all. The very idea of the power, and the right of the people to establish government, presuppose the duty of every individual to obey the established government.

And again:

And again:

If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation, for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

Since the death of George Washington no man has more powerfully appealed to the hearts and affections of the American people than that rugged, gentle, patient figure, Abraham Lincoln; and I say it as a southern man. This sentiment of reverend regard for the Constitution, this abhor-rence of the usurpation by Federal officers or Federal powers not warranted by that Constitution, or interdicted by it, re-tained its place in the hearts of wise patriots from the day Washington was inaugurated until the hour Abraham Lincoln reaffirmed the solemn adjuration. In his first inaugural Lincoln said:

It is my duty and my oath to maintain inviolate the right of the States to order and control under the Constitution their own affairs by their own judgments exclusively. Such maintenance is essential for the preservation of that balance of power on which our institu-

Until the last decade, until a few short years ago, any Congressman, any Senator, any judge, who for any purpose, to attain any end, however desirable; to enforce any law, how-ever vital to the life or happiness of his country, had proposed a bold act of naked, indefensible usurpation, would have met the fixed finger of scorn in this body, and that sentiment but a few years ago was reflected by the leader of the majority, the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge]. Said Mr. Lodge in a recent utterance:

Our forefathers founded a limited Government. The movement of to-day and the various measures of a socialistic kind extending governmental activities are breaking down those constitutional limitations and are intended to do so. It is well for us to stop and consider whether it is wise to destroy the Government which Washington founded and which Lincoln saved.

While my warning of two years ago fell upon deaf ears in the Senate, while it invoked scorn, and a sarcastic innunendo that I was camouflaging behind the Constitution in order to aid a nefarious business; while it met the sneer that "Such talk might be welcome to moonshiners and bootleggers, but as far as we, the self-constituted keepers of the consciences of the American people, are concerned we will do as we please with the Constitution; we will override the right of immunity from search and seizure, the writ of habeas corpus, and the right of trial by jury, or any other safeguard, even the sanctity of the home; no person shall stand in the way of any bailiff we may commission, and we refuse to impose any penalty for a violation of any part of the Constitution except the eighteenth amendment." That was the challenge; that was the statement; amendment." That was the challenge; that was the statement; that was the bold, brazen position of those who denounced me for a simple proposal that a reasonable penalty be imposed upon officers who, in the enforcement of one law, violated one or more of the solemn provisions of the Constitution of the United States.

I am gratified to know that while my words were vain here they have found an echo_elsewhere. I am delighted to know that that echo is not partisan, that it is not confined to North or South, or East or West, to Democrat or to Republican. The great first governor of Oklahoma, who in 1908 broke temporarily with the nominee of the national Democratic convention because he desired to put a stronger expression into the Democratic platform against the liquor traffic than even the nominee would accept, a champion not only of temperance but of prohibition, on more than one occasion has lent his powerful and eloquent voice to the cause of liberty, and has demanded that in the enforcement of any law every officer should respect the Constitution of his country, has denounced in unmeasured terms the wanton extravagance of paternalism gone mad and the centralization of power bursting headlong through every limitation erected by a hundred years of free government.

The speeches of Charles N. Haskell ring like a clarion call to the lovers of constitutional liberty all over America. Not less emphatic are similar statements by Gov. Frank O. Lowden. who as the governor of a great State has deserved the commendation of his country and who many thought would be the nominee of this party for the Presidency of the United States.

This protest, this apprehension which aroused so much opposition and invited so many sneers, sarcasm, and diatribes in the Senate of the United States has, thank God, found an echo. But yesterday a notable utterance was made in the State of Ohio by the president of the greatest university on the reeling earth, with its 30,000 matriculates, a man whose advocacy of the cause of temperance no temperance man can question; who wrote into a party platform the first dry resolution ever passed in New Jersey; who led gallantly the fight against the saloon as long as there was a saloon in his State; whose private life and whose Christian character are above question. At the head of that great institution no political office can tempt him and calumny will not charge, because calumny does not even dream, that Nicholas Murray Butler is the superserviceable tool of the liquor interests. Yet he, in a great address on law and lawlessness, has given additional weight to this timely warning to get back to the Constitution and to respect the rights of the citizen.

Yea, more, Mr. President, here in the city of Washington last Sunday, on a great and historic occasion, the leading bishop of the Episcopal Church in the South, an orator without a superior in the pulpit of America in any church, in the presence of the President of the United States, foreign diplomats, and one of the most notable assemblies that ever gathered, on one of the most notable occasions in the history of this Capital, repeated the solemn warning which two years ago invited the contempt and the sarcasm of Senators.

I quote from the Washington Post of February 19. If I had said these things I would be burned in effigy. The article reads:

REFORMERS WEAKEN LAW, BISHOP AVERS—FOSTER DISRESPECT FOR IT
BY CURBING LIBERTY—PRESIDENT IN AUDIENCE—HIGH OFFICIALS HEAR THE RIGHT REVEREND GAILOR EXTOL WASHINGTON—WARNS OF RISING DISCONTENT—NATION DAILY SEES NEW ONSLAUGHTS ON PERSONAL FREEDOM, LAWS PROPPORTIONATELY LOSE RESPECT, AND COURTS FALL INTO DISREPUTE, HE ASSETTS—POINTS TO LEGACIES
FROM WASHINGTON IN A PLEA FOR RELIGION IN EDUCATION—SAYS THAT WARS HAVE BEEN BENEFICIAL.

THAT WARS HAVE BEEN BENEFICIAL.

Reformers and lawbreakers seem to be in a conspiracy to bring the law into disrespect and the courts into disrepute, the Right Rev. Thomas F. Gailor, bishop of Tennessee, declared yesterday in the course of a sermon at the services of the Sons of the Revolution in commemoration of the birth of George Washington.

Read the Farewell Address of Washington, and, oh, how appropriate was the utterance of this great man of God, who loves the liberties of his country better than the success of a faction or a propaganda. I continue reading from the Post

High Government officials, including President Harding and members of the diplomatic corps, thronged St. Johns Church to hear the bishop. Not only is there a widespread disrespect for the law, but this condition is to be blamed alike on the criminals and "those who gather into groups to advance special legislation favorable to them," the speaker declared.

PERSONAL LIBERTY INVADED. "The supremacy of law and the preservation of the individual liberties of our citizens are parts of America's old traditions which we do not seem to have realized," said Bishop Gallor. "Not only has discontent with the laws become more or less general, but daily we see the individual liberties of our citizens further curtailed and restricted.

"The formation of certain small groups to favor certain laws which they themselves may believe to be right has exaggerated this disrespect for the law rather than promoted in the minds of our citizens the sanctity of the law and the proper respect for our governmental institutions.

MUST SEEK UNITED OPINION.

"We are losing sight of the importance of the bedrock upon which our Government is founded," the bishop declared. "Public opinion is being so molded by a few." he continued, "that it is persistently interfering with personal liberty.

"Any measure which tends in any way to reduce individual liberty should be very carefully considered before it is put into effect."

I did not ask for a careful consideration of the bill. I simply asked that a measure restricting personal liberty, a measure authorizing an officer to enter the home, should require that officer to regard the Constitution when he entered it, and they said I was an incendiary and an advocate of intemperance.

Such measures should be based not on the opinion of a group but on the whole united opinion of the public.

Patriotic impulses and loyalty to the State do not interfere with the Christian idea of the brotherhood of man, the bishop said. The church has no desire to curtail the patriotism of its members, but on the contrary encourage that patriotism.

AMENDMENT OF WAR BISK INSURANCE ACT (S. DOC. NO. 308) CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to submit a conference report on House bill 10003, and ask to submit a conterence report on house but 1000s, and ask for its immediate consideration and adoption. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Whils in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Da-kota? The Chair hears none, and the report will be read.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10003) to further amend and modify the war risk insurance act, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10003) to further amend and modify the war risk insurance act, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the amendment of the Senate insert the following:

Sec. 23. (1) That, except as provided in subdivision (2) of this section, when by the terms of the war risk insurance act and any amendments thereto, any payment is to be made to a minor, other than a person in the military or naval forces of the United States, or to a person mentally incompetent or under other legal disability adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction, such payment shall be made to the person who is constituted guardian, curator, or conservator by the laws of the State or residence of claimant, or is otherwise legally vested with responsibility or care of the claimant or his estate: Provided, That prior to receipt of notice by the United States Veterans' Bureau that any such person is under such other legal disability adjudged by some court of competent jurisdiction, payment may be made to such person direct: Provided further, That for the purpose of payments of benefits under article 3 of the war risk insurance act, as amended, where no guardian, curator, or conservator of the person under a legal disability has been appointed under the laws of the State or residence of the claimant, the director shall determine the person who is otherwise legally vested with responsibility or care of the claimant or his estate.

"(2) If any person entitled to receive payments under this act shall be an inmate of any asylum or hospital for the in-sane maintained by the United States, or by any of the several States or Territories of the United States, or any political subdivision thereof, and no guardian, curator, or conservator of the property of such person shall have been appointed by competent legal authority, the director, if satisfied after due investigation that any such person is mentally incompetent, may order that all moneys payable to him or her under this act shall be held in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of such person. All funds so held shall be disbursed under the order of the director and subject to his discretion either to the chief executive officer of the asylum or hospital in which such person is an inmate, to be used by such officer for the maintenance and comfort of such inmate, subject to the duty to account to the United States Veterans' Bureau and to repay any surplus at any time remaining in his hands in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the director; or to the wife (or dependent husband if the inmate is a woman), minor children, and dependent parents of such inmate, in such amounts as the director shall find necessary for their support and maintenance in the order named; or, if at any time such inmate shall be found to be mentally competent, or shall die, or a guardian, curator, or conservator of his or her estate be appointed, any balance remaining to the credit of such inmate shall be paid to such inmate, if mentally competent, and otherwise to his or her guardian, curator, conservator, or personal represenatives.

And the Senate agree to the same.

P. J. McCumber, REED SMOOT, JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Managers on the part of the Senate. BURTON E. SWEET. W. J. GRAHAM,

SAM RAYBURN, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ROBINSON. What is the proposal, Mr. President? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reading clerk has just read the report

Mr. McCUMBER. It is a conference report on the amendment of the war risk insurance act.

Mr. ROBINSON. But what is the request?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. A request has been made for unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let it go over. Mr. McCUMBER. Very well. Then I simply present the

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be printed, and lie on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE,

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhue, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 726. An act for the relief of George Emerson; S. 1516. An act for the relief of Lewis W. Flaunlacher;

S. 1670. An act for the relief of Buffkin and Girvin;

S. 2168. An act for the relief of Jesse C. Dennis and William Rhett Eleazer;

S. 2323. An act for the relief of Anna M. Tobin, independent executrix of the estate of Frank R. Tobin, deceased; S. 2746. An act for the relief of William Howard May, ex-marshal of the Canal Zone; William K. Jackson, ex-district attorney of the Canal Zone; and John H. McLean, ex-paymaster of the Panama Canal, now deceased;

S. 2934. An act to provide for the issuance to John W. Stanton by the Secretary of the Interior of patent to certain land upon payment therefor at the rate of $1.25 per acre;

S. 3154. An act for the relief of C. M. Rieves; and S. 4028. An act for the relief of John N. Halladay.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills of the Senate, each with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 1405. An act for the relief of William Collie Nabors

S. 2984. An act for the relief of Thurston W. True; and S. 3594. An act for the relief of Anton Rospotnik and the exchange of certain lands owned by the Northern Pacific Rail-

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2632) to correct the military record of Martin Cletner, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 1252. An act for the relief of John A. Douglas:

H. R. 6601. An act for the relief of the Great Lakes Engineering Works;

H. R. 7267. An act granting permission to Mrs. R. S. Abernethy, of Lincolnton, N. C., to accept the decoration of the bust of Bolivar.

H. R. 8051. An act for the relief of the Commonwealth & Dominion Line (Ltd.), owner of the British steamship Port Phillip.

H. R. 2291. An act for the relief of Trygve Kristian Lode; H. R. 10177. An act for the relief of Sherman Miles;

H. R. 10825. An act for the relief of the heirs, assigns, and legal representatives of Thomas Johnson:

H. R. 12751. An act to convey to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co. a portion of the hospital reservation of United States Veterans' Hospital No. 78 (Fort Logan H. Roots), in the State of Arkansas;

H. R. 13004. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to lease to the Kansas Electric Power Co., its successors and assigns, a certain tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leaven-

H. R. 13024. An act for the relief of August Nelson:

H. R. 13612. An act authorizing the issuance of patent to the legal representatives of Miles J. Davis, deceased;

H. R. 13614. An act for the relief of Wyatt A. Marshall;

H. R. 13617. An act to dissolve the Colored Union Benevolent Association, and for other purposes;

H. R. 13724. An act for the relief of Hugh Marshall Mont-

H. R. 13751. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell and patent certain lands to Robert E. Wyche, a resident of Caddo Parish, La.;

H. R. 13903. An act for the relief of the New York State Fair

Commission:

H. R. 14028. An act for the relief of Joseph H. Lokken:

H. R. 14082. An act to authorize the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct and operate a line of railway in and upon the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the State Minnesota:

H. R. 14089. An act granting six months' pay to Harriet B.

H. R. 14183. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasary to sell a portion of the Federal building site in the city of

H. R. 14249. An act for the relief of the owners of the American schooner Mount Hope;

H. R. 14317. An act granting permission to Capt. Norman Randolph, United States Army, to accept the decoration of the Spanish Order of Military Merit of Alfonso XIII; and

H. J. Res. 222. Joint resolution for the relief of Ramon B.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by title and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 13617. An act to dissolve the Colored Union Benevolent Association, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

H. R. 14089. An act granting six months' pay to Harriet B.

Castle; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

H. R. 14183. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to sell a portion of the Federal building site in the city of Duquoin, Ill.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and

H. R. 7267. An act granting permission to Mrs. R. S. Abernethy, of Lincolnton, N. C., to accept the decoration of the bust of Bolivar; and

H. R. 14817. An act granting permission to Capt. Norman Randolph, United States Army, to accept the decoration of the Spanish Order of Military Merit of Alfonso XIII; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

H. R. 6601. An act for the relief of the Great Lakes Engineering Works;

H. R. 8051. An act for the relief of the Commonwealth & Domonion Line (Ltd.), owner of the British steamship Port Phillip;

H. R. 13903. An act for the relief of the New York State Fair Commission; and

H. R. 14249. An act for the relief of the owners of the American schooner Mount Hope; to the Committee on Claims. H. R. 8291. An act for the relief of Trygve Kristian Lode;

H. R. 10825. An act for the relief of the heirs, assigns, and legal representatives of Thomas Johnson;

H. R. 13024. An act for the relief of August Nelson;

H. R. 13612. An act authorizing the issuance of patent to the legal representatives of Miles J. Davis, deceased;
H. R. 13614. An act for the relief of Wyatt A. Marshall;
H. R. 13751. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to sell and patent certain lands to Robert E. Wyche, a resident of Caddo Parish, La.; and

H. R. 14028. An act for the relief of Joseph H. Lokken; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

H. R. 1252. An act for the relief of John A. Douglas;

H. R. 10177. An act for the relief of Sherman Miles; H. R. 13004. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to lease to the Kansas Electric Power Co., its successors and assigns, a certain tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth:

H. R. 14082. An act to authorize the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct and operate a line of railway in and upon the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the State of Minnesota; and H. J. Res. 222. Joint resolution for the relief of Ramon B. Harrison; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PUEBLO INDIAN LANDS.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent out of order to report favorably from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys the bill (S. 3855) to ascertain and settle land claims of persons not Indian within the Pueblo Indian land, land grants, and reservations in the State of New Mexico.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I am compelled to object. Mr. LENROOT. Will the Senator withhold his objection for a moment while I make a statement?

Mr. ROBINSON. I object, The Senator will have ample opportunity to submit the report to-morrow

Mr. LENROOT. But I want to get the bill on the calendar. It has been agreed upon. It is a measure of national interest, and we have come to a full agreement. I would not ask it if were not a very exceptional case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. ROBINSON. I reserve the right to object. The Senator can make his statement.

Mr. LENROOT. Every Senator is aware of the conference that went on for several weeks concerning the Bursum bill, which was once passed by the Senate, recalled, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys. The Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, through a subcommittee on Public Lands and Surveys, through a subcommittee, held extensive hearings, running over, I think, three weeks. Parties came in from all over the country, made their full presentation to the committee, and finally a bill has been agreed upon that is satisfactory to all interested, and unanimously ordered to be reported.

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator's statement further than to say that he can submit the report during the morning of to-morrow. An arrangement is already in contemplation to consider the calendar further on Monday.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the Senator withhold just a moment more?

Mr. ROBINSON. I withhold it.
Mr. LENROOT. The reason why I ask leave to submit the report now is that the bill is one which has attracted such widespread interest that I think Senators ought to have an opportunity to examine it before it is called up on Monday; and they will not have that full opportunity unless the report can be made to-day.

Mr. ROBINSON. I am compelled to object.
Mr. LENROOT. Very well.
Mr. ROBINSON. I will state now that there will be no unanimous consent granted this afternoon, and there need not be requests submitted, unless it is something of a peculiarly emergent nature. I do not want to discriminate between Senators. and I think under the present condition of business in the Senate no unanimous consent should be granted.

Mr. LENROOT. I simply want to say to the Senator that every day lost means that there will be no legislation at the present session of Congress on this very important subject.

Mr. ROBINSON. The session has been in progress a great while and the Senator can not convince me that this is a matter of such emergent importance that 10 hours will determine the fate of the measure. He can report the measure to-morrow.

Mr. LENROOT. It is a Senate bill and it is desired to get the bill through the House.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas objects.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts and joint resolutions:

On February 9, 1923: S. 4029. An act to amend and supplement the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Texas & Pacific Railroad Co., and to aid in the construction of its road, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1871, and acts supplemental thereto, approved, respectively, May 2, 1872, March 3, 1873, and June 22, 1874; and

S. J. Res. 12. Joint resolution authorizing the President to require the United States Sugar Equalization Board (Inc.) to take over and dispose of 13,902 tons of sugar imported from the Argentine Republic.

On February 10, 1923:
S. J. Res. 248. Joint resolution to provide for the payment of salaries of Senators appointed to fill vacancies, and for other purposes.

On February 12, 1923:

S. J. Res. 259. Joint resolution authorizing the President to abrogate the international agreement embodied in certain Executive orders relating to the Panama Canal.

On February 13, 1923:

S. 1016. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to repeal section 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States"; and

S. J. Res. 226. Joint resolution authorizing the acceptance of title to certain land within the Shasta National Forest, Calif.

On February 14, 1923:

S. 1878. An act to permit the State of Montana to exchange cut-over timberlands granted for educational purposes for other lands of like character and approximate value;

S. 1926. An act to extend the provisions of the act of February 8, 1887, as amended, to lands purchased for Indians; and

S. 3702. An act providing for the acquirement by the United States of privately owned lands situated within certain townships in the Lincoln National Forest, in the State of New Mexico, by exchanging therefor lands on the public domain also within such State.

On February 15, 1923:

S. 4169. An act granting the consent of Congress to the city of Aurora, Kane County, Ill., a municipal corporation, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Fox River;

S. 4260. An act to extend the time for the construction of a bridge over the Columbia River, between the States of Oregon and Washington, at a point approximately 5 miles upstream from Dalles City, Wasco County, in the State of Oregon; S. 4288. An act to grant the consent of Congress for the special commission constituted by an act of the Legislature of Massachusetts to construct a bridge across the Merrimack

River;

S. 4341. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Oregon-Washington Bridge Co., and its successors, to construct a bridge across the Columbia River at or near the city of Hood River, Oreg.;

S. 4346. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Delaware State Highway Department to construct a bridge across the Nanticoke River:

S. 4353. An act granting the consent of Congress to the highway commissioner of the town of Elgin, Kane County, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Fox River; and

S. 4439. An act to revive and to reenact an act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress for the construction of a bridge and approaches thereto across the Arkansas River between the cities of Little Rock and Argenta," approved October 6, 1917.

On February 17, 1923: S. 2531. An act to create a board of accountancy for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

S. 3169. An act to equalize pensions of retired policemen and firemen of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

On February 20, 1923:

S. 3721. An act providing for the erection of additional suitable and necessary buildings for the National Leper Home. On February 21, 1923:

S. 1066. An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to close Piney Branch Road between Seven-teenth and Taylor Streets and Sixteenth and Allison Streets NW., rendered useless or unnecessary by reason of the opening and extension of streets called for in the permanent highway plan of the District of Columbia; and

S. 3808. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to investigate the feasibility of reclamation projects on the Columbia River and various other irrigation projects.

REPORT OF THE GOVERNOR OF PORTO RICO (H. DOC. NO. 602).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying papers and documents, ordered to be printed and referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions:

To the Congress:

As required by section 12 of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1917, entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress the Twenty-second Annual Report of the Governor of Porto Rico, together with the reports of the heads of the several departments of the Porto Rican Government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922

I concur in the recommendation of the Secretary of War that this report be printed as a congressional document.

WARREN G. HARDING.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 23, 1923.

REPORT ON RUSSIAN RELIEF (S. DOC. NO. 307).

The Vice President laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers and documents, referred to the Committee on Appropriations: To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, a report by the American Relief Administration of the disposition made of certain medicines, medical, surgical, and hospital supplies, which were transferred to said American Relief Administration by virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress approved January 16, 1922, for the relief of the distressed and famine-stricken people of Russia.

WARREN G. HARDING.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 23, 1923.

A SHIP SUBSIDY-WILL IT BE ONE OF OUR NATIONAL BLUNDERS, AND WHY?

Mr. LADD. Lir. President, I desire to discuss at this time at considerable length the question of a ship subsidy and to show why the measure as presented to Congress will be one of our national blunders, a natural outcome of a policy which has been permitted to lead us astray. I shall endeavor to show that the germ which made possible this unfortunate condition was planted with the founding of our Government and has continued to develop ever since, until to-day in this country we are witnessing its full fruition for the benefit of a privileged few and at the expense of the masses.

At the outset I wish to call attention to the blunder that has been made in the private operation of our railroads, our banks, and other great industries and how interlocked has become nearly all lines of so-called big business; how a few men actually control the policy of these industries and institutions; and how they have been enabled to thwart the Government's efforts to have them render a real service to all the people through the instrumentalities that have been intrusted in the hands of individuals and corporations until they have ceased to function in the interests of the people and have become at times even a dangerous weapon in the hands of special privilege. This policy, if continued, will crush our people and drag down the splendid civilization which our forefathers so laboriously built up that we might ever continue a free and independent people, where poverty and suffering should almost be unknown and every man should receive a full share of the fruits of his labor, but which independence is now fast becoming a hollow mockery to many of the best blood of our land. Fortunately, the ballot promises to be a means to save this fair land through evolution, so that the common people shall have their fair share of responsibility in its affairs and shall enjoy the rights to the fruits of their toil.

In passing, Mr. President, I may say, however, that I am just as anxious for a practical and prosperous merchant marine as any other loyal citizen, but I am not convinced that the proposition as presented is sound or in the interest of all the people, but that it will bring great profits to a few privileged financiers and international bankers at the expense of the producers of the I am not convinced either that it would benefit agriculture or tend to promote foreign trade, as its proponents claim. Where there is much smoke there is fire; where there is much propaganda stop, think, beware!

Mr. President, with the illimitable, inexhaustible resources of this country, with her prodigious increase of wealth-producing power, her marvelous mechanical achievements, and the unprecedented genius of her people for industrial cooperation and efficiency, it is a perplexing enigma that there should be a single person able and willing to work that can not find remunerative employment sufficient to maintain his family in comfort and contentment. Nevertheless, it is painfully and pitifully evident from every-day experience and common knowledge, substantiated by the reports of investigations made by the Federal, State, and municipal governments, that a very large proportion of our industrial population is as a result of low wages and disemploy-ment, living in a condition that is detrimental to physical health and moral purity, and which deprives the American home of every element of happiness and contentment. How large this proportion is is not susceptible of precise determination, but it is evident from governmental statistics that at least one-third, perhaps one-half, of the families of wage earners employed in mining and manufacturing, receive much less in the course of a year flan enough to support them in anything resembling decency and comfort. It is into this helpless, hopeless poverty that destroys manhood, blights womanhood, that robs even childhood of its innocence and happiness, that the working classes are being driven by an invisible power which acts upon them like a resistless and pitiless pressure.

ON THE WAY TO BECOME PAUPERS.

Two-thirds of these families-64 per cent-have incomes of less than $750 a year, and almost one-third have incomes of less than $500, the total average being $720. The average size of these families is over five members. That the average American wage earner does not receive sufficient wages to keep his family in anything like a condition of moral decency and physical comfort is shown by the fact that 30 per cent of the families keep boarders and lodgers. Furthermore, in 77 per cent of the families, two or more persons occupy a single sleeping room; in 37 per cent three or more persons, and in 15 per cent four or more persons. Two persons out of every three in the large cities and industrial centers of England die either in a workhouse, a madhouse, or a public charity hospital and are buried in pauper's graves. The abhorrence of all classes of wealth producers to a pauper's burial is so appalling that everything will be sacrificed and grievous debts incurred rather than permit the remains of a member of the family to lie in the potter's field. Nevertheless and notw'thstanding this natural abhorrence, in the wealthy city of New York 1 person out of 12 is buried in a pauper's grave or turned over to the medical fraternity for dissection.

FARMERS APPROACHING BANKRUPTCY.

The most eminous fact in our agricultural conditions is the rapid growth of farm tenants. In 1920, 37 tenants operated farms in every 100, as compared with 28 in 1910, an increase of 33 per cent in 10 years. Wherever this notoriously inefficient and outrageously unjust system is established, human slavery in its worst and most degarding form follows as a natural and necessary result.

In 1920 part-owner tenancy involved 89,000,000 acres and nearly $4,000,000,000 worth of land and buildings. On the same date full tenants claimed 265,000,000 acres and nearly 000,000 worth of land and buildings. Altogether, 354,000,000 acres and nearly $28,000,000,000 of land and buildings were operated by lessees. Without exclusive property in farms operated by managers, the percentage of acreage operated by lessees in 1920 was 37, and the lessee percentage of farms and buildings, measured by value, was 42. Omitting real estate operated by managers, lessees operated 39 per cent of the farm land as measured by acreage and 44 per cent of the total valuation of farm lands and buildings. On this basis, in 1920 lessees operated 44 per cent of the improved acreage and 46 per cent of the value of the land alone. The rapid growth of farm tenancy and farming by hard labor under managers is alarming and portends disastrous consequences to the Nation if it be permitted to continue at the present ratio. In 1880 about 25 per cent of our farms were operated under the tenant To-day in many States it has passed the half-way tenancy mark, and in some of the States has reached the highwater mark of from 59 to 60 per cent.

TENANT FARMING APPALLING.

It appears that lessee farming has become characteristic of vast areas. How vast these areas are may be understood by the following comparisons:

The tenants of the United States operate an area of unimproved land larger than the entire surface of the Republic of France, or the former Empire of Germany. In addition to this they operate an improved acreage six times the area of Illinois, Arizona, or Iowa. The combined area of unimproved and improved acreage farmed by tenants in the United States exceeds in area by 25,000 square miles the following countries: England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Belgium, Denmark, Italy, Poland, Switzerland, Austria, Greece, and Portugal. The value of the farm property they operate exceeds the amount of America's direct expense in the World War.

In connection with the question of the rapid increase of farm tenancy, the number of farmers who are paying rent in the shape of interest, though nominally owning their own land, would, if the figures could be ascertained, stagger the whole country. For it should be remembered that the most common form of agricultural tenancy in the country is not that of money or share rent, but of mortgage. What percentage of American farms occupied by their nominal owners are under mortgage we can only surmise, but it can be safely estimated at 50 per cent. The total farm mortgage indebtedness in this country to-day is over $8,500,000,000. And this appalling debt is borne by the 6,500,000 farm families of the country, whose annual net income is $184 each, out of which sum the children are to be educated, doctor's bills, life and fire insurance paid buildings repaired and church and fraternal organizations supported. But this distressing condition is not confined to the farm industry. Over 60 per cent of those who work in the manufacturing and mining industries and auxiliary business activities are living in rented houses. Seventy-five per cent of the homes of America are mortgaged. Out of a population approximately 110,000,000, only 4,181,878 own homes free from encumbrance.

OUR EARNING POWER WILL NOT PAY THE INTEREST.

The estimated wealth of the United States is 175 billions, and the estimated indebtedness, which includes all interest and dividend-bearing securities, is $140,000,000,000. One thing is certain and that is that these figures show that we are on the verge of national bankruptcy. The earning power of all the people after a bare subsistence is deducted is not sufficient to pay the interest upon this gigantic sum, to say nothing of payment of the principal. The most disgraceful and indefensible feature of this intolerable condition is the incontrovertible fact that over 90 per cent of this prodigious indebtedness is wholly fictitious, not representing one dollar of actual investment, but is the result of dexterous manipulation of financial schemes concocted for the sole purpose of robbing the actual wealth producers of the country. Little by little and bit by bit we have built up a banking and currency system solely for the benefit of stock gamblers, speculators, money sharks, and all sorts of financial bandits and wholly against the real business interests and productive industries of the people. The industrial slavery established under this money system may be more refined than chattel slavery, but it is far more merciless, cruel, and inhuman. When we remember that the interest on this indebtedness is paid by the people through increased prices we see at once that here is an ignored factor, an overlooked element in the rapidly increasing prices of the necessaries of life.

JEFFERSON ON AGRICULTURE.

In the light of these observations the drift of the agricultural population to the large cities and industrial centers is no longer a mystery. We see here the relation of cause and effect and realize the significance of Thomas Jefferson's statement in this connection:

The people will remain virtuous for many centuries, as long as they are chiefly agricultural, and this will be as long as there are vacant lands in any part of America. When they get piled one upon another in large cities, as in Europe, they will become corrupt, as in Europe.

What Jefferson said in his day was prophecy. In our day it is history. In 1790, at the time of the first census, the cities contained 3.3 per cent of the whole population. In 1880 they contained 22.5 per cent of the population, and in 1920 it had increased to the alarming extent of 51 per cent.

Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey, Where wealth accumulates and men decay.

· And how can this indefensible and intolerable condition of the wealth producers of the Nation be accounted for? We know that in the sequence of human events there are no accidents. Every fact has a cause and every fact implies a preceding fact, which in its turn becomes the basis for another fact, and thus is established an interminable connection of all social phenomena. It should not be difficult to discover the fundamental causes of this indefensible and intolerable disparity in the condition of the privileged and the nonprivileged

That there is a combination of causes no one who has given careful consideration to existing conditions can doubt. And yet when we consider the course of legislation in this country for the past 60 years, there is nothing unnatural in the abnormal situation that confronts us. He who in the midst of abundance suffers the pangs of hunger; who in the presence of inexhaustible natural resources stands in enforced idleness; who, clothed with political power, is a political nonentity; to whose unremitting drudgery labor-saving inventions have brought no relief but rather seem to make his condition worse, instinctively realizes that there is something wrong with our system of distributing the wealth which his labor produces. He knows that the vice and misery, the ignorance and brutishness that arise from degrading poverty on the one hand and vast accumulations of unearned wealth on the other can not be attributed to the will of his Creator. He inherently feels that the Infinite Power that planned and contrived the world before He created it, made ample provision for those He intended to send into it. His own personal experience has satisfied him that natural laws which are the ordinances of God are not tainted with injustice at which even the mind of the most hardened criminal revolts. The distressing situation of affairs is not the natural and necessary result of industrial coopera-tion and social development. It accompanies industrial cooperation and social development because our legislation for over half a century has contravened natural law and ignored the demands of justice. It is the direct and necessary result of granting to a corrupt and favored few predatory privileges which involve supreme functions of government.

It must be remembered that the industrial, economic, and financial difficulties that now confront us are but peculiar manifestations, following the perversion of functions of government to serve purposes for which they are not adapted and for which they were never intended. For the industrial unrest, the widespread discontent, which darken the future with ominous clouds, which perplex the politician, appall the statesman, no President and no Congress have as yet presented a solution which accounts for all the phenomena and points to any clear and simple remedy. This is obvious from the essence and nature of the bill before us. Its primary purpose and ultimate object is not to promote the welfare of the people by removing the cause of our difficulties, but to aggravate present evils by extending existing privileges and granting new

DEMOCRATS AND PLUTOCRATS.

It is the delusion born of unearned wealth that recognizes in the popular unrest with which the Nation is feverishly pulsing only the transitory effect of ephemeral causes. Between democratic aspirations and plutocratic arrogance and greed there is an irreconcilable conflict. The new wine of industrial prog-ress is fermenting in the old bottles of plutocratic conservatism, and elemental forces gather for the strife. But if, while there is yet time, we restore to government her exclusive functions, the dangers that now threaten must subside, the blind forces that now menace will be transmitted to agencies of elevation.

The history of civil government amply justifies the assertion that political corruption may be engendered and public mis-fortunes induced by failure of the government to exercise functions which legitimately belong to it, as well as from its interference with the individuals in their legitimate sphere of action. A government is neither necessary nor practicable to men living in an isolated state. But with the growth of population and the resulting cooperation of individuals in the production of things essential for the satisfaction of individual wants, public needs arise which necesitate the organization of the community under some form of civil government. There are those who, when it suits their selfish ends, contend that there are no natural rights, but that all rights emanate from the State or grant of the sovereign political power.

This is, of course, pious political piffle served up for those who they think do not know any better. There are some facts so obvious and universal that their mere statement carries conviction, and one of these is that there are rights between man and man which naturally existed before the formation of government and which continue to exist in spite of espionage laws. All rational men believe that this earth is the creation of God and that the people who occupy it during the brief period of their earthly existence are sent here by His direction. Each person born into this world is a distinct, separate, independent, coherent entity which alone justifies individual ownership and proclaims his equal rights with all his fellows.

NATURE'S LAWS DO NOT DISCRIMINATE.

The laws and forces of nature, which are simply the decrees of the Creator, make no discriminations among men but are to all absolutely impartial. All persons stand upon the same level and have equal rights. There is no distinction between farmer and banker, skipper and carrier, laborer and capitalist. when governments are instituted they do not create new rights but are intended to secure the old ones. Let us never forget that there is a law higher than any human enactment, the law of the Creator inherent in the human consciousness and which is above and beyond man-made laws and upon conformity to which all human laws must depend for their To deny this is to assert that man is destitute of a moral faculty and that there is no standard whatever by which the justice or injustice of human laws and institutions can be determined; to assert that no actions are in themselves right and none in themselves wrong, but only become so by legis-lative enactment. The history of mankind everywhere shows that the very reverse of this is the fact. The truth of the matter is that to make an action a crime by human law which is not a crime by God's law is inevitably to destroy respect for all law; to require men to take an oath before God with a view to preventing them from doing what they feel they have a natural right to do is to weaken the sanctity of oaths and tends to defeat the purpose they are intended to serve. Government ought not to interfere with the personal activity of individuals further than to secure the equal right of each from aggressions on the part of others, and the moment governmental interferences extend beyond this they are liable to defeat the very ends they were established to secure.

What is the natural law of human progress in its entirety but the recognition of the moral law in human relations? Just as human laws promote the law of equal freedom, just as they acknowledge the equality of right between man and man, just as they insure to each the perfect liberty which is limited only by the perfect liberty of every other, must mankind advance. Just as they ignore or contravene all this must the progress of mankind come to a halt and eventually turn backward. The science of government can not teach any lessons not embodied in the decalogue and the golden rule.

As the primary purpose and chief object of government is to secure the natural rights and equal liberty of each, all undertakings which involve monopoly come within the necessary sphere of governmental regulation and undertakings that are in their nature complete monopolies are legitimate functions of the Government. As the cooperation of individuals for the gratification of all their desires becomes closer and wider, the Government must assume functions that in a lower stage of cooperation were neither necessary nor expedient.

DEMANDS OF PREDATORY INTERESTS.

The annals of every nation since the beginning of recorded history show the encroachments of a sordidly selfish class upon the natural rights of their fellows. Even in our Federal Constitutional Convention there was a strong, dominating coterie of predatory privileged interests that were strenuously opposed to the principles of republicanism for which the Revolutionary War was fought, who pressed for a monarchial form of government, and when they realized that the great body of the delegates were strong for republicanism, but for giving due strength to the Federal Government under that form, they then directed their efforts to the construction of a Government that would leave but the shadow of power with the people. They pressed forward their schemes of strengthening all the branches of the Government which conformed to a monarchy, and the creation of a money power by means of a funding system, not calculated to pay the national debt but to make it perpetual and to make it an engine of tyranny and extortion in the hands of the executive branch of the Government, which, in addition to the powerful patronage it possessed in the disposal of public offices, might enable it to gradually assume autocratic power. Although our banking and currency system ought to be as clear and simple as the rule of three, so that every person of ordinary intelligence ought to be able to comprehend it, the privileged banking interests from the very beginning of our Federal Government succeeded in grafting on our monetary system of government an arbitrary schemewhich can not, save by a great abuse of language, be called a system-so complicated and tortuous that neither Congress nor the President seemed able to understand it. In the first instance, in funding the national debt they formulated the most arbitrary, intricate, and mysterious system that could possibly be devised. They then succeeded in inducing a complacent Secretary of the Treasury to make his appropriations consist of a number of scraps and remnants, many of them mere phantoms, and then applied them to objects in reversion and remainder, until the finances of the Nation were involved in an impenetrable fog of ambiguity and confusion.

Thomas Jefferson said to President Washington:

Thomas Jefferson said to President Washington:

"I told him," says Jefferson, "that, in my opinion, there was only a single source of these discontents. Though they had indeed appeared to spread themselves over the War Department also, yet I considered that as an overflowing only from the real channel which would never have taken place if they had not first been generated in another department, to wit, that of the Treasury. That a system there had been contrived for deluging the States with paper money instead of gold and silver, for withdrawing our citizens from the pursuits of commerce, manufacture, and other branches of useful industry, to occupy themselves and their capitals in a species of gambling, destructive of morality, and which had introduced its poison into the Government itself. That it was a fact, as certainly known as that he and I were conversing, that particular members of the legislature while those laws were on the carpet had feathered their nests with paper and then voted for the laws, and constantly since lent all their talents and instrumentality of their offices to the establishment and enlargement of this system; that they had chained it about our necks for a great length of time, and in order to keep the game in their hands had from time to time aided in making such legislative constructions of the Constitution as made it a very different thing from what the people thought they had submitted to; that they had now brought forward a proposition far beyond any one ever yet advanced, and to which the eyes of many were turned, as the decision was to let us know whether we lived under a limited or an unlimited Government. He asked me to what proposition I alluded; I answered, to that in the report on manufactures which under color of giving bounties to manufactures meant to establish the doctrine that the power given by the Constitution to collect taxes to provide for the general welfare of the United States permitted Congress to take everything under their management which they should deem for the public welfare, and which is susceptible of the application of money; consequently, that the subsequent enumeration of their powers was not the description to which resort must be had and did not at all constitute the limits of their authority; that this was a very different question from that of the bank, which was thought an incident to an enumerated power."

A MONEY MONOPOLY.

The bank to which Jefferson refers was the Bank of the United States, a grinding, extortionate, money monopoly, rob-bing the producers of wealth by usurious rates of interest, inflating and contracting the volume of money to aid their gambling and speculative enterprises, ruining the State banks, and practically dominating the business interests of the country. In 1832, three years before the expiration of their charter, the incorporators of the bank succeeded in jamming through Congress a new charter conferring new and extortionate privileges. It granted additional gratuities of over $7,000,000 to the stockholders. It was generally admitted that it provided for an increase of the market price of their stock at least 30 per cent. More than eight millions of the stock of the bank was held by foreigners. For these gratuities to foreigners and unscrupulous Americans the people were to receive nothing in return. The many millions which this charter proposed to bestow upon favored individuals were to come out of the hard earnings of the American people.

The new charter contained provisions precisely similar to our present Federal reserve system; that is, it secured to certain State banks legal privileges which it denied to private citizens. For instance, if a State bank in Philadelphia owed the Bank of the United States and had notes issued by the St. Louis branch, it could pay the debt with those notes; but if a farmer, a merchant, a mechanic, or other private citizen was in like circumstances he could not legally pay his debt with those notes but must sell them at a discount. This privilege granted to the State bank was for the purpose of creating a bond of union among the moneyed interests, erecting them into a separate and distinct interest apart from the people, and its necessary and inevitable tendency was to unite the Bank of the United States and the State banks in any financial measure which they considered to their special interest. Furthermore, it contained a provision that exempted from taxation the foreign stockholders who owned over 8,000,000 of the bank's stock. However, President Jackson returned this infamous measure to the Congress without his signature, stating in one of the ablest State papers that ever emanated from the White House his reasons for withholding his approval.

TOO RAW FOR PRESIDENT JACKSON OR CARL SCHURZ.

In his message to the Senate, returning the bill to recharter the United States bank, President Jackson said:

The present corporate body, denominated the president, directors, and company of the Bank of the United States, will have existed at the time this act is intended to take effect 22 years. It enjoys an exclusive privilege of banking under the authority of the general Government, a monopoly of its favor and support, and, as a necessary consequence, almost a monopoly of the foreign and domestic exchange. The powers, privileges, and favors bestowed upon it in its original charter, by increasing the value of the stock far above par value, operated as a gratuity of many millions to the stockholders.

Carl Schurz, commenting on the insidious and brazen efforts of the Bank of the United States to secure for its own aggrandizement a paramount function of government, in his interesting and instructive biography of Henry Clay, says:

grandizement a paramount function of government, in his interesting and instructive biography of Henry Clay, says:

It would have been well for Clay and his party had they recognized the fact that not only this Bank of the United States could not be saved, but that no other great central bank, as the fiscal agent of the Government, could be put in its place with benefit to the country.

An institution whose interests depend upon the favor of the Government is always apt to be driven into politics, be it by the exactions of its political friends or by the attacks of its political enemies. Its capacity for mischief will then be proportioned to the greatness of its power, and the power of a central bank, acting as the fiscal agent of the Government, disposing of a harge capital, and controlling branch banks all over the country, must necessarily be very large. Being able to encourage or embarrass business by expanding or curtailing bank accommodations and to favor this and punish that locality by transferring its facilities, it may benefit or injure the interests of large masses of men and thereby exercise an influence upon their political conduct, not to speak of its opportunities for propitiating men in public position, as well as the press, by its substantial favors. So it was in the case of the Bank of the United States. Although Jackson's denunciations of its corrupt practices went far beyond the truth—which is extremely doubtful, as even the great statesman, Daniel Webster, was on its secret pay roll—there can be no doubt that, when it last fought for the renewal of its charter and against the removal of the deposits, it did use its power for political effect.

John Fiske, our scientific and philosophic historian, saw

John Fiske, our scientific and philosophic historian, saw clearly the deep-rooted and widespread evils that must necessarily accompany the delegation to private interests of the power to issue money, which is an exclusive function of the Government. He says:

It was Jackson whose sound instincts prompted him to a course of action quite in harmony with the highest political philosophy. During the administration of John Quincy Adams, there was fast growing up a tendency toward the mollycoddling, old granny theory of government, according to which the ruling powers are to take care of the people, do their banking for them, rob Peter to pay Paul for carrying on a losing business—just as the pending bill proposes—and tinker (?) and bemuddle things generally. It was, of course, beyond the power of any man to override a tendency of this sort, but Jackson did much to check it; and still more would have come from his initiative if the question of slavery and secession had not so soon come to absorb men's minds and divert attention from everything else. His destruction of the bank was brought about in a way that one can not wish to see often repeated; but there can be little doubt that it has saved us from a great deal of trouble and danger. By this time the bank, if it had lasted, would probably have become a most formidable engine of corruption.

PANIC OF 1837 FOR THE BANKERS.

The bank precipitated the panic of 1837 by refusing credit and extension of loans to farmers, merchants, and business men in general, foreclosing mortgages, and, by the abuse of its power, dislocating and paralyzing the entire industrial organization. But when the effects of these evil operations subsided, a period of general prosperity ensued-a prosperity so genuine and allpervading that it is regarded by impartial historians as the happlest and most prosperous period of our history. It offered conclusive proof of the beneficial effect, if not perhaps of a sound scientific currency system, of one that was at least free from favoritism and extortion.

The farming and small business interests were no longer at the mercy of financial bandits and unscrupulous money gamblers. Commerce made marvelous advances and our carrying trade grew so rapidly that within 10 years after the panic of 1837 had spent itself, our tonnage exceeded that of England. There was a constant, continuous development of all our productive industries, under financial freedom. Trusts and monopolies were not granted predatory privileges to rob and oppress the people. Agriculture, the indispensable basis of all production, was never more prosperous. The farmers and planters at no other period of our Nation's history were in receipt of such good prices, steadily paid to them in real genuine money for their surplus products, which they could ship to the home market on the railroads at reasonable rates, and to foreign markets in American ships maintained without subsidies.

The breaking out of the Civil War presented a splendid opportunity for the banking interests to again get control of the Nation's finances. The unselfish devotion of a people ready to make any sacrifice to preserve the Union of the States was taken advantage of by the moneyed interests to induce Congress to create two kinds of money, one for the bondholder, consisting of the precious metals, and the other for the people, consisting of a partial legal tender, a depreciated money; and to establish a national banking system which enabled the bankers to draw interest on both their debts and credits.

On July 17, 1861, an act was passed authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow $250,000,000, and to issue coupon bonds, registered bonds, or Treasury notes at his discretion. The bonds were to bear interest at 7 per cent, and run for 20 years. The Treasury notes were to bear 7.3 per cent, and were convertible into 20-year 6 per cent bonds.

On August 5, 1861, an act supplementary to the act of July 17 was passed authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds bearing interest at 6 per cent payable at the expiration of 20 years, which could be exchanged for Treasury notes bearing 7.3 per cent interest. It is manifestly evident that these bonds and notes were lame and impotent substitutes for money, and were issued at the dictates of the money power to prevent the Government from exercising its sovereign right to create a full legal tender money in the interest of the people.

THE PEOPLE DEMANDED REAL MONEY.

The people were demanding that Congress exercise its power and furnish the people in this national exigency with an efficient and sufficient medium of exchange. The enactments of July 17, 1861, and February 12, 1862, authorized the issue of $60,000,000 of Treasury notes, full legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private, without exception. This was the first and only attempt of our Government to establish a genuine and efficient monetary system free from the control of private selfish interests.

The money power realized that if this bill became a law it would deprive them of the power to dominate the circulating medium of the country. A formidable lobby appeared at once in Washington, consisting of the leading bankers of the country, and insisted that the Committee on Ways and Means and the Finance Committee of the Senate should meet them in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury on a certain date.

The New York Tribune, then under the honest and patriotic management of Horace Greeley, commenting on this meeting,

The Subcommittee on Ways and Means objected to any and every form of "shinning" by the Government through Wall or State Streets and the knocking down of Government stocks to 75 or 60 cents on the dollar, the inevitable results of throwing a new and large loan on the market without limitation as to price, and finished by firmly refusing to assent to a scheme that should permit a speculation by brokers and bankers and others in the Government securities, and particularly any scheme which should double the public debt of the country and double the expenses by damaging the credit of the Government.

Here we have the hypocritical patriotic pretenses of the money power exposed to public view. Their real purpose was to sandbag the Government in her hour of peril by knocking down her securities to 60 or 75 cents on the dollar, permit speculating by bankers and brokers in her securities, to double her public debt and double her expenditures by damaging her credit. Nevertheless and notwithstanding all this base treachery to the Nation in the greatest crisis in her history, the bankers and brokers won a complete victory. The bill was passed by the Senate, inserting the words-except duties for interest on bonds and notes, which shall be paid in coin-

And-

that duties on imported goods and proceeds of the sale of public lands should be set apart to pay coin interest on the debt of the United

A PERNICIOUS MEASURE, SAYS STEVENS.

As he reported the bill to the House as amended by the Senate, Thaddeus Stevens, chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Ways and Means, said:

I hope the gentlemen of the House will read the amendments. They are very important and, in my judgment, very pernicious, but I hope the House will examine them.

When the bill as amended was under consideration, he said:

When the bill as amended was under consideration, he said:

I have a melancholy foreboding that we are about to consummate a cunningly devised scheme which will carry great injury and loss to all classes of the people throughout this Union except one. With my colleague, I believe that no act of legislation of this Government was ever hailed with as much delight throughout the whole length and breadth of the Union, by every class without exception. It is true that there was a doleful sound came up from the caverns of bullion brokers and from the saloons of the associated banks.

Their cashiers and agents were soon on the ground and persuaded the Senate with but little deliberation to mangle and destroy what it had cost the House months to digest, consider, and pass. They fell upon the bill in hot haste and so disfigured and deformed it that its very father would not know it. Instead of being a beneficent measure, it is now positively mischievous. It has all the bad qualities which its enemies charged on the original bill and none of its benefits. It now creates money and by its very terms declares it a depreciated currency. It makes two classes of money—one for the bankers and brokers and another for the people. It discriminates between the rights of different classes of creditors, allowing the rich capitalists to demand gold and compelling the ordinary lender of money on individual security to receive notes which the Government had purposely discredited.

Representative Spaulding said:

Representative Spaulding said:

Representative Spaulding said:

I desire especially to oppose the amendment of the Senate which requires the interest on bonds to be paid in coin semiannually, and which authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to sell 6 per cent bonds at the market prices for coin to pay the interest. The passage of this measure, the legal tender bill, in this House was hailed with satisfaction by the great mass of the people all over the country. It received the hearty indorsement of such bodies as the chambers of commerce, New York, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Binfalo, Milwaukee, and other places. I have never known any measure to receive a more hearty approval from the people * * Why make these discriminations? Who asks to have one class of creditors placed on a better footing than another class? Do the people of New England, the Middle States, or the people of the West or Northwest or anywhere else in the rural districts have such discrimination made in their favor? Does the soldier, the farmer, the mechanic, or the merchant ask to have any such discrimination made in his favor? No, sir; no such unjust preference is asked for by this class of men. They ask for a legal-tender note bill, pure and simple. They ask for a national currency which shall be of equal value in all parts of the country. They want a currency that shall pass from hand to hand among all the people in every State, county, city, town, and village in the United States.

A DARK CHAPTER IN OUR HISTORY.

An able writer, considering this base and treacherous betrayal of the people's interest, says:

Here begins one of the darkest chapters in American history. It will be found that every step taken by Congress from this on in matters pertaining to the finances of the Nation has been dictated by the money power. Foreign capitalists, such as the Rothschilds, became deeply interested in the scheme of robbery inaugurated by the passage of this act; and through their agents, such as August Belmont, banker and whilom chairman of the Democratic National Committee, have aided the money power here materially in controlling the policy of both political parties.

The amount stolen from the people by the financial policy then adopted and which now encumbers the Nation in the shape of a bonded debt, payable principal and interest in gold, is estimated by such writers upon the subject of finance as J. S. Gibbons (contributor to Johnson's Universal Cyclopedia) at over one thousand million dollars, to say nothing of which the people have been robbed indirectly by means of the pernicious monetary system foisted upon the country.

EXPLOITING THE FARMERS AND LABORERS. This infamous scheme of exploiting the producing classes through the possession of an exclusive function of the Government was supplemented by the passage of the national bank act. When the Senate inserted the words "excepting the payment of interest on the public debt," or "be received in payment of customs duties" in the legal tender bill, they purposely depre-clated their own currency by making it a partial legal tender, good enough for the people but not good enough for the financial bandits who secured its insertion. Hence, in 1864, $35,000 in gold could buy $100,000 in partial legal-tender notes. ernment received these notes at their face value, funded them into a bond drawing 6 per cent interest in coin, and upon the bond issued $90,000 national-bank notes, which the bankers loaned to the people at 8 and 10 per cent. So by this financial legerdemain the banks were drawing interest on $190,000, for which they actually paid only $35,000.

THE FAMOUS HAZZARD CIRCULAR.

In order to prove conclusively that this whole financial scheme was the work of international investment bankers, I will read what is known as the Hazzard Circular, issued in the fall of 1862, a copy of which came into the possession of Hon. Isaac Sharp, a student of law under Thaddeus Stevens, and subsequently acting Governor of Kansas. The circular says:

Slavery is likely to be abolished by the war power and chattel slavery destroyed. This I and my European friends are in favor of, for slavery is but the owning of labor and carries with it the care of the laborer, while the European plan, led on by England, is capital's control of labor by controlling wages. This can be done by controlling the money. The great debt that capitalists will see to that is made out of the war must be used as a measure to control the volume of money. To accomplish this the bonds must be used as a banking basis. We are now waiting to get the Secretary of the Treasury to make this recommendation to Congress.

Mr. Hazzard, the author of these atroclously inhuman propositions, was solicitor of the English Bankers' Association. One of the many contemptible tricks of the money power is to make the currency question so complicated that the ordinary citizen can not understand it, and make it appear to him as one of the abstruse sciences. With this object in view they had the Treasury Department issue 15 different forms of Government obligations.

WHO DEMONETIZED SILVER, AND WHY?

Silver was demonetized by an act of Congress that for treachery, perfidy, and deception has no precedent nor a parallel in the annals of representative government. President Grant, who signed the bill, said that he did not know that the act of 1873 demonetized silver. Senator Morgan, of New York, said:

It can not even be fairly said that Congress did it. It was done at the instigation of the bondholders and other money kings, who now, with upturned eyes, deplore the wickedness we exhibit in asking the question, even, Whe did this great wrong against the toiling millions of our people?

Senator Beck, of Kentucky, said:

The bill demonetizing silver never was understood by either House of

The demonetization of silver was to make the national debt and interest thereon payable in gold.

Then we had the silver purchase act, which, in its last analysis, meant no more than taking silver out of a hole in the ground in the West and putting it in a hole in Washington and issuing certificates against it. President Cleveland, who was elected in 1892 on a tariff-reform platform, showed his sub-serviency to the money power by calling Congress in extra session to repeal the purchasing clause of the silver act.

The tariff-reform cry upon which the people elected him was not passed until 18 months after his induction into office, and finally was a miserable abortion, in which his promise to the people was shamelessly violated, and the privilege of the predatory interests firmly intrenched and buttressed.

Mr. President, the Manufacturers' Record, issue of February 22, 1923, contains a most important and interesting article, centioned "An american source of the production of the production captioned "An amazing revelation of secret financial meeting." This gives us some light warmen ing." This gives us some light upon the development of the policy of drastic deflation. This strikes me as of great importance in the financial history of our country, and it should go into a permanent record.

Also, in the Issue of the Manufacturers' Record for October 21, 1920, appeared an interesting and illuminating article captioned "An amazing situation of world importance." In the issue of the same publication for November 3, 1921, appeared another article, captioned "A strange financial admission." These last two articles tend to show that drastic deflation was a world-wide policy, designed by the international bankers, to be carried on through the central banking institutions throughout the world. They strike me as evidence of an immoral and conscienceless conspiracy against the people of the nations of the earth, and such a conspiracy as almost borders upon treason.

In order that these articles may be preserved for the future, so that historians may have them at hand for their considera-tion, I ask unanimous consent to insert the three mentioned articles in the RECORD in the usual 8-point type. The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[From the Manufacturers Record, October 21, 1920.] AN AMAZING SITUATION OF WORLD INPORTANCE.

Bulletin No. 2, issued September 27 by the First Federal Foreign Banking Association, which is controlled by the leading banking institutions of New York, states that the League of Nations is carrying on a world campaign "for drastic credit restrictions through existing central banking institutions." also says that measures have been taken in the United States "to restrict the granting of credits and put up the cost of borrowing," and that "our restriction of credit shows far-reaching influences, bringing about reduced production and liquidation of commodities.

> [From the Manufacturers Record, November 3, 1921.] A STRANGE FINANCIAL ADMISSION.

The First Federal Foreign Banking Association of New York in its Bulletin No. 13, issued on September 30, in reviewing the question of money and credit, says: "The strangle hold that gold has comes from the fact that it has the monopoly of world-wide command of purchase at unquestioned parity."

The Century Dictionary defines "strangle" as "to draw tight, squeeze, to choke by compression of the windpipe, kill by choking, throttle." Who would ever have imagined that a great banking institution of New York would thus refer to gold as having a strangle hold?

Further on in the same financial circular it is said "there is not gold enough in the world to make current settlements with. If the realization that something must be done promptly is not vivid now, it certainly will be very soon."

We have tried for several years to warn the financiers of the world that with a steadily decreasing gold output and a larger consumption of gold for the arts the world is facing a gold shortage, which unless there is a change by some better system of financing, will ultimately lead to world-wide panic and world-wide repudiation of debts and bonds, national and corpo-Gold as it now stands limited to an output with a steadily decreasing supply indeed has, as stated by the First Federal Foreign Banking Association, of New York, "a stranand this strangle hold unless it is released will ultimately produce the very things defined by the Century Dictionary, "to draw tight, squeeze, to choke by compression of the windpipe, kill by choking, throttle."

[From the Manufacturers Record, February 22, 1923.]

AMAZING REVELATION OF SECRET FINANCIAL MEETING—ON MAY 18, 1920, FEDERAL RESERVE MEETING IN WASHINGTON DISCUSSED DEFLATION, RESTRICTION OF CREDIT, BREAKING DOWN OF PRICES, AND HIGHER FREIGHT RATES, BUT GOVERNOR HARDING WARNED THOSE PRESENT NOT TO DIVULOR THE DISCUSSIONS OF THE DAY—THE INSIDE STORY REVEALED BY A STENOGRAPHIC REPORT OBTAINED BY THE MANUFACTURERS RECORD.

"After one of the most fateful meetings in the financial history of the world, a meeting which no other organization, including the Interstate Commerce Commission or the Supreme Court of the United States, would ever have dared to hold in secret and reach its conclusions in secret and withhold its conclusions from the public, Governor Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, in closing that meeting of the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Advisory Council, and the class A directors of Federal reserve banks, said: 'I would suggest, gentlemen, that you be careful not to give out anything about any discussion of discount rates. That is one thing there ought not to be any previous discussion about, because it dis-turbs everybody, and if people think rates are going to be advanced there will be an immediate rush to get into the banks before the rates are put up, and the policy of the reserve board is that that is one thing we never discuss with a newspaper man. If he comes in and wants to know if the board has considered any rates or is likely to do anything about rates, some remark is made about the weather or something else and we tell him we can not discuss rates at all. And I think we are all agreed it would be very ill advised to give out any impression that any general overhauling of rates was discussed at this conference. We have discussed the general credit situation and your committee, which has been appointed with plenary powers, will prepare a statement which will be given out to the press to-morrow morning and we will all see what it is. You can go back to your banks and of course tell your fellow directors as frankly as you choose what has happened here to-day, but caution them to avoid any premature discussion of rates as such. We have had an exceedingly interesting day, gentlemen. The suggestions which have been made have been valuable and we have profited by your views. I wish to express on behalf of the board our appreciation of your coming here and to thank you for the unselfish and loyal interest you l have taken in the Federal bank situation throughout the country in giving this matter the careful thought and consideration that you have. And I am sure that the spirit which has manifested itself at this meeting here to-day will spread throughout all the country, to the member and nonmember banks, and if it does we can look the future in the face with courage and confidence.'

"These closing words of a fateful conference, it can be conservatively said, are the most damning indictment of the management of the Federal reserve system which could be penned by the worst enemies of that organization. The Manufacturers Record has shown since shortly after that meeting was held some of its decisions, but it has never until within the last few days been able to get hold of a stenographic copy of the minutes. But with this stenographic report we are now able to give to our readers some details regarding that meeting which strengthened and confirmed the work of deflation which had already been inaugurated. After a long conference and full discussion, covering 37 pages of foolscap, closely typewritten, the statement that Governor Harding closed the meeting with was emphatic warning to those in attendance that the deliberations of that meeting should be held as strictly confidential except to fellow directors and that the public should not be allowed to know what had taken place and the newspapers should know only so much of the meeting as the carefully prepared statement would present.

"As far back as July 3, 1919, the Manufacturers Record warned the Federal Reserve Board against some of the actions that were then being taken, and said:

"'Not for a moment would we suggest that the members of the Federal Reserve Board were in any way financially interested in the stock market, but we can readily understand the limitless power of stock speculation and the manipulation of the stock market which would be available to anyone who knew a few hours in advance of such proposed action by the Reserve Board. It is entirely within the power of that board to break the stock or the cotton market or to bring about a big boom movement in cotton or stocks. The power is too great to rest in the hands of any seven men, even if they were angelic in character, for they might be succeeded by those who were not so angelic.'

"That editorial emphasized the control which big financial interests had held over the stock market to break it when it suited their convenience to buy in stock or to boom it when it suited their convenience to unload stocks, and we added: 'It was hoped that the organization of the Federal Reserve Board would make this impossible; but the recent action of the board resulted in a very rapid break in the stock market, and it is within the power of the board to bring about a rapid ad-vance whenever there is a change of policy and prevent the calling of loans or the sharp advance in money.

"In that editorial we quoted from the Boston News Bureau a very sharp arraignment of some of the methods of the Federal Reserve Board and closed with the statement from the news bureau:

"'Before the Federal reserve system a money squeeze was one of the tricks of the trade to frighten the public out of their stocks. Are the administrators of the Federal reserve system going to countenance the same old game by allowing the people who have the control of money to play with values on a discount basis, arresting advancement and prosperity?

"When two years ago the Manufacturers Record urged that every important meeting of the Federal Reserve Board should be held in the open, with the right of the public to know what was taking place, so that no secret acts should be passed giving to the insiders limitless possibilities for money-making, we knew that we had thrown a bombshell into the camp of secrecy, but we did not at that time know that Governor Harding had so specifically and emphatically urged that that conference should regard its whole discussion as secret and to be withheld from the newspapers and from the public at large. The human mind is somewhat staggered as it tries to outline the limitless possibilities for money-making on the part of every man who, having this secret information, knew exactly what would happen in the business world long in advance of what the general business public could even suspect, even if no man ever used this information to his own individual no man ever used this information to his own individual profit. This conference, the closing statement of which we have quoted, was held on May 18, 1920. Those in attendance were as follows

"Hon. Adolph C. Miller, member of the Federal Reserve Board.

"Hon. Henry A. Mohlenpah, member of the Federal Reserve Board.

"Hon. John Skelton Williams, Comptroller of the Currency and member ex officio of the Federal Reserve Board.

- "Hon, David F. Houston, Secretary of the Treasury and member ex officio of the Federal Reserve Board.
 - George L. Harrison, counsel, Federal Reserve Board.
 - Also the members of the Federal advisory council: "Philip Stockton, Federal reserve district No. 1.
 - "A. B. Hepburn, Federal reserve district No. 2.
 - "L. L. Rue, Federal reserve district No. 3.

 - "W. S. Rowe, Federal reserve board No. 4.
 "J. G. Brown, Federal reserve district No. 5.
- "Oscar Wells, Federal reserve district No. 6.
- "James B. Forgan, Federal reserve district No. 7. "F. O. Watts, Federal reserve district No. 8.
- "E. F. Swinney, Federal reserve district No. 10. "R. L. Ball, Federal reserve district No. 11. "A. L. Mills, Federal reserve district No. 12.
- "J. H. Puelicher, Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee, Wis.
 "John Perrin, chairman of the board and Federal reserve
- agent, Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco.
- "Hon, Edmund Platt, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, House of Representatives.
- "Also the following class A directors of the Federal reserve
- banks: "Boston: Thomas Beal, Edward S. Kennard, and Frederick
- S. Chamberlain. "New York: James A. Alexander, R. H. Treman, Charles
- Smith, and J. H. Sisson. "Philadelphia: Joseph Wayne, jr., M. J. Murphy, and Francis
- "Cleveland: O. N. Sams, Robert Wardrop, and Chess Lam-
- "Richmond: John F. Bruton, Charles E. Rieman, and Edwin
- "Atlanta: J. K. Ottley, Oscar Newton, P. R. Kittles, and W. H. Kettig.
- "Chicago: George M. Reynolds, Charles H. McNider, and E. L. Johnson.
 - St. Louis: J. C. Utterback and Sam A. Ziegler.
- "Minneapolis: Wesley C. McDowell and E. W. Decker.
 "Kansas City: J. C. Mitchell, C. E. Burham, and W. J.
- "Dallas: John T. Scott, E. K. Smith, and B. A. McKinney.
 "San Francisco: C. K. McIntosh, J. E. Fishburn, and M. A.
- Buchan.
- DOOM OF COUNTRY'S BUSINESS INTERESTS SOUNDED AT CONFERENCE COMPOSED EXCLUSIVELY OF BANKERS.
- "It will be noted that those in attendance were preeminently bankers and that business men as such were not there, though the business men and not the bankers are the ones who create the business of the country, whether in agriculture, manufacture, or other lines of industry. Their doom was being settled in a conference composed exclusively of bankers.
- "In opening the proceedings Governor Harding, referring to those in attendance, said:
- "The class A directors are the banker members of the boards of directors of the Federal reserve banks. not only directors, and as a rule very influential directors, of
- Federal reserve banks but they are officials of member banks, and thus they see both sides of the picture. So it seems to be peculiarly appropriate at a time when there is a banking situation to discuss to have bankers here to discuss it.'
- "It is true that it might have been important to have bankers there to discuss the subjects up for consideration that day, but is it not also true that the manufacturers, the merchants, the farmers, and all others representing the ducing and transportation interests of the country were just as vitally interested in a conference of this kind as those who were exclusively engaged in banking? In a rather lengthy opening speech Governor Harding said:
- "'Every effort should be made to stimulate necessary pro duction, especially of food products, and to avoid waste.
- "And having encouraged the farmers to the utmost extent during the spring of 1920 to carry forward their farming operations despite the high wages that were being paid labor drastic deflation was put into effect, breaking down the prices of farm products to an extent that literally bankrupted hundreds of thousands of farmers.
- "'We can,' said Governor Harding, 'restrict credit and expand production, letting the expansion of production proceed at a greater rate than the restriction of credit, and we are then working along in the right direction.'
- "No human being has yet found a way to restrict the credit facilities essential for increasing production and at the same time bring about increased production. That statement is so rankly absurd on its face that it is an amazing thing that any man professing to be either a banker or a political economist

- could presume to suggest that restriction of credit and expansion of production could go hand in hand.
 "It is in striking contrast with the statement quoted from
- Hon. Reginald McKenna, formerly Chancellor of the Exchequer of Great Britain and one of the world's great banking authorities, given elsewhere in this issue, in which Mr. Mc-Kenna said: 'The continuance of a high rate or the adoption of any other method for the purpose of forcing down prices is bound to strangle trade and reduce output. interfere with the natural flow of trade by any restriction of existing producing power but must seek a general increase of wealth through a more abundant output.'
- "And as that day's meeting was devoted to a discussion of how to increase interest rates in order to lessen the volume of business, it is interesting to quote from a statement made by Comptroller Crissinger, recently nominated as governor of the Federal Reserve Board, in which he said: 'Falling prices and high interest rates are never twin sisters of prosperity. I can not too emphatically say that I do not believe deflation in currency and credits can go hand in hand with a régime of high interest rates without imposing great and dangerous hardships upon the people.'
- "'It is very clear,' said Governor Harding, 'that if we find it impossible under the present circumstances to increase the volume of production of the most essential articles, the only thing for us to do is to reduce consumption of those articles. In other words, here was a definite plan to break down business and lessen consumption at a time when the American people and the world at large were buying freely of everything that could be produced.
- "This plan of forcing down prices and breaking down business had been secretly inaugurated long before the meeting whose records we now have before us and from which we have been quoting, for on February 12, 1920, the Manufacturers Record published an extract from a letter from one of the foremost bankers of the country, in the course of which, criticising this paper because we had denounced the efforts of banks through the pressure of the Federal reserve system to call all loans on Government bonds, he said:
- "'You can further see that if by any pressure these bonds can be turned out of the Federal reserve banks and passed over to the strong boxes of great institutions-savings banks. life-insurance companies, large estates, benevolent and philanthropic institutions-just to that extent the 12 banks would be in a position to extend additional facilities to merchants and business men generally. Of course it seems hard that anyone who for patriotic purposes should have invested in Government bonds should be practically called upon to part with say a loss of from 8 to 9 per cent, but facts are stubborn things and conditions more important than theories.
- "That same banker wrote us that he would not lend money any collateral of any kind, it mattered not how good it might be, and that there was too much business in the country and it should be brought down to normal conditions
- "That was the spirit which was being inculcated by the then management of the Federal reserve system. Stripped of all its useless verbiage, the meeting of May 18 was largely devoted to the discussion of how to lessen the activity which was prevailing throughout the country and bring on deflation of business and of credits. Governor Harding said: 'We should be careful, however, not to overde this matter of liquidation, because too drastic a policy of deflation, which might result in crowding to the wall and throwing into bankruptcy legitimate enterprises, however unessential their operations may be, would have a tremendously bad effect and would defeat the purpose of the very policy which we are trying to have established.' He added 'A sensible and gradual liquidation will result in permanent improvement, as we all know, but any attempt at radical or drastic deflation, merely for the sake of deflation, will result in very serious consequences, and such a policy should be avoided.'
- "But drastic deflation is exactly what took place. Some of the men who went from that meeting went with the impression, and said so, that a policy of deflation and the breaking down of prices could be put into effect and that the Federal reserve management would have the power to stop this deflation and price breaking at any point when it might decide that it had gone far enough, not having financial ability sufficient to comprehend the fact that when they started business on the toboggan slide they would not be able to stop it until it collapsed at the bottom. Every man of ordinary intelligence ought to have been able to see the inevitable result of the policies dis- cussed and outlined in that campaign.

 "Over and over again during the process of deflation it was stated by Governor Harding and others that the banks of the country were guilty of misleading, even to the extent of practically lying to their customers by declining to make loans, alleging the opposition of the Federal Reserve Board, but in Governor Harding's speech he said: 'The directors of the Federal reserve banks are clearly within their rights when they say to any member bank, "You have gone far enough; we are familiar with your condition; you have got more than your share and we want you to reduce. We can not let you have any more." They must exercise their discretion as to the proper course to pursue but they have the power and there are many cases where the rule ought to be laid down and a member bank ought to be made to understand that it can not use the resources of the Federal reserve banks for its own private advantage for profit."

"At the close of his address Mr. Hepburn asked if any arrangement had been made to place Governor Harding's opening remarks before the public and to this Governor Harding said: 'I have a synopsis prepared which was given to the press on yesterday for release to-morrow morning. It is rather more abridged than the statement I made this morning, but it is the substance of it.'

It is interesting to take this statement in connection with Governor Harding's closing remark at the end of the convention which we have already quoted and in which he insisted that the discussion of the meeting should not be given to the press or to the people and the only thing which should be given to the press would be a summary prepared by the committee.
"Thus neither the press nor the public ever had any real information on what took place at that meeting.

TRIFLING DISCUSSION BY FIRST DISTRICT OFFICIALS.

"After closing his address the meeting was opened by Governor Harding with an invitation to those in attendance to make reports as to conditions in their communities and in the Federal reserve banks with which they were connected. Mr. Thomas Beal, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, said: 'We seem to have been able to have had some liquidation in

And the public knew only too well that there has been a great deal of liquidation due to drastic deflation, not only in

"Mr. Chamberlain, of the Boston bank, had nothing to say, but added, 'I am the baby director on the board and Mr. Beal is our spokesman.'

"Mr. Kennard, of the same bank, said: 'I am a group 3 director of the first Federal district, and I want to say that we have a very healthy looking baby.'

"But whether he was referring to the bank as a healthy looking baby or to Mr. Chamberlain as the baby director we have no means of knowing, but the public can probably gain some light from the trifling discussion of the healthy looking baby and baby director from men who were facing one of the greatest financial problems that the world has ever had to meet. It was a time which called for real men, men who could think and who could say and did not plead the baby act or newness. However, Mr. Kennard, continuing, said, 'I also think that the rates for money should continue on a high level, with the hope of causing liquidation in commodities. Of course, liquidation would result in low prices and the easing up of business. I do not think this body should encourage any drastice measures of readjustment. I think the deflation should be gradual, and I think we should give more care to the commercial paper that is rediscounted at the Federal reserve banks.

That Mr. Kennard or anyone else has found out how high rates of money shall be forced upon a country without producing drastic liquidation in place of gradual deflation he will have discovered something that no other human being has yet been able to discover. Mr. Kennard emphasized the congestion of the transportation facilities and the fact that the warehouses were congested because they did not have the shipping facilities, and this thought runs through a great many of the discussions of that day, and yet without shipping facilities merchants and manufacturers were told that they must ship their stuff in order to liquidate their accounts.

NEW YORK BANKERS FAVORED CURTAILMENT OF EXPANSION WHEREVER POSSIBLE.

"Mr. James A. Alexander, of New York, said, 'We find today, I think, a hesitation in business. Large users of credit are inquiring as to what the future has in store for them. I think now is the logical time to deal with this question, perhaps the best time that has occurred up to now, to bring this credit situation home to the users of credit. Although while this hesitation is on they will get some loans, prices are being reduced, but nevertheless, unless there is a very substantial contraction and a very definite and positive announcement made in some way, the users of credit in the country may become more hopeful again that the situation is not one to be feared, and they will feel justified in going ahead and making very substantial and large commitments for the future.

Following this, Mr. Alexander suggested that the discount rate should be raised, 'not to 61 or 61 per cent but to 7 per cent on commercial paper.' In reply to a question from Governor Harding as to whether the raise in rate would penalize anybody who could not liquidate on account of transportation facilities, Mr. Alexander said: 'I am afraid somebody is bound to be penalized in order to bring about "production." A percentage of 1 per cent is not a very heavy penalty in the way of an interest charge, but it is a very positive announcement that the credit situation is such that further expansion must be presented and that curtailment should be had wherever possible.' When asked as to the transportation situation in his district Mr. Alexander said: 'There is almost no such thing there now'; and he added: 'There is one thing, I think, to be feared, and that is that if the transportation facilities are improved and commodities moved freely and credits are thereby released it may make a temporary ease in the money market, and may encourage people to go ahead and expand. I believe now is the time to put the rates up and to keep them up.

From this one might interpret Mr. Alexander's statement as indicating that he did not desire to see transportation facilities improved and commodities moved freely, because that would release credits and encourage the business people to go May Heaven save this Nation from a policy so narrow visioned and so amazing as that!

"Mr. Treman, also of the New York district, said: 'I think Mr. Alexander has well expressed the general sentiment of the directors in our district, that there is a spirit of hesitation and uncertainty prevailing throughout the country, and that the business interests are looking to the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal reserve banks to indicate what is to be done. We have felt in New York that it was advisable to advance the rate further than at present, because we got good results from the action which was taken in the winter. We believe the time is coming when there should be a further warning by the advancement of the rate throughout the country. Not that it would curtail business—that is, the advancement of a point or a half point in the commercial rate-but it would be a warning to a great many banks that will not be affected by the graduated or progressive rate that in dealing with their customers they should recognize what many of them apparently do not recognize yet, and that is that the credit situation is a very strained one and should be dealt with now before the conflagration becomes too severe. As to the particular method to be employed, Mr. Alexander, I think, has correctly stated the position of the directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York-that is, that there should be an immediate raise in rate; second, that the position outlined by Governor Harding with regard to the process and methods of education should be car-* I am in very close touch with certain of the distributing interests-jobbers in hardware and jewelry and other lines-and I am sure that they are disturbed and they are looking to the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal reserve banks to outline a remedy which will deal with the situation in a sound and sane way at the present time without causing undue alarm. We can do that if we begin and restrict within reason the granting of credit through individual banks. You must do something more than send them requests not to do it. The way to do it is to bring them face to face with the officials of the Federal reserve banks in each district and have them understand the situation and have them in turn go back and deal with the commercial and business interests. in addition to reaching the business organizations through their officials reach the agricultural societies and organizations though their officials, so that if there should be an effort to get in touch with the large interests in each district and merely point out the necessity for a reasonable curtailment of credit, the same as we curtailed sugar and coal when there was a real need for it, it seems to me that by the raising of rates now, by the education of bankers individually and by these group meetings and by going on further and extending our suggestions to the business interests of the country, I believe that we can forestall any very serious disturbance in the fall.'

"Mr. Alexander was asked by Mr. Ottley, referring to the suggested raise in rates to 7 per cent: 'In view of the basic line that is under consideration by the Federal reserve bank, would it be your idea, Mr. Alexander, to just make a flat rate of 7 per cent or start off the basic line at 6 per cent with a rising scale?' And to this Mr. Alexander replied: 'Make the basic rate 7 per cent. I am in hopes that there will be no plan of progressive rates put in effect in New York. Make the rate 7 per cent. I am speaking of commercial paper. Commercial paper is the thing that is being created in volume right now and we want to limit it as much as we possibly can limit the creation of commercial paper.'

"Mr. Charles Smith, of New York, said: 'The entire board of our bank is in hearty accord with the advancement of rates as expresed by both Mr. Alexander and Mr. Treman.'

"Mr. John Skelton Williams said: 'Before we leave this question, Mr. Alexander, as you suggest a 7 per cent rate do you not think that one of the effects of a 7 per cent rate as a minimum rate for all banks would be to discharge essential industries? Six per cent is the maximum rate in New York except on bonds and certain other things. A small bank might have an application from an essential industry and it would realize that if it were to lend to that industry the accommodation that it needed it could only reimburse itself at the higher rate or at a loss. It would have to charge that essential industry 6 per cent and would have to pay 7 per cent and there would therefore be no inclination to extend the accommodation at a loss even to an essential industry. On the other hand, if you put the rate at 7 per cent, that would not deter the profiteers who are making 70 per cent profit, 20 per cent, or 50 per cent. My apprehension and wonder is whether a higher rate of interest would not in the long run discourage the essential producers and at the same time have no effect at all upon the profiteers, upon the men who are making exorbitant and extortionate profits."

"Mr. Alexander replied: 'In the case of a corporation there can be a contract rate, whatever is agreed upon.' But to this statement Mr. Williams replied: 'The farmers, for example, are not corporations and a great many of the smaller transac-tions are not carried on with corporations.' And to this Mr. Alexander replied: 'No, I am coming to that point. Between corporations there is a contract rate, but in smaller transaccorporations there is a contract take, but in smarter transactions, where you are dealing with individuals and with farmers, 6 per cent is the legal rate. I do not think it makes a particle of difference to any of these borrowers, certainly to none of those with whom we come in contact, whether they pay 5 per cent, 6 per cent, or 7 per cent. The question is, 'Can we get the money? That is the question to-day. 'You lend us the money and we will pay the rate.' They say, 'You lend us the money and we will pay the rate.' Now, there is the objection as stated by you of charging 7 per cent to the member banks when they can only collect 6 per cent. that is a feature of the situation that must be met. In other words, I think the purpose to be served is so great and of such prime importance that these other matters must be considered of smaller importance. I think the bank would have to stand in between the users of credit for essential purif necessary, or they can have balances which will jus-poses, if necessary, or they can have balances which will justify them in making a loan at 6 per cent, although they have to pay 7 per cent for the money.'

"Continuing the discussion, Mr. Alexander said: 'That is exactly what you would acomplish by making a profiteer understand that credit is a luxury and difficult to get,' and so a great New York banker, holding the purse strings over hundreds of milions, we believe, wants to make it out that credit is a luxury and it is difficult to get. In this particular case he was referring to the profiteer, but that spirit that 'credit is a luxury, and is difficult to get,' in this particular, prevailed in too many bapking rooms where a man was entitled to credit and should not have been made to feel that credit was a luxury.

have been made to feel that credit was a luxury

"Mr. Williams suggested that in dealing with a profiteer the purpose could be better accomplished by saying to him: 'We won't let you have the money,' than by letting him have the money, even at 10 per cent.

"Mr. Alexander agreed to this statement as true and added: 'We could say that they could not have the money and we should see to it that the profiteer is cut out and that the essential industry is carried, even at the expense of the bank." Referring to those who had engaged in what was called profiteering during the period of rising prices, Mr. Alexander said: 'People of that kind will disappear rapidly, I think, under present conditions, because they will be forced out.'

THIRD DISTRICT COOPERATED IN DEFLATION OF CREDIT.

"Mr. Joseph Wayne, of Philadelphia, said that he did not think the third district was unduly alarmed over the credit situation, but that they 'felt for some time that it required rationing and the green signal had been out."

"When the Government sold its bonds the Treasury Department and the banks of the country pledged to 20,000,000 buyers of these bonds that they could be carried through the banks until they could be paid for out of earnings. On the subject of liquidating these Government bonds, Mr. Wayne said:

We may have been subject to criticism for not liquidating more promptly the obligations secured by Government bonds, but we more or less acted along the suggestion of the previous Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board at the time these loans were taken, and it now looks to us to be a pretty bad time to force these bonds on the market. They are being more or less liquidated. We have been endeavoring in our own bank in the last month to force Liberty bonds on the market, but they do not go on very comfortably. who have to part with them and lose 13 points do not part with their money very gracefully.'

"When asked by Governor Harding if a 7 per cent rate in New York had forced the Philadelphia bank to put on a 7 per cent rate, Mr. Wayne said: 'No; but you know the general custom is that when one bank raises its rate we usually suggestion from the Federal Reserve Board that they will approve a raising of rate for our district, and that usually goes through.' When asked as to transportation facilities, Mr. Wayne reported them as very poor and the freight blockade as serious, and that during the past few weeks the transportation situation had not shown any improvement.

"Mr. Francis Douglas, of the Philadelphia Reserve Bank, reported that some banks were not cooperating to the fullest extent with the Federal reserve bank, and he suggested that a letter stating the actual conditions should be sent to the various letter stating the actual conditions should be sent to banks, throughbanks, not only member banks but nonmember banks. be very beneficial and would help a great deal in the deflation of credit.'

FOURTH DISTRICT OFFICIAL FAVORED BREAKING DOWN BUSINESS AND BUILD-ING UP FROM BOTTOM,

"Mr. Robert Wardrop, of the Cleveland Reserve Bank, said: 'I think a reasonable depression in business will be a good thing for the country,' and he added, 'I really think we would do better if we could get down to a lower basis, a different basis, and then from that we can work up again.'

"In other words, it would be a good thing, according to Mr. Wardrop, which was the view of a leading banker we have already quoted, that business should be broken down and then take a fresh start from the bottom. . Millions of people who lost by that kind of teaching naturally question its wisdom.

"Mr. Chess Lamberton, of the Cleveland bank, one whom we have already quoted, also classes himself as a 'baby director,' and declined to express any opinion on any of the subjects discussed.

NECESSITY FOR RAISING DISCOUNT RATE DOUBTED BY FIFTH DISTRICT REPRESENTATIVES.

"Notwithstanding the fact that the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank sent out a circular letter in August, 1920, that it had been urging its member banks for more than 12 months to restrict credit, Mr. John F. Bruton, of the Richmond bank, referring to the heavy demands of agricultural loans, said: 'I hope it will not be necessary to increase the rate of interest. for fear that it might be construed as a reflection upon this great industry, which in the final analysis is doing the work of the country. Probably I am a little old-fashioned, but I have the impression that some positive relief could be had at the discount table of the Federal reserve bank by the discounting committee in drawing in on certain few banks in the district and limiting their borrowings, which would give to their banks the opportunity to make essential arrangements.' When referring to some banks that he thought had been borrowing too heavily, Mr. Bruton said: 'Some of them have two feet in the trough already and it might be advisable to reduce on some of them."

"The suggestion that any bankers trying to take care of their customers were hoggishly inserting two feet in the credit trough seems a little rough, and perhaps Mr. Bruton spoke unadvisedly.

Mr. Charles E. Rieman, of Baltimore, a director of the Richmond bank, said: 'I hardly see the necessity of increasing the rate at this time. * * * With regard to the retail business, I have made a pretty close examination of it, and I do not think the shelves are overloaded.'

"Mr. Rieman was entirely correct in his position that there was no necessity of increasing the rate and that the country was not overstocked with goods.

PENALTIES IN SIXTH DISTRICT CERTAINLY BECAME STRONG.

"Mr. J. K. Ottley, of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank, said: 'The condition of the farmers, merchants, and manufacturers in the sixth district, in large majority, is good.

"Contrast this good condition of farmers, merchants, and manufacturers in the latter part of May, 1920, as reported by Mr. Ottley, with the chaotic condition of business in that district when, by higher rates and curtailment of credit, business chaos was produced, not only in that immediate district but throughout the country generally. In further discussion of the matter, Mr. Ottley said: 'I would not feel at this time, from an independent standpoint, that a raise in the rate was necessary other than to put in this basic line and make the penalties very strong as they progressed.'

"In view of the fact that penalty for higher rates were inflicted by the Atlanta bank on one Alabama bank, which was trying to protect its farmer customers, up to 871 per cent, the Atlanta bank evidently carried out the suggestion of making the penalty very strong."

EMINENT CHICAGO BANKER SOUNDED WARNING NOTE.

"Mr. George M. Reynolds, of Chicago, was evidently not in favor of breaking down business so as to get a new basis from which to start again, for he said: 'If we pass through this crisis successfully and maintain prosperity at anything like its present level, I think the first requisite necessary is the maintenance of confidence. Believing, furthermore, that confidence is to a considerable extent a state of mind, it seems to me that we people who are from the outside points here could do more for the state of mind along the line of trying to enable the members of the Federal Reserve Board to look through our glasses and get the focus of things as we see them at the other end of the line."

What a daggerlike thrust that was on the part of Mr. Reynolds against some members of the Federal Reserve Board when he, as one of the greatest bankers of America, suggested that one of the most important things was to get the Federal Reserve Board to look at the situation from his standpoint. What an infinite pity Mr. Reynolds was not able to bring about such a desirable change of vision! Further discussing the subject, Mr. Reynolds said: 'I would not be honest with myself if I did not express my own frank opinion on some of the questions that have been raised here. I have not lost my belief in the theory that the yardstick is the interest rate, which is after all the best means of controlling the demand for money. I hope the Federal Reserve Board and the other people interested in this problem will not overlook this one principle.

'As I understand it, reserves are kept and enmassed and impounded for the purpose of loans in times of emergency. Take the central reserve cities, and there are deposited in those banks, as you know, secondary reserve deposits, which since the organization of the system have been lying there dormant. In times like this when there is an emergency there is a shrinking first in deposits, and then many of these institutions come back to us for credit requirements which are not borrowed ordinarily. We have that situation in this crisis. In every institution in this country there is a large amount of paper which is not eligible for rediscount at the Federal reserve bank, but at the same time it represents the very cream of paper in so far as the question of safety is con-cerned. * * It may seem to you people have the It may seem to you people here that under conditions which arise whereby there should be deflation rather than inflation the banks should stop loaning money. That is just as impossible without trouble as it is for us to fly out of this room. * * * I have not one particle of fear about of this room. * * * I have not one particle of fear about the outcome. It is just a question of using what we might call horse sense and not getting stampeded or excited or doing something under stress of excitement or going off, as we somemes say in the country, half cocked.'
"Mr. Charles H. McNider said: 'We feel there must be reason, there must be sanity, that the essentials must be taken care of, that there can not be an extraordinary cutting down of credits at this time because that would create disaster.

We ought to deflate in a sane and reasonable manner."
"Unfortunately, Mr. McNider's suggestions were not taken, for we deflated in an insane and extraordinary manner, and the result was world disaster.

"Mr. E. L. Johnson, of the Chicago Reserve Bank, said: 'I believe that education and propaganda must be carried on, with authority and with strength, carried on from this board and from these gentlemen here down to all the nonmember banks on to the small business man in the small factory.'

"Evidently the propaganda was carried on and carried on with authority and with strength, for bankers everywhere were warned to curtail credits, and naturally any man who was not a fool from the top of his head to the bottom of his feet knew that that meant the breakdown of prices, the breakdown of business, and the increase of unemployment; and therefore every man stopped buying raw materials or finished products of every kind. Mr. Johnson added that Governor Harding's speech should be 'properly disseminated among them with the show of authority, even if you do not have it.'

"What an amazing statement for one of the directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago to make to the effect that Governor Harding's speech should be broadly disseminated among the banks with a show of authority, even if Governor Harding did not have such authority!

MINNEAPOLIS BANKER WANTED TO STOP HIGH FINANCE IN POLITICS AND BUSINESS.

Mr. Wesley C. McDowell, of the Minneapolis Reserve Bank, said: 'I do not like this increase in rates. Out in our part of the country we have been going a little bit wrong on our thinking, so that we have established a bank of our own, called the State Bank of North Dakota. * * * I think that any method that would raise the rate arbitrarily when the farmer has had four or five years of poor crops * * it looks to me like the institution they told us of when we started the Federal reserve system that was going to take care of us and prevent panies was now going to fall down and penalize them. It seems to me that now is a poor time to penalize the little fellow. * * * The Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis is making $10,000 a day. Is that profiteering, when they have been using our money without any interest ever since it started? Is the Federal Reserve Board going to be put in the same class with the sugar profiteer and the manufacturer who has been making big money? * * * So I say again, it does not sto me that now is the proper time to increase our rate. * So I say again, it does not seem want to cure that unrest out there more than we do anything else. We want stop some of this high finance in politics, in business.'

DEASTIC REMEDIES OF TENTH DISTRICT MANAGERS PROVED FATAL TO VICTIMS.

"Mr. J. C. Mitchell, of Denver, director of the Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank, referring to the condition in his district, 'In my opinion we corrected the trouble there by putting in the progressive interest rate; we felt we had to do some-thing. We considered it a little bit drastic, but we thought we would try it, and we did try it.'

"It looks like the directors of that bank were trying an experiment the end of which they could not see. Mr. Mitchell thought it was a success. We venture to cay that a million people in that territory thought it was a dismal failure. It looks very much like the quack doctor called in to attend an ill child. The quack admitted that he could not diagnose the case, but, said he: 'I am hell on fits, and I will throw the child into fits and cure the fits.' Unfortunately, the child died, and many a farmer and many a business man in the Southwest died financially because of the action of the Kansas City bank.

Mr. W. J. Bailey, of the Kansas City Reserve Bank, said: 'I am well convinced, gentlemen, that you will bring the Federal reserve system back to a reserve system rather than a commercial system if you will make it unprofitable for certain great banks to use the funds of other banks.'

"What a pity that Mr. Balley did not mention by name the great banks against which he aimed this dart! Then he added: I think the real remedy is in a graduated rate. Of course, make the basic line whatever you want and let us say you would raise the rate to 7 per cent. Now, the only complaint we have among our banks is that there ought to be a maximum rate. I do not believe that, gentlemen. I would put a danger signal here and another there and another up therethat is, death; and he will never go against the death signal. You have made the Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank a broker's shop; you have changed it from a reserve bank to a commercial bank and I want to get it back, and that is the reason I am in favor of the graduated rate.'

"Mr. Forgan offered a resolution that a committee of five be appointed 'to prepare a resolution in regard to the effect the transportation situation is having on the expanded condition of credit in the country, with a view to placing such a resolution before the Interstate Commerce Commission, requesting them to do what in their power they can to relieve the situation by increased freight rates or otherwise."

It has been reported that one of the thoughts expressed by some at that meeting was that one way to break down busines in addition to restricting credit was to secure increased freight rates and thus lessen the volume of business, bringing business down to a point where the railroads and the banks without trouble could transport and finance the business then it operation. That does not, however, appear in the resolution nor in the report of the meeting, but that was a current report in Washington at the time of the meeting as the intention of those who sought to persuade the Interstate Commerce Commission to raise rates.

GRADUAL DEFLATION FAVORED BY ELEVENTH DISTRICT MANAGER, WHO DOUBTED WISDOM OF PROPOSED RAISE IN RATES—WITH 100 PER CENT PROFIT. FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS WERE ALREADY CHARGED WITH PROF-

"Mr. John T. Scott, of the Dallas bank, said: 'Speaking of the increased rates proposed by some of the districts, I can not find myself in agreement on that proposition. We have already increased the rate, and the increase of the rate is not going to correct the evil unless the member banks all cooperate.

"'We might increase the rate from 7 to 8, 9, and 10, and the situation would still be uncorrected. I believe we ought to continue our efforts with our member banks throughout the country and induce them to curtail their loans as far as possible to only the legitimate needs of legitimate business, and by that means we can bring about in a normal way the deflation of credit. We must remember that this inflation has not taken place over night; it has been going on from three to four years, and it is going to take some time to correct it. We can not hope to correct the situation in a day or a month or in six months. We have got to go at it in a sensible way, to bring it about in a gradual way rather than attempt to correct it within a short period of time. The Federal reserve banks have been charged with profiteering by reason of the rates they are now charging. We are making in the neighborhood of 100 per cent on our capital. * * * The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas has already adopted the progressive rate proposed to be put in wherever the executive committee finds it necessary to do so. have sent out two letters within the last three months to the member banks. The last one was sent out at our last directors' meeting, under the order of the directors, to be sent under personal cover to the president of each member bank and by registered mail, so the letter would receive attention, and they were requested to read these letters at the next meeting of their

"With a registered letter to the president of each member bank and requirement that he read this letter at the next meeting of his board of directors the Dallas bank was evidently following the suggestion of Mr. Johnson, of the Chicago bank, who suggested that the governor's speech should be disseminated among the bankers with a show of authority, even though the governor did not have the authority. The Dallas bank either had the authority or it took it, and at any rate the member banks that received that registered letter well knew they taking their life in their hands if they failed to obey it.

"Mr. B. A. McKinney, of the Dallas bank, said: 'From a study of the condition of those banks I can say that throughout all the districts they are in stronger condition to-day than they were a year ago.'

"That favorable condition, however, hardly held good after drastic deflation was put into effect.

WIELDING A CLUB ON FRIEND AND FOR ALIKE NOT APPROVED BY TWELFTH DISTRICT DIRECTOR.

"Mr. C. K. McIntosh, of San Francisco, said: 'We are thoroughly in accord with the resolution adopted and with the of Governor Harding outlining the methods that are desirable for us to proceed on. We can see the problem and we know fairly well some of the causes. We know that there is a demand that exceeds the supply of credit; we know there must be discrimination, and we are ready to join in any proposition. * * * I can hardly conceive that it is wise, in the endeavor to keep out the undesirable feature, to permit it to be rocked, even though the rocker is willing to pay 7 per cent for the privilege. I find it hard to convince myself that it is the most intelligent restraint to wield a club on the heads of friends and foes alike. A rate which applies beyond a certain arbitrary and colculated line has its effect, but without regard to what the man on the other end of the line is doing it is something like running into a melee with a club in one's hand to assist in quelling it and making up your mind you are going to strike every fellow on the other side of the fence, whether he has his coat off helping to reduce the melee or whether he is one of the main instigators. It seems to me the character and not the amount of opposition should be the prevailing factor in penal-We must have the assurance, or should have the assurance, that we may have the unqualified support of the Federal reserve banks in our district, because that is their job; also the reserves are not sacrosanct; they are not to be framed and hung on the wall. That given the purpose, given the fact that the real purpose is being served by the advance, the Federal reserve bank must help us, must help those who are doing that thing, and must decline when discrimination is practiced against those not doing that thing. * * * If we can go to against those not doing that thing. * * * If we can go to our people with the assurance that there is credit available for the production of essential and quickly assimilable things and that as compensation for that use we must ask to refrain from the demand for credit for those things not essential or for those which in our minds are not essential, we shall have gone a long way toward solving the difficulty as far as it is within our power to do so.'

"Unfortunately for the good of the country the reserves were regarded as sacrosanct and were not called upon to help out in the emergency-the very thing for which they were established-and the banks did not, with the cooperation of Federal reserve system, guarantee to their customers credit for essential things.

CALLING LOANS AGGREGATING $2,000,000,000 PROPOSED AS DESIRABLE WAY TO PREPARE FOR FALL BUSINESS.

"Mr. John Perrin, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, said: 'The way to meet that problem is to bring about in the next three or four months a definite amount of contraction which would permit us to expand correspondingly in the fall.

If it were possible for every bank in the country to reduce its loans during the next three or four months to the extent, say, of 10 per cent, there would be a total expansion in the fall possible of approximately $2,000,000,000.

"Here is a definite suggestion as to calling loans amounting to $2,000,000,000 in order that they might be reloaned in the fall, or, in other words, break down business in order to give it a fresh start a few months later!

"Mr. Forgan said that the calling of the convention 'has stirred up sentiment throughout the country and there has been some thought, I think, of a good deal of misapprehension of what we were going to do when we got here. The fear got out that we were going to meet here and in some way were going to classify loans into essentials and nones-sentials and with that even send an order through the country that there were to be no loans on what we term nonessentials." Mr. Forgan then presented some documents from the American Bankers' Association committee and other organizations which had been disturbed by the unrest already created throughout the country by the campaign of deflation which had been for some time under way by Federal reserve banks and by the fear that this convention would make still more drastic rulings. Letters were presented also from some leading business concerns along the same line. If any of these big business interests were tipped off in advance as to what was to be done prior to this information leaking out to the public they would have had an opportunity to make many millions of dollars. If, for instance, some corporation through some member of this meeting learned that deflation was to be continued it would have had a chance to unload before the break in prices came. It is hardly possible that, as 100 copies of the report from which we are quoting were printed for confidential circulation, so we are advised, and the type then destroyed, some people did not have an opportunity of learning what the public had not learned and thus of having the opportunity of utilizing this information in a way which might have made millions or saved millions.

"Mr. F. O. Watts, of Federal Reserve District No. 8, chairman of the committee on transportation, made a report for the committee reviewing the inadequate transportation facilities of the country, which were hampering business, and in the course of which it was said: 'A striking necessity exists which can only be relieved through the upbuilding of the credit of the railroads. This must come through adequate and prompt increase in freight rates. and prompt increase in freight rates. Every delay means the paying of greater cost, directly or indirectly, and places a burden on the credit system which in the approaching time for seasonal expansion may cause abnormal strain. Even under the light of war inflation, high price level, and extravagances the bank reserves would probably be sufficient if quick trans-portation could be assured during the time of the greatest strain.'

were increased freight rates suggested as means of lessening volume of business?

Watts offered the following resolution, which was adminimously adopted:

"Resolved, That this conference urge as the most important remedies that the Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States Shipping Board give increased rates and adequate facilities such immediate effect as may be warranted under their authority, and that a committee of five be appointed by the chair to present this resolution to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States Shipping Board with such verbal presentation as may seem appropriate to the committee.'

"What was the verbal presentation made by the committee to the Interstate Commerce Commission in behalf of increased Was it, as some have surmised, a suggestion that it would be better temporarily to lessen the volume of business of the country in order to enable the railroads and the banks to handle it? Some rumors to that effect were circulated at the time. Were they correct?

circulated at the time. Were they correct?
"Mr. Wayne raised the question of graduated rates on borrowings or rediscounts and said: 'I would like to know whether in the districts that have adopted this procedure there has been eliminated the question of borrowing on Government securities from calculations as to the line of credit granted to a bank?'

"Governor Harding replied: 'In the Kansas City district and the Dallas district, in their tentative plans they have eliminated entirely borrowing on Treasury certificates of in-debtedness and on Liberty bonds actually owned on the 1st of April, 1920.'

"Mr. Wayne then asked: 'Have they made any reference to collateral notes of customers that have been by the banks as a result of Liberty loan subscriptions?

"Mr. Bailey replied: 'They have to belong to the bank on the first day of April. We have made that rule.' "Mr. Scott said: 'It is the same way in the Atlanta dis-

"Mr. Wells said: 'He wants to know if customers' notes secured by Liberty bonds are exempt from the application of it'; and Mr. Bailey said: 'They are not.'

"When the Federal reserve system undertook to violate every promise made by the Government and by the banks in persuading people to buy Liberty bonds, promising to carry them and then calling loans on them in order to force them out of the banks, breaking them down from 12 to 15 points or more, the honor of the Government and the good faith of banks was trampled in the mire and millions of bonds bought in good faith by patriotic people to help the banks and heip the Government were forced to be sold at a loss, and the National Government bought in $2,000,000,000 of its own dishonest promises to pay and the Secretary of the Treasury boasted of the money that had been saved in doing so! And at these low prices hundreds of millions of bonds were bought in by big estates and big institutions, with heavy losses to innocent original purchasers.

"At the afternoon session it was proposed to appoint a committee of five, as that number 'would be more impressive,' to prepare some kind of a statement or memorandum to be submitted back to the conference, which we can use as a basis of a press statement and which you can all use as a basis of a statement to your own banks when you get back home touching the situation as you see it, and forestalling any more remarks such as were made in the Senate yesterday as to all kinds of trouble coming, and yet being careful not to stir up another bomb.'

PRESS DENIED OPPORTUNITY OF GETTING FACTS OF MEETING.

"When the press is denied the right to learn for itself what is going on and must accept as law and gospel any prepared report, the public may rest assured that it is not getting the real facts, and yet such a prepared report was all that the press has heretofore ever been able to secure as to the discussions which took place in that meeting.

"Mr. John Skelton Williams, discussing in the afternoon some of the things that had been said during the morning, said: 'I do not think myself that there is any ground for expecting a commercial cataclysm or crisis such as some people are predict-I see nothing in the situation to justify the fear of such a commercial crisis or financial catastrophe as we had either in 1873 or in 1890 or in 1907. If anything of that kind comes it will be our fault, the fault of those who are in charge of the banking and commercial interests of the country, and I do not believe they are going to bungle it.'

Unfortunately those in charge of the banking interests of the country did bungle it and bungled it badly, as Mr. Williams has repeatedly said that they did, and proved by the figures which he has published showing how badly it was bungled.

"Mr. Henry A. Mohlenpah, member of the Federal Reserve Board, and who, it is generally thought, joined Mr. Williams from time to time in vigorous opposition to the drastic deflation campaign carried out by Governor Harding and other members of the board, in following Mr. Williams's address said: 'I think it to be right to say that there is no member of the board at this time that has been related to your problem so directly as perhaps I have been, because I have just come from the desk and I have during the past six months visualized the proposition you are up against, and I want to say right here, gentlemen, that I refuse to be a pessimist. I quite agree with the comptroller. That does not mean to say that I am an expansionist or an inflationist, but I do believe in the broad general proposition that we have just as much right to take stock of our assets and of our privileges and of our opportunities as we have of the darker phases of the question. * * * I believe out of this question will come a stronger, higher morale on the part of the bankers themselves.' And referring further to the situation he said: 'It is just exactly to my mind what this situation needs; not a contraction that is going to hurt; it needs the steady nerve of the bankers, just as they faced their problems in 1903 and 1907,

"The situation did need, just as Mr. Mohlenpah said, the kind of handling that would not produce a contraction to hurt business, but in place of that it got a contraction that well nigh destroyed business. Mr. Mohlenpah and Mr. Williams thought that the management of the Federal reserve system would not bungle the job, but the most disastrous commodity panic in the world's history and the most disastrous agricultural condition which this country has faced in its whole life proved that the job was badly bungled, unpardonably bungled. As one of the speakers said, it had taken three or four years of inflation to carry us to the top, and it should have been evident to every man that the only way to come down safely was to take as long in coming down from inflation as we had taken in climbing up. This, however, was made impossible by the urgent efforts of Federal reserve banks to cause member banks to restrict credit and with the Federal Reserve Board carrying out its constant efforts to impress upon all banks the need of restricting credit and curtailing business operations chaos was inevitable.

$32,000,000,000 LOSSES AS RESULT OF RESERVE HOARD'S DEFLATION PROGRAM.

"As the Manufacturers Record showed a few weeks ago, the decline in the value of farm lands in 1920 and 1921 under deflation amounted to about $18,000,000,000, and the decline in the value of farm products of these two years as compared with 1919 prices showed a decrease of over $14,000,000,000, making a total loss to the farmers of upward of $32,000,000,000. If to this we add the decrease in securities, stocks, and bonds of railroads and industrial corporations and the losses in the decline of output in manufacturing and mineral industries, it will be found that under the system pursued of erroneous financing and financing directly contrary to the teachings of such bankers as Reginald McKenna and others of his standing we wiped out about $50,000,000,000 of values, a staggering loss which well nigh shocked the very life out of the country. Mr. Wayne, referring to the proposed progressive discount rate, said, 'It does not appeal to me as a director of the Federal reserve bank at all, at least for operation in our district. am afraid it will do just the opposite for which the Federal reserve act was enacted. In other words, the act was proposed to enable the banks to cater to commercial business. I know in the operation of our bank we were very often called upon to borrow quite heavily and we cut it down as fast as we could, but if we are going to accumulate a batch of commercial paper, either by direct transactions for customers or by purchase on the market, because our borrowings at the Federal reserve banks happen to go beyond a certain limit we are going to be heavily penalized, we are going to stop buying the paper, and we are going to invest our money in call loans on Wall Street, which is exactly what the Federal Reserve Board does not want the member banks to do. * * * I think that you are going to defeat the very purpose of the act, which was to enable commercial banks of the country to do a safe commercial business. We will simply be driven into call leans on Wall Street for our surplus money if they are going to penalize us.'
"Mr. Scott, in discussing the matter, said, 'We find that about 80 per cent of our members are small country banks, with a small capital and small deposits. * * the ones that we really need to help out in the farming com-We had a complete list made up of every borrowing bank, showing what its rate would be if they were under the Kansas City plan, and we found that some of them ran up as high as 18 and 19 per cent. If that plan were applied it would mean the ruination of the agricultural districts.

"That plan was put into effect and the agricultural districts were ruined, exactly as Mr. Scott had predicted.

"After considerable discussion in regard to the progressive rate and vigorous opposition on the part of a number, Mr. Mohlenpah said, 'Is it absolutely necessary in every transaction made in a Federal reserve bank that it has got to be made on a basis of profit to the Federal reserve bank, or is it not that these reserve banks will have to forego their profit in this overplus of borrowing when the country banks have to move crops or other commodities?'

"Judging by the 100 per cent profit that the Dallas bank was making, as one of its officers said, and the $10,000 a day that the Minneapolis bank was making, it looks as though every Federal reserve bank did business only on the basis of a profit on each transaction, regardless of its effect upon the country at

UNHEEDED WARNINGS OF COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY JOHN SKELTON WILLIAMS.

"As shown by letters from John Skelton Williams, then Comptroller of the Currency and a member of the Federal Reserve Board, Mr. Williams repeatedly warned the board of the danger that faced the country from its deflation campaign. In a speech before the Maine Bankers' Association at Bangor June 26, 1920, Comptroller Williams called attention to the fact that the Federal reserve banks had an unused lending power at that time of about $700,000,000 and that if the reserve requirements should be temporarily reduced by only 10 per cent the total unused lending power of the reserve system could be increased to two thousand million dollars.

"Nevertheless the financial situation, under the reserve board influence, grew worse, and on July 31, 1920, Comptroller Williams gave a statement to the press showing that the unused lending power of the reserve banks was still $750,000,000. Mr. Williams added in that statement: 'Such figures as these ought to be sufficient to allay fears of pessimists as to the financial condition of the country at this time.'

"Mr. Williams's statement was resented by the chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, who promptly wrote a letter to the reserve board complaining that Mr. Williams's public statement was interfering with the plans for deflation.

"On August 9, 1920, Mr. Williams called attention of the reserve board to the fact that certain banks in New York were using the funds of the reserve system for speculative ventures and were extorting grossly excessive interest rates from customers, so that business men and merchants needing funds for legitimate business were being required to pay exorbitant rates.

"August 26, 1920, Comptroller Williams filed a memorandum with the board urging a reduction in rates which the reserve banks were exacting on Liberty bonds and for legitimate business transactions, and he also warned the board at that time that the drastic liquidation which had already taken place in leading commodities, including cotton, corn, wheat, rice, silk, wool, leather, etc., had brought about a shrinkage in some cases amounting to over 50 per cent. He also showed the board that the pressure had been so great that the prices of Government bonds and other high-class investment securities had been broken down to the lowest level they had touched in half a century. At that time he told the board: 'Such additional liquidation as is needed could be brought about without the exaction of interest rates as high as those which have prevailed.'

"On October 26, 1920, in a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, remonstrating against the reserve board's policies and urging a revival of the War Finance Corporation, he said: 'The shrinkage in our leading commodities throughout the current year has ranged from 25 to 75 per cent from prices of less than a year ago. This shrinkage amounts not to millions or hundreds of millions but to billions of dellars. The strain upon the business fabric of the country is in some respects unparalleled, and I do feel that the time has come for the exercise of such salutary and constructive powers as may be at our command.'

"The reserve board's answer to Mr. Williams's protestation and remonstrances was to tighten the screws still further and to force a contraction or deflation in leans held by the reserve banks which amounted to one thousand million dollars in the succeeding 12 months, every month showing an actual contraction from the preceding month.

"When Comptroller Williams a few weeks later offered a resolution in the beard to require the banks which had been exacting extortionate interest rates from member banks—as high as 50, 60, 70, and 85 per cent—to limit interest charged member banks to 6 per cent, the board voted down his resolution, and when in February, 1921, he offered another resolution to limit the interest rates charged member banks to 10 per cent they also voted that down.

"At the close of the meeting, in which only one day was given to this general discussion of the most tremendous financial problem that this country had every faced, when days and days might well have been spent in a careful analysis of the situation, the meeting was closed with the statement by Governor Harding, which we have quoted in the opening paragraph, insisting that nothing should be given out by those in attendance in regard to the discussions that had taken place; and thus the public was to be kept in dense ignorance, knowing nothing except the official statement issued by the committee, and from which the public and the press could get no information worth having as to what was being done or would be done by Federal reserve banks.

by Federal reserve banks.

"We do not know what has become of the 100 copies of this stenographic report of the day's proceedings which were printed for confidential distribution, but the Manufacturers Record feels that in having secured one copy and in giving this summary of it to its readers it is rendering a service of inestimable value to the Nation."

PERILOUS CONDITION OF THE BANKS AND GREAT INDUSTRIAL TRUSTS.

Mr. LADD. Mr. President, previous to the World War the larger banks of the United States, especially those owned and controlled by international bankers, were overloaded with debts that they owed and held as collateral security against the great industrial trusts, manufacturing corporations, and business enterprises of the people of the United States. Fully 90 per cent of these debts had been created by the banks loaning a false and fictitious substitute for money knewn as "bank credits"—that is, money having no existence and represented only by credit and debit figures upon the books of banks.

As a logical result, when the demand for these debts was made, calling for payment in money, business depression set in, and as an illustration of its effect, the common stock of the United States Steel Corporation dropped to 30 cents on the dollar, as it had skipped its dividend payment and was heading for a receivership. If this had occurred the other great trust combinations would have been likewise affected, producing financial chaos among the banks of the country, as it would have been impossible for their debtors to pay their debts in money.

International bankers, anticipating this situation, formulated and put through Congress in 1914 their fraudulent gold basis Federal reserve act, granting banking corporations organized for private gain, first, the power to rediscount the debts of borrowers and receive the proceeds in Federal reserve notes from the Government, thus giving banks the power to convert debts into money; second, the astounding privilege of rediscounting the debts of borrowers and having the amount credited to their "reserve," and upon this reserve, so created, loan from eight to ten times the amount, thus putting the people deeper and deeper in debt. This afforded the banks the opportunity to make unheard-of profits.

In 1914, when the European war started, tremendous war orders from the Allies in Europe were placed with these great trusts and corporations, showing profits running as high as 500 per cent; as a result the stocks of these trusts and corporations advanced in value to unprecedented high levels, which enabled them to obtain additional loans from the banks to increase the capacity of their manufacturing plants to meet this growing demand.

This was their situation when the alarm started that the Allies had exhausted their means of making payments on their debts and could not purchase more in the United States unless they were given uncovered credits; in other words, they could put up no more collateral security for loans or pay the debts then due in the United States, amounting to billions of dollars. It was then forced upon the attention of these international bankers that if the Allies were defeated or Europe was bankrupt as a result of the war they would face a total loss.

The resourcefulness of the international bankers in high finance was put in operation and the plan put through to shift the obligations owed them by the Allies upon the taxpayers of the United States. This was done by getting Congress to authorize the exchange of United States bonds for the worthless promises to pay of the bankrupt countries of Europe which they, the bankers, would not accept, knowing that Europe, with a war debt of over $200,000,000,000,000, would have to repudiate them.

Thus the bonds put upon the taxpayers of this country were used to pay the debts of the Allies to the banks, industrial trusts, and corporations in the United States.

This was another gigantic conspiracy of international bankers to rob the people, that will be more fully exposed in the near future. The people of the world have been financially ruined by a false banking and currency debt manufacturing scheme, built upon a fraudulent and dishonest gold basis, and the present move of international bankers for an economic council of experts to adjust German reparations and stabilize the mark is an international subterfuge to entangle the United States financially with the bankrupt countries of Europe, to reestablish the gold standard, or gold-basis banking and currency scheme, through which international bankers control the money and credit of the different countries of the world.

The people of the United States should resist at any cost this attempt to reestablish the fraudulent gold-basis money scheme, as it will inevitably rivet the chains of industrial slavery upon 90 per cent of our people or end in civil war.

THE WORLD'S CONDITION PROVES THE IGNOMINIOUS FAILURE OF THE BOASTED GOLD STANDARD.

There is no misrepresentation too erroneous, no falsehood too malicious, no assumption too baseless for the hired agents of the money power to resort to accomplish their insidious purposes. For instance, they hold up to the world the financial distress of the devastated and debt-burdened countries of Europe as horrid examples of countries that are hopelessly striving to establish a monetary system other than the one which they dominate and which they misname the gold-standard system, which never had an actual existence.

Let us go back to the financial condition which existed in these countries previous to the World War. For instance, Germany, the most powerful and progressive nation on the Continent, was on the gold standard or the gold basis and all other forms of money or currency was redeemable in gold. At the beginning of the European war Germany realized that her gold-based money system could not stand the strain of carrying on the war and allowed banking corporations to issue and loan their nonlegal-tender notes as a substitute for legal-tender money. Upon this fraudulent gold basis billions of debts were created upon the German people by the loaning of "money of account," a false and fictitious money, having no existence and represented only by credit and debit figures upon the books of banks. These banking corporations were also granted the power to issue billions of marks in "bank notes" as a substitute for money. The gold-basis money system upon which this gigantic issue of currency—German marks—is based has been absolutely destroyed by the war. The validity and value of money depends upon, first, its being full legal tender; second, the solvency of the country issuing it; third, the sovereign power of its government to enforce its acceptance in payment of all debts, public and private; fourth, a proper regulation of its quantity.

The German mark has none of these essential requirements to protect its value. The German Government is now bankrupt and in the hands of receivers (the Reparation Commission) representing the Allies, holding a mountain of debts against the German people sufficient to keep them in debt slavery for over a hundred years.

RESULTS OF FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM.

I am fully justified in stating that the peak of official perfidy and financial iniquity was reached when the Federal reserve system was imposed upon the American people by the world's investment bankers. For defeating the very purpose its sponsors publicly claimed for it, it can not be matched. It was an un-pardonable national crime. The few redeeming traits that it possesses are rendered nugatory by what its originator, Paul M. Warburg, styled "in an administrative way." notoriously dishonest manipulations of this infamous system, the purchasing power of the farmers of the country has been deflated $18,000,000,000 in a single year. When we stop to consider that there are 6,500,000 farms in the United States employing 13,000,000 men, we at once realize that the farmer is the largest employer of labor in the country. He produces all our food and clothing and pays nearly 60 per cent of the freight charges, in the capacity of producer and consumer. Every farm is a producing and consuming plant. Just think of the prodigious amount of supplies that are consumed in the aggregate by the farmers of the United States: Threshing machines, reapers, rakes, binders, tractors, wire fencing, tiles, in short farming machinery and implements of all kinds, building material for homes, barns, and outhouses, fruit trees, fertilizers, plants, and the scores of things these will suggest. Now, it is as plain as a geometrical axiom, that just in proportion as you reduce the purchasing power of the farmer in the same proportion you diminish the prosperity of the Nation. In the face of these indisputable facts is it not a burning, blistering shame, tantamount to a national scandal that the time of the Congress should be wasted and frittered away considering such an iniquitous measure as the one under consideration while the working farmer is pushed into irredeemable bankruptcy by the force of unjust laws and the dishonest and inefficient administration of Can you imagine anything more cruel and merciless than the foreclosure of a farm mortgage that robs industrious, thrifty, peaceable, country-loving, law-abiding American citizens of years of weary toil, to turn it over to men who never performed a day's labor, produced a dollar's worth of wealth, rendered any useful service to society, who have done nothing, in fact, to aid the advancement of a true civilization or to furnish the slightest pretext for their own existence? To compare them to parasites that fatten on other organisms would be doing injustice to the parasite, as the latter do not intimidate, discriminate, or deceive their prey; they are vampires that with ruthless indifference extract the very lifeblood of their helpless

According to John Skelton Williams, former Comptroller of the Currency, the earnings of a lifetime vere turned over to these modern Shylocks through the unexpected and wholly unnecessary deflation of the currency by the faithless and merciless connivance of officials of the Federal reserve system. These public officials, although supported by the people and supposed to serve them in a public capacity, have no interest in the general welfare, no sympathy for the toiling masses, but are entirely devoted to the predatory privileged interests. Their insatiable rapacity, if allowed to continue, is bound to wreck our Government as they have already wrecked monetary and transportation systems and our most productive industries, and eventually retard and then turn back our civilization as other civilizations have been turned back in the past by the very same causes, for a civilization that concentrates enormous wealth in the hands of those who have not produced it and takes it from those who have must inevitably evolve disorder and bring disintegration. The dangers that menace us are the natural and inevitable result of the kind of legislation we are now considering. All our industrial progress and material achievements have not brought the benefits, advantages, and blessings which our Creator intended them to bring, because we have permitted the predatory privileged interests to impose upon us laws to enrich themselves at the expense of the real wealth producers of the Nation. The appalling decline of the purchasing power of the farmer resulting from the rapid and unwarranted decline in the prices of farm produce is evidently the chief cause of our industrial depression, which started with the basic industry, communicated itself to every other branch of the industrial organization, causing a dislocation of the various parts of the whole intricate network of pro-The rapid decline of prices of farm products, which duction. so diminished the purchasing power of the six and one-half million farmers, showed itself in the decline of effective demand for manufactured articles and other products of industry, resulting in the closing of mills and factories or their being operated at a small percentage of their capacity. Only the greatest and most powerful of the industrial organizations, like the Standard Oil and United States Steel, were able to maintain prices, and this was made possible by monopolistic privileges. Injustice to the farmer is the primary cause of the unemployment of millions of men able, willing, and anxious to work to produce the things essential for the gratification of their own desires and those of others. The conclusion is irresistible, and from this conclusion there is no escape, that peace and prosperity can not be reestablished until we do justice to the farmer who works the farm and prevent financial bandits from farming the farmer who works the farm. Never before in the history of this Nation was there such an urgent demand for honesty, intelligence, and courage on the part of the people's representatives as there is at this very moment. Their responsibility to the people in this great emergency is grave and serious.

SOME RAILROAD JUGGLING AND CORRUPTION.

Mr. President, the ship subsidy bill, if enacted into law, will take untold millions from the earnings of the people and hand them over to the very men who by the prostitution of governmental functions have brought us to our present low estate.

The operation of our railroads by private interests, if we may believe history and the record of the roads, is the blackest chapter in the history of civil government. It is a long, unbroken series of incredible stupidity, shameless dishonesty, flagrant inefficiency, disgraceful perfidy, and the rankest corruption and debauchery.

What I am about to read to you is not from a progressive, a nonpartisan leaguer, a Bolshevist, an anarchist, or a red. but from the records of our conservative Interstate Commerce Commission—Report No. 6569, in re financial transactions of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co.:

The result of our research into the workings of the former management of the New Haven system has been to disclose one of the most glaring instances of maladministration revealed in all the history of American railroading. In the course of the investigation many instances were uncovered of violation of the laws of different States. * * *

States. * * *

The difficulties under which this railroad system has labored in the past are internal and wholly due to its own mismanagement. Its troubles have not arisen because of regulation by governmental authority. Its greatest losses and most costly blunders were made in attempting to circumvent governmental regulation and to extend its dominion beyond the limits fixed by law.

Here we have an emphatic denial of the railroads stcreotyped complaint that the inefficiency and insufficiency of the railroads to serve the people as common carriers was due to Government regulations and interferences. We are here told by the Interstate Commerce Commission after an important and exhaustive investigation that the difficulties with which the railroads have labored in the past are directly attributable to dishonesty, incompetency, and contemptuous disregard of the principles of justice and common decency by their financial managers. Their disastrous failures are not because of regulation by governmental authority, but in utter disregard of it. Their gigantic losses and criminal blunders were made in attempting to circumvent governmental regulation and to extend their dominion of plunder and exploitation beyond the limits fixed by law. Just think of it! The capitalization of this one system was increased $324,000,000 in 10 years, a fictitious capitalization representing not a single dollar of actual investment, on which, under the provisions of the Esch-Cummins law, the people must pay a guaranteed interest of 6 per cent.

We hear a great deal these days from the seats of the mighty about compelling our alien population to respect the law and reverence our institutions, but what is their ignorant infringement of our laws compared with these atrocious robberies by our railroad magnates? Consider for a moment the criminal negotiation by which the enormous sum of $36,400,000 was squandered on a road only 18 miles in extent, not at all essential to the system, and operated at an annual loss of $1,250, 000; the payment of $2,700,000 for the retention of a parasite, a transaction in which he rendered no service to the New Haven railroad; the inability of another to render any account of $1,032,000 intrusted to him; the distribution of $1,200,000 for corrupt purposes in securing amendments in the charters of the Westchester and Port Chester franchises. I quote further from the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission:

for corrupt purposes in securing amendments in the charters of the Westchester and Port Chester franchises. I quote further from the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The subject matter of this inquiry relates to the financial operation of a protein which, on June 30, 1903, had a total capitalization of approximately $98,900,000, of which $79,000,000 was stock and $14,000,000 bonds. In the 10 years from June 30, 1903, this capitalization was increased from $93,000,000. Of this increase, approximately $120,000,000 was devoted to its railroad property and was expended for betterments and equipment. This leaves the sum of $294,000,000, which was expended for operations outside of its railroad practically monopolized the freight and passenger business in five of the States of the Union. It has acquired a monopoly of competing steamship lines and trolley systems in the section which it serves. The financial operations necessary for these acquisitions and the losses which they have entailed have been skillfully concealed by the jurgelings of money and securities from one subsidiary corporation to another.

Marked features and significant incidents in the loose, extravagant shown in the investigation are the Boston & Maine despolment; the iniquity of the Westchester acquisition; the double price paid for the Rhode Island trolleys; the recklessness in the purchase of Connecticut and Massachusetts trolleys at prices exorbitantly in excess of their market value; the unwarranted expenditure of large amounts in "educating public opinion": the disposition, without knowledge of the directors, of hundreds of thousands of dollars for influencing public and the subsidiaries, and consequent complication of accounts; the practice of financial legerdemain in issuing large blocks of New Haven stock for notes of the New England Navigation Co., and manipulating these securities back and forth; fictitious sales of New Haven stock to friendly parties with the design of boosting the stock and unloading on the public at the

was not in answer to any public necessity and paralleled its own existing line.

The sum of $36,434,173.25 was expended for a road only 18.03 miles in extent, which is being operated at an annual loss of approximately $1,250,000 and which will have to increase its earnings four and one-half fold before it can pay its operating expenses and first charges. It is inconceivable that this enterprise could have been entered into by the New Haven as result of the mandates of good judgment and proper railroading.

The Westchester acquisition was planned and executed by a special committee of the board consisting of Directors Morgan, Rockefeller, and Miller, with President Mellon as chairman. The vote appointing this committee "on proposed competition between the Connecticut State line and Harlem River, with power," does not disclose an intention to authorize the buying of charters and promotion securities and the building of a new railroad, much less one at a cost of $36,000,000. It is ambiguous, and was evidently intended to conceal a secret purpose. The full board was not taken into the confidence of those directors who wanted these securities purchased, and no report was ever made by this committee placing the situation as they found it before the board.

The first information the board had concerning the extravagant acquisition of Westchester and Port Chester securities was on November 8, 1907, when this committee made its only report. It was then learned that $11,155,000 had been expended in obtaining control of these two insolvent promotion schemes, and that this expenditure carried with it an obligation to construct two railroads, under the franchises of doubtful validity, paralleling the existing line of the New Haven.

ANOTHER RAILROAD SCANDAL

Mr. President, in report No. 6833, in re Pere Marquette Railroad Co. and Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Co., we have another disgraceful history of the dishonesty, inefficiency, perfidy, and corruption of these predatory interests that now come begging and bulldozing to compel this august body to permit their avaricious hands to be dipped deep into the pockets of the people and take whatever is left of their paltry earnings. The report says:

come begging and buildozing to compel this august body to permit their avaricious hands to be dipped deep into the pockets of the people and take whatever is left of their paitry earnings. The report says:

It may be well at the outset to marshal the outstanding facts arong the many disclosed of record, which have affected the ability of the property of their securities in the hands of the investing public.

The Pere Marquette came into being as a consolidation of three relatively successful michigan roads, and began operation on January-terests, headed by W. W. Crape and Nathaniel Tayser, and in the process outstanding capital stock in the hands of the public was infinited by $1,501.250, and sook value of property by $4,290,230.41.

In the pere sound in the main; realing stock and miles operating increased; a small surplus was accumulated and used for improvements; no common-stock dividends were paid, and physical condition was become and the stock of the public was increased; a small surplus was accumulated and used for improvements; no common-stock dividends were paid, and physical condition was become and the stock of the public was increased; a small surplus was accumulated and used for improvements; no common-stock dividends were paid, and physical condition was become and the succeeding management.

The first of these was the stock of the public was increased by almost at a maximum of $85 per share. Its policy of expansion included acquisition of new equipment costing over $6.000,000, and of stone 38 miles of main and branch lines most of which had a history of falliers, also of the public was increased the policy of their predecessors. * * * paid uncerned dividends on common stock, and in the 18 months of their management stitled on the public was a supplied to the public of their predecessors. * * paid uncerned the supplied of the public of their predecessors. * * * paid uncerned the public of their predecessors. * * * paid uncerned their common to the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton at 125 per share com

MORE HIGH RAILROAD FINANCING.

Again, Mr. President, in another instructive and illuminating report to the Senate, No. 5933, in the matter of the receiver-ship of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Co. and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Co., the commission sets forth in forcible terms another disgraceful chapter in the private operation and management of our railroads. The commission says:

forth in forcible terms another disgraceful chapter in the private operation and management of our railroads. The commission says:

A receiver for the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Co., herein after referred to as the Frisco, was applied for on May 27, 1913, in a petition signed by James Campbell, vice president and director of that company, and president of the North American Co. of New York. The basis of the petition was default on a six months' 6 per cent note issued to the North American Co. by the Frisco, due April 21, 1913, for $625,000, upon which a payment of $225,000 was made subsequently to its due date and prior to May 27, 1913.

While this indebtedness was the nominal cause of the receivership, the true cause was the inability of the Frisco to meet the payment of the principal of its two-year 5 per cent notes, dated June 1, 1911, due June 1, 1913, amounting to $2,250,000, which had been sold to F. S. Mosely & Co., of Boston. These notes were secured by $2,500,000 parvalue of the Frisco-Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Co. commonstock trust certificates, and $1,490,000 Frisco-Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis preferred-stock trust certificates, which were pledged as collateral security therefor with the Old Colony Trust Co., of Boston. The collateral underlying the note upon which the default occurred was deemed insufficient by the holders thereof, and on May 20, 1913, on the demand of Campbell that the Frisco deposit additional collateral, $5,000,000 of the capital stock of the New Mexico & Arizona Land Co. and $200,000 in Frisco, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico division bonds were placed under the notes as additional security. The stock of the New Mexico & Arizona Land Co. and $200,000 in Frisco, New Orleans, Texas & Mexico division bonds were placed under the notes as additional security. The stock of the New Mexico & Arizona Land Co. stood jointly in the names of W. F. Evans and F. H. Hamilton and Alexander Douglas, the latter being vice president in charge of the accounting department, as di

April 24, 1918 May 2, 1913 May 10, 1913 May 14, 1918	$1,000,000 1,000,000 500,000 500,000 way & Bridge Co.; and by the increase in interest on funded debt from $1,994,488, for the year ended June 30, 1897, to $10,684,788.55, as of June 30, 1913, an increase of $8,690,300.55.
Total	3.000.000

The gross earnings per mile of road operated increased from $5,157 for the year ended June 30, 1897, to $8,306 for the 11 months ended May 27, 1913, and the net earnings per mile increased during the same period from $2,159 to $2,733, an increase of $574, while the funded debts, interest, per operated mile increased from $1,716 for the year ended June 30, 1897, to $2,253 for the year ended June 30, 1913, an increase of $537.

Mr. President, where can there be found in American history a darker chapter of mismanagement, incompetency, and abuse of corporate power by individuals than is set forth in the pre-ceding? Can we find in Government control a greater disregard for the interests of the people than what has been depicted in these official reports, which none can contradict? Where has Government control or operation made more or greater criminal blunders against common decency and the interests of the masses? As great as were the abuses during the war by some of the alleged patriots, can we duplicate them? I believe not. As the years go by history will give us a better understanding of how our people have been robbed by so-called railroad magnates, little better in their methods than bandits. By overcapitalization and watered stock they have placed a burden for all time upon all the people for the benefit of a privileged few. By means of the proposed ship subsidy bill and its far-reaching effects, do we want to repeat the scandals of American railroads and so help to further reduce our producers to the condition of serfs and a life worse than slavery? It may be accomplished, but it is not the will of the people; and in the end we shall, in my humble opinion, pay dearly for our

THE BIG FIVE PACKERS.

Mr. President, I now turn from the railroad mismanagement and corruption to a still darker chapter of our national history, since it affects the welfare and prosperity of every individual in the United States, and at the same time has throttled our markets and helped to bring bankruptcy to thousands of our producers on American farms. They have likewise been one of the chief causes of the high cost of living in this country, as will attempt to show in the following presentation:

On February 7, 1917, President Wilson directed the Federal Trade Commission "to investigate and report facts relating to production, ownership, manufacture, storage, and distribution of foodstuffs and the products or by-products arising from or in connection with their preparation and manufacture; to ascertain the facts bearing on alleged violations of the antitrust acts, and particularly upon the question whether there are manipulations, controls, trusts, combinations, conspiracies, or manipulations, controls, trusts, combinations, conspiracies, or restraints of trade out of harmony with the law or the public interests," to the end that proper remedies, legislative or administrative, might be applied. On July 1, 1917, funds for carrying out the President's direction became available, and the commission proceeded with its inquiry. On July 3, 1918, just a year afterwards, the commission made its report, statistics that there had found conclusive or identicated.

Total 3,000,000

Total 3,000,000

The sale of securities to the investing public, through the bankers, it is easie of securities to the investing public, through the bankers, it is easie of securities to the investing public, through the bankers, it is easie of securities to the investing public, through the bankers, it is easie of securities to the investing public, through the bankers, it is easie of securities to the investing public, through the bankers, it is easiered or participated in guch sale. Speepe & Co. should have been aware of the poverty of the Frisco and of its difficulties in obtaining public, the liquid and the proceeds of the sale of $1,000,000 of these bonds, on May 2, to the liquidation of these notes.

While the Frisco was compelled to borrow tunds from every available, some of the Brownsylle Street & Interurban Railroad and San Benito & Rio Grande Valley Railway. The sums advanced to him during the fiscal year 1913 to the date of the receivership amount to $022,460,113.

Brownsylle & Mexico Railway.

The date of May 24, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,088.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,089.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,089.83 and its per cent note dated May 1, 1913, for $1,493,089.83 and its per cent no lumber, millwork, including sashes, doors, blinds, boxes, barrels, cement, lime, plaster, brick, sand, gravel, and roofing. It is humiliating, it is a public disgrace, that fertilizer, which is to the soil what food is to the individual, should be practically monopolized by the big five packers while Henry Ford is asking the Congress to permit him to supply the cultivator of the soil with the best and cheapest of fertilizers. It is manifestly obvious that much of the opposition to the Henry Ford project at Muscle Shoals might be traced to the officers of the Big Five. They control more than two-thirds of the offal produced; they are the most important factors in the manufacture of animal fertilizer ingredients and are attempting to obtain control of our mineral ingredients.

SOMETHING ABOUT FERTILIZERS.

Is there a nation in the world making any pretense of being honestly and truly representative and professing to be progressive that would starve its soil by permitting its nutriment to be controlled by such predatory privileged interests? Can the human mind conceive of anything more mulishly stupid, not to say criminally negligent, than such a governmental policy? Consider for a moment what such a policy involves. It means that the cultivator of the soil must either pay monopolistic prices for the fertilization of his land or he must let it starve, This is the incredibly preposterous policy of the profound statesmen who have joined forces with the packers in frustrating Henry Ford's attempt to supply cheap and abundant fertilizer for our impoverished agricultural lands. It is indeed strange and inexplicable that these professed champions of human rights and ardent friends of the farmer should so strenuously oppose every effort to give him immediate and practical relief.

I take the liberty of again inviting attention to paragraph 15 of the Ford proposition, which reads:

Since the manufacture, sale, and distribution of commercial fertilizers to farmers and other users thereof constitutes one of the principal considerations of this offer, the company expressly agrees that, continuously throughout the lease period, except as it may be prevented by reconstruction of the plant itself, or by war, strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control, it will manufacture nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers, mixed at nitrate plant No. 2, or its equivalent, or at such other plant or plants adjacent or near thereto as it may construct, using the most economical source of power available. The annual production of these fertilizers shall have a nitrogen content of at least 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen, which is the present annual capacity of nitrate plant No. 2. If during the lease period said nitrate plant No. 2 is destroyed or damaged from any cause, the company agrees to restore such plant within a reasonable time to its former capacity, and further agrees:

(a) To determine by research whether by means of electric-furnace methods and industrial chemistry there may be produced on a commercial scale fertilizer compounds of higher grade and at lower prices than farmers and other users of commercial fertilizers have in the past been able to obtain, and to determine whether in a broad way the application of electricity and industrial chemistry may accomplish for the agricultural industry of the country what they have economically accomplished for other industries, and if so found and determined, to reasonably employ such improved methods.

The annual production of fertilizers in this country is ap-The annual production of fertilizers in this country is approximately 6,543,435 tons. If Mr. Ford's offer is accepted, he guarantees to produce at the very outset at least one-fourth as much as the present output. But it should be remembered that this is the minimum and the project in its infancy. Under the terms of his offer fertilizers will be supplied to the working farmer at a greatly reduced price. It is impossible to determine at the present stage of development and under existing conditions just what reduction in the price of fertilizer Mr. Ford would be able to make, but it is conservatively estimated at about 40 per cent. But suppose he should only reduce the ar about 40 per cent. But suppose he should only reduce the price $5 a ton, as previously pointed out; that would mean a net saving to the farmers of $35,000,000 in a single year. This a consummation devoutly to be wished. Why should we hesitate to give this much-needed relief to the most useful and most neglected class of producers in the country? Why should we continue to starve our soil when an abundance of nutriment is so near at hand? Why should we permit this much-desired nutriment to be controlled by the most avaricious, privileged interest in the civilized world? It is a base and treacherous betrayal of the trust confided to us by the people to permit this to continue a day longer than we can apply the proper remedy. There is no excuse for our negligence. We have the remedy. There is no excuse for our negligence. power and the means to put a stop to this indefensible and intolerable condition of affairs, and it is our sworn duty to

SOME CHILDISH PRATTLE.

This talk about giving a public utility to a private corporation if we pass the Muscle Shoals act is childish prattle. It is not a public utility that we are granting to Mr. Ford, but the The use use of a natural resource that is now going to waste. of the water of the Tennessee River for the purpose of producing cheap and abundant fertilizers is no more the monopolization of a public utility than the use of a coal vein to produce cheap and abundant fuel. We might as well say that the utilization of the Mesabi Range by the Steel Trust is the monopolization of a public utility as to say that the utilization of the waters of the Tennessee River at Muscle Shoals is a monopoly of water power. Under present conditions it is the only possible way that this valuable natural resource may be utilized for the general welfare. Suppose the Government were to attempt to operate the Muscle Shoals plant; would it not be made a disastrous failure in order to discredit Government operation of public utilities? Would not some predatory favored interest do to Muscle Shoals what Lasker and his predecessors have succeeded in doing to American shipping and what McAdoo did to the Government operation of the railroads? Suppose that a quarter of a century ago the Potomac River at Great Falls had been utilized for the benefit of the people of Washington under the same guaranties as are embodied in the Ford proposition; who can estimate the money value, not to say the comfort, convenience, and health that would have ensued to the people of the District of Columbia? Is it not time that we should demonstrate our capacity for practical statesmanship? Let us meet the situation as it is. Let us make the best possible use of the tools and materials at hand. We are not faithful to the trust reposed in us if we fritter our time away on nonessential and utterly impracticable matters.

THE PACKERS COME BACK.

Referring again to the packers, they have a practical monopoly of hides, leather, and wool. They handle directly more than three-fourths of the hides and skins produced, and through their subsidiaries, leases, and contracts tan a large proportion of the leather produced in this country.

Their immense storage facilities and commanding financial position enable them to manipulate the markets and dispose of their products in utter disregard of supply or demand.

While the price of shoes and of leather goods is so exorbitant that poor children must go barefoot, it is said the packers are still hoarding enormous quantities of hides, with the view of further enhancing the prices. According to their own admis-

We are forced to pack them in our cellars and outside in the open, but have reached the point now where we have no place to go with any

These five predatory privileged corporations own 93 per cent of the total of all sorts of cars used in interstate commerce, consisting of refrigerator, stock, tank, box, flat, and gondolas. Our railroads, which are supposed to be our public highways, built upon land taken by the right of eminent domain and solemnly devoted by law to the service of all the people, have practically no equipment for the shipping of dressed meats and other perishable commodities. Our railroad managers have de-liberately wrecked the people's highways and turned the greatest labor-saving invention known to mankind into an instrument of extortion, oppression, and corruption. All the icing stations on the lines of our railroads are owned by the packers, and they use them not only as a means of extortion from independent shippers, but as a means of securing information of the shipments and customers of their competitors. The cars of the Big Five receive preferential treatment by railroad officials. They are carefully handled, are accorded through routes, utterly regardless of the rights of other shippers, are promptly returned, and are never used by the roads for the shipment of any other commodities save those of the packers. The small, nonprivileged packers are subject to indefensible, vexatious, and expensive delays. Six months for a trip from St. Louis to New York and return is not at all unusual, and there are a number of instances where it took nine months. It is said the ordinary freight car travels only 23 miles in 24 hours, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission, while packers' are known to travel over 600 miles. Not only that, but the railroads treat the small independent packer as if he had no legal right that the railroad was obliged to respect, hence the railroads frequently use the small packers' meat cars to ship onions and other commodities.

In this connection it may be interesting to state that packers have organized various companies to sell to the railroads equipment and supplies, such as bumping posts, metal bearings, waste, ice, and coal, from which they derive enormous profits. The use to which the packers have transformed the refrigerator cars and cold-storage facilities is but another evidence of the fact that what is potent for good is potent for evil—its utility depending upon its use. In the hands of the packers refrigerators and cold storage, instead of being a blessing to mankind, are an unmixed curse,

MARKET CONSPIRACY.

Market control and excessive profiting in the handling of perishable products depend upon the ability to buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest markets. Through a criminal conspiracy they fix the price they will pay the producer for his products, and by the use of their cold-storage plants they create an artificial scarcity and thus keep the supply below the demand.

The packers own over 1,000 branch houses, nearly 1,500 routes, and distribute their products in approximately 60,000 towns. This system of wholesale distribution through branch houses is the chief factor in their monopoly. With the development of their branch houses and car-route systems it is not longer necessary for the packers to go through the slow and costly process of establishing manufacturing plants.

The oldest and most strongly established houses are witnessing line after line of their merchandise absorbed by the packers' branch-house system. First, they saw the packers absorb butter, eggs, cheese; condensed milk, then various brands of "package goods," then sugar, coffee, rice, and other staple commodities. The combined sales of the packers each year approximate $3,-000,000,000. At the present rate of expansion the packers will soon control and monopolize the distribution of the Nation's food supply.

BIG PACKERS, BIG BANKS, AND INTERNATIONAL BANKERS.

Through interlocking directors the real source of power lies in the great international investment bankers. In each of the banks shown in the following list the packers are represented either directly or indirectly.

It is noteworthy to observe that behind the packers are the international investment bankers finacially interested in all their nefarious undertakings. The following list of banks shows the extent of their interests, although there are a number of banks not included in this list. In each of the banks shown in this list the packers are represented on the board of directors, or through officers; directors, or confidential employees of the packing companies:

BANKS, BANKERS, AND PACKERS,

BOSTON.

Commercial National Bank (Wilson). Broadway National Bank of Chelsea (Swift). Harvard Trust Co. (Swift).

NEW YORK CITY.

William Salomon & Co. (Wilson).
National City Bank (Armour).
Chase National Bank (Wilson).
International Banking Corporation (Armour).
Irving National Bank (Swift, Armour).
Guaranty Trust Co. (Wilson).
Irving Trust Co. (Armour).
New York County National Bank (Swift).
Hallgarten & Co. (Wilson).

CHICAGO.

CHICAGO,

Continental Commercial National Bank (Armour, Cudahy).

Hibernian Banking, Association (Armour).

Fort Dearborn Trust & Savings Bank (Swift).

Illinois Trust & Savings Bank (Swift).

First National Bank (Morris, Wilson).

First Trust & Savings Bank (Armour).

National Bank of the Republic (Swift, Cudahy).

Continental & Commercial Trust & Savings Bank (Armour).

National Bank (Swift).

Liberty Trust & Savings Bank (Morris).

Woodlawn Trust & Savings Bank (Morris).

Wostside Trust & Savings Bank (Morris).

Mid-City Trust & Savings Bank (Morris).

Mid-City Trust & Savings Bank (Morris).

Mid-City Trust & Savings Bank (Morris).

Stoney Island Trust & Savings Bank (Armour).

Kenwood Trust & Savings Bank (Wilson).

South Side State Bank (Armour, Swift).

Central Manufacturing District Bank (Armour).

Drovers Trust & Savings Bank (Swift).

Drovers Trust & Savings Bank (Morris, Armour).

Stockmen's Trust & Savings Bank (Armour, Wilson).

Livestock Exchange National Bank (Armour, Swift, Wilson).

Stockwards Savings Bank (Armour, Swift, Worris).

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL. National Stockyards National Bank (Morris, Swift, Wilson). SOUTH ST. PAUL, MINN.

Stockyards Mortgage & Trust Co. (Swift). Stockyards National Bank (Swift, Armour). SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

Livestock National Bank (Swift).

OMAHA, NEBR.

Livestock National Bank (Swift, Morris). Stockyards National Bank (Armour, Cudahy). Omaha National Bank (Cudahy).

ST. JOSEPH, MO St. Joseph Stockyards Bank (Swift, Morris). American National Bank (Swift). Drovers and Merchants Bank (Swift). First National Bank (Swift). First Trust Co. (Swift).

KANSAS CITY, MO. Drovers National Bank (Morris, Swift). New England National Bank (Armour). Interstate National Bank (Armour).

WICHITA, KANS.

Guarantee Title & Trust Co. (Cudahy). Kansas National Bank (Cudahy). Union Stockyards National Bank (Cudahy). OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA

Oklahoma Stockyards National Bank (Morris, Wilson).

FORT WORTH, TEX.

Stockyards National Bank (Swift, Armour).

DENVER, COLO. Denver Stockyards Bank (Swift, Armour, Morris).

PORTLAND, OREG. Livestock State Bank (Swift, Armour). SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

Anglo-California Trust Co. (Swift). Bank of South San Francisco (Swift).

Mr. President, in the near future I propose to deal more fully with the main features of the ship subsidy bill itself and with some, to my mind, of the iniquitous features of the proposed bill, at least as these provisions impress me. At this time I prefer to make a few observations on the evils which have come before in previous legislation making possible the serious consideration of a bill so generally obnoxious to farmers and workers, a bill which I am not able to defend before my constituents and which, in my humble opinion, if enacted into a law as the bill now reads should and will discredit any party sponsoring the measure. On another day, when I shall have completed the presentation of my views and observations, I shall be glad to consider the further and fuller interpretation of other and abler exponents of this particular measure.

The very fact that there has been for the past year or more such an extensive and persistent propaganda nation-wide, that advertising experts have been employed apparently at Government expense to specially prepare and shape public sentiment adverse to a sound governmental policy, has forced not a few of our good people throughout the entire country to question the real motives which have prompted them and as to whether there has been an honest effort to bring national success for Government ownership and operation any more than there was a sincere effort to have governmental operation of the railroads succeed.

Some of these matters I shall discuss later much more fully than I have time for to-day. I repeat, many at this time are raising the question as to whether or not there has really been a sincere effort put forth to win success for the Government's operation of the merchant marine so necessary for the commercial development of our Nation and so vital and so essential to our national protection in time of enforced war. which we so devoutly hope may never come, but which under present world conditions may be forced upon this country at a no distant date.

Before we proceed to build up subsidized privileged monopolles, let us have a sincere, sympathetic, honest attempt to properly carry out the spirit and provisions of the Jones Merchant Marine Act of 1920. Let the President, if need be, dismiss for the good of the cause every employee of the Shipping Board and get rid of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, a corporation not now responsible to or under the control of Congress, and put only men in charge who are sympathetic to the building up of a great national merchant marine as called for under the provisions of the Jones Act and then without hindrance reemploy only those who can and will make good in an honest, sincere effort to serve the best interests of the Government and get private business out of government-for private business, when mixed with government business, lives and grafts at the expense of the Government-and then we shall see prosperity come to the shipping interests until the American flag will be found on every sea and in every port of the world. If we do this we shall have taken a long step forward in the interests of all the people instead of further intrenching privilege to profiteer from the labors of the masses.

The war brought us no greater curse than the privileged groups and the greed that is sucking the very lifeblood out of this Republic itself. Listen to the prophetic words of that noble statesman and martyr, Abraham Lincoln, who said:

I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands and the Republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of the war. God grant that my suspicions may prove groundless.

Lincoln's prophesy is now largely history in so far as the course privilege would follow to their own selfish ends.

us rally to the protection of the interests of the people and as one forward step defeat any further attempt to entwine about ourselves the tentacles of this monstrous octopus to flourish on the sweat of the toiling masses, who year by year are being forced to a condition of life little better than that of serfs.

> THE SHIP SUBSIDY BILL-WHAT IS IT? CONSIDER CAREFULLY THE FACTS

Mr President, "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread" is an old saying that may be exemplified in my case to-day, but at least an analytical mind leads me often to search for buried truths and for fallacious reasoning that so often leads us astray. I hope I may be given credit for an honest attempt to enlighten myself and in the kindliest spirit such criticisms as I may offer are not intended for the purpose of destroying or wounding, but rather that all phases of this great problem of vital national importance to further the reestablishment of our foregn commerce-yea, of our national development and policy itself-is represented in what is done with this proposed legislation

It is the welfare of all the people and of the country rather than of any individual or group which should be considered at Whether our policy shall be truly constructive or this time. destructive in its effects in the years to come or our place as a truely maritime nation will be determined by what we may do with this bill. Shall we build for all the people or shall we build for privilege and with little thought for the great

If my studies and research have led me into blind alleys it is far from my real purpose, for I am as anxious as any of my colleagues to see this Nation once more with its flag on every sea and in every harbor of the civilized world, To this end I would study carefully the rise and fall of American shipping in the earlier years of our country's phenomenal shipping industry. I am aware we should not live wholly in the past, but its history may teach us some useful lessons.

Mr. President, an analysis of the shipping bill itself, the report of the Committee on Commerce accompanying it, the arguments of Albert D. Lasker, the head of the Shipping Board, who is evidently more interested than anyone else in its passage, does not convince me that this measure will accomplish the marvelous things claimed for it by its sponsors. In my judgment it will not establish, nor on the part of certain interests is it intended to establish, an economical and efficient American merchant marine. It will not stop the wanton waste of $50,000,000 annually, but it will probably quadruple it in the years to come. It will be of no advantage or benefit to the American farmer, merchant, or mechanic, nor is it anparently designed to be. As it comes before the Senate, to my mind it has one sole aim, one sovereign purpose, to enrich beyond the dreams of avarice a few predatory privileged beneficiaries, who have already distinguished themselves by wrecking our railroads, as I shall attempt to show later, physically and financially killing our canals and river transportation, and dominating and controlling our banking and currency system in subordination to their notorious scheme of gambling and speculating. I have before me a pamphlet entitled:

"What are we to do with our Government-owned ships? Do we need a merchant marine for peace and war?" Statement by Albert D. Lasker, chairman United States Shipping Board, at the joint hearing before the Senate Committee on Commerce and the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries on the proposed bill providing aids for American shipping.

When, where, and by whom this pamphlet was printed and gratuitously distributed, who bore the expenses, is not disclosed. These peculiar circumstances, while trivial in themselves, are sufficient to arouse suspicion and prompts us to inquire, all this prudent precaution, all this dark secrecy? Who is back of Mr. Lasker? I can but wonder. Is it the international investment bankers, who will be the ultimate beneficiaries of the economic octobus?

In this connection, Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senate to section 6 of chapter 6 of the United States Statutes at Large, volume 41, part 1, Sixty-sixth Congress, which reads as follows:

which reads as follows:

Sec. 6. That hereafter no part of the money appropriated by this or any other act shall, in the absence of express authorization by Congress, be used directly or indirectly to pay for any personal service, advertisement, telegram, telephone, letter, printed or written matter, or other device intended or designed to influence in any manner a Member of Congress to favor or oppose, by vote or otherwise, any legislation or appropriation by Congress, whether before or after the introduction of any bill or resolution proposing such legislation or appropriation; but this shall not prevent officers and employees of the United States from communicating to Members of Congress on the request of any Member or to Congress, through the proper official channels, requests for legislation or appropriations which they deem necessary for the efficient conduct of the public business.

Any officer or employee of the United States who, after notice and hearing by the superior officer vested with the power of removing him, is found to have violated or attempted to violate this section, shall be removed by such superior officer from office or employment. Any officer or employee of the United States who violates or attempts to violate this section shall also be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

Mr. President, I suggest an investigation along this line. I believe that some officials and employees of the Shipping Board have violated this statute.

Mr. Lasker's pamphlet is a curiosity in economic literature. For contradictory and self-contradictory statements, for irreconcilably, inconsistent assertions, for unwarranted assumptions and discordant predictions it is without a parallel or precedent, according to my understanding and interpretation.

It commences with the ridiculous absurdity that "whether or no America is to be potent on the seas for the next several generations will be decided in the disposition of Congress of the legislation now proposed by the President for the aid and upbuilding of our merchant marine." As if it made a particle of difference to the useful classes whether or not America was potent on the seas through the instrumentality of a Government-fostered monopoly. And it is marked throughout the argumentative portions by passages which show the most ridiculous, illogical, and uneconomical thinking, as, for instance, that: "If John Smith, the individual, spends $50 abroad and receives wares therefor, he is none the poorer, but if the national John Smith spends $50,000,000 that he could retain at home, the Nation is a great portion of that $50,000,000 poorer."

It would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to compress into a single passage more nonsense than the foregoing. How the national John Smith could be poorer by buying abroad $50,-000,000 worth of goods that he needed, while the individual John Smith would not be poorer if he bought $50 worth of goods that he needed is beyond human comprehension. An individual buys abroad for the same reason that he buys at home, because 1: wants the things he buys more than he wants the money he gives in exchange. If money has any use except to buy things we want, some one ought to tell us what it is. This confusion This confusion of thought does not merely pop up here and there; it characterizes the whole pamphlet. In fact the main body of the pamphlet is taken up with what is in reality a refutation of the proposition which the pamphlet is supposed to strengthen and support. We are a luxury loving Nation, he declares, because we drink coffee several times a day!

WE HAD THE WORLD'S SHIPPING AND WHY?

The economic reasoning is only equaled by the lack of historical knowledge.

In our early days-we were a seafaring Nation. Our clipper ships excelled the world.

Most assuredly. But our clipper ships were not fostered by Government subsidies. De Tocqueville, when he visited this country nearly a century ago, was struck with the fact that nine-tenths of the commerce between the United States and Europe and three-fourths of the commerce of the New World and Europe was carried in American ships; that these ships filled the docks of Havre and Liverpool, while but few English and French vessels were to be seen in New York. The only explanation that he could discover for this was upon the hypothesis that vessels of the United States can cross the seas at a cheaper rate than any other vessels in the world. And, he continues continues—

It is difficult to say for what reason the Americans can trade at a lower rate than other nations; and one is at first led to attribute the circumstance to the physical or natural advantages which are within their reach; but this supposition is erroneous. The American vessels cost almost as much to build as our own. They are not better built, and they generally last for a shorter time. The pay of the American salior is more considerable than the pay on board European ships, which is proved by the great number of Europeans who are to be met with in the merchant vessels of the United States. But I am of opinion that the true cause of their superiority must not be sought for in physical advantages, but that it is wholly attributable to their moral and intellectual qualities. * * The European sailor navigates with prudence; he only sets sail when the weather is favorable; if an unforeseen accident befalls him, he puts into port; at night he turls a portion of his canvas, and when the whitening billows intimate the vicinity of land he checks his way and takes an observation of the sun. But the American neglects these precautions and braves these dangers. He weighs anchor in the midst of tempestuous gales; by night and by day he spreads his sheets to the wind; he repairs as he goes along such damage as his vessel may have sustained from the storm; and when he at last approaches the term of his voyage he darts onward to the shore as if he already descried a port. The Americans are often shipwrecked, but no trader crosses the seas so rapidly. And as they perform the same distance in a shorter time, they can perform it at a cheaper rate.

What this philosophical historian describes so graphically

What this philosophical historian describes so graphically and which he attributes to the moral and intellectual qualities of American seamen was an advantage that attached not merely to the sailing of ships but likewise to their designing, their building, and, in fact, to everything connected with them. This advantage resulted from the higher standard of wages, to which the proponents of ship subsidies are unalterably opposed, and the resulting higher standards of comfort which afforded the means and opportunity for the development of their moral and intellectual faculties.

Now, the question naturally obtrudes itself that, while nearly a hundred years ago we excelled the world in the shipping business without any aid or subsidies or subventions from the Government, to-day after unprecedented industrial progress we can not make any effort unless we permit a greedy horde of parasites who never sailed a ship and who apparently could not tell a mizzen mast from a smokestack, to help themselves at the public expense? I would like to have the proponents of this scheme to elte an instance in the annals of representative governments to match this.

THE DAYS OF AMERICAN SHIPPING.

In the glorious days of American shipping, when Donald McKay, of Boston, and William H. Webb, of New York, secured the materials for their ocean greyhounds from forests that were practically as far distant as they were from the Clyde, the Humber, or the Thames, they never dreamed of begging and bullying, and trying to get Congress to grant them Government subsidies.

Prior to the World War-

Declares the distinguished advertising agent-

America was content to have its cargoes carried in foreign bottoms. We were then a debtor Nation, and we could feel sure that those whom we owed, being the great maritime nations of the world, would furnish us the bottoms with which to carry the goods to liquidate our debts.

It is difficult to read such statements with complacency. It is too absurd for discussion. Just think of it! A debtor nation may feel sure that her goods will be carried safely by her creditors, but when the debtor nation becomes so foolish as to become a creditor nation, by giving thus the earnings of her people to her debtors to wage what Mr. Bryan designates as a causeless war, then the tables are turned and the nations she befriended will no longer carry her goods. According to this process of reasoning, instead of a creditor nation being placed in an advantageous position it is infinitely worse off. Is not that the limit of unreason? And this is the genius that assumes to tell the Congress of the United States as to their legislative duties.

With the keen penetration and broad vision that can only reach the pitch of perfection in the counting rooms of Lord & Thomas, Mr. Lasker illuminates a perplexing problem in statesmanship. Reflect on this profound exposition of the legislative intent of what he styles the very beneficent merchant marine act of 1920, known as the Jones Act:

The purpose of this legislation-

He savs-

was to provide for the temporary operation by the Government of such ships as were necessary to maintain and develop trade routes not covered by private enterprise and to enable the Government to dispose of its war-built tonnage to private owners.

Hence it appears that according to this advertising agent's method of reasoning an act is beneficial that provides for the operation of Government ships to maintain and develop trade routes unprofitable to private owners for the sole and sovereign purpose of selling the ships to private owners after the routes have been established. But in the very next sentence he tells us that in this very beneficial act—wisely constructed with statesmanlike vision, has not achieved what was expected of it, because immediately after its passage world trading collapsed and has remained in a depressed state ever since.

HOW AND WHY IT FAILED.

Why an act "wisely constructed with statesmanlike vision" ignominiously failed to achieve the results expected is very significant. Whether the passage of the act caused the collapse of world trading and subsequent depression or the collapse of world trade caused the failure of the act this legislative adviser does not explain. The keystone of the arch of this beneficent legislative structure, he explains, was "preferential tariffs to inure to goods imported in American bottoms." It may be possible that if the contemplated advantages of the act had inured to the owners of the bottoms instead of to the goods imported in them the act might not have been such a colosal failure. Nevertheless, the head of the Shipping Board believes that the failure of the act is chiefly due to President Harding's declination to abrogate commercial treaties solemnly entered into with other nations.

Now, to even "a wayfaring man" it is manifestly obvious that an act, no matter how beneficent its purpose may be, could not have been constructed with statesmanlike vision which flagrantly violated treaties declared by the Constitution to be the law of the land. Surely the President should not be held responsible for the failure of an act, the success of which depended upon the violation of his oath to support the Constitution. If Mr. Lasker were as keen an observer of public affairs as he assumes to be, he would have easily discovered the primary cause of the collapse of the world trade in the economic stupidity of the allied and associated powers to trade with Russia and the Central Powers.

It seems to me that more responsibility rests on a national policy carried out by our Secretary of State in adopting a policy prohibiting in practice the American people from exchanging the surplus products of their labor for the surplus products of the labor of the people of Russia and central Europe.

WHO SET THE EXAMPLE?

The Russian people followed the example of our illustrious forefathers, and instituted a Government which to them seemed most likely to secure their safety, peace, prosperity, and happiness. Our Secretary of State declared the industrial Republic of Russia an "economic vacuum." If it were a vacuum, the embargo was purely an act of superogation. It must be remembered in passing that this policy did not prevent the Russian people from trading; it merely prevented the American people from trading with the Russian people. It is obvious to the most obtuse that if Americans did not want to exchange their surplus products for the surplus products of Russia there could be no trade; and the interference of the administration it would seem was a perversion of their delegated authority, and a disregard of the economic rights of those whom they seek to serve.

A moment's reflection will show that no effort, no matter how pressing, could enable the Russian people to sell their surplus goods to Americans if Americans were not desirous of exchanging their own surplus goods for them. It takes two to make a bargain; to every trade there must be two agreeing minds, two consenting parties, who mutually desire to trade and whose interests are reciprocal. No one can buy unless there is some one willing to sell. Conversely, no one can sell unless there be some one willing to buy. Unless the people of the United States, for exampe, wanted to sell their surplus goods to the people of Russia, there could be no sale. Hence it is obvious that the policy of the administration was a direct and positive injury to the American people in every line of business activity. So far as doing business with Russia and other European countries is concerned, the contention of predatory privilege that "Nations build navies to insure that their merchant ships may carry their wares to all portions of the world unmolested," is debilitated nonsense, mere pretense. International trade is not warfare unless premeditated; it is the great promoter of international peace and universal prosperity.

WHAT RUSSIA WANTED.

When the vast resources of Russia are considered and her dire need for all kinds of manufactured goods, which could be amply supplied by our millions of unemployed artisans, it seems little short of criminal conspiracy that prevented the conjunction of these desires and their mutual gratification. The Russians are in need of engines, cars, rails, and all sorts of railway equipment. They are also in dire need of farming implements, mechanics' tools, motor trucks, tractors, and all kinds of leather goods. At the lowest estimate they would have purchased 50 millions of foodstuffs and 30 millions of textile goods.

While our mills and factories were closing down for want of orders, throwing out of employment millions of persons able and willing to work, whose earnings would have been exchanged for the produce of the farmer, the administration shut the door in the face of a customer whose effective demand for the products of our farms, mines, mills, and factories would have set to work every unemployed person in the country. Trade with Russia and central Europe would have imbued our industries with fresh energy and given an impetus to trade that would have inspired confidence and courage in every line of human activity. Instead of helping to make the Government operation of Government-owned ships a success they did everything possible, it seems, to make it an ignominious failure.

GOVERNMENT OPERATIVES,

But, in spite of this unwarranted prohibition of international trade by our own accredited representatives, it appears from Mr. Lasker's own statements that Government operation of Government ships is a tremendous success and that the private operation of private ships is an absolute failure. In the first place, we are told that—

The purpose of Government operation as defined by law was to build up trade routes in order that the Government ships might thus be sold with established good will to private owners.

In other words, the purpose of Government operation was not primarily to establish an efficient water transportation service but to establish profitable trade routes, and then, after demonstrating the efficiency of Government operation, to sell out to private owners. But it seems that the scheme did not produce the desired result, for, as Mr. Lasker informs us-

The very method chosen has worked to defeat its own purpose, for in the upbuilding of those routes the Government has operated ships, and in the operation of ships has driven its potential customers largely off the seas.

Now, here we have a broad, unqualified admission that Government operation has been so superior to private operation that it has driven the private operator off the seas-put him out of business. It is natural to suppose that after it was amply demonstrated that Government operation was vastly superior to private operation the Shipping Board would favor the operation that had proved a success rather than the one that had proved a failure; that these public officials would have some national pride, some love of country, and that they would strive to make Government operation more and more efficient. No. Instead they seem destitute of national pride or love of country, as judged by the cold facts which they themselves present. Mr. Lasker, speaking for the board, says:

Thus we come to conclusions from which there is no escape—that since continued Government operation means finally the possible and likely elimination of private operation of American ships, a method must be devised whereby the Government shall end its operation and at the same time insure carriage of American goods under the American flag through private ownership, as contemplated by the Jones

Consider for a moment the shameless perfidy, the base treachery, the atrocious betrayal of a public trust, involved in such an indefensible proposition. It means that although Government operation is now and has been since its commencement a marked success, therefore and for that sole reason the conclusion is irresistible that it must be abandoned. Private operation is a failure; therefore it must be maintained at a cost of millions to the taxpayers of the country and exorbitant increase of freight charges to shippers.

DISCREDITING GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

It would seem that Government operation having proved a success in spite of Mr. Lasker and his Shipping Board, a method must be devised whereby it shall be put out of the shipping business. The method devised is so simple and so easy of application that one marvels at its simplicity. It means that Government-owned ships shall be sold to private interests who have no capital at present to buy them, but in the event of the Government granting the subsidy the Federal reserve banks will furnish them the purchase price. The Committee on Commerce, in its report on the bill, makes this very plain and unmistakable. as it states:

One main object of the bill is to bring about the purchase by private parties of the ships owned by the Government. This will require capital, which must be secured from banks and those who are willing to invest in shipping securities. This can not be borrowed by proposed purchasers and operators of the ships if there be the least uncertainty of the payment of the compensation provided in the bill.

We are again reminded that the main object of the bill is to sell our ships to private parties. If this were the main object of the bill, why encumber it with other extraneous matters? The reason for this, according to the reasoning of the committee, is that the proposed purchasers have neither the necessary capital nor the credit to secure it. But if the Government guarantees the annual payment of from thirty millions to seventyfive or perhaps one hundred millions, the banks will lend them the money, but not otherwise. If there be the least uncertainty, the banks will not accommodate them. This exposes the scheme in its predatory purposes and objects. The Government must furnish a guaranty bond acceptable to the banks, and then they will furnish the money to the proposed purchasers and operators to buy the ships.

Compare this proposal with the simple request to aid the basic industry of agriculture. Under this prearranged scheme, it is manifestly evident that the Federal reserve bankers have already picked the proposed buyers and operators. We have heard a great deal about the Government keeping out of business and business keeping out of Government, but this proposed scheme inextricably involves the Government in private business and private business in Government, and to which there is no possible termination.

But while this connection of private business with the Government is a violation of the pledges made to the people, it is discreditable to the sponsors of the bill that there is no provision to conserve and protect the interests of the people, but everything is done to secure the privileges of the private shipowners and operators. The following extract from Mr. Lasker's statement conclusively proves this contention:

Of the six millions of freighters the Government possesses, it is the hope of the Shipping Board that ultimately a great measure of the three million good tons will find itself in the hands of American owners should the legislation here proposed be adopted. It is doubtful if, under the happiest conditions, the American flag will need the three million good tons in its entirety, and ways and means must be found to dispose of such good tonnage as remains, so that American interests will not be hurt. Under no circumstances must the surplus tonnage that America can not absorb be disposed of so as to bankrupt those who buy from the Government at current prices.

WHOM ARE WE HELPING?

The duplicity and evident intention to mislead is apparent by the substitution of such terms as "American owners" and the "American flag," for they really mean predatory privileged beneficiaries of this indefensible measure. Observe how this statement flatly contradicts the statement in the report of the committee on the bill itself. The report, as previously quoted, states that the main object of the bill is "to bring about the purchase by private parties of the ships owned by the Government." Mr. Lasker says that under no circumstances must the ships that remain after the parties picked by the Federal reserve banks have helped themselves to the choice of the best ships be disposed of so as to come in competition with the beneficiaries of this bill and endanger their monopoly of ocean transportation.

Not alone that, but, as Mr. Lasker puts it, the American flag will not need the 3,000,000 of good tonnage in its entirety, even under the happiest conditions. Therefore, to safeguard the predatory interests of these law-created monopolists, as to the millions of tonnage remaining in the possession of the Government, it is proposed that the hulls must be sold at low figures for conversion to types of freighters that we do not possess. As to why and to whom the Government must sell them at low figures, and the type of freighters to which they are to be converted, no explanation is offered. If 3,000,000 of good tonnage is more than is needed, and there is a surplus tonnage of several millions, why the necessity of creating new types of freightage?

Continuing, Mr. Lasker says:

For if we permit a potential surplus to remain, with the possibility of its use in abnormally prosperous times when any tonnage can be profitably operated, the burden of less will fall on the good tonnage in times of adversity without full enjoyment of profit in times of prosperity, and thus we depress the price of all our tonnage, and so it will come to pass that we shall liquidate the whole for less than we could liquidate the good part.

A MONOPOLY ESTABLISHED.

Competition, which is virtually the life of honest and efficient trade, must be entirely eliminated and an absolute monopoly established. If a potential surplus remained in possession of the Government, there might lurk a possibility of competition in abnormally prosperous times which might interfere with the excessive rates that this gigantic monopoly will naturally impose upon ocean transportation. Therefore, the Shipping Board recognizes the necessity "to force the uneconomical 3,000,000 of freighters' disappearance from the market.' will be observed that every precaution is taken by the beneficiaries of the bill to establish an extortionate and oppressive monopoly which the people will be taxed to maintain. Is it possible for the human mind to conceive of anything as infamous as the iniquities embodied in this atrocious measure?

The Shipping Board is operating 421 steel ships out of a total of 1,442, leaving 1,021 tied up at an enormous expense to the Government. Mr. Lasker, on page 4 of his prepared statement, says that notwithstanding this serious handicap the Government-operated ships have driven their private competitors off the seas. On page 12, in a lame attempt to discredit Government operation, he says that the Government ships are operated at an annual loss of $50,000,000. He immediately contradicts this statement by admitting that this sum includes the cost of maintaining 1,021 ships lying idle in our ports and the cost of repairs necessary to prevent entire deterioration.

THE SHIPS MAKE A GOOD SHOWING.

For the year 1921 Government-owned ships carried 51 per cent of our total foreign trade. This is certainly a satisfactory showing. Consider this refutation by Mr. Lasker of all that he has said in favor of private operation:

The vast sums we saved ourselves in freight rates alone, which through faulty Government bookkeeping was converted to construction charges, would have showed during that period that handsome freight returns foured to the Public Treasury. Private operation at that time would have been impossible,

It is surprising that an annual loss of $50,000,000 is charged against Government operation, when it is publicly admitted that through governmental bookkeeping their earnings were converted to other purposes and entered as a loss and not a profit. If private operation is impossible immediately after a war, at what rate per annum does it become possible? If private operation was impossible in 1918, what has occurred to make it possible in 1923? If Government operation from that time to this has been the greatest insurance we have to our future over-seas prosperity, which involves our entire national prosperity, why should we abandon it in favor of a system of operation that has failed and that can be maintained only at a prodigious cost to the American taxpayers through an indeterminable subsidy, and a still higher cost to the American consumer through monopolistic freight rates?

After stating several times with more or less emphasis that Government operation has driven competitors from the seas, the Shipping Board again flatly contradict themselves by the statement that "free competition with the privately owned shipping of the world through successful Government operation is an impossibility."

How, then, has Government operation succeeded in driving its competitors off the seas, notwithstanding the fact that the Government has been paying the highest salaries to the most inefficient aggregation of incompetent miscalled experts that I have any knowledge of, and at the same time maintaining 1,021 idle ships?

Fifty million dollars annually it is costing to keep the Shipping Board boats going-

Declares Mr. Lasker-

Fifty million dollars, not including, however, interest, full insurance, or depreciation on invested capital. For any private business to say that it was losing $50,000,000, without considering interest on capital investment, full insurance, or depreciation, would mean that the managers of that private business were attempting to deceive their stock-

IS IT BAD PAITH?

This, Mr. President, would appear to be a misstatement of the situation, made for the purpose of misinforming American people—the stockholders of the Shipping Board—and to mislead their accredited representatives, the Congress of the United States. Let me present a strictly parallel case and one the farmers can understand. Suppose a man owns 1,442 horses, 421 of which are working, earning for him handsome profits; but the other 1,021 horses are standing idle in the stable, earning nothing, but consuming not only the profits that the working horses are earning, but costing an additional $500 each year for Naturally the man would realize immeditheir maintenance. ately that the sensible and reasonable thing to do would be to sell his idle horses. He calls his managers, foremen, and superintendents before him and advises them to sell the 1,021 idle horses at public auction to the highest and best bidders. His trusted, well-paid employees strenuously protest against such an arrangement.

They earnestly contend that the proper thing to do and, in fact, the only thing to do is to sell the working horses to Smith, Brown, and Robinson. "But," says the owner of the horses, Brown, and Robinson. But, says the office for credit; "Smith, Brown, and Robinson have neither money nor credit; "box how is it possible for them to buy them?" "That is all very true," the trusted employees admit, "but we have made arrangements by which they can get the money. You must deposit with the Federal reserve bank a guaranty bond or sufficient collateral, and the bank will lend Smith, Brown, and Robinson the money to buy your horses. You must also put up additional collateral to insure a handsome profit to Smith. Brown, and Robinson, whether the horses earn anything or not. This will cost you a huge sum each year, but you will be compensated for your magnanimity, as Smith, Brown, and Robinson solemnly promise to fly the American flag from the top of their stable. Of course, it will not be the real national emblem, as it will not represent liberty, virtue, and independence, but slavery, graft, and extortion." "And what," asks the owner, "shall be done with the 1,021 idle horses that are still in my possession? Must I sell them also?" "Oh, Heavens, no! If you were to sell them, they would naturally and necessarily compete with the horses you have sold to Smith, Brown, and Robinson, and this would reduce their profits, and then you would have to pay them a bigger subsidy." Therefore the wise, patriotic thing to do is to shoot the idle horses. "So," thinks the owner, 'according to this brilliant arrangement, I must sell the horses that are earning me satisfactory profits and then furnish the Federal reserve bank with enough good collateral to secure them against any loss, or even risk, in order to furnish money to men who have neither capital nor credit to buy my profitearning horses. Not only that, but I must put up money every year to insure these men against anticipated losses in a business which I operated myself at a handsome profit, and then must shoot the balance of my horses, lest their competition might reduce the prodigious profits of Smith, Brown, and Rob-Inson." This, it seems to me, is precisely what the Shipping Board is proposing that the people of the United States do through their public organ, the Federal Government.

Mr. President, there is nothing in recorded history, nothing in the annals of civil government, so infamous as the proposi-tions embodied in this indefensible measure. In my place here in this imposing and dignified assemblage, the repository of the direct authority of the American people, I declare that in my humble opinion never before has there been a measure considered here that can even approach the measure before us for disregard of the rights and interests of the people.

Mr. President, a further consideration of the details of this bill indicates that it is of a dual character, one portion of it. being a proposed subsidy bill, and the other portion being an amendment to the income tax laws. Under the proposed changes to the income tax laws, special privileges are granted to ship owners, the nature of which, it would seem, are not understood by the proponents of the bill. These changes are so technical that it is doubtful whether they received the careful consideration they deserve of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee of the House, or of the Senate Commerce Committee. An examination of the reports made in support of this bill by the Committee of the House and of the Senate falls to give adequate information concerning the operation of the proposed changes of our internal revenue law, and yet we are asked to blindly vote for such radical class legislation.

Taking up the subsidy portions of the bill for detailed con-sideration, we find, Mr. President, that the proponents of this measure assert that they are designed to build up an American merchant marine in the interest of American shipping. They have sought to induce the people to believe that any American citizen or corporation can receive assistance in the shape of a subsidy when carrying the products of American farm or fac-tory to markets, and that the producers will not be dependent upon foreign shipping for the marketing of their products. Upon these premises is sought the indorsement of American farmers and laborers for the measure. As a matter of fact, the bill proposes no such thing. What the bill says is:

The board shall not be required to enter into such contracts unless in the judgment of the board such person possesses such ability, experience, resources, and character as, in the opinion of the board, to justify a belief that the payment of the compensation will be reasonably calculated to carry out such policies and otherwise promote the general welfare of the United States. (Page 24, lines 7 to 14.)

This, in effect, is giving into the hands of a board appointed under political influences the power to enter into subsidy contracts to certain individuals or corporations, and refuse it to those who fail to measure up to their arbitrary standards. The board itself is to be the sole judge of what shall constitute ability, experience, resources, and character. There is nothing in the proposed bill which says that ability or experience shall be determined upon experience in seamanship or experience in ship operating, or, indeed, on knowledge of shipping matters whatsoever. It seems to me the great danger under these provisions is that the board can create a gigantic shipping trust owned by personal friends and subsidized out of the Treasury of the United States. I am unwilling to lend myself to any such proposition as will give limitless powers to a group of men who, in their appointments and administration, will be subjected to the influences of the political, predatory, and financial power which we have felt too much in this country. It is not necessary to be personal or cynical about these matters. There is no necessity for bartering words about the character of appointees who may be placed in positions of power. Our past experiences fully justify us in questioning the wisdom of such a policy or taking chances.

I earnestly hope that the time may come in this country when our people will be saved from the domination of perfectly respectable presidential appointees recommended with little regard save to pay political obligations. Mr. President, during the early discussion of this bill it was almost a daily occurrence for some eulogy of the present Shipping Board to be spread upon the pages of the Congressional Record. The Senate is necessarily placed in the position of agreeing that they are all respectable appointees; notwithstanding that fact, there has doubtless never been an agency of the Government in such disrepute as the Shipping Board and its predecessors.

IS THE SHIPPING BOARD COMPETENT?

There have been frequent accounts of mismanagement and actual suggestions of corruption; and yet, Mr. President, all through the subsidy provisions of this bill we find that the granting of a subsidy to American shipowners depends, not upon the right granted in the bill to such American shipowners, but upon the judgment or favor of the board, who can parcel out these financial subsidies which are to be paid by all the people of the United States. Other provisions in this bill are likewise misleading, particularly one familiarly known as the Madden amendment. The Senate committee in its report referred to it as follows:

6. Permanent appropriations: The objected to requirement has been changed in the bill as it finally passed the House, and the Shipping Board will have to appear before Congress and obtain appropriations. While it is questionable whether this will not in a large measure defeat the purpose of the bill, this change nullifies the minority's

So far as the payment of direct subsidies under the provisions of this bill are concerned, the report of the committee is accurate, and the provision found on pages 38 and 39 of the bill would seem to limit the payment of such subsidies from the merchant marine fund to appropriations made annually by Congress. This provision is as follows:

Provided, That no expenditures shall be made from the merchant marine fund because of any increased compensation granted under the terms of paragraph (c) of section 410 except out of the appropriations made annually therefrom by Congress,

But, Mr. President, this provision does not cover by far the greatest expenditures of money under this bill. Under the income-tax provisions relating to depreciation of vessels the door has been opened for the refunding of vast amounts of income taxes. The payments of these refunds is especially provided for on page 25, lines 15 to 19, inclusive, which says:

All moneys in the fund are hereby permanently appropriated for the purpose of making such payments and the refunds authorized by subdivision (j) of section 416, subject, however, to the proviso of paragraph (c) in section 410.

Mr. President, the proviso in section 410 has reference only to the payment of direct subsidy for increased compensation, for which an annual appropriation by Congress is required; but the secret refunds of taxes to large corporations are permanently appropriated for out of the Treasury, and the amount of such appropriation is indefinite, and may reach hundreds of millions of dollars.

The provisions of law which require the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to report to Congress the disbursements of money for refunds of taxes do not apply to this permanent appropriation; and, as a result, Congress will never know how much money will be required and to whom such refunds will be paid. More than that, as all matters relating to income tax are supposed to be secret under the provisions of the internal revenue law, Senators and Congressmen will not be able to obtain any information on this subject, and this in spite of the fact that the Constitution (sec. 9, Art. I) directs that "a regular statement and amount of the receipts and expenditures of all public moneys shall be published." The result will be that no one will know whether the total amount of such funds will be millions of dollars or hundreds of millions of dollars Why shipowners should not be required to come to Congress for appropriations to get their refunds, the same as every other claimant for refunds, is beyond comprehension. Why should special favors be shown them? On the other hand, a farmer who may have a few dollars due him for an erroneous overpayment of income taxes has to come to Congress for an appropriation. Why this favoritism?

ANOTHER BAD FEATURE.

Mr. President, there is another permanent appropriation in this bill which is not affected by the provisions of section 410. I refer to section 501, on page 47 of the bill, which gives the power to scrap the Government transports and for the making of contracts for the carrying of Government supplies and troops in privately owned vessels. Under this section a permanent and indefinite appropriation is made to make all payments upon contract entered into under its provisions. Here, again, is kept from Congress, the representatives of the people, a knowledge of how much of the people's money is being spent for the benefit of a favored few shipowners. Mr. President, I wonder if the members or the supporters of this bill on House and Senate committees realized to what extent they are opening the doors of the Treasury to an unrestricted, unsupervised expenditure of

THE REVENUE LAW AMENDED.

Let us, Mr. President, come to that portion of the bill which deals with the administration of the revenue law, found on pages 19 and 20. The bill proposes an amendment to the income tax law regarding the depreciation of vessels, which is an in-Under this section values novation in Federal tax matters. upon which internal taxes are levied are not determined by the Internal Revenue Bureau but are to be determined by the Shipping Board, which board has been given a free hand to exercise a degree of favoritism not in the interest of sound business. In paragraph (a) the proposed section says:

That the reasonable allowance for exhaustion, wear and tear, and absolescence, provided in paragraph (8) of subdivision (a) of section 214 and in paragraph (7) of subdivision (a) of section 234, shall be determined, and allocated to the years in which sustained, under rules and regulations prescribed by the United States Shipping Board.

Again, in paragraph (b) the Shipping Board is given the power to determine what the exceptional decrease in value of vessels has been, which decrease in value is to be deducted from any amount paid or to be paid in income tax. This presents great possibilities, but why worry? Privilege gets it.

Mr. President, we are treated to the spectacle of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue being bound by the findings of the Shipping Board, no matter what the actual facts in the case may be. The actual depreciation may only be 4 per cent, and yet if the Shipping Board certifies to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that in their opinion a 10 per cent depreciation should be allowed the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is bound to order a refund of taxes based upon such a depreciation.

WHAT MAY WE EXPECT.

Judging from the past course of the Shipping Board, no one can estimate what the depreciation of these vessels will amount to. An examination of the hearings before the Committee on Appropriations in the House of Representatives in May, 1921, shows that the Shipping Board was allowing a 10 per cent. depreciation per voyage on new vessels. I understand that the rate of depreciation to-day allowed by the Shipping Board is between 44 and 5 per cent annually, which is more nearly that of the depreciation which commercial companies estimate upon their own vessels. We have no assurance that the present rate of depreciation adopted by the Shipping Board will be continued. The board may find in some cases the depreciation to be as high as 15 per cent per voyage or as low as 1 per cent; and where can the appeal be made should there be a charge of favoritism or even an error in judgment? Who is the judge?

The Shipping Board is the sole arbiter. From its decisions there is no appeal. Its finding are irrevocable. It may allow one shipper compensation for depreciation far beyond the demands of justice and refuse to allow to his competitor what he is justly entitled to. But he has no redress

Mr. President, why should the Shipping Board determine these questions of depreciation and decrease in value for the Treasury Department and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue? If this principle of allowing a bureau of the Government having charge of a certain subject matter is to be followed here to estimate depreciation in values for the purposes of taxation, why not apply it to all the bureaus of the Government instead of to the Shipping Board alone?

GIVE THE FARMERS A SHOW,

Why not allow the Secretary of Agriculture to promulgate rules and regulations estimating the unusual and exceptional decrease in value of farms, live stock, and farm products and so certify to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and direct him to pay refunds of taxes in unlimited amounts to the suffering farmers in the West and South? This would savor too much of socialism, of paternalism, and government in business, but it would be all right-good business-for privileged ship-Oh, no, Mr. President, such a policy will never be owners. permitted by the people.

Again, why not direct that the head of the Forestry Bureau to estimate the deletion and depreciation in values in our vast forests and lumber industries which shall be binding upon the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the estimation and assessment of taxes in our great lumber industries? Why should the vast corporations owning oil tankers and iron-orecarrying ships be allowed the privilege of having the Shipping Board estimate the values and depreciation upon which their income tax had been based while a similar privilege to the farmer, the miner, the manufacturer, and the lumberman is

If we are to have the values upon which income taxes are levied estimated by the favor of any one particular governmental board in the interest of a certain class of taxpayers, why not pass a general amendment to the income-tax laws and provide that all values shall be estimated by the particular branch of the Government having supervision over the class of industry in which the taxpayer is engaged? Why not let the Department of Labor estimate the depreciation in the earning capacity of the large body of laboring men in this country, some of whom are obliged to pay income taxes, and then certify that to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue as a basis for taxation? Mr. President, if I am wrong in my interpretations, the people have a right to know the facts and then act for themselves. tainly, we do not want to have any doubts about so important matters or any special advantages to any group of men or industries. All the farmer has asked is for a square deal, an chance with others, and he objects strongly to further favoritism in legislation, but he wants to see a creditable merchant marine in this country.

Mr. President, I think I have fully demonstrated the viciousness of this proposed fundamental change in our taxing law which seeks to grant special privileges to wealthy corporations. The best thing that can be done by those Senators who honestly believe that a direct subsidy to American shipping is necessary and right would be to strike from this bill all references to the internal revenue laws, for when one attempts to embark upon the unknown sea of class legislation in matters of taxation it is hard to determine the port at which the voyage will end.

THE BILL IS SPONSORED BY THE SHIPPING BOARD.

The best way to judge those who sponsor a measure of this kind is to consider their past performances. Let us notice just a few matters of administration and policy of the Shipping Board, matters which in themselves are almost inconsequential when considered in relation to that governmental agency, but matters, nevertheless, that will show us whether or not we should follow their lead.

Charges have been freely made in the press and on this floor that the Shipping Board was a mass of incompetency, which resulted in extravagance, waste, graft, and actual fraud; that the books and accounts of the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Cor-poration were so poorly kept that the financial affairs of the board were so hopelessly entangled that no one knew the actual financial standing of the board. One matter has come to my attention affecting the administration of the treasurer's office of the board which seems to substantiate these charges of mismanagement. So far as I can learn the treasurer of the Shipping Board, and, by the way, he is the treasurer also of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, has never submitted to Congress a list showing the financial concerns in which the moneys of the board were deposited, nor has a list showing the nature and amounts in detail of the securities owned by the board or held in trust by them ever been submitted.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE!

During the early part of last year it was discovered that the treasurer's office of the Shipping Board had no record of the amounts of money on deposit to the credit of the Shipping Board in a great number of the depositaries, large and small, all over the country. As a matter of fact, it seems it did not have a list of such depositaries, and the files of the office had to be searched to find the names of the banks and other financial institutions which might have on deposit money of the Shipping Board or of some of its agencies.

WHO HAS UNCLE SAM'S MONEY!

Consequently a form letter was sent to every institution where it was suspected the Shipping Board had kept an account, and I understand some twelve or fifteen hundred of these letters were sent out. Of the aggregate of this, however, I have no detailed information. The following is a copy of one of these letters:

FEBRUARY 27, 1922. NATIONAL BANK

GENTLEMEN: It appears from the records in this office that the United States Shipping Board of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation maintained an account with your bank in 1918.

In 1918.

The records are not in sufficient detail to afford complete reply to an inquiry from the financial vice president as to the status of the accounts maintained in the former depositaries. In order that this may be available you are requested to furnish the following informay be available you are requested to mation:

If the account has not been finally closed please state the balance as of the date of your reply, and whether the balance includes current accrued interest.

accrued interest.

If the account has been closed will you please state the date and amount of the last payment and whether it includes the accrued interest on the account up to the date of withdrawal?

Your early reply will be appreciated.

T. L. CLEAR, Treasurer.

Be it said to the credit of our national banks and trust companies, I am informed answers were received from practically all of the letters sent out, and various sums of money were found to be in these banking institutions to the credit of either the Shipping Board or the Emergency Fleet Corporation or some of its agents. The following is a sample of one of these

THE -

THE — TRUST CO.,
— February 27, 1922.
UNITED STATES SHIPPING BOARD EMERGENCY FLEET CORPORATION,
Washington, D. C.

(Attention Mr. T. L. Clear.)

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of February 23 in reference to accounts in the name of United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation received, and in reply to same we beg to advise you that upons examination of our books we find that we have an account with * * resident auditor, of $15.48, and also contract * * of Trusting this is the information you desire, we are, Very truly yours,

TRUST Co.,
-, Assistant Treasurer. THE -

THE BOARD FINDS SOME MONEY.

An answer was sent to this letter of the trust company in the following terms and checks for the amount were duly received by the treasurer's office:

MARCH 15, 1922.

The - TRUST COMPANY,

GENTLEMEN: With reference to your letter of February 27, 1922, relative to the accounts of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, will you please remit by cashler's checks payable to the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation the amount of $15.48 carried on the former account of resident auditor, and $123.84 carried in the former account of Housatonic Shipbuilding Co.

Yours truly,

(Signed) T. L. CLEAR, Treasurer.

Mr. President, this correspondence discloses an administration of Government business which is intolerable and this condition of affairs exists under Mr. Lasker's administration of the Shipping Board, the man who presumes to advise the Congress as to the legislation that is necessary to secure national prosperity. Is it not time that a thorough and exhaustive investigation should be instituted?

Mr. President, Congress should order an investigation of the office of the treasury of the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation in order to ascertain how much has been lost, if any, to the Government in this careless method of book-There is, however, another phase of the situation in the Shipping Board which these letters I have cited developed. How was it possible for the Shipping Board to audit the accounts of its branch offices and of its contracts with the various shipbuilding companies when it did not know how much money remained unexpended and had no record of the accounts or expenditures or even where the money was on deposit? Was the expensive audit conducted under contract with Lybrandt, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, at an expenditure of over $500,000, an actual audit, or was it based upon guesswork, for surely these accounts referred to in the letters of Mr. Clear, the treasurer, do not appear to be a part of that audit? This audit, itself, it is alleged, was conducted by the Shipping Board through an evasion of the law, and Mr. Lasker in his testimony before the Senate Committee on Appropriations in August, 1921, may have misled the committee or have been uninformed himself as to the cost and extent of such an audit. On pages 5 and 6 Mr. Lasker stated that the cost of this so-called Montgomery contract would be in the neighborhood of $50,000, and when Senator Smoor intimated that the contract might extend to $200,000 Mr. Lasker impressed the committee with the idea that it would not amount to that sum.

HOW THE LAW IS EVADED.

In order that outside auditing firms might not be employed by the Shipping Board, Congress included in the deficiency apby the Shipping Board, Congress included in the denciency appropriation bill of that year at the instance of Senator La Follette and with the approval of Senator Smoot and Senator Warren a provision which provided that hereafter all accounting of every nature should not be done by outside firms, but should be under the supervision of the Bureau of Efficiency. It would seem this provision of law was evaded by transferring all of the accounting of the Shipping Board to the Emergency Fleet Corporation, which being a private corporation, under the law continued the Montgomery contract in effect until over $500,000 have been expended. Even now, it is asserted, experts consider the Montgomery audit as lacking and the system of accounting approved by this firm as an inefficient method for handling the vast amount of claims in which the Government is interested. The Perley and Morse audit previously conducted by the Shipping Board, it appears, was likewise a failure, al-though the Government in this venture, through the Shipping Board, paid this firm of accountants approximately $600,000. Since the inception of the Shipping Board the tendency has been to place the operations of the Emergency Fleet Corporation beyond the control of Congress, and it appears there was no supervision of accounting by the auditors of State and other departments or of the Comptroller of the Treasury. One can not fail to wonder why these things should be. Who can enlighten the people? In harmony with past policies the provisions of the present bill in providing that Congress is to have no supervision of the expenditures of the subsidy for the period of 10 years is in strict accord with the conduct of the highpriced officials of the Shipping Board, who are constantly seek-ing unlimited appropriations where the Government can not act as guardian of the vast expenditures of the people's money. Why should we invite scandal through such legislation?

QUESTIONABLE TRANSACTIONS.

Story after story of individual questionable transactions involving, to say the least, gross mismanagement have been brought to the attention of Senators by men formerly connected with the Shipping Board or by those transacting business with the board. I call attention to two of these as samples, the truth of which can easily be established through an investigation. The first one impugns the accuracy of the so-called Montgomery audit above referred to, and is as follows: "The Baltic Steamship Co. purchased under contract in 1920 from the United States Shipping Board a passenger steamer named the New Rochelle. They were required to pay $27,500 in cash as the first payment on the vessel, which was purchased 'as is, where is.' Their contract required that the purchaser would pay for reconditioning the vessel.

Several months after the initial payment a second payment amounting to $22,500 was made, making a total payment by the purchaser of $50,000. No subsequent payments were made by the purchaser.

The vessel was reconditioned and completed one or more trips under the direction of the purchaser. Recently, by reason of libels attached to the vessel, the Shipping Board, exercising its rights as mortgagor, took back the vessel. The Shipping Board was then confronted and forced to pay the bill for reconditioning which was not paid by the purchaser in accordance with its contract, and which bill amounted to over a million dollars. The Shipping Board was also required to pay royage expenses which were not paid by the purchaser, which amounted to between $300,000 and $400,000.

The remarkable and unexplainable act on the part of the Shipping Board, approved by Mr. Montgomery, who has full authority under the chairman and final powers with respect to approval of vouchers for payment occurred in this act, to wit: A claim was made by the purchaser that the consumable stores on board this vessel when she was taken over by the Shipping Board. Their contention was accepted, and a voucher was approved by Mr. Montgomery on July 8, 1921, for the payment to the said Baltic Steamship Co. of the sum of thirty-three thousand eight hundred and odd dollars as representing the value of said consumable stores. This payment disregarded the fact that these stores were purchased and placed aboard by the steamship company who falled to pay, requiring the Shipping Board to pay bills therefor, which appeared under unpaid voyage account bills. This action on the part of the Shipping Board is unparalleled in the history of sound business, and is so openly notorlous as to suggest an intentional irregularity.

Mr. President, it does not seem possible that the Government

Mr. President, it does not seem possible that the Government should be required to pay twice for the same goods, but if this story, as it came to me, be true, that is exactly what the Government has done.

WAS ALL PROPER AND HONEST?

The other story is an account of an original contract and the names are all given. It is as follows:

Memorandum.

(Original contract, dated May 27, 1917. Samuel L. Moore & Sons Corporation and L. C. Gillespie & Sons.)

COST.

Actual cost of material.
 Actual cost of labor.
 Overhead 65 per cent of direct labor.
 Profit 30 per cent on sum of items 1, 2, and 3.

HISTORY.

Hull was commandeered by Executive order in August, 1917.

* * Shipbuilding Corporation (Ltd.) was organized and assumed control of the Samuel L. Moore & Sons Corporation as of November 1, 1917. No new contract was entered into between the Bethelem Co. and the E. F. C. The E. F. C. assumed the position of the former owner.

The original contract called for a combination oil and general cargo

The original contract called for a combination oil and general cargo steamer.

The motive power of this vessel was to be a coal-burning apparatus. This was later changed by the E. F. C. to an oil-burning apparatus, which, of course, necessitated many expensive alterations in the buil and machinery. When work under that change was in progress the E. F. C. made a further change by placing the machinery from the fore to the aft. In addition to the aforementioned changes there were many other expensive alterations, each requiring the abandonment of material originally fabricated. This vessel was on the ways from the early part of 1917 to August, 1919.

COST.

The approximate cost of the vessel, as shown by the books of the contractor, was $2,000,000, to which should be added the profit of 30 per cent on the cost, amounting to $600,000, making a total cost of $2,600,000. The dead-weight tonnage of this vessel was 5,100 tons. The approximate cost per dead-weight ton was $500, which, when compared to other vessels built by the contractor, appears very

The net steel charged to item 12 was approximately_____
The amount of steel required in the construction of the hull as delivered (certified to by naval architects) was_____ 6, 800, 000

At an average cost of 5 cents per pound, the additional burden on cost due to the excess charges for steel amounted to $130,000 (including the 30 per cent profit). No effort was made to ascertain the additional cost of machinery material required due to the changes summarized above.

GENERAL.

The Emergency Fieet Corporation made no change in this contract similar to those of other former-owner contracts. Other former-owner contracts were changed from lump sum to cost plus 10 per cent or cost plus $10 per dead-weight ton. If the contract had been changed to a cost plus 10 per cent, the saving to the Government would have been about $400,000, or if the contract had been changed to a cost plus $10 per dead-weight ton the saving in profit would have been $550,000. Approved audited overhead at the yard should not be 63 per cent, and had contract provided for actual instead of 65 per cent overhead a further saving to the Government would have been effected. It is difficult to believe, it is hard to realize, that American citizens could descend to such depths as to be guilty of such iniquities against their own Government. There is a Nemesis that follows such perfidy with pitiless arm and tireless feet that never rests and never sleeps until the wrong is atoned for.

BAD RECORDS AND FILES.

BAD RECORDS AND FILES.

It is charged:
"The records and files of the Shipping Board themselves and of the Emergency Fleet Corporation are in a most deplorable condition, and daily important papers are lost which materially affect the standing of claimants before the board."

This statement was made to me by a gentleman thoroughly familiar with the workings of the Shipping Board; and to illustrate the delays and embarrassments caused by the loss of papers, he handed me the following memoranda, which illustrates this condition. It is as follows:

"JUNE 25, 1921.

"Office memorandum.

"Office memorandum.

"The files of correspondence belonging to the Auditor for the State and Other Departments relating to the claim of the Shawmut Steamship Co. against the United States Grain Corporation, amounting to $77,840.20, for the unpaid balance on freight revenues for cargo shipped on the steamship Mystic has been missing for some time. When last seen the correspondence was in a manila folder, and was checked through the mail room to the chairman's office on April 15, 1921, but the latter office has no record of its receipt.

"As it is essential for the Auditor for the State and Other Departments to have these papers in order to settle the claim, it is requested that each official of the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation cause a thorough search to be made of the desks and files in their respective offices and advise the Secretary of the result. The file, if found, should be immediately transmitted to this office.

"(Signed) ———, Secretary."

THE STEEL TRUSTS HAVE A HAND.

am informed that the corridors of prominent hotels in Washington have been thronged with men who were discussing the possibilities of purchasing vessels owned by the Government should this bill become a law, and among the statements made among these men. who are supposed to know what is going on in the "holy of holies" of the Shipping Board, is a state-ment to the effect that in all contracts of purchase of vessels ment to the effect that in an contracts of purchase of vessels from the board will be a provision requiring the purchaser to equip the vessel purchased with oil-burning machinery of a certain type whenever required by the board to do so. It seems, according to these gentlemen, that the patents for this seems, according to these gentlemen, that the patents for this particular type of oil-burning machinery are owned exclusively by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and the result of this provision in a contract would be to put the purchasers of vessels from the United States at the mercy of this glgantic trust, whom many people believe were guilty of profiteering during the war. The truth or falsity of these allegations can not be ascertained by me, yet I think they are serious enough in their nature to require a committee of this body to inquire into. Surely it is no part of the policy of Congress to give to the manufacture of any one particular type of marine engine an exclusive monopoly.

WHY THIS DANGEROUS POLICY?

There is another provision in this bill which does not meet with my approval, and that is placing in the hands of the Shipping Board jurisdiction over the joint water and rail rates. The skirts of the Shipping Board do not appear to be clean when it comes to the question of rate-making power. as June, 1920, the board postponed putting in operation those provisions of the Jones Act which would prevent the making of exclusive contracts between the railroads of the United States and foreign steamship companies. As a result of such postponement the railroads of this country, it is rumored, entered into contracts with foreign steamship companies which discriminated against American shipping. It is said that these contracts are all on file in the Inferstate Commerce Commission. The Shipping Board, perhaps unintentionally, is responsible for the contracts having been entered into. Here they undoubtedly acted against the interests of American shipping.

Mr. President, is it safe, therefore, to leave the approval or disapproval of these contracts exclusively in the hands of the Shipping Board as provided for by this bill? In my opinion, it is not, because the board might, it seems, decide to leave in force contracts between a particular railroad and a particular foreign steamship company which the individual members of the Shipping Board might feel inclined to favor. The enforcement or nonenforcement of the provisions relating to the joint rate contracts are not obligatory; they are merely discretionary with the board, and there is nothing in the law to prevent the board from exercising this discretionary power either for political advantage or for a more sinister advantage. The law on this Subject should be obligatory, not discretionary.

Mr. President, in saying this I am condemning a system and not the individuals of the system, many or all of whom may be sincere and honestly endeavoring to do their duty.

CHEAP OCEAN RATES, PERHAPS.

Mr. President, the Senators who favored the passage of the pending bill have stated again and again that the result of its operations will be cheaper ocean freight rates for the products of the farm and the factory. This bill leaves the rate-making power in the hands of the board, and if the future actions of the board are to be judged by its actions in the past instead of having lower freight rates for farm products, the farmers and shippers of this county will have to pay higher freight rates. Even after the war was over, I find that the Shipping Board, on August 24, 1920, increased the freight rates 20 to 40 per cent above what they had been during the war, and these increases took effect not later than January 1, 1921. What assurance has the American public that the Shipping Board, with its top-heavy personnel and apparent disregard for public opinion, will be interested in the reduction of freight rates and costs to the shipper, when its every performance in the past has been against the producers and the public and for the granting of special favors to favorite shipowners and ship operators?

FARM ORGANIZATIONS ARE OPPOSED TO A SHIP SUBSIDE,

Mr. President, nearly every large farm organization in this country has come out openly in opposition to the ship subsidy bill. The American Farm Bureau Federation, at their annual meeting at Chicago, December 11-14, 1922, passed resolutions in opposition, as follows:

Inasmuch as it has been the general policy of this country to subsidize railroads by land grants, bonds, and granting special privileges; manufacturers by a protective tariff, and it is now proposed by those in charge of our general policy to subsidize our shipping interests by the payment to them of a bonus, for all of which the consuming public must foot the bill; we emphatically protest against the continuance of a policy that has become confiscatory instead of protective.

There is not much cheer in that for friends of the ship subsidy.

Mr. President, here we have one of the largest farm organizations and the most widely distributed in this country con-demning in unmistakable terms the policy of a ship subsidy. The farmers do not see wherein great benefits would come to them, such as have been claimed by proponents of the measure. On the other hand, the farmers feel that they, in a large measure, will be called upon to foot the bills should the ship subsidy bill pass with its continuing appropriations, probably running into billions, and they do not hesitate to go on record in opposition to any measure of this kind.

Let me say, also, that should the proposed ship subsidy be forced through Congress at this session, it will prove, in my judgment, disastrous to the party pushing it, and especially so in a large part of the West and Northwest country. Furthermore, upon an examination of the reasoning by which Mr. Lasker and his confrères reach the conclusion that Government ownership, which has proved successful, although managed by men hostile to it, should be abandoned for private operation, which they say has proved a failure, we see at once that it is not an induction from undisputed facts, but a deduction from a previously assumed doctrine, viz, that the insatiable greed of predatory privileged interests is paramount to the rights and interests of the producing classes. The spirit of the American people revolts against such an interpretation of our institutions, and they are sure to repudiate it whenever the opportunity present itself.

SHALL THERE BE A NEW BOARD?

The report of the committee, and Mr. Lasker's carefully prepared statement, conclusively prove that if the present Shipping Board are removed because of their hostility to Government operation of Government ships and a board substituted in full sympathy with Government operation and free from the sordid and sinister influences of the predatory privileged interests, there can be no doubt that Government operation will be a tremendous success.

The experience of mankind has amply demonstrated that governmental interests and private interests can not be combined without producing public misfortunes and the corruption of public officials. Private interests, whenever involved in governmental affairs, are forever encroaching upon public rights and securing new and extending old predatory privileges. Therefore they must be kept distinct and separate if we are to have a pure and honest government and clean and decent politics. This is a political truth that we have ignored. politics.

Mr. President, in justice to the people of this great land, we can not grant such powers as provided in this bill. Instead of this bill giving the people of this land a great shipping industry and a great fleet that will sail the seven seas, its provisions are such as will result in the building up of a gigantic shipping trust that will throttle the efforts of all independent shippers, and will eventuate in extortionate rates and the elimination of competition. Let us bend our energies, Mr. President, to some method that will perpetuate the American flag upon the seas in honor and respect, and will not simply mean that particularly favored ones shall be given the exclusive right to flaunt Old Glory in the commercial intrigues of the

Mr. McKellar resumed and concluded the speech begun by him yesterday, as follows:

Mr. McKellar. Mr. President, on yesterday I gave notice that I would conclude my speech to-day or at some later time. I want to conclude it now by asking unanimous consent to print in the Record as a part of my remarks the substitute I have offered for the subsidy bill.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, January 16 (calendar day, January 19), 1923.

Amendment (in the nature of a substitute) intended to be proposed by Mr. McKelear to the bill (H. R. 12817) to amend and supplement the merchant marine act, 1920, and for other purposes, viz: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

That section 5 of the merchant marine act of 1920 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. (a) That in order to accomplish the purposes of this act, and more effectively to build up an American merchant marine, the board is authorized to sell, whenever a demand for vessels makes it to the interest of the Government to sell and consistent with good business methods and the objects and purposes to be obtained by this act, at public competitive sale, after appraisement and due advertisement, to persons who are citizens of the United States, except as provided in section 6 of this act, any vessels that five-sevenths of the board may conclude are undesirable as a part of the American merchant marine, and where such vessels have not been in use and have been tied up for a period of at least one year.

"(b) Any sale under this section shall be made at such prices and on such terms and conditions, including the use and disposition of the vessel by the purchaser, as the board may prescribe; except that (1) the completion of the payment of the purchase price and interest shall not be deferred more than 15 years after the making of the contract of sale; (2) interest on the unpaid purchase price shall be payable at least annually at a rate of not less than 41 per cent per annum; and (3) the payments of principal shall be so arranged that the amounts due and paid under the contract of sale as principal, up to any moment of time, shall be sufficient to cover depreciations of the vessel up to such moment, unless the board waives this requirement upon the giving of adequate security: Provided, however, That no officer, agent, representative, or employee of the Shipping Board or of the Government, or anyone who has been in the last three years, shall in any way be interested as a vendee in any purchase made from the Shipping Board within a period of 10 years after such officer, agent, employee, or representative has left the service of the Shipping Board or the Government.

"(e) All sales made under the authority of this act shall be subject to the limitations and restrictions of section 9 of the shipping act of 1916 as amended: Provided, however, That the ship known as the Leviathan, now being reconditioned, shall not be sold for a price less than the cost of reconditioning the vessel nor at all without the approval of Congress first had and obtained."

Sec. 2. (a) Section 7 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended by inserting after the first previse thereof the following: "Provided further, That domestic communities primarily interested in such lines shall be understood to mean the geographical divisions of the coast lines of the United States known as the North Atlantic, South Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific coasts, together with the particular ports from which such lines may run or be intended to run and the territorial regions and zones naturally tributary to such ports and coastal divisions: Provided further. That the board shall not for the period of two years after the enactment of the merchant marine act, 1922, sell vessels operating on routes established by the board prior to the enactment of this act to persons other than those who in the judgment of the board have the support, financial and otherwise, of the domestic communities primarily interested in such lines": Provided further, That the board shall not establish any discriminatory rates or permit and discriminatory rates or permit any discriminatory rates or permit and discriminatory rates or permit any discriminatory rates or permit and discriminatory rates or permit any discriminatory rates or permit and discriminatory rates or permit and discriminatory rates or permit and discrim natory rates as between ports along the Atlantic seaboard; all rates from such ports to be on a parity.

(b) Such section is further amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph to read as follows:

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to discourage monopoly in the American merchant marine, and in pursuance of this policy the board is directed, in the development of its sales and its assignment policy, to continue as far as possible and practicable, subject to the provisions of this section, all existing steamship routes and regular services, and to endeavor in every way to bring about the permanent establishment of such routes and services, and their retention, as far as possible, in the hands of persons having the support, financial and otherwise, of the domestic communities primarily interested in such routes and services. In carrying out the provisions of this section the board is directed to investigate fully all matters in connection therewith, and to conduct hearings at which the persons interested in such communities may have the opportunity to express their views as to the course to be pursued by the board and the methods to be adopted in carrying out the policy herein prescribed."

SEC. 3. Section 9 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended to read as follows:

SEC. 9. That if the terms and conditions of any sale of a vessel made under the provisions of this act include deferred payments of the purchase price, the board shall require, as a part of such terms and conditions, in order to protect and secure the equity of the United States for such unpaid purchase money, that the purchaser of the vessel and his successor in title shall keep the same insured (a) against loss or damage by fire, and against marine risks and disasters, and war and other risks if the board so specifies, with such insurance companies, associations, or underwriters, or with the separate insurance fund to the extent authorized by section 10 of this act, and under such forms of policies and to such an amount as the board may prescribe or approve; and (b) by protection and indemnity insurance, if the board so specifies, with such insurance companies, associations, or underwriters, or with the separate insurance fund to the extent authorized by section 10 of this act, and under such forms of policies and to such an amount as the board may prescribe or approve. The in-surance required to be carried under this section shall be made payable to the board and/or to the parties as interest may The board is authorized to enter into any agreement that it deems wise in respect to the payment and/or the guaranty of premiums of insurance."

SEC. 4. Section 10 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 10. That the board may create out of revenue from operations and sales, and maintain and administer, a separate insurance fund, which it may use to insure in whole or in part, for the account of whom it may concern, against all hazards covered by insurance in such cases, for an amount not exceeding any interest or equity of the United States therein (a) any vessel either constructed or in process of construction, and any obligation or liability in connection therewith; except that whenever the obligation rests upon any person, other than the United States, to place any such insurance or to pay the premium therefor, such insurance may be placed in the insurance fund only in case the rates obtainable for such insurance from foreign insurance companies are lower than those obtainable from American insurance com-panies, and (b) any plants or materials heretofore or hereafter acquired by the board or hereby transferred to the board."
SEC. 5. Section 11 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended to read as follows:

SEC. 11. (a) That there is hereby established in the Treasury a revolving fund to be known as the 'United States Shipping Board construction loan fund' (hereinafter in this section called the 'loan fund'). There shall be covered into the loan fund all moneys which at the time of the enactment of the merchant marine act, 1922, are in the fund created by this section as in force before its amendment by such act; and the board may set aside and cover into the loan fund all receipts of the board, except appropriations made by law and profits of the board from the operation of vessels; but the total amount of moneys covered into the loan fund (other than payments upon the principal and interest upon loans made there-from) shall not exceed $125,000,000.

"(b) The board may use the loan fund, to such extent as it deems necessary, for making loans to aid persons, citizens of the United States, (1) in the construction by them in the private shipyards of the United States of vessels of the best and most efficient type equipped with the most efficient and the most economical machinery and commercial appliances, or (2) in the equipping by them of vessels already built with such machinery and commercial appliances: Provided, That this section shall not apply to the construction or equipment of vessels by corporations or individuals primarily for the purpose of transporting their own products, and no loan shall be made unless it has the sanction of at least five out of the seven members of the board, the names of those voting for the loans to be spread upon the minutes of the board.

(c) No loan shall be made for a longer time than 15 years. All loans shall bear interest, payable at least annually, upon the unpaid principal at a rate not less than 5 per cent per annum. No loan shall be made (1) in the case of a loan for construction purposes for a greater sum than one-half of the cost of the vessel to be constructed, nor (2) in the case of a loan for equipment purposes for a greater sum than one-half of the cost of the equipment or one-half of the value of the vessel when thus reequipped, whichever is the lesser. The board shall require such security for the loan, including a first lien upon the entire interest in the vessel with reference to which the loan is made, as it deems necessary in order to insure the repayment of the loan with interest. In case of a loan under this section made after the enactment of the merchant marine act, 1922, all payments upon the principal and interest of the loan shall be covered into the loan fund."

SEC. 6. (a) Section 24 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 24. That all mails of the United States shipped or carried on vessels shall, if practicable, be shipped or carried on vessels documented under the laws of the United States which are not ineligible under subdivision (c) of section 406 of the merchant marine act, 1922, to receive compensation under Title IV of such act (hereinafter in this section referred to as qualifled vessel). No contract hereafter made with the Postmaster General for carrying mails on qualified vessels shall be assigned or sublet, and no mails covered by such contract shall be carried on any vessel not so qualified. No money shall be paid out of the Treasury of the United States on or in relation to any such contract for carrying mails on qualified vessels when such contract has been assigned or sublet or when mails covered by such contract are in violation of the terms thereof carried on any vessel not so qualified."

(b) Section 7 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended by striking out so much thereof as reads as follows: "The Postmaster General is authorized, notwithstanding the act entitled 'An act to provide for ocean mail service between the United States and foreign ports, and to promote commerce, approved March 3, 1891, to contract for the carrying of the mails over such lines at such price as may be agreed upon by the board and the Postmaster General.'

(c) The act entitled "An act to provide for ocean mail service between the United States and foreign ports, and to promote commerce," approved March 3, 1891, is repealed.

TONNAGE DUTIES.

Sec. 7. After 30 days from the enactment of this act all amounts required to be levied, collected, and paid as tonnage duties, tonnage taxes, or light money, except such amounts as are required to be paid into the Treasury of the Philippine Islands, shall be double the amounts which would be required to be levied, collected, and paid if this act had not been enacted. This section shall not apply in the case of a sailing vessel (as defined in sec. 405) of less than 1,000 gross tons, or in the case of any other kind of vessel of less than 1,500 gross tons.

TITLE II .- TRANSPORTATION OF IMMIGRANTS BY WATER,

Sec. 8. As nearly as practicable three-fourths of the total number of immigrants admitted to the United States in any fiscal year shall be transported in vessels registered or enrolled and licensed under the laws of the United States.

The Commissioner General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall make regulations necessary for the enforcement of section 301. All such regulations, in so far as they relate to the administration of such section by diplomatic or consular officers of the United States, shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of State.

Section 301 shall not take effect as to immigrants transported in a vessel documented under the laws of any foreign country until a time fixed by proclamation of the President. ident is authorized and directed, whenever in his opinion the provisions of this title or of regulations made thereunder, are or may be in conflict with treaties or conventions with a foreign country, to take such steps as may, in his opinion, be necessary to remove such conflict. Whenever, in his opinion, no such conflict exists in the case of any country he shall so proclaim, and the provisions of this title and regulations made thereunder shall take effect in the case of immigrants transported in vessels documented under the laws of such country at the time specified in his proclamation therefor.

The term "United States" as used in this title in a geographical sense means the several States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, the District of Columbia, Porto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

TITLE III .- ARMY AND NAVY TRANSPORTS.

SEC. 9. Whenever in the judgment of the President adequate transportation facilities to meet any or all of the needs of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps are afforded by vessels registered, or enrolled and licensed, under the laws of the United States, he may direct the discontinuance in whole or in part of the transport service of either the Army or the Navy and transfer to the board or place out of commission any of the vessels now or hereafter engaged in either of such services. Whenever such disposition is made, the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, respectively, are authorized and directed to enter into contracts with owners of vessels registered, or enrolled and licensed, under the laws of the United States, for such transportation as may be required by the Army, the Navy, or the Marine Corps, respectively. Such contracts may be for a term The board shall furnish whatever assistance may of 10 years. be necessary in the making of such contracts. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to meet the payments required under such contracts.

TITLE IV .- PROVISIONS RELATING TO RAIL AND WATER TRANSPORTATION. DEFINITIONS.

SEC. 10. As used in this title the term "commission" means the Interstate Commerce Commission.

INTERRELATIONS OF RAIL AND WATER TRAFFIC.

(a) It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to promote, encourage, and develop water transportation, service, and facilities in connection with the commerce of the United States, and to foster and preserve in full vigor both rail and water transportation, and the board and the commission are hereby severally authorized, empowered, and directed to cooperate to that end.

(b) The board and the commission are authorized and directed to create a joint board, selected from among their members, officers, and employees, to study the conditions and interrelations of rail and water traffic, questions relative to the control, improvement, and extension of ocean freight terminals, and the principles and methods essential to accomplishing the policy declared in subdivision (a).

(c) The joint board shall appoint a secretary who shall keep minutes of its meetings, which minutes shall be furnished to the members of the board and of the commission. The joint board shall hold regular semimonthly and such additional meetings as may be necessary to transact properly its business.

(d) The joint board shall formulate and make such recommendations to the board and the commission, not inconsistent with law, pertaining to the interrelations of rail and water traffic, as it deems necessary to accomplish the policy declared in subdivision (a). The board shall make effective, by such means as are granted it by law, any such recommendation upon any matter within its jurisdiction, if such recommendation is approved by the board. The commission shall have a like duty as to any such recommendation upon any matter within its jurisdiction.

(e) None of the provisions of this section shall be construed to affect the power or jurisdiction of the commission, or to confer upon the board concurrent power or jurisdiction over any matter within the power or jurisdiction of the commission.

EXPORT BILLS OF LADING.

Sec. 603. Paragraph (4) of section 25 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new section, to read as follows: "In making rules and regulations prescribing the form of such through bills of lading, the commission shall adopt as the portion thereof governing the carriage of goods by water in foreign commerce such form as may be certified to the commission by the United States Shipping Board for such purpose."

RAIL-OWNED WATER LINES.

Sec. 604. Paragraph (9) of section 5 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lien thereof a colon and the following: "Provided, That the foregoing provisions of this paragraph shall not apply in any case where such common carrier by water or such vessel is engaged exclusively (a) in trade (other than with foreign contiguous territory) not included in the coastwise trade, or (b) in trade between ports in the United States and ports in the Philippine Islands, but this proviso shall not apply in any case where such common carrier by water or such vessel is engaged exclusively in trade upon any of the rivers or canals of the United States."

AGREEMENTS BETWEEN CARRIERS AFFECTING WATER TRANSPORTATION. SEC. 605. Section 15 of the shipping act, 1916, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 15. (a) That every common carrier by water, or other person subject to this act, shall file immediately with the board a true copy, or, if oral, a true and complete memorandum of every agreement with another such carrier or other person subject to this act, or modification or cancellation thereof, to which it may be a party or conform in whole or in part, fixing or regulating transportation rates or fares; giving or receiving special rates, accommodations, or other special privileges or advantages; controlling, regulating, preventing, or destroying competition; pooling or apportioning earnings, los or traffic; allotting ports or restricting or otherwise regulating the number and character of sailings between ports; limiting or passenger traffic to be carried; providing warehousing, docking, or other terminal facilities; providing that the one carrier shall act in any manner as agent or representative of the other carrier; or in any manner providing for an exclusive, preferential, or cooperative working arrangement.

"(b) Every common carrier by water shall file immediately with the board a true copy, or, if oral, a true and complete memorandum, of every agreement with a common carrier by railroad subject to the provisions of the interstate commerce act, as amended, or modification or cancellation thereof, to which it may be a party or conform in whole or in part, relating to the interchange of freight or passengers, or the making of joint or through rates, or providing warehousing, docking, or other terminal facilities, or providing that the one carrier shall act in any manner as agent or representative of the other carrier, or in any manner providing for a cooperative working arrangement between the two carriers. In all such cases the common carrier by railroad shall also have a like duty. The provisions of this subdivision shall apply only to agreements relating to passengers or property transported or to be transported to or from a foreign country or the Philippine Islands from or to a port or other place in the United States.

"(c) The term 'agreement' as used in this section includes understandings, conferences, and other arrangements.

"(d) The board may by order disapprove, cancel, or modify any agreement, or any modification or cancellation thereof, whether or not previously approved by it, that it finds to be unjustly discriminatory or unfair as between carriers, shippers, exporters, importers, or ports, or between exporters from the United States and their foreign competitors, or to operate to the detriment of the commerce of the United States, or to be in violation of law, or to be otherwise detrimental to the interest and welfare of the United States, and shall approve all other agreements, modifications, or cancellations.

"(e) Agreements existing at the time of the enactment of the merchant marine act, 1922, shall be lawful until disapproved by the board. It shall be unlawful to carry out any agreement or any portion thereof disapproved by the board.

"(1) All agreements, modifications, or cancellations made after the enactment of the merchant marine act, 1922, shall be lawful only when and as long as approved by the board, and before approval or after disapproval it shall be unlawful to carry out in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, any such agreement, modification, or cancellation.

"(g) Every agreement, modification, or cancellation lawful under this section shall be excepted from the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies,' approved July 2, 1890, and amendments thereof and acts supplementary thereto, and the provisions of sections 73 to 77, both inclusive, of the act entitled 'An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes,' approved August 27, 1894, and amendments thereof and acts supplementary thereto.

"(h) Whoever violates any provision of this section shall be liable to a penalty of $1,000 for each day such violation continues, to be recovered by the United States in a civil

SEC. 606. Paragraph (d) of paragraph (13) of section 6 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(d) If any carrier by railroad subject to this act enters into arrangements lawful under section 15 of the shipping act, 1916, as amended, with any carrier by water operating from a port in the United States to a foreign country, for the handling of through business between interior points of the United States and such foreign country, the commission may require such carrier by railroad to enter into similar arrangements with any or all other carriers by water operating from such port to the same foreign country, but such arrangements shall be subject to the provisions of section 15 of the shipping act, 1916, as amended."

JOINT OR PROPORTIONAL RATES.

SEC. 807. Section 28 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 28. (a) That no common carrier shall charge, collect, or receive, for transportation subject to the interstate commerce act, as amended, of passengers or property, under any joint rate, fare, or charge, or under any export, import, or other proportional rate, fare, or charge, which is based in whole or in part on the fact that the passengers or property affected thereby are to be transported to, or have been transported from, any port in a possession or dependency of the United States, or in a foreign country, by a carrier by water or regulating in any way the volume or character of freight in foreign commerce, any lower rate, fare, or charge than that charged, collected, or received by it for the transportation of passengers, or of a like kind of property, for the same distance, in the same direction, and over the same route, in connection with commerce wholly within the United States, unless the vessel so transporting such passengers or property is, or unless it was at the time of such transportation by water, documented under the laws of the United States.

"(b) Whenever the board is of the opinion, however, that adequate shipping facilities to or from any port in a possession or dependency of the United States or a foreign country are not afforded by vessels so documented, it shall certify this fact to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the commission shall, by order, suspend temporarily the operation of the provisions of this section with respect to the rates, fares, and charges for the transportation by rail of passengers and property transported from, or to be transported to, such ports.

"(c) Such suspension of operation of the provisions of this section shall be terminated upon 30 days' notice, given in accordance with the requirements of section 6 of the interstate commerce act, as amended, by order of the commission whenever the board is of the opinion that adequate shipping facilities by such vessels to or from such ports are afforded and so certifies to the commission.

"(d) Whenever the board and the commission are both of opinion, and certify, that putting into effect or keeping in effect the provisions of this section will result in unjust discrimination between ports of the United States or commerce accustomed to move through such ports, or in materially changing the channels of transportation within the United States, or in unduly congesting one or more of the ports of the United States, the commission shall, by order, suspend the operation of said provisions until such time as it and the board reach a contrary conclusion in the premises, whereupon such suspension shall, by order, be terminated by the commission upon 30 days' notice as hereinbefore provided for the termination of other suspensions."

TITLE VII.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

SEC. 11. Any officer, employee, or agent of the United States, including legislative, judicial, diplomatic, and consular officers, and officers serving in the military or naval forces of the United States, traveling by water, when the expense of such passage is chargeable directly or indirectly to the United States, shall when practicable travel in a public vessel of the United States or a vessel registered, or emolled and licensed, under the laws of the United States. When passage in such a vessel is not practicable, the voyage may be made in a vessel under a foreign flag only when specifically ordered by the head of the department or other Government establishment concerned, or upon order specifically approved by such head of department or other Government establishment, who shall as promptly as possible report each such voyage made in a vessel under a foreign flag, together with the reasons showing necessity therefor to the board.

(b) Any person subject to the provisions of subdivision (a) who fails to comply therewith in respect to the passage taken shall not be reimbursed for such passage money, or shall be surcharged in his accounts with the United States with the amount thereof, as the case may require.

TRANSPORTATION OF GOVERNMENT SUPPLIES.

SEC. 12. All goods, wares, merchandise, and material of every nature (including supplies for the military or naval forces of the United States) belonging to or intended for the United States, transported by water, shall when practicable be shipped in a public vessel of the United States or a vessel registered, or enrolled and licensed, under the laws of the United States. When shipment in such a vessel is not practicable and the shipment is made in a vessel under a foreign flag, it shall be the duty of the officer, employee, or agent of the United States authorizing or making the shipment, within one month thereafter, to mail a written notice to the board, stating the ports of departure and destination, the date, the name of the vessel, and the reason why the shipment was not made in a public vessel or a vessel registered, or enrolled and licensed, under the laws of the United States.

Sec. 13. Whereas in section 34 of the merchant marine act passed by the Congress and approved June 5, 1920, the President was "authorized and directed within 90 days after this act becomes law to give notice to the several governments, respectively, parties to such treaties or conventions, that so much thereof as imposes any such restrictions on the United States will terminate on the expiration of such periods for the giving of such notice by the provisions of such treaties or conventions"; and

Whereas the President of the United States refused and failed to give notice as required by said act of Congress to the nations affected by said section; and

Whereas treaties with the following countries, together with the dates of conclusion of such treaties, are within the intent of section 34 of said merchant marine act of 1920: Argentine Republic, July 27, 1853; Belgium, March 8, 1875; Bolivia, May 13, 1858; Borneo, June 23, 1850; China, November 17, 1880, and October 8, 1903; Colombia, December 12, 1846; Costa Rica, July 10, 1851; Denmark, April 26, 1826; Ethiopia, June 27, 1914; Honduras, July 4, 1864; Italy, February 25, 1871; Liberia, October 21, 1862; Muscat, September 21, 1833; Netherlands, August 26, 1852; Norway, July 4, 1827; Ottoman Empire, May 7, 1830; Paraguay, February 4, 1859; Persia, December 13, 1856; Serbia, October 14, 1881; and Spain, July 3, 1902; and the treaty of commerce and navigation, concluded with France on June 24, 1822; and

Whereas the said conventions are no longer responsive in various respects to the commercial needs of the several countries:

Therefore be it enacted that the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives shall, within 90 days after the passage of this act, give notice to each of said nations as required in said conventions by leaving a copy of this act with the diplomatic representatives of each of said countries in Washington, or by mailing to the officer conducting the foreign affairs of each of said countries, a copy each of this act.

Be it enacted further, that within the time limit mentioned in each convention after said notice is received by the diplomatic representatives at Washington of each of said countries, or after said notice has been received by the officer conducting the foreign affairs of each of said nations, the said conventions and each of them between the United States and each of said countries of dates mentioned herein are hereby entirely abrogated and annulled, as provided for in said conventions.

Be it enacted further, that the President is hereby requested, upon the abrogation of the said treaties, or any of them, to negotiate with the diplomatic representatives of said countries, in lieu of said conventions hereby abrogated, a new convention more in consonance between the United States and the said several countries.

Sec. 14. Whereas the convention between the United States and Great Britain, concluded on the 22d day of December, 1815, and extended by amendatory commercial convention ratified April 2, 1828, between said countries, provides in Article II of the amended convention, "Either of the contracting parties, in case either should think fit, at any time after the expiration of the said 10 years—that is, after the 20th of October, 1828—on giving due notice of 12 months to the other contracting party to annul and abrogate this convention, and it shall, in such case, be accordingly annulled and abrogated after the expiration of the said term of notice"; and

Whereas in section 34 of the merchant marine act passed by the Congress and approved June 5, 1920, the President was "authorized and directed within 90 days after this act becomes law to give notice to the several Governments, respectively, parties to such treaties or conventions, that so much thereof as imposes any such restrictions on the United States will terminate on the expiration of such periods for the giving of such notice by the provisions of such treaties or conventions"; and

Whereas the President of the United States refused and failed to give notice as required by said act of Congress; and

Whereas in the opinion of the Congress the convention aforesaid discriminates against the trade and commerce of the United States; and

Whereas in any event said convention is no longer responsive in various respects to the commercial needs of the two countries:

Therefore be it enacted that the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives shall, within 90 days after the passage of this act, give notice to Great Britain, as required in said conventions as amended, by leaving a copy of this act with the British Ambassador to the United States, or by mailing to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain, London, England, a like copy of this act;

Be it enacted, that 12 months after said notice is received by the British Ambassador, or by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain, the said convention between the United States and Great Britain, of date December 22, 1815, as amended by the said convention of date of April 2, 1828, is hereby entirely abrogated and annulled, as provided in Article II of said amended convention ratified April 2, 1828;

Be it further enacted, that the President is hereby requested upon the abrogation of the said treaty as amended to negotiate with Great Britain in lieu of the convention hereby abrogated a convention more in consonance with modern conditions of trade and commerce between the two countries.

TITLE VI

SEC. 15. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to set aside upon receipt of 5 per cent of the amount of all custom duties paid under law in force at the time of the enactment of this act or under laws subsequently enacted on all goods, wares, and merchandise imported in ships of the United States, and to pay out the same to the importers of goods, wares, and merchandise which shall be imported in such vessels of the United States, said sums to be paid in proportion to the duty collected on the goods thus imported by each importer: Provided, That these payments shall not be made prior to a day 15 months after the passage of this act, at which time the treaties mentioned in sections 13 and 14 of this act shall have been abrogated and annulled by this act, unless it shall be determined finally by the courts that this section is not affected by said treaties: Provided further, That no such sums shall be paid to any importer who imports any goods now on the free list, or which may hereafter by law be put upon the free list, in vessels other than in those of the United States, and the Shipping Board shall establish rules and regulations by which the fact of importation of goods on the free list shall be determined: And provided further, That persons traveling and returning to the United States bringing goods, wares, or merchandise with them, shall likewise be entitled to 5 per cent of the duties paid by them: And provided further, That this section shall not apply to importers transporting their own products in their own vessels.

REPORTS BY SHIPPING BOARD.

Sec. 16. The second paragraph of section 12 of the shipping act, 1916, is amended to read as follows:

"It shall, on or before the 1st day of December in each year, make a report to the Congress, which shall include its recommendations and the results of its investigations, a summary of its transactions, a statement of all expenditures and receipts (including the merchant marine fund and the construction loan fund), and of the operations of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and of any corporation which is managed or controlled by the board, and the names and compensation of all persons employed by the board."

HOME PORT OF VESSEL OF UNITED STATES.

SEC. 704. (a) The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to designate such ports of entry as he deems advisable as ports of documentation for vessels.

(b) For the purposes of section 30 of the merchant marine act. 1920, and of the navigation laws, the home port of a vessel shall be that port of documentation at or nearest to, and in the same customs district as, the place at which there is conducted the greater part of the vessel business of the owner of the vessel. except that the Secretary of Commerce shall by regulation pre-scribe the home port in cases where he finds that the above rule is not applicable, including among other cases the case of vessels owned by the United States or any governmental agency thereof, the case of vessels not engaged in trade, and the case where there is no port of documentation in the same customs district as the place at which the greater part of the vessel business of the owner is conducted. The decision of the Secretary of Commerce as to the home port of a vessel shall be final. Nothing in this section shall be held to repeal section 4178 of the Revised Statutes, as supplemented.

Sec. 705. Subsection B of section 30 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended to read as follows:

"Subsection B. When used in this section—
"(1) The term 'document' means certificate of registry or enrollment and license, whether permanent or temporary, but does not include a provisional certificate of registry;

"(2) The term 'port of documentation' when applied to any vessel means the home port of that vessel as shown in its documents:

"(3) The term 'vessel of the United States' means a vessel having a document issued under the laws of the United States, and for the purposes of this section such vessel shall be held to continue to be a vessel of the United States until the document is surrendered with the approval of the board; and

"(4) The term 'mortgagee' in case of a mortgage involving a trust deed and a bond issue thereunder means the trustee designated under the deed."

Sec. 706. Section 4141 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 4141. Every vessel, except as otherwise provided by law, shall be registered by the collector of customs at the home port of the vessel."

Sec. 707. Subdivision (a) of subsection O of section 30 of the merchant marine act, 1920, is amended to read as follows

Subsection O (a). The documents of a vessel covered by a preferred mortgage may not be surrendered without the approval of the board, except (1) in the case of forfeiture of the vessel or its sale by order of any court of the United States or any foreign country, or (2) in case of the renewal of the documents without change in ownership of the vessel, or (3) in case of change of documents incident to change of trade but without change in ownership of the vessel. The board shall refuse its approval unless the mortgagee consents to the surrender."

SURRENDER OF DOCUMENTS.

SEC. 708. Section 42 of the shipping act, 1916, is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 42. That any vessel registered, enrolled, or licensed under the laws of the United States shall be deemed to continue to be documented under the laws of the United States within the meaning of section 9 and of subdivision (b) of section 37 until such registry, enrollment, or license is surrendered, with the approval of the board, the provisions of any other act-of Congress to the contrary notwithstanding."

REGULATIONS.

Sec. 709. Except where otherwise specifically provided in this act, the board may make such regulations in respect to matters placed under its jurisdiction by this act as it deems necessary in order to make effective the intent and purposes of this act.

SEPARABILITY.

Sec. 710. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the act and of the application thereof to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 711. This act may be cited as the "merchant marine act, 1922."

Sec. 17. It is hereby declared the policy of the Congress that all the ships now owned by the Government under the direction of the Shipping Board shall be operated for a period of 10 years, either directly by the Shipping Board or by leasing to independent operators under such terms as the board shall prescribe, to the end that the American merchant marine may be established upon a firm and enduring foundation, provided that no ship shall be leased at a loss to the Government.

And the Shipping Board is hereby directed to establish trade routes and trade connections as rapidly as possible and wherever in its judgment paying routes can be maintained and to utilize every ship that it can utilize without loss to the Govern-The Shipping Board is further directed to make a list of such ships as it does not believe can be profitably utilized by the Government or its lessees and make its recommendation in reference to the disposition thereof to the Congress at its December, 1923, session, giving full data as to each ship recommended to be sold to others than American citizens.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, out of order, to make a report from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be re-

The READING CLERK. From the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, the Senator from Nebraska reports back favorably House bill 10819, relating to the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. ROBINSON. What is the request? The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the

Mr. WILLIS obtained the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I announced earlier in the day that under the arrangement under which we were doing business here, unanimous consent would not be granted this evening for the consideration of other business than the pending bill, and I shall be compelled to persist in that attitude. If the report has already been received, of course I will not ask the Senate to rescind its action; but further requests for unanimous consent can not be granted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair perhaps did not make adequate announcement. The Chair will rule that if the Senator objects, the report can not be received.

Mr. ROBINSON. I object. Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President-

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me? Was there objection to the reception of the report?

The VICE PRESIDENT. There was.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I announce now, to save Senators inconvenience, that having pursued throughout the day the policy of objecting to unanimous-consent requests, no unanimous consent will be granted this evening. Senators can, of course, take the floor and submit their requests, but I shall object. Ample opportunity will be afforded, under the arrangement that has already been effected, to take up these matters during the morning hour to-morrow.

A number of Senators who were assured that this arrangement would be executed have left the Chamber, and in good faith I shall be compelled to object to the transaction of any business this evening by unanimous consent.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon will state his inquiry.

Mr. McNARY. I have a very important bill on the calendar to standardize hampers and fruit baskets. I desire to know if a motion to take up that bill would be in order at this time?

Mr. FLETCHER. It would not, of course.

Mr. NORRIS. Why would it not?

Mr. FLETCHER. There is a motion pending now.

Mr. CURTIS. There is a motion pending.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, would such a motion be in order?

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is a motion pending. PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, I think I have the floor, if I have not lost it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio is entitled to the floor.

Mr. WILLIS. I do not desire to submit any request. desire to discuss a matter that has been discussed before the Senate this afternoon.

A short time ago the distingushed and able Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Stanley] made some remarks in which he referred to an address that was made by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler in Columbus, Ohio. That address is already in the RECORD, having been placed in the RECORD at the request of the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Broussard]. I have no request to make touching that. That address speaks for itself; but, just so that there can not be any doubt as to the attitude of the Bar Association of Ohlo or the impression that was made by the address of Doctor Butler, I desire to read in my own time the resolution that was adopted there. It was a reiteration of the resolution previously adopted by the American Bar Association touching the matter of law enforcement.

Doctor Butler has made remarks indicating that the law could not be enforced. He quotes with approval such language as this:

Suppose that the State has exceeded its rights by prohibiting some harmless act, such as the consumption of alcohol. Is smuggling in such a case morally justifiable? I should say yes; the interference of the State in such matters is a mere impertinence.

And so on. He expresses that idea at different points in the address; and I suppose from that the Senator from Kentucky gains the impression, which he states, that Doctor Butler is one of the bright, shining lights of the dry cause. However that may be, after he got through with this address, in which an effort was made to make it appear that the law not only was not enforced but could not be enforced and ought not to be enforced, even though it was a part of the Constitution, this resolution was reiterated and readopted by the association which he addressed:

Reverence for law and enforcement of law depend mainly upon the ideals and customs of those who occupy the vantage ground of life in business and society. The people of the United States by solemn constitutional and statutory enactment have undertaken to suppress the age-long evil of the liquor traffic. When for the gratification of their appetites or the promotion of their interests, lawyers, bankers, great merchants, and manufacturers and social leaders, both men and women, disobey and sooff at this law or any other law, they are aiding the cause of anarchy and promoting mob violence, robbery, and homicide; they are sowing dragon's teeth and they need not be surprised when they find that no judicial or police authority can save our country or humanity from reaping the harvest.

That resolution was readopted and reaffirmed and reiterated and this resolution added:

Now, therefore, we

And this was adopted after the great address by Doctor Butler, showing the impression that was made thereby—

Now, therefore, we, the State bar association, hereby reaffirm the above declaration and place ourselves unreservedly in favor of enforcement of law and opposed to anarchy and organized disobedience to law in any form and recognize our duties as officers of the courts of the State to use our influence in favor of the enforcement of the law and the encouragement of respect therefor.

I submit, therefore, Mr. President, that whatever impression the address may have made on my friend from Kentucky, it certainly did not impress the members of the bar association of my State, as evidenced by the fact that they immediately proceeded to adopt a resolution calling in question the attitude of Doctor Butler upon the matter.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President, I can not see the relevancy of the resolution adopted by the Ohio Bar Association to the address delivered before it. If the learned Senator from Ohio has read into the great address of the president of Columbia University any encouragement to law violation or any disregard for the Constitution of his country, he has found in the address something which I have failed to see.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption at that point?

Mr. STANLEY. Certainly.
Mr. WILLIS. I want the Senator's opinion upon this language. I think he was not on the floor of the Senate when I read it. Doctor Butler quoted with approval this language:

Suppose that the State has exceeded its rights by prohibiting some harmless act, such as the consumption of alcohol. Is smuggling in such a case morally justifiable? I should say yes; the interference of the State in such matters is a mere impertinence.

The question I propound to the Senator is this: This having been written into the Constitution, when a great leader of educational thought in the country like Doctor Butler quotes with approval language that says that it is not wrong to smuggle, to violate that law, does he not regard that as a pretty strong suggestion to the people that they can violate the laws with impunity?

Mr. STANLEY. I will answer that question by asking one. The Senator implies that in the present act interdicting the use of medicinal alcohol when brewed the State has interdicted a perfectly harmless thing. Of course, if the Senator believes that the use of alcohol is a perfectly harmless thing, then he has a perfect right to complain of the language of Doctor Butler.

Mr. WILLIS. That is not my language.

Mr. STANLEY. But if it is not a perfectly harmless thing. there is no analogy between the statement of Doctor Butler and the conclusions of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, I did not desire at this late hour in the evening to engage in a discussion with my friend. What I am getting at is this: Without going into the merits of whether or not this should be the law, it is the law and it is the Constitution, and Doctor Butler made a speech the evident purpose of which was to create the impression that if you do not like the law you are justified in disobeying it. That did not make a hit with the bar association of my State, as evidenced by the resolution which I have just read.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, does the Senator from Ohio say that Doctor Butler urged that the law be violated?

Mr. WILLIS. I read to the Senate-I think the Senator was here—a sentence or two from the speech of Doctor Butler. All of his speech is in the RECORD. I have read it all. It is in the RECORD at page 3857 and following. That is the impression that I get from it. Let me read a sentence to the Senator. If the Senator from Kentucky will permit me, in talking about the majority that was given for the constitutional amendment, he says:

The majority is not always right, nor is its verdict final.

Of course, there is no objection to that.

The Old Testament records a leading case in which 450 prophets of Baal were worsted single handed by the prophet Elijah, who had God and right on his side.

Mr. STANLEY. Is there any objection to that?
Mr. WILLIS. The objection I make to it is the evident intent of Doctor Butler, and the only purpose he could have had in view, to say to the people he was addressing, and the people of the country generally, that God and the Prophet Elijah were on the side of the wets. That is what he intended to say, and I do Does the Senator? not believe it.

Mr. STANLEY. I never heard anything about Elijah's attitude on prohibition.

Mr. WILLIS. I never did, either, until I read it in Doctor Butler's speech.

Mr. STANLEY. I know this. Suppose a man should come into this community, into this Senate, into this town, and attend a wedding feast and turn water into wine; you would send him to jail. There was a fair-haired Nazarene who did that. I do not mean by that to intimate that the Savior was on the side of the wets. I mean to intimate that a man is sneered at if he rises here and says that no petty officer, no constable, no sleuth, shall be allowed to disregard the writ of habeas corpus, to disregard the fourth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to disregard that right which is as instinctive as the love of life and liberty in every scion of the Saxon race, outside of a few blinded by their own misguided zeal, for there are few in this country who do not believe that a man's home is his castle and that its sanctity should not be invaded by any except an officer of the law armed and authorized by the due processes

What I am urging is not an objection to the eighteenth amendment, not an objection to any law calculated to enforce it. I believe that the Constitution of the United States should be enforced from alpha to omega. No officer of the law, no one in Congress or on the bench, from the highest to the lowest, can call God to witness that he will obey that law, that he will preserve, protect, and defend it, and then fail to do it without blackening his soul with perjury.

I go further, and I say that you swear allegiance not to 1 amendment, but to 19 amendments; not to the amendments only, but to the organic law itself, which is the ark of the covenant, and I say that when men rise, as Nicholas Murray Butler has risen, as sacred ministers of God have risen, with their white vestments upon their shoulders, in the only temple that is more sacred than a temple of justice-a temple of the most high God-and abjure their countrymen to preserve the rights for which men have fought and bled and died in battle, for which saints have prayed upon bended knees, for which sages have thought and labored, then you rise with a cynical sneer and "If you are in favor of any part of the Constitution interfering with any of our little enforcement officers, or deputies, or subdeputies, or sleuths, then you are a wet; and if you quote the Bible, it is a sin. If you talk about Elijah or Christ, you are a pagan. Away with you, and away with the Constitution, and away with everything that does not suit our propaganda and our determination to do as we please with the people of this country, without regard to constitutional rights."

Judges upon the bench have been denounced for their findings as a "horde of scoundrels" by men obsessed with this idea. Nobody can escape. Ministers of the Gospel, judges upon the bench, great heads of papers, anybody who stands in the way of this propaganda must be damned and denounced, or, if not, must be the subject of cynical sneers and cheap wit.

I am as much in favor of enforcing the Constitution, yea, more so, than the Senator from Ohio. I have never talked about a cheap constitutional right as being a little thing to protect boot-I have never stood in this Chamber and stepped upon the Constitution of my country, and sneered at things for which men have endured martyrdom. This right to protect the home, this right not to be put twice in jeopardy, this right not to be forced to testify against yourself, this immunity of person and property are sacred, not because they are in the Constitution, they were put in the Constitution because they were sacred.

Men have perished in lonely and loathsome dungeons, in a felon's cell "the fittest type of hell," because they denied to crown as God's anointed kings the right you would put in the hands of a petty sleuth. Men have gone undaunted to their bloody deaths at the hands of the headsman for the maintenance of rights the Senator from Ohio thinks are petty and contemptible things.

I am not fighting the eighteenth amendment or any law enforcing it. I am simply saying that you shall not, while I have a voice that I can raise, or a hand I can lift, or a syllable that I can utter, destroy the Constitution of the United States in order better to enforce a sumptuary regulation. Upon that rock I stand, and I thank God that the cry for constitutional liberty and constitutional rights, that that reaffirmance of the thing which Washington urged in the last great utterance of his life, those principles that were cardinal and that were the very confession of political faith to Jefferson and to Jackson and to Madison and to Lincoln, and which lately were re-iterated by men like LODGE and BORAH, upon the other side of the Chamber-that those great principles shall not be abrogated, forgotten, or despised by anyone. I have never proposed to obliterate the eighteenth amendment. I have never said one word in favor of or against light wines and beers.

I do not care the rap of my finger whether you pass a law saying that alcohol brewed is not medicine but that alcohol fermented is medicine. I can not see the great importance of such finical distinctions as that. But if you write a law saying that a man shall go to jall because he takes brewed alcohol as a medicine instead of fermented alcohol as a medicine, I say enforce the law and leave to the common sense of the people to say whether they will amend it or not.

It is not a crime to ask for the repeal of any law. The protection and preservation of the institution of chattel slavery was once a part of the Constitution of the United States. Will the Senator say they were traitors who asked for an amendment to the Constitution in that regard? It is perfectly legiti-mate to seek the amendment, the betterment, of any law: but I have never said, and I never shall say, on the floor of the Senate or elsewhere, one word which can by the most strained construction imply the slightest disrespect for the law or the slightest encouragement to those who would fail to enforce it.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, my friend from Kentucky has totally misconceived my purpose. I have made no assault upon his views or upon anything he has said. I have indulged in no sneers, nor have I indulged in any cynical smile, so far as he is concerned.

I rose in my place to say that in my judgment an address by a great university president, the evident purpose and the inevitable meaning of which was to bring to the people of the United States the suggestion that if they did not like a law or did not like a part of the Constitution they were morally justified in breaking it, was unworthy of the great president who uttered it, and that it was immediately repudiated by the bar association to which he uttered it.

But since my friend has gone a little further into the question, I want to say that the matter to which I referred in Doctor Butler's address had no reference whatever to sleuths, about whom the Senator talks; that it had no reference whatever to any statute, but was quoting, in effect, the Constitution of the United States, the eighteenth amendment, which the Senator himself has said-and I knew it, of course, without his saying it-he stands by. However, in his address Doctor Butler, with the inevitable meaning that you must draw from it, if you read it and study it, leaves the impression that it is not immoral to break the eighteenth amendment, even though it was adopted by a good majority, since it is regarded by some people as tyrannical and unjust; and I take issue with that proposition. When it is written into the law or into the Constitution of the country there is no room for a difference of opinion any longer. So far as it is the law, it is the duty of every patriotic citizen to obey it. That is my position upon the question.

PRINTING OF FOREIGN POSTAGE AND REVENUE STAMPS (S. DOC. NO. 305).

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I present a conference report upon Senate bill 2703. I do not ask for the consideration of the report at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be printed and lie on the table.

The report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (S. 2703) to allow the printing and publishing of illustrations of foreign postage and revenue stamps from defaced plates, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as fol-

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In line 13, page 1, after the word "alstrike out the semicolon and insert a period, and in bums." lieu of the matter proposed insert the following: "Nothing in said sections shall be construed to forbid or prevent similar illustrations, in black and white only, in philatelic or historical articles, books, journals, albums, or the circulars of legitimate publishers or dealers in such stamps, books, journals, albums, or circulars, of such portion of the border of a stamp of the United States as may be necessary to show minor differences in the stamp so illustrated, but all such illustrations shall be at least four times as large as the portion of the original United States stamp so illustrated."; and the House agree to the same.

W. P. DILLINGHAM, ALBERT B. CUMMINS, JNO. K. SHIELDS, Managers on the part of the Senate. ANDREW J. VOLSTEAD, W. D. Boies, Hatton W. Sumners, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, only a few moments ago the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] served notice on all Senators that he would object to the presentation of a conference report or any other report from a committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No objection can be interposed to the presentation of a conference report.

Mr. CURTIS. I understand the Senator from Iowa does not ask for the consideration of the report, but it is simply the presentation of a privileged report. That can be done at any

Mr. HARRISON. I was merely calling attention to the

Mr. ROBINSON. There is no request for the consideration

Mr. CUMMINS. Not at all. In fact, the report can not be considered before it is adopted by the House. It must first be acted upon there.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I take it there is nothing further to do, and under the unanimous-consent agree-

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Will the Senator from Washington yield for the presentation of a couple of reports from the Finance Committee?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I understand the Senator from Arkansas objects to the presentation of reports or bills, or anything of that kind. I myself have no objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. That can be done to-morrow morning. Mr. JONES of Washington. I have no objection myself.

Mr. NORRIS. I will object unless the same privilege is accorded to me to make a report.

Mr. ROBINSON. Having objected earlier to-day and announced repeatedly that unanimous consent would not be granted, and having effected an arrangement to take up this character of business during the morning hour on to-morrow, in good faith I do not think Senators should present any requests, and I shall object. If it is necessary to stand here and object over and over, I shall be compelled to do so. I do not want to discriminate between Senators.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection to the request of the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to present and have inserted in the Record some petitions which I have received. They are not bills or reports of committees, but merely petitions, and I merely want to get something printed in the RECORD which, it seems to me, is a matter of public interest.

Mr. ROBINSON. I think the practice has been to permit matters to be printed in the RECORD, and I shall not make an objection to the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the matter will be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I would just like to define in a very brief way what I would like to have put into the Record. We all have been familiar with the occurrences regarding the strike of last August, and I have received petitions from the State of New Mexico signed by probably a thousand people.

ADJOURNMENT.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the hour of 6 o'clock having arrived, the Chair declares the Senate stands adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Thereupon (at 6 o'clock p. m.) the Senate, in accordance with the unanimous-consent agreement, adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, February 24, 1923, at 11 o'clock a.m.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 23 (legislative day of February 19), 1923.

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

James Francis Downey, jr., to be ald (with relative rank of ensign in the Navy).

POSTMASTERS.

MISSOURI.

David W. Puthuff, Bollvar. Everett Drysdale, Butler. George L. Pemberton, Charleston, John R. Edwards, Dawn.

MONTANA.

Roy W. Broman, Ismay. Joseph Brooks, Livingston. Clyde C. Richey, Richey.

OHIO.

Charles F. Decker, Vermilion. OKLAHOMA.

Elmer D. Rook, Sayre.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Whitfield Pritchard, Bangor.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Benjamin F. Foreman, Allendale.

John F. Hunter, Helper.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Fred A. Smith, Northfork.

WISCONSIN.

Henry J. S. Hanson, Bayfield. George C. Dobbs, Conover. Frederick N. Lochemes, St. Francis.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, February 23, 1923.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon and was called to order by Mr. Campbell of Kansas as Speaker pro tempore. The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Lord and our God, apart from Thee life is a weary search. All our deficiencies are met in Thee, for Thou art our wisdom, our righteousness, and our redemption. Conscious of our dependence, O may a childlike humility clothe us as with a garment. This is the way by which comes the great inflow of Thy cleansing love. So inspire us that we shall be the lovers of Thy word, the interpreters of Thy truth, and the messengers of Thy wisdom. Guard Thou our lips, keep Thou our hearts, and bless us with Thy abiding peace as we travel on our homeward way. In the holy name of Jesus we pray.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman from Delaware rise?

Mr. LAYTON. I rise for the purpose of asking unanimous consent to have printed in the back part of the Record a speech I have prepared on the subject of bureaucracy, the same to be printed in 8-point type.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Delaware asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on bureaucracy. Is there objection? [After a pause.]

Chair hears none.

DISCHARGE OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. ROUSE. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. ROUSE. Mr. Speaker, I move to discharge the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads from the further consideration of House Resolution 492, a copy of which I will send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, that motion is not in order.
Mr. ROUSE. It is a privileged motion.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Upon what question of privilege does the gentleman from Kentucky call the resolution up? Mr. ROUSE. It asks information from the Postmaster General relative to the filling of vacancies in post offices.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my point of order. It is, I think, a privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky moves to discharge the committee from the consideration of the resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk began the reading of the resolution.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to reserve a point of order. I have not heard it to see whether it is privileged or

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that the reservation comes too late.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. It has not been read yet, and the gentleman can not make the point of order until it is reported. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 492.

Resolved, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the House of Representatives—
(1) Of the post offices in which a vacancy in the postmastership thereof has occurred since May 10, 1921, for which no certified eligible or list of eligibles for appointment as regular postmaster therein, obtained at the time the vacancy arose; of the name of each such office, the date on which the vacancy arose, the date of the request of the Civil Service Commission for a certified eligible or list of eligibles for regular appointment thereto, the date of the receipt from the Civil Service Commission of a certified eligible or list of eligibles therefor, and the date on which appointment of a regular postmaster was made; and

(2) Of the post offices in which a vacancy in the postmastership thereof has occurred since May 10, 1921, for which a certified eligible or list of eligibles for appointment as regular postmaster therein obtained at the time the vacancy arose; of the name of each such office, the date on which the vacancy arose, and the date on which appointment of a regular postmaster therefor was made; and

(3) Of the appointments of temporary postmasters since May 10, 1921, if any, of the offices for which such temporary appointments were made, of the date on which such temporary appointments were made, and of the date on which such temporary appointments were made, and of the date on which the appointment of a regular postmaster was made.

Mr. MONDELLI, Mr. Speaker, the information caked for is

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the information asked for is not important. I move to lay the resolution to discharge the committee on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Wyoming.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. ROUSE and Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House again divided; and there were—ayes 111, noes 33. Mr. ROUSE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because there is no quorum present and make the point there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently there is no quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will bring in absent Members, and the Clerk will call the

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 216, nays 101, not voting 110, as follows:

	YEA	S-216.
Ackerman	Evans	Корр	Reed, W. Va.
Anderson	Fairchild	Kraus	Ricketts
Andrew, Mass.	Fairfield	Larson, Minn.	Riddick
Andrews, Nebr.	Faust	Larson, Minn.	Roach
Appleby	Fenn	Lawrence	Robertson
Atkeson	Fess	Layton	Robsion
Barbour	Fish	Leatherwood	Rogers
Beck	Fordney	Lehlbach	Sanders, Ind.
Begg	Foster	Little	Scott, Tenn.
Benham	Frear	Longworth	Scott, Tenn.
Bixler	Free	Luce	Shelton
	French		Shreve
Blakeney		Luhring	Sinclair
Bland, Ind.	Frothingham	McArthur	Sinnott
Boles	Fuller	McFadden	Smith, Idaho
Brooks, Pa.	Funk	McKenzie	Snyder
Brown, Tenn.	Gahn	McLaughlin, Mich.	Speaks
Browne, Wis.	Gensman	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Sproul
Burdick	Gernerd	McPherson	Stafford
Burtness	Gifford	MacGregor	Stephens
Burton	Glynn	MacLafferty	Strong, Kans.
Butler	Goodykoontz	Madden	Strong, Pa.
Cable	Graham, Ill.	Magee	Summers, Wash.
Campbell, Kans.	Green, Iowa	Maloney	Sweet
Campbell, Pa.	Greene, Mass.	Mapes	Swing
Cannon	Greene, Vt.	Merritt	Taylor, N. J.
Chalmers	Griest	Michener	Taylor, Tenn.
Chandler, Okla.	Hadley	Miller	Temple
Chindblom	Hardy, Colo.	Mondell	Thompson
Christopherson	Hawley	Moere, Ohio	Therpe
Clague	Hays	Moores, Ind.	Tilson
Clarke, N. Y.	Henry	Morgan	IDisch and the
Clouse	Herrick	Murphy	Timberlake
			Tincher
Cole, Iowa	Hersey	Nelson, Me.	Tinkham
Cole, Ohio	Hickey	Nelson, A. P. Nelson, J. M.	Towner
Colton	Hicks	Nelson, J. M.	Underhill
Cooper, Ohio	Hill	Newton, Minn.	Vaile
Cooper, Wis.	Himes	Newton, Mo.	Vestal
Copley	Hoch	Norton	Voigt
Coughlin	Hogan	Ogden	Volstead
Crago	Hukriede	Olpp	Walters
Cramton	Hull	Paige	Ward, N. Y.
Dallinger	Humphrey, Nebr.	Parker, N. J.	Wason
Darrow	Husted	Parker, N. Y.	Webster
Davis, Minn.	Ireland	Patterson, Mo.	White, Kans.
Dempsey	James	Paul	Williams, Ill.
Denison	Johnson, S. Dak.	Perkins	Williamson
Dickinson	Kearns	Perlman	Winslow
Dowell	Kelly, Pa.	Porter	Wood, Ind.
Dunbar	Kendall	Purnell	Woodruff
Dunn	Ketcham	Radcliffe	Woodyard
Echols	Kirkpatrick	Ramseyer	Wurzbach
Edmonds	Kissel		Wyant
Elliott	Kline, N. Y.	Reece	Yates
Ellis	Kline, Pa.	Reed, N. Y.	Young
		S—101.
Manual San			Trade
Abernethy	Byrns, Tenn.	Favrot	Huddleston
Almon	Cantrill	Fields	Hudspeth

Fields
Fisher
Fulmer
Gallivan
Garrett, Tenn.
Garrett, Tex.

Gilbert Goldsborough

Goldsboroug Griffin Hammer Hardy, Tex. Hayden Hooker

Clark, Fla.
Cockran
Collier
Connally, Tex.
Crisp
Cullen
Davis Tenn

Cullen Davis, Tenn. Deal Doughton Drewry Driver Dupré

Aswell Bankhead Bell

Bell Black Bland, Va. Blanton Bowling

Box Brand Briggs Buchanan Bulwinkle

Huddleston Huddleston
Hudspeth
Humphreys, Miss,
Jacoway
Jeffers, Ala,
Johnson, Ky,
Jones, Tex,
Kincheloe
Lanham
Lankford Lankam Lankford Larsen, Ga. Lazaro Lea, Calif. Lee, Ga.

Linthicum Oldfield Sandlin Turner Oliver Parks, Ark, Sears Sisson Steagall Stedman Legan Londen Tyson Upshaw Vinson Londen Lowrey Lyon McClintic McDuffie McSwain Mansfield Mead Montague Pou Quin Rainey, Ill. Weaver Wilson Stevenson Sumners, Tex. Swank Wingo Wise Wright Raker Rankin Rayburn Rouse Sabath Taylor, Colo. Ten Evck O'Connor Sanders, Tex. Tillman NOT VOTING-110 Lee, N. Y.
Lineberger
McCormick
McLaughlin, Pa.
Martin
Michaelson
Mills
Moore, Ill. Focht Ryan Sanders, N. Y. Schall Scott, Mich. Freeman Garner Gorman Gould Anthony Arentz Bacharach Barkley Scott, Mich.
Shaw Siegel
Slemp
Smith, Mich.
Smithwick
Snell
Steenerson Graham, Pa. Beedy Haugen Hawes Bird Bond Bowers Moore, III.
Moore, Va.
Morin
Mott
Mudd
Nolan
O'Brien
Overstreet Huck Huck Hutchinson Jefferis, Nebr. Johnson, Miss. Johnson, Wash. Brennan Britten Brooks, Ill. Steenerson Stiness Stoll Sullivan Burke Jones, Pa. Kahn Byrnes, S. C. Taylor, Ark. Thomas Treadway arew Park, Ga. Patterson, N. J. Carter Keller Kelley, Mich. Kennedy Chandler, N. Y. Classon Tucker Petersen Codd Collins Connolly, Pa. Kiess Kindred Pringey Rainey, Ala. Ward, N. C. Ward, N. C. Watson Wheeler White, Me. Williams, Tex. Woods, Va. Zihlman Reber Rhodes Riordan Rodenberg King Kitchin Crewther Kleczka Knight Dale Dominick Drane Kuutson Kreider Kuuz Lampert Rose Rosenbloom Dyer Fitzgerald Rossdale Rucker

So the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. Graham of Pennsylvania (for) with Mr. Barkley (against)

Mr. Morin (for) with Mr. Tucker (against). Mr. Snell (for) with Mr. Garner (against).

Mr. Snell (for) with Mr. Garner (against).
Mr. Curry (for) with Mr. Woods of Virginia (against),
Mr. Rhodes (for) with Mr. Carter (against).
Mr. Beedy (for) with Mr. O'Brien (against).
Mr. Kiess (for) with Mr. Riordan (against).
Mr. Crowther (for) with Mr. Williams of Texas (against).
Mr. Dale (for) with Mr. Byrnes of South Carelina (against).
Mr. Lampert (for) with Mr. Hawes (against).
Mr. Stiness (for) with Mr. Smithwick (against).
Mr. Watson (for) with Mr. Thomas (against).
Mr. Freeman (for) with Mr. Ward of North Carolina

(against).

Mr. Anthony (for) with Mr. Carew (against).

Mr. Keller (for) with Mr. Martin (against).
Mr. Fitzgerald (for) with Mr. Park of Georgia (against).

Mr. Mudd (for) with Mr. Drane (against).
Mr. Treadway (for) with Mr. Collins (against).
Mr. Scott of Michigan (for) with Mr. Kunz (against). Mr. Connolly of Pennsylvania (for) with Mr. Dominick

Mr. Bacharach (for) with Mr. Kindred (against). Mr. Shaw (for) with Mr. Sullivan (against).

Mr. King (for) with Mr. Kitchin (against)

Mr. Patterson of New Jersey (for) with Mr. Moore of Virginia (against)

Mr. White of Maine (for) with Mr. Johnson of Mississippl

(against).

Mr. Lineberger (for) with Mr. Overstreet (against).

Mr. Rosenbloom (for) with Mr. Rucker (against).

Mr. Michaelson (for) with Mr. Sisson (against).

Mr. Kahn (for) with Mr. Taylor of Arkansas (against).

Mr. Moore of Illinois (for) with Mr. Rainey of Alabama

Mr. Johnson of Washington (for) with Mr. Stoll (against).

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. The SPEAKER pro tempore. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged resolution of inquiry.

PENSIONS.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 14288), a private pension bill, in order under the rules for to-day, and I ask unanimous consent—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14288) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war.

Mr. FULLER, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the highest privilege.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to consider this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole House. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Minnesota that this bill is in order and comes up, as to-day is set apart for the consideration of that class of legislation.

Mr. STEENERSON. I made my request for consideration of this resolution at the same time Mr. ROUSE made his. Why should one resolution of inquiry be preferred over another?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is one of recognition. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Minnesota later. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous con-sent that the bill just reported be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. It is a privileged bill? The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes. The Chair hear The Chair hears no objection and the Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Speakers pro tempore. 188. The Chair hears no objection and the Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws—

The name of Rodia A. Dunifer, widow of Edward R. Dunifer, late of Company H, Seventy-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Margaret L. Fardette, widow of Joseph Fardette, alias William Taylor, late of Company E, First Regiment Pennsylvania Rifles, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Elma L. Holton, widow of Charles C. Holton, alias Charles W. Harris, late landsman, United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Anna W. Nixon, widow of William H. Nixon, late deckhand, United States ram Queen of the West, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Margaret B. Blunt, former widow of Washington Bird, late of Company H, One hundred and seventy-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Delliah J. Sprinkle, widow of Michael J. Sprinkle, late of Company A. Second Regiment, and Company C, Third Regiment, North Carolina Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary Reynolds, widow of Edward W. Reynolds, late of Company A. Second Regiment Thompson, widow of Peter Thompson, late of Company M. First Regiment Thompson, widow of Peter Thompson, late of Company A. Skixteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary H. Tosh, widow of William M. Tosh, late of Company F. Twenty-fourth Regiment Missouri Volunteer State Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary A. Tosh, widow of Jacob Stealey, late of Company E, Furthen Regiment Milinois Vo

Company F. Fourteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavairy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Jane Platner, widow of Albert A. Platner, late of Company A, Forty-ninth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Ruth V. Hutchens, widow of Joseph Harris, late of Company H, Fifty-third Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Martha A. Thompson, widow of Justin G. Thompson, late of Seventy-seventh Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Lavina H. Etnire, widow of Daniel Etnire, late of Company F, Seventy-second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Ella Knowlton, widow of Benjamin Knowlton, late of Company F, Eighteenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Bertha Mann, widow of Ervin F. Mann, late of Companies E and A, Third Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Carrie M. Allison, widow of Leander J. Allison, late of Company F, Fourth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay her a pension at the vidow of Menly White, late of Companies K and G, Sixty-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Catharine Crawford, widow of Lewis S. Crawford, late of Company F, One hundred and thirty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Frances E. Griffin, widow of James P. Griffin, late of Company K Third Regiment and Company H, Fourth Regiment, Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary Spencer, widow of Samuel R. Spencer, late of Company A, Fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Jennie Boyd, widow of William Boyd, late of Company G, One hundred and skty-fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Margaret Blackman, widow of John W. Blackman, late of Company I, Third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Lida O'Neal, widow of William O'Neal, late of Company B, Fifty-fifth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Carrle Tissue, widow of Newton Tissue, late of Company K, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Martha E. Butler, widow of Norton Butler, late of Company E, Twenty-third Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Uraula Levisee, widow of Oren Levisee, late of Company D, Seventy-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

receiving.

The name of Lula Reeder, widow of Elias Reeder, late of Company D, Seventy-minth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Warren C. Reeder, helpless and dependent son of Lula and Elias Reeder, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: And provided further. That in the event of the death of Lula Reeder, the name of said Warren C. Reeder shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $20 per month from and after the date of death of said Lula Reeder, paid through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Catharine Boardman, widow of Samuel H. Boardman, late of Company C, Twenty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary C. Cole, widow of Ira B, Cole, late of Company I, One hundred and seventy-fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Susan Brunaugh, widow of William M. Brunaugh, late

The name of Susan Brunaugh, widow of William M. Brunaugh, late of Company A. Thirty-fourth Regiment Ohlo Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Amelia S. Scott, widow of William N. Scott, late of Company D. One hundred and twenty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary E. Blanchard, widow of Asa Blanchard, late of Company F, Thirty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Barsha Story, widow of Oliver Story.

now receiving.

The name of Barsha Story, widow of Oliver Story, late of Company II, Eighth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Millie Rex, widow of Martin L. Rex, late of Company I, Twenty-second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and Company I, Third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Provisional Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary J. Robinette, widow of Jasper C. Robinette, alias Jasper Robinette, late of Company D, Second Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

month.

month.

The name of Melissa J. Thompson, widow of Rankin Thompson, late of Company D, One hundred and seventy-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary H. Pennypacker, widow of Jacob Pennypacker, late of Company C, One hundred and seventy-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Nathan E. Hopkins, late landsman and ordinary seaman, United States Navy, and Company C, Twelfth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50

United States Navy, and Company C, Twelfth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Eugene S. Nash, late of Company C, Second Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and Captain Peale's Company F, Thirteeath Regimen: Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Mattie Dunn, widow of William W. Dunn, late of Company A, Sixth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Ruth E. Vann, widow of James G. Vann, late of Company K, Sixth Regiment Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Samira E. Cooprider, widow of Wesley Cooprider, late of Company G, Fifty-Inith Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Lizzie E. Miller, widow of George A. Miller, late of Company A, Twenty-second Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Joseph D, Emerson, late of Company I, First Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and company K, Seventeenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Mary A. Harper, former widow of Alfred Lanstrum, late of Company B, Fifty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Susan V. Payne, widow of Samuel J. Payne, late of Company B, Fifty-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Anna R. Twaddle, widow of William Twaddle, late of Company F, Thirty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Anna R. Twaddle, widow of William Twaddle, late of Company F, Thirty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary E. Touhy, former widow of Owen Coburn, late of Company A, Twentieth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Charles F. Kuntz, helpless and dependent son of Robert D. Kuntz, late of Company I, Sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month, through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Liberty E. Frank, helpless and dependent daughter of David R. Frank, late of Company D, Forty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month, through duly appointed guardian.

The name of William L. Delow, helpless and dependent son of Charles Delow, late of Company K, Righth Regiment New York Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

Charles Delow, late of Company K, Eighth Regiment New York Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Midlan Mercer, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Joseph Ham, late of Company A, Twenty-second Regiment New York Volunteer Cavalry, and Company D, One hundred and ninety-fourth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Edward Powell, late of Company F, Ninety-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Julia M. Fletcher, widow of Henry W. Fletcher, late of Company B, Ninth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Sarah A. Wellman, widow of Richard N. Wellman, late of Company F, Fiftieth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of John Wellman, helpless and dependent son of said Richard N. Wellman, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine. Provided further, That in the event of the death of Sarah A. Wellman, the name of said John Wellman shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $20 per month from and after the date of death of said Sarah A. Wellman, through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Lulu Moore, widow of Perry R. Moore, late of Company C, Twentieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Martha A. Demaris, widow of Jacob B, Demaris, late of Company K, Fifty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Martha A. Pitzer, widow of Samuel Reed, late of Company H, Seventieth Reed, widow of David Quim

The name of Elizabeth Reed, widow of Samuel Reed, late of Company H, Seventieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Nellie Quimby, widow of David Quimby, alias Thomas Stevens, late of Company G. Seventh Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Victoria M. Ray, widow of James A. Ray, late of Company B, Thirty-fifth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Sarah J. McCullon, widow of George W. McCullon, late of Company C. Eighteenth Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Samuel E. Blades, afflicted son of Wesley Blades, late of Company A. Second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Kate Caldwell, widow of Marshall Caldwell, late of Company F, Fourteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Agnes Green, helpless and dependent daughter of Isalah L. Green, late of Company E, Thirty-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary A. Harmon, widow of Thomas Harmon, late of Company K, Twenty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Angeline Insley, widow of Isalah A. Insley, late of Company I, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Angeline Insley, widow of Isalah A. Insley, late of Company I, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Margaret C. Miller, widow of John W. Miller, late of Company I, Jeseventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of John D. Hadley, helpless and dependent son of John Hadley, late of Company H, One hundred and forty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Isabella W. Williams, widow of John D. Williams, late of Company G, Second Regiment District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Josephine Hoffman, helpless and dependent daughter of Lafayette Hoffman, late of Company I, One hundred and seventy-nintin Regiment, and Company F, Eighteenth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Anna E. Best, former widow of Josiah Best, late of Company H, Thirty-eighth Regiment, and Company D, One hundred and forty-second Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Amanda Wishard, widow of Samuel G. Wishard, late of Company F, Twenty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Lena Castor, widow of James Castor, late of Company G, Ninety-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Temple Dyer, widow of John F. Dyer, late of Company B, Twelfth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Jennie Alexander, widow of Thomas B. Alexander, inte of Company B, Fifty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Amos E. Albritton, helpless and dependent son of Amos A. Albritton, late of Company B, Fifteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Susan A. Thompson, widow of Philip A. Thompson, late lieutenant colonel, Fifth Regiment Missouri Volunteer State Millita Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of George D. Jones, late unassigned, Eleventh Regiment, and Company G, Fifty-first Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Mary E. Saner, widow of Abram Saner, late of Company B, Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Mary E. Saner, widow of George M. Meece, late of Company I, Forty-ninth Regiment Fennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Catherine Meece, widow of George M. Meece, late of Company I, Forty-ninth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Catherine Meece, widow of John Gordon, late first-c a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Anna M Fay, widow of Andrew J. Fay, late of Company E. Third Regiment Pensiyvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a Ther name of Nancy A. Gerdon, widow of John Gordon, late first-class boy, United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Minerva Lane, widow of John Lane, late of Company G. One hundred and sixteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Caroline K. Nester, widow of George Nester, late of First Battery, Indiana Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Cathacine Anderson, widow of William Anderson, late of Captain Harrah's company, One hundred and first Regiment Penser month in lieu of that ahe is now receiving.

The name of Wilhelmina S. Brand, widow of Senecer H. Brand, late of Company H. One hundred and thirty-eightin Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Lillian Ensminger, helpless and dependent daughter of Henry C. Ensminger, late of Company B, Sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Elizabeth E. Laman, widow of Joseph H. Laman, late of Company B, One hundred and diffyshath Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month through duly appointed quardian.

The name of Elizabeth E. Laman, widow of Joseph H. Laman, late of Company B, Necond Regiment Missouri Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Elizabeth M. Griffith, widow of James R. Griffith, late of Company B, Second Regiment Wissouri Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of William F. Rancy, helpless and dependent daughter of Nebemiah Rancy, late of Company I, Ninth Regiment Gantry, and pay Company I, Forty-seventh Regiment lows Volunteer intentry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Nancy J. Cooper, widow of Samuel Cooper, late of Company I, Tenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah A. Fitzgerald, former widow of William H. Cox, late of Company I, Fifty-fifth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah J. Moody, widow of Martin P. Moody, late of Company A. Tenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Elizabeth A. Limes, window of Henry S. Limes, late of Company A, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary M. Lilley, helpless and dependent daughter of Matthias Lilley, late of Company F, Fourteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of John Bywater, alias John Tallman, late of Company H, Eighth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and Company E, Tenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and Company E, Tenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Oscar Okes, helpless and dependent son of William Okes, late of Company F, One hundred and fifteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Mary M. Singer, widow of Francis A. Singer, late of Company D, Second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Lucy Jane McGrayel, widow of James McGrayel, late of Company G, Twenty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

she is now receiving.

The name of Susan Laugherty, widow of Thomas J. Laugherty, late of Company H. Sixth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Agatha M. Miller, widow of John Miller, late of Company D, One hundred and first Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Clara A. Ricknell, widow of William M. Bicknell, late of Company A, Fifth Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Hannah K. Hallowell, widow of Daniel Hallowell, late of Company I, Sixth Regiment, and Company C, Seventh Regiment, Maine Volunteer Infantry, and Company C, First Regiment Maine Volunteer Veteran Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

of Company I, Sixth Regiment, and Company C, Seventh Regiment, Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Elizabeth A. Morrow, widow of Robert Morrow, late of Company A, Sixth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Nancy A. Morrow, helpless and dependent daughter of said Elizabeth A. and Robert Morrow, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: Provided further. That in the event of the death of Elizabeth A. Morrow the name of said Nancy A. Morrow shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $20 per month from and after the date of death of said Elizabeth A. Morrow, through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Mary Sowle, widow of Elvirus Sowle, late of Company D, Thirty-ninth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Susan Ritter, widow of Frank Ritter, alias Frank Hilb, late of Company E, Fourth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Cavairy, and Company D, Fifty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Martha Crawford, widow of William Crawford, late of Company B, Eighth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Cavairy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Ruth E. Daniels, widow of Frank Daniels, late of Twelfth Independent Battery Ohio Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

of Company B, Eighth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Ruth E. Daniels, widow of Frank Daniels, late of Twelfth Independent Battery Ohio Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Jane Oliver, widow of Aaron P. Oliver, late of Company C. Second Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Elizabeth Grover, widow of William Grover, late of Company I, Second Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Harriet Wicks, widow of James Wicks, late of Company H, Eighty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Euphamia Smith, widow of Charles Smith, late of Company K, One hundred and twenty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Ellen Thompson, widow of Joseph Thompson, late of Company A, Twenty-fourth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of William E. Robinson, helpless and dependent son of William C. Robinson, late of Company H, Eighteenth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month through duly appointed guardian.

The name of L. Anna Mavity, widow of William K. Mavity, late of Company F, Thirty-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Jennle Darling, helpless and dependent daughter of Charles H. Darling, late of Company M, First Regiment Massachusetts receiving.

The name of Jennie Darling, helpless and dependent daughter of Charles H. Darling, late of Company M. First Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Cavalry, known as Company D. First Battalion Massachusetts Volunteer Cavalry, and Company M. Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Margaret F. Freeman, former widow of George C. Carson, late of Company B. Eleventh Regiment, and Company M, Ninth Regiment, Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Zula A. Springer, widow of William R. Springer, late of Company G, Seventh Regiment Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Claud B. Springer, helpless and dependent son of said Zula A. and William R. Springer, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: Provided further, That in the event of the death of Zula A. Springer the name of said Claud B. Springer shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $20 per month from and after the date of death of said Zula A. Springer through duly appointed guardian.

The name of Mary Savanack, widow of John R. Savanack, late of Company G, One hundred and twenty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Pernina A. Morrison, widow of Theodore Morrison, late of Company A. Ninety-first Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Charles J. Bice, late of Company A, Thirty-ninth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Herrietta Richmond, widow of Jason H. Richmond, late of Company G, Fifty-seventh Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of John W. Genung, late of Captain Graham's company, attached to Fourteenth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

This bill is a substitute for the following House bills referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

H. R. 1023. Rodia A. Dunifer, H. R. 7347. Margaret L. Fardette,	H. R. 13747. Alice Luth.
H P 8282 Films f Halton	H. R. 13762. Angeline Insley. H. R. 13787. Mary J. McLaughlin, H. R. 13788. Margaret C. Miller.
H R S671 Anna W Nivon	H. R. 13787. Mary J. McLaughlin,
H. R. 11222 Margaret R Riunt	H. R. 13788. Margaret C. Miller.
H. R. 8383. Elma L. Holton. H. R. 8671. Anna W. Nixon. H. R. 11222. Margaret B. Blunt. H. R. 11638. Delilah J. Sprinkle. H. R. 12123. Mary Reynoids. H. R. 12242. Katharine Thompson. H. R. 12332. Mary J. Tosh. H. R. 12337. Sallie B. Stoll.	H. R. 13786. John D. Hadley. H. R. 13795. Isabella W. Williams. H. R. 13798. Josephine Hoffman. H. R. 13803. Anna E. Best. H. R. 13813. Amanda Wishard. H. R. 13818. Lena Castor. H. R. 13818. Temple Dyer.
H. R. 12123. Mary Reynolds. H. R. 12242. Katharine Thompson. H. R. 12332. Mary J. Tosh. H. R. 12337. Sallie B. Stoll.	H. R. 13798, Josephine Hoffman.
H. R. 12242. Katharine Thompson.	H. R. 13803. Anna E. Best.
H. R. 12832. Mary J. Tosh.	H. R. 13813. Amanda Wishard.
H. R. 12397. Sallie B. Stoll.	H. R. 13818. Lena Castor.
H. R. 12393. Leona Stealey. H. R. 12447. Eliza H. Lockwood, H. R. 12533. Minerva Douglas.	H. R. 13818. Lena Castor. H. R. 13821. Temple Dyer. H. R. 13822. Jennie Alexander. H. R. 13823. Amos E. Albritton. H. R. 13841. Susan A. Thompson
H. R. 12441. EHZa H, Lockwood,	H. R. 13822. Jennie Alexander.
H R 19537 Mary A Car	H. R. 18823. Amos E. Albritton. H. R. 13841. Susan A. Thompson.
H. R. 12537. Mary A. Guy. H. R. 12553. Jane Platner.	H. R. 13843. George D. Jones.
H. R. 12613. Ruth V. Hutchens. H. R. 12711. Martha A. Thompson. H. R. 12851. Lavina H. Etnire.	H. R. 13841. Susan A. Thompson. H. R. 13843. George D. Jones. H. R. 13844. John H. Smith, allas Henry H. Smith. H. R. 13845. Mary E. Saner.
H. R. 12711. Martha A. Thompson.	Henry H. Smith.
H. R. 12851. Lavina H. Etnire.	H. R. 13845. Mary E. Saner.
H. R. 12879, Ella Knowiton.
H. R. 12883. Bertha Mann. H. R. 12907. Carrie M. Allison, H. B. 12910. Martha White.	H. R. 13849. Irene S. Slagle. H. R. 13896. Anna M. Fay. H. R. 13897. Nancy A. Gordon. H. R. 13898. Minerva Lane. H. R. 13900. Caroline K. Nester. H. R. 13905. Catharine Anderson. H. R. 13906. Willelmine Anderson.
H. R. 12910. Martha White.	H. R. 13890. Anna M. Fay.
H. R. 12915. Catharine Crawford.	H. R. 13898. Minerva Lane.
H R 19922 Francos E Calffin	H. R. 13900. Caroline K. Nester.
H. R. 12968. Mary Spencer, H. R. 12969. Jennie Boyd.	H. R. 13905. Catharine Anderson.
H. R. 12969. Jennie Boyd.	the rest of the state of the st
M. A. 12010. Margaret Discaming.	H. K. 18912, Lillian Ensminger
H. R. 12972. Lida O'Neal.
H. R. 12986. Carrie Tissue.	H. R. 13924. Elizabeth M. Griffith.
H. R. 12992. Martha E. Butler. H. R. 12994. Urzula Levisee.	H. R. 13925. Jennie E. Moore. H. R. 13946. Nancy B. Raney. H. R. 13947. William P. Raney.
H. R. 12994, Urzula Levisee,	H P 19047 William P P.
H. R. 13010. Lula Reeder. H. R. 13011. Catharine Boardman. H. R. 13013. Mary C. Cole.	H. R. 18954 John M. Roggick
H. R. 13013, Mary C. Cole.	H. R. 13958. William F. Graham
H. R. 13020. Susan Brunaugh	H. R. 13924. Elizabeth E. Lanam. H. R. 13924. Elizabeth M. Griffith. H. R. 13946. Nancy B. Raney. H. R. 13947. William P. Raney. H. R. 13954. John M. Barrick. H. R. 13958. William F. Graham. H. R. 13965. Sarah E. Gliespie. H. R. 13967. Sarah E. Stephens.
H. R. 13040. Amelia S. Scott.	H. R. 13967. Sarah E. Stephens.
H. R. 13040. Amelia S. Scott. H. R. 13041. Mary E. Blanchard.
H. R. 13055. Barsha Story.	H. R. 13970. Rosetta Alloway. H. R. 13973. Sarah E. Knight.
H. R. 13060. Millie Rex.	H. R. 13973. Sarah E. Knight.
H. R. 13061. Mary J. Robinette. H. R. 13084. Melissa J. Thompson.	H. R. 13983. Nancy J. Cooper. H. R. 13984. Sarah A. Fitzgerald. H. R. 13985. Sarah J. Moody.
H. R. 13084. Mellssa J. Thompson. H. R. 13089. Mary H. Pennypacker. H. R. 13099. Nathan E. Hopkins. H. R. 131099. Nathan E. Hopkins. H. R. 131102. Mattle Dunn. H. R. 13122. Mattle Dunn. H. R. 13179. Samira E. Cooprider. H. R. 13204. Lizzie E. Miller. H. R. 13204. Lizzie E. Miller. H. R. 13308. Mary A. Hatper. H. R. 13357. Susan V. Payne. H. R. 13372. Lizzie Leasure. H. R. 13372. Lizzie Leasure. H. R. 13398. Anna R. Twaddle.	H. R. 13985. Sarah J. Moody.
H. R. 13099. Nathan E. Hopkins.	H. K. 13990 Elizabeth A Times
H. R. 13100. Eugene S. Nash.	H. R. 14007. Mary M. Lilley. H. R. 14008. John Bywater, alias John Tallman.
H. R. 13122. Mattie Dunn.	H. R. 14008. John Bywater, alias
H. R. 18144. Ruth E. Vann.	John Tallman.
H. R. 15179. Samira E. Cooprider.	H. R. 14012. Oscar Okes. H. R. 14022. Mary M. Singer. H. R. 14023. Lucy Jane McGrayel. H. R. 14029. Susan Laugherty. H. R. 14030. Agatha M. Miller. H. R. 14042. Clara A. Bicknell. H. R. 14044. Hannah K. Hallowell. H. R. 14049. Elizabeth A. Morrow. H. R. 14051. Mary Sowle.
H R 18280 Joseph D Emerson	H P 14022 Lucy Tano McCrowel
H.R. 13308, Mary A. Harner	H. R. 14029. Susan Laugherty.
H. R. 13357. Susan V. Pavne.	H. R. 14030. Agatha M. Miller.
H. R. 13372. Lizzie Leasure.	H. R. 14042. Clara A. Bicknell.
H. R. 13398, Anna R. Twaddle.	H. R. 14044. Hannah K. Hallowell.
H. R. 13426. Addle Sour.	H. R. 14049. Elizabeth A. Morrow.
H. R. 15440, Mary E. Touny,	H. R. 14051. Mary Sowle. H. R. 14054. Susan Ritter.
H. R. 13598. Anna R. Twaddle. H. R. 13426. Addie Sour. H. R. 13440. Mary E. Touhy. H. R. 13473. Charles F. Kuntz. H. R. 13527. Liberty E. Frank. H. R. 13599. William L. Delow. H. R. 13699. Midlan Mercer. H. R. 13640. Edward Powell.
H. R. 13569, William L. Delow.	H. R. 14060. Martha Crawford. H. R. 14072. Ruth E. Daniels
H. R. 13599. Midian Mercer.	H. R. 14072. Ruth E. Daniels. H. R. 14075. Jane Oliver. H. R. 14088. Elizabeth Grover. H. R. 14090. Harriet Wicks. H. R. 14090. Elen Thompson. H. R. 14102. William E. Robinson.
H. R. 13623, Joseph Ham,	H. R. 14088. Elizabeth Grover.
	H. R. 14090. Harriet Wicks.
H. R. 13665, Julia M. Fletcher,	H. R. 14096. Euphamia Smith.
H. R. 13666. Sarah A. Wellman.	H. R. 14100. Ellen Thompson.
H. R. 18685. Jacob Shoup.	H. R. 14102. William E. Robinson. H. R. 14109. L. Anna Mavity.
H. R. 13000. Sarah A. Wellman. H. R. 13684. Lulu Moore. H. R. 13684. Jacob Shoup. H. R. 13700. Martha A. Demaris. H. R. 13703. Martha A. Pitzer. H. R. 13703. Elizabeth Reed. H. R. 13705. Nellie Quimby. H. R. 13707. Victoria M. Ray. H. R. 13707. Victoria M. Ray.	H. R. 14102. William E. Robinson. H. R. 14102. William E. Robinson. H. R. 14109. L. Anna Mavity. H. R. 14150. Amanda J. Alford. H. R. 14153. Jennie Darling. H. R. 14158. Margaret F. Freeman. H. R. 14159. Zula A. Springer. H. R. 14187. Mary Savanack. H. R. 14210. Pernina A. Morrison.
H. R. 13703. Martha A. Pitzer.	H. R. 14153. Jennie Darling.
H. R. 13700. Martha A. Demaris, H. R. 13703. Martha A. Pitzer, H. R. 13703. Elizabeth Reed.	H. R. 14158. Margaret F. Freeman.
H. R. 13705. Nellie Quimby.	H. R. 14159. Zula A. Springer.
H. R. 13707. Victoria M. Ray.	H. R. 14187. Mary Savanack.
H. R. 13707. Victoria M. Ray. H. R. 13710. Sarah J. McCulloh. H. R. 13731. Samuel E. Blades.	H P 14220 Charles I Ples
H. R. 13741. Kate Caldwell.	H. R. 14158. Margaret F. Freeman. H. R. 14159. Zula A. Springer. H. R. 14187. Mary Savanack. H. R. 14210. Pernina A. Morrison. H. R. 14220. Charles J. Bice. H. R. 14228. Henrietta Richmond. H. R. 14276. John W. Genner.
H. R. 13743. Agnes Green.	H. R. 14276. John W. Genung.
H. R. 13744, Mary A. Harmon.	durants.
	T

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to offer an amendment. On page 27, line 6, at the end of the line strike out the capital letter "R" and insert the capital letter "B."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 27, line 6, at the end of the line, strike out the capital letter R" and insert the capital letter "B."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. FULLER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. ROBSION. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill H. R. 14200 on report from Committee on Pensions of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky calls up the bill H. R. 14200, which the Clerk will report by

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14200) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors.

Mr. ROBSION. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider the bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to consider this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole House. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pensions laws—
The name of Joseph Bauer, late of Company K, Second Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Joseph Bauer, late of Company K, Second Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Isabelle Barnett, widow of Theophllus Barnett, late of Troop H. Nineteenth Regiment Kansas Cavairy, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Fred Stanley, late of Troop M, Eleventh Regiment United States Volunteer Cavairy, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Watson S. Coburn, late of Company I, First Kansas State Militia Cavairy, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of George D. Smith, late of Captain D. B. Randall's Company B, Second Regiment Idaho Volunteers, Nez Perce Indian War, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Fred Schwarz, late of the United States Navy, Philippine insurrection, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William C. Knuckles, late of Company K, Twenty-eighth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Barbara Oglesby, widow of George W. Oglesby, late of Captain Martin Williams's company, Lewiston Scouts, Idaho Volunteers, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

teers, month.

captain Martin Williams's company, Lewiston Scouts, Idaho Volunteers, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Sherwood H. Williams, late of United States Marine Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Jerome B. Butler, late of Company C, Thirty-second Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Lina Real, widow of Adolphus Real, late of Captain Owen Shaw's company. Texas Mounted Volunteers, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of C. M. Middleton, late of Captain L. H. McNelly's company, special State Troops, Frontier Battalion, Texas Rangers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Samuel E. Acuff, alias Samuel E. Harris, late of Companies D and G. Eighteenth Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Sarah E. Fortier, widow of Joseph Fortier, late of the Renville Rangers, Minnesota Militia, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Ben C. Robinson, late of Company D, Comanche County Texas Minute Men, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Richard Burns, late of Company D, Fourteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Andrew McLaughlin, late of Company M, Sixty-fifth Regiment, United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Andrew McLaughlin, late of Company M, Sixty-fifth Regiment, United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $18 per month.

The name of Peter Lacher, late of Troop D, Fourth Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

States Cavalry. Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Rebecca Melvina Elliff, widow of Captain Hardy Crier Elliff, late of Captain Hardy Elliff's independent company. Mounted Oregon Volunteers, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Rose G. Bingman, widow of John I. Bingman, late of Captain Randall's Company B, Second Idaho Volunteers, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Lizzie Johnson, widow of Thomas W. Johnson, late of Company A, Gray's Battallon, Arkansas Volunteers, Mexican War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Ferdinand Heinen, late of Lieut, Henry Schwethelm's company, Kerr County Texas Minute Men, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Annie Veuve, widow of Ernest Veuve, late of Company H, Third Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Etta W. Cass, widow of Jesse Lee Cass, late hospital steward, Fourth Regiment Texas Infantry, war with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is new receiving.

The name of Levi T. Miller, late of Captain Randall's Company B, Second Regiment Idaho Volunteers, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Mark Y. Judd, late of Captain Warren Wallace's company, Nueces and Rio Grande Counties, Texas Frontier Men, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Rachel J. Smith, widow of William C. Smith, late colonel First Regiment Tennessee Infantry, Spanish-American War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Emma Grace Ridgely, widow of Howard B. Ridgely, late of Capt. Martin Williams's company, Lewiston Scouts, Idaho Volunteers, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

month.

The name of Robert Longstaff, late of Troop F, Fifth Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William Henry Bush, late of Troop C, Ninth Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Louise W. Noyes, widow of Henry E. Noyes, late captain, Second Regiment United States Cavalry, and brigadier general, retired, United States Army, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Albert C. Roach, late of Company G, Fourteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Rhoda A, Savage, widow of James Savage, late of Com-

The name of Rhoda A. Savage, widow of James Savage, late of Company K, Third Regiment Missouri Mounted Volunteers, Mexican War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Alva C. Cooper, late of Company D, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of William E. Johnson, late of Company K, Second Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of James Donnelly, late of Company A, Third Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of James Donnelly, late of Company A, Third Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Alice Z. Sherwin, widow of Charles L. C. Sherwin, late of Troop K, Eighth Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary E. Tritten, widow of John G. Tritten, late of Troop A, Seventh Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Robert M. Daniels, late of Troop E, Eighth Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Paul Henricksen, late of Company D, Eighth Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Clarence J, Johnson, alias Franklin J. Green, late of Troop C. Seventh Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James McDonough, late of Company E, Second Regiment Illinois Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The name of Howard Hines, late of Company B, Nineteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $18 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

pension at the rate of $18 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of George Peyton Chambers, late of Company B, First Regiment Alabama Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Tracey M. Halley, late of Company A, Eighteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month. Pension to be paid to a legally appointed guardian.

The name of John F. Kilbride, late of Sanitary Detachment, First New York Cavalry, National Guard, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of John T. Hyder, late of Company E, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of David C. Preston, late private, Company F, Eighth Regiment California Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Martin G. Lyons, late of Company E, Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William S. Arnold, late of Company G, Eighteenth Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Thomas M. Benton, late of Company A, Twenty-ninth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $14 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Thomas M. Benton, late of Company A, Twenty-ninth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $14 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William S. Whitley, late of Company B, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William Coleman, late of Troop F, Seventh Regiment United States Cavalry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of William Dotson, late of Company I, Eighth Regiment Illinois Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah A. Fisher, widow of Stanton G. Fisher, late chief of Indian Scouts, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Werner Snow, late of Company E, Thirty-second Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of John Johnson, late of Company F, Thirteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Charles B. Winton, late of United States Navy, second-class fireman, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of George W. Camp, late of Company A. Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Blaine Campbell, late of Troop L. Fifteenth Regiment United States Cavalry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Blaine Campbell, late of Company I. Kinth Regiment United States Cavalry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Banner Chandley, late of Company I. Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Harry Elkins, late of Company F, Nineteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John W. Thomas, late of Company D, Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John W. Thomas, late of Company D, Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James A Carver, late of Company I, Twelfth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James A Carver, late of Company J, Twelfth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James A Carver, late of Company L, Eighteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate ment, and Company L. Twenty-third Regiment, United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Leo Forst, late of Company D, Fifth Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mournin Scott, dependent mother of Joseph Scott, late of the Ninety-seventh Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Henry T. Bishop, late of Company E, Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Horace G. Butterfield, late of Company F, Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Phillip S, Jackson, late of Company B, First Regiment Wyoming Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James Mitchell, late of Company B, Third Regiment Kentucky Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $15 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James C. Woodward, late of Battery H, Ohio Volunteer Light Artifllery, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James A. G. Cox, late of the Seventy-first Company United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $35 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James Phelps, late of Company D, Fourteenth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James Phelps, late of Company F, Twenty-fifth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Gorge W. Laird, late of Company

The name of Martin E. McMichael, late of Company F, Ninth Regiment Illinois Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Marie F. Manns, widow of William A. Manns, late of Companies K and C, Twenty-third Regiment United States Infantry, Indian wars, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Willie A. Mankin, late of Company F, Third Regiment Tennessee Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Viola Butler, permanently helpless and dependent child of Henry C. Butler, late of Captain Lamar's company, Bell's regiment, Texas Mounted Volunteers, Mexican War, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of William P. Johnston, late of the One hundred and fifth Company, United States Coast Artillery, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

This bill is a substitute for the following bills referred to the Committee on Pensions:

This bill is a substitute for the following bills referred to the Committee on Pensions:

H. R. 3026. Joseph Bauer.
H. R. 4389. Isabelle Barnett.
H. R. 13026. William S. Arnold.
H. R. 5409. Fred Stanley.
H. R. 5409. Fred Stanley.
H. R. 1528. George D. Smith.
H. R. 7528. George D. Smith.
H. R. 7725. Fred Schwarz.
H. R. 7828. William C. Knuckles.
H. R. 7828. William C. Knuckles.
H. R. 8587. Barbara Oglesby.
H. R. 8830. Sherwood H. Williams.
H. R. 8835. Jerome B. Butler.
H. R. 9035. C. M. Middleton.
H. R. 9035. C. M. Middleton.
H. R. 9035. G. M. Middleton.
H. R. 9044. Lina Real.
H. R. 9131. Sarah E. Fortier.
H. R. 9359. Ben C. Robinson.
H. R. 9377. Peter Lacher.
H. R. 9378. Peter Lacher.
H. R. 9986. Rebecca Melvina Elliff.
H. R. 10502. Lizzie Johnson.
H. R. 10502. Lizzie Johnson.
H. R. 10504. Fridmand Helmen.
H. R. 10755. Annie Veuve.
H. R. 11313. William Mapier.
H. R. 11270. Rachel J. Smith.
H. R. 11270. Rachel J. Smith.
H. R. 11270. Emma Grace Ridgely.
H. R. 11311. Robert Longstaff.
H. R. 11373. William Henry Bush.
H. R. 11374. Milliam B. Wolliam S. Arnold.
H. R. 11375. Alone C. Cooper.
H. R. 11375. James M. Chonough.
H. R. 11376. James M. Persin.
H. R. 13774. Robod A. Savage.
H. R. 113650. William B. William S. Arnold.
H. R. 11373. William H. Thompson.
H. R. 1373. William H. Thompson.
H. R. 1374. Hohod A. Savage.
H. R. 1375. James M. Carver.
H. R. 1376. James Mitchell.
H. R. 13774. Hohod A. Savage.
H. R. 1366. James Phelps.
H. R. 13675. James Mitchell.
H. R. 12247. Mary E. Tritten.
H. R. 12248. Goorge Peyton Chamber.
H. R. 12249. Robert M. Daniels.
H. R. 12248. Goorge Peyton Chamber.
H. R. 12249. Forbert M. Parker.
H. R. 13880. Marie F. Manns.
H. R. 12249. Robert M. Daniels.
H. R. 12249. Whilliam B. Johnson.
H. R. 13289. John F. Kilbride.
H. R. 13290. Willia M. H. R. 13390. Willia M. Johnson.
H. R. 12248. Goorge Peyton Chamber.
H. R. 12249. Whilliam B. Johnson.
H. R. 13289. William P. Johnston.
H. R. 1328

Mr. ROBSION. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to strike out the name of Martin G. Lyons, on page 9, lines 1 to 4, inclusive.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kentucky.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 9, beginning with line 1, strike out the paragraph, including lines 1 to 4, inclusive.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time. as read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Robston, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the vote was passed was laid on the table.

REREFERENCE-YAZOO RIVER.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, the letter of the Secretary of War, which is printed as House Document 597 in a report on a further investigation of the Yazoo River was erroneously referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. I ask that it be referred to the Committee on Flood Control.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent that a rereference be made of the letter of the Secretary of War in reference to the Yazoo River project. If there is no objection, the letter will be referred to the Committee on Flood Control.

There was no objection.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 14222) to amend the trading with the enemy act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Minnesota withhold that?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I withhold it.

FREIGHT RATES ON DAIRY SUPPLIES AND AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged motion to discharge the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce from the further consideration of House Resolution 266.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota offers a privileged motion to discharge the Committee on Inter-state and Foreign Commerce from the further consideration of House Resolution 266, which the Clerk will report.
The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 266.

House Resolution 266.

Resoluted, That the President be, and he is hereby, requested to transmit to the House of Representatives all information in his possession or in the possession of the Interstate Commerce Commission relative to the alleged practice of charging freight on butter tubs made and shipped from Duluth and other points in Minnesota to Red River Vailey points in Minnesota, plus freight from Eigin, III.; and also relative to the practice of charging freight upon agricultural machinery shipped from points west of Pittsburgh to points in Minnesota, plus freight from Pittsburgh, Pa.; and also all information in his possession or in possession of said commission as to what statutory authority or other legal authority exists or is claimed to exist to justify or authorize such discriminatory and unjust practices.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order on the resolution

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against it.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the resolution and only just heard it read, but it calls for information about certain "alleged" practices which clearly takes privileged status which it might otherwise have.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order, Mr. Speaker, that this is not a privileged resolution. It asks for information peculiarly within the knowledge of this department. It asks the department to cite to this Congress certain laws, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Steenerson] could get that information elsewhere. It calls for a citation to certain laws. That is wholly out of order on a resolution of inquiry.

Mr. MAPES. It calls for information in regard to an alleged practice, which, it seems to me, brings it clearly outside of the Chair to the last clause:

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I direct the express attention

And also all information in his possession or in possession of said commission as to what statutory or other legal authority exists or is claimed to exist to justify or authorize such discriminatory and unjust

That is calling for an opinion in the guise of information.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is ready to rule.

Clearly the resolution calls for something more than a mere statement of fact. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 14222) to amend the trading with the enemy act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Steenerson] appeals from the decision of the Chair.
Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the appeal on the table

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the appeal on the table

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin and the gentleman from Minnesota move to lay the appeal on the table. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the "ayes" appeared to have it.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, a division.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota calls for a division on the question of laying on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair. As many as favor the motion to lay on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair will rise and stand until they are counted.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 121, noes 6.

So the motion to lay on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 14222) to amend the trading with the enemy act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 14222) to amend the trading with the enemy act. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota

[Mr. Anderson] will please resume the chair.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 14222) to amend the trading with the enemy act, with Mr. Anderson in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 17, strike out the word "application" with a comma and insert the word "application" without a corma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 1, strike out the word "Custodian" with a comma and insert the word "Custodian" without a comma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 2, strike out the word "him" with a comma and insert e word "him" without a comma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 8, strike out "Austria-Hungary" and insert "Austria-Hungary" with a comma; and on page 5, line 9, strike out the word "who" with a comma and insert the word "who" without a comma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 9, strike out the word "Statutes" and insert the word "Statutes" with a comma. The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 10, line 13, strike out the word "otherwise" and insert the word "otherwise" with a comma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 10, line 17, at the beginning of the line insert the word "as."

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 10, line 24, strike out the word "States" with a comma and sert the word "States" with a semicolon.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. RAYBURN: Page 1, lines 5 and 6, after the word "person," strike out the words "not an enemy or ally of enemy."

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, several Members and I have consulted with the majority. This is the amendment that provides for the return of all the property. It is the one important amendment that will be offered. Several gentlemen have suggested that we try to agree upon time on this amendment. If the amendment is voted down there is only one more important amendment on this side that will be offered to the bill, and that is for the return of the Austrian property. Many Members want to be heard upon this amendment who did not get time in general debate. Therefore I feel that the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Newron] or the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Winslow] should ask for very liberal time for debate on this amendment.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Does the gentleman's suggestion apply to his particular amendment, or does it apply to the section itself?

Mr. RAYBURN. It applies to this particular amendment.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Would it not be better if we are to go into a limitation to apply it to the section itself rather than to this particular amendment?

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, no; do not do that.

Mr. RAYBURN. If the amendment I have just offered is adopted, several amendments will have to be adopted to the first section of the bill. Therefore it seems to me that it would be impracticable to agree upon time as to all of the section.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. What suggestion has the gentleman to offer in reference to limitation of debate on this one section?

Mr. RAYBURN. I should like very much to control an hour on this amendment.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I have no desire whatever to curb debate unduly, but the gentleman from Texas must realize, as we all realize, that we are near the end of the session and that if we take up time here we are just simply preventing some other measures from being considered. seem to me that upon this particular amendment half an hour on a side is all that the gentleman should ask for.

Mr. RAYBURN. There are a dozen men on this side who did not get to say anything yesterday. I think there are many on that side who did not, and this is the crux of this whole situation.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman from Minnesota allow me?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I yield to the gentleman from Wyoming

Mr. MONDELL. We debated this very question four hours Now, all gentlemen want is to discuss the very yesterday. Now, all gentlemen want is to discuss the question which was discussed most of the time yesterday.

There are at least half a dozen gentlemen Mr. RAYBURN. on this side who did not get even five minutes yesterday.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman from Texas yield for a suggestion?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes. Mr. TILSON. Why not let the debate run for a little while, with the explicit understanding that no extensions will be made beyond five minutes, and then later close the debate? Let the chairman determine as to those for and against, but no one to speak longer than five minutes, and let it run, to see how much debate is really desired.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Let me suggest the impracticability of doing that, because we are standing in the road of an urgent deficiency bill which it is very necessary to pass. we give an hour to this amendment, there will be another amendment on the Austrian property upon which liberal time will be wanted, and then there is an amendment to be offered on this side upon the declaration of future policy, upon which time will be wanted. If we are not careful we shall occupy the whole afternoon here. It seems to me that we had better agree in advance, so that we shall have no feeling about it among the membership when the time ends. For that reason we ought to limit it now on this amendment.

Mr. RAYBURN. What does the gentleman say to an hour and a half on this amendment?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. If the gentleman is going to insist on its being limited to this amendment, it seem to me we can not go beyond one hour.

Mr. RAYBURN. I think the gentleman ought to grant us an hour and a half for this amendment. We will get through with it by 3 o'clock. We will not take up much time on the Austrian amendment.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. If it is to be limited to this particular amendment we can not go beyond the hour.

Mr. RAYBURN. Let us take both amendments and make it an hour on a side then, on the return of all the property and on the return of the Austrian property.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I do not think we can do that.

Mr. RAYBURN. I ask for recognition, Mr. Chairman. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Ray-

BURN] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I do not have much to add to what I said yesterday in reference to this proposition. The amendment I have offered offers to the House a clear-cut proposition and a square opportunity to pass upon the proposition of whether or not we will do what we concede the only thing that this Govern-ment, speaking through this Congress should do, and that is to return all this property at an early date. If this amendment is voted down it means that we by this method only tantalize the situation. It seems to me that as a policy for this Gov-ernment to-day we would be less likely to be misunderstood if we returned none of this property than if we returned only a partial amount of it, and for this reason. If we do not act upon this question, if we do not return any of this property, there is no congressional action on it at all at this time, the world will believe that the United States of America will in the future, as it has in the past, be guided by the decisions of its courts, by its traditions, and follow the rules of international law built up in these modern days of civilization.

But if we return $10,000 of this property we imply the threat that we are going to retain the remainder as security for the payment of private claims by American citizens against the German Government, and the world will have the right and will believe that we intend to do what some gentlemen have been frank enough to assert, confiscate this property.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania, Doctor Temple, yesterday, although disclaiming any intent on the part of the Gov-ernment of the United States for the confiscation of this property, driven to the ultimate conclusion, said this:

What is the German Government to do about privately owned property of its citizens which it has turned over to this Government under the terms I read from the treaty a few minutes ago? If the time should come when we would have to sell the property to make good the claims of our people against Germany, then the German owners would hold the claim against their own Government.

If we are going to sell the property and devote the proceeds to paving private claims of American citizens, in God's name, what is that but confiscation?

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Is not the real crux of this whole matter that after the armistice the Alien Property Custodian under the last administration did sell most of the prop-

Mr. RAYBURN. Some of it.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. He did it, and after the armistice, and gave notice that no one but pure American citizens should bid on it.

Mr. RAYBURN. I say that we will be misunderstood the world over because if this House adopts the recommendation of this committee and, in the light of the speeches made here, sustains this committee, they can come to no conclusion but that the property will be confiscated ultimately for certain objects.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. The gentleman will acknowledge that this House is not answerable for the policy of confiscation and seizure?

Mr. RAYBURN. That does not enter into what we are doing now. If somebody violated the law in the last administration it is no reason why this Congress or this administration should hold us up to the world in a light that we never have been placed in, in the light to make us misunderstood the world over, when America stands alone in a world of turmoil to-day, If the world is to come to settled conditions, if civilization's battle for freedom and the enlightenment of the world is to stand and to mean anything, the United States must hold forth the beacon light of law. order, humanity, and decency to the whole world.

hole world. [Applause.] Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on the amendment of the gentleman from Texas and all amendments thereto close in 55 minutes: the time to be divided 30 minutes to those opposing the amendment and 25 minutes to those favoring the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close at the end of 55 minutes, 25 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Texas and 30 minutes by himself. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, I want five minutes. I understood there was to be liberal debate. Does that include five minutes for me?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. The gentleman will have to look to his colleague. Is there objection? The CHAIRMAN.

There was no objection.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SANDERS.]

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I want to say at the outset that I am opposed to the application of the property in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian to the payment of American claims. I am also in favor of the passage of this measure as claims. it is. The fact that such position may seem anomalous leads me to explain in just as brief form as I can why I think this measure should be passed without amendment with reference to the amount we return, and why those who entertain the views which I entertain can not only support the measure on final passage but can urge that the measure be passed in its present form rather than in the form of returning all the property at the present time. We are confronted with this practical proposition.

There are many gentlemen in the House who entertain the views so ably expressed by the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], who is not only one of the able members of our committee but one of the ablest Members of this House. I am among those who entertain such views, but there are many gentlemen in the House who entertain the view that this property ought not to be returned but ought to be applied to the payment of American claims. We have before us legislation which proposes to return to the German nationals 92 per cent in number of all of these trusts. The legislation before us does not commit you or me or any Member of this Congress to any policy of the application of this property to the payment of American claims. If the legislation contained one single section or paragraph or phrase which committed our Government to the policy of taking the property of these enemy nationals, brought here during peace times, builded up by their toll, I would vote against the measure and oppose it; but there is not anything in the bill to that effect.

Personally I should be glad if the Senate and the House could agree to-day to return all of the property to those to whom it belongs, but it can not be done. The distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] made an able argument to that effect, but over in another body the distinguished Democratic leader who represents the great State of Alabama has a bill now before that body, proposing to apply this property now to the payment of these American claims; and there are others there sharing the same opinion.

The question is, shall those of us who believe so firmly in the sacred rights of property here, regardless of whether it belongs to our own people or others, amend this bill and propose to give it all back, send the measure to the other body to die, thus losing the opportunity of turning back 92 per cent in number of these trusts, or shall we support the bill in its present form and embrace that opportunity? I say it is a practical proposition, and that the men who belong to the majority, who have the responsibility of legislation, must face the situation as it is, and those of us who believe that it all ought to be returned, with the opportunity confronting us to turn 92 per cent in numbers back, must take advantage of that opportunity.

We have a proposition here which can go through without violating the principles of any gentleman, whether he believes it all ought to be returned or not, for if one believes that all this property ought to be returned, then he believes 92 per cent in number ought to be returned.

Those of us who entertain the view that it all ought to be returned get practically everything we asked for in this measure. We return all of 92 per cent of those trusts, and the bill in its present form has been so amended that we give the in-come of all the remaining trusts. Thus, not much will be lost to the owners if it goes on for another year or two while they are adjusting these claims. They lose nothing, and we get substantially what we ask for. Therefore, regardless of our views, we can join in this proposition of doing substantial justice and returning what is provided for in this measure. [Applause.]

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Yes.
Mr. TILSON. Does not the gentleman think that the precedent we are setting by turning back a part of it can be taken as a pledge that all of the rest of it will be disposed of in the same manner?

SANDERS of Indiana. I do not know, but the matter is in the hands of the American Congress. This property can not be confiscated without the assent of Congress, and the American Congress can never under the sun consent to such a policy as confiscating private property of enemy nationals to pay American claims. [Applause.]

I desire to discuss the provisions of this bill and this question of whether we shall apply this property to the payment of American claims.

The Alien Property Custodian, appointed by virtue of the trading with the enemy act, now holds 30,368 trusts of the value of approximately $347,000,000. These trusts embrace almost every species of property, including private debts and United States Government obligations. Some of these Government obligations are investments made by the custodian, but others are Government obligations owned by alien enemies at the time they were taken over. The Winslow bill, H. R. 13496, would return 28,144 trusts, each of which is less than $10,000 In value, and would return $10,000 in value to some of the beneficiaries of the remaining 2,224 trusts. According to the estimate of Mr. Miller, Alien Property Custodian, this would amount in all to $44,362,000, or less than one-seventh of the property in value. (Hearings before House committee, p. 6.) —AS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE ENEMY GOVERNMENT WE HAVE THE RIGHT TO CONFISCATE THE PROPERTY OF THESE ENEMY NATIONALS.

Under strict international law all questions as to the rights of the nationals of the respective governments are foreclosed when the treaty is signed.

I apprehend that the treaty of peace abolishes the subject of the war, and that after peace is concluded neither the matter in dispute nor the conduct of either party during the war can ever be revived or brought into contest again. * * * * the restitution of, or compensation for, British property confiscated or extinguished during the war by any of the United States, could only be provided for by the treaty of peace. (Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 229.)

Germany not only failed to make provision for the return of the property held by our Alien Property Custodian but specifically agreed in the treaty of Versailles-

The property rights and interests, and the cash assets, of German nationals-

Including that held by our custodianshall be subject to the disposal of such power-in accordance with its laws and regulations.

America-

Versailles treaty, section 4, article 297 (h) (2), with the further provision that-

Germany undertakes to compensate her nationals in respect of the sale or retention of their property, rights, or interests. (Ibid, art. 297 (i).)

This right in the Versailles treaty and the rights reserved in the Knox-Porter resolution were preserved to us in the treaty of Berlin.

II .- OUR COURTS AND ENGLISH COURTS, WHILE RECOGNIZING THE NAKED RIGHT OF CONFISCATION, CONDEMN ITS EXERCISE.

A. DECISIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

A. DECISIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

(1) In former times the right to confiscate debts was admitted as an acknowledged doctrine of the law of nations, and in strictness it may be said to exist, but it may well be considered as a naked and impolitic right, condemned by the enlightened conscience and judgment of modern times. * * There is no exigency in war which requires that belligerents should confiscate or annul the debts due by citizens of the other contending party. Grant that the law of nations is that debts due from individuals to the enemy may by the rigorous application of the rights of war be confiscated, still it is a right which is seldom or never exercised in modern warfare. (Hanger v. Abbott (1867), 6 Wall. 532.)

the rights of war be confiscated, still it is a right which is seldom or never exercised in modern warfare. (Hanger v. Abbott (1867), 6 Wall. 532.)

(2) Between debts contracted under the faith of laws and property acquired in the course of trade on the faith of the same laws reason draws no distinction and although in practice vessels with their cargoes, found in port at the declaration of war, may have been seized it is not believed that modern usage would sanction the seizure of the goods of an enemy on land which were acquired in peace in the course of trade. Such a proceeding is rare and would be deemed a harsh exercise of the rights of war. (Chief Justice Marshall in Brown v. U. S., 8 Cr. 110.)

(3) There is no exigency in war which requires that belligerents should confiscate or annul the debts due by the citizens of the other contending party. (Hanger v. Abbott (1867), 6 Wall. 532.)

(4) Confiscation of debts is considered a disreputable thing among civilized nations of the present day; and indeed nothing is more strongly evincive of this truth than that it has gone into general desuctude, and whenever put into practice provision is made by the freaty which terminates the war for the mutual and complete restoration of contracts and payment of debts. (Justice Patterson in Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199 at 255; and see also Judge Wilson, ibid. p. 281; and Judge Cushing, ibid. 283.)

(5) It may not be unworthy of remark that it is very unusual, even in cases of conquest, for the conqueror to do more than to displace the sovereign and assume dominion over the country. The modern usage of nations which has become law would be violated; that sense of justice and of right which is acknowledged and felt by the whole civilized world would be outraged if private property should be generally confiscated and private rights annulled. * * If this be the modern rule, even in cases of conquest, who can doubt its application to the case of an amicable cession of territory? (Chief Justice Marshall, U. S. v. Percheman, 7 Pet

(B) DECISIONS OF ENGLISH COURTS.

Many English authorities are collected and reviewed in the case of ex-Czar of Bulgaria's property (July 30, 1920), 123 In this case the Crown had undertaken to for-Law Times, 661. feit property belonging to the ex-Czar of Bulgaria in Great Britain. It was held that the right did not exist because of the British "trading with the enemy act," which was inconsistent. The court, however, said that except for the act the Crown would have had the right of forfeiture.

I quote, however, certain parts of the decision to show how the court condemned confiscation:

The right to forfeiture and the trading with the enemy legislation are concerned with all enemy property, and it must be remembered that the right to forfeit, although its existence is recognized, has been criticized and its exercise deprecated by practically all writers an international law in modern times. (Lord Sterndale, p. 665.)

* * * Lastly, for more than 100 years it has not been exercised, so far as any record produced to us shows, in the case of private property of enemies, the only form of property with which we are concerned, and the tendency of writers on international law has been, while admitting the existence of the right, to deprecate on grounds of humanity and from economical considerations the assertion of it in the times in which we live, with the intimate relations between the inhabitants of different countries brought about by improved facilities of communications, etc. (Lord Sterndale, pp. 667-668.)

But, apart from such judicial views, the propriety of the exercise of any arbitrary right of forfeiture has been increasingly made the subject of disapproval by writers on international law, while the unwisdom of its exercise in the general case, because such exercise was calculated to expose British subjects to like measure on the part of their enemies, and in many cases to put them in the position of being obliged to pay their debts twice over, was generally insisted upon. (Lord Younger, L. J., pp. 669-670.)

* * * It will be noticed that while under the act every purpose of forfeiture under the prerogative not merely penal is attained in that, while its procedure when adopted is effective to deprive an enemy owner of property within the realm of any beneficial interest therein while the war lasts, its provisions also permit complete justice to be done to him on the conclusion of peace in respect of his property preserved and administered during the war. (Lord Younger, L. J., p. 670.)

It will be noted on reading this case carefully that the court does not follow the case of Wolff v. Oxholm (6 M. & S. 92), which has been cited with approval by our courts.

That case involved the confiscation by Denmark of a debt of a British subject. The British court was there deciding a clear question of international law, took a strong stand against confiscation of debts of enemy nationals, and denied the right under international law to confiscate.

In cases where the Crown seeks to forfeit, the British courts hold themselves bound by the policy determined by the Crown, unless the power has been taken away by act of Parliament.

The views of Great Britain when her own subjects are involved is shown by the Wolff case and the British protest against the confiscatory acts of the Confederate States hereinafter quoted. Great Britain is for the enlightened policy of nonconfiscation when the property belongs to British subjects.

(C) INTERNATIONAL LAW TEXTS.

Finally, with unnecessarily multiplying authorities on a point which is undisputed, we may quote from Hall the following passage:

"Property belonging to an enemy which is found by a belligerent within his own jurisdiction, except property entering territorial waters after the commencement of war, may be said to enjoy a practical immunity from confiscation." (John Bassett Moore, vol. 7, p. 308, Digest of International Law.)

III.—THE QUESTION OF CONFISCATION IS ONE OF POLICY TO BE DETERMINED BY THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, AND WHEN INVOLVED IN TREATY, OF COURSE, THE EXECUTIVE ALSO.

Involved in Treaty, of course, the Executive Also.

(1) The question, What shall be done with enemy property in our country * * o is proper consideration of the legislature, not the executive or judiciary. (Brown v. U. S. (1814), 8 Cr. 110; 3 Law Ed. 504; Huberich, p. 232.)

(2) If Virginia as a sovereign State violated the ancient or modern law of nations in making the law of the 20th of October, 1777, "confiscating debts," she was answerable in her political capacity to the British nation, whose subjects have been injured in consequence of that law. Suppose a general right to confiscate British property is admitted to be in Congress, and Congress had confiscated all British property within the United States, including private debts, would it be permitted to contend in any court of the United States that Congress had no power to confiscate such debts by the modern law of nations? If the right is conceded to be in Congress, it necessarily follows that she is the judge of the exercise of the right as to the extent, mode, and manner. (Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199, at 224.)

IV .- THE ESTABLISHED AMERICAN POLICY IS OPPOSED TO CONFISCATION.

a. Now, since our courts, British courts, and authorities on international law had condemned confiscation of the private property of enemy nationals, although recognizing it as a naked right, and since it has been expressly held to be a matter of policy, it becomes important to determine what is the established American policy.

(1) THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

This was at a time when the Nation was in a formative stage, Congress itself passed no confiscatory measures. The individual States under the Articles of Confederation had sequestered and confiscated property, particularly British debts. Nevertheless, in our treaty of 1782, we provided:

ART. IV. It is agreed that creditors on either side shall meet with no lawful impediment to the recovery of the full value in sterling money of all bona fide debts heretofore contracted.

ART. V. It is agreed that the Congress shall earnestly recommend it to the legislatures of the respective States to provide for the restitution of all estates, rights and properties which have been confiscated, belonging to real British subjects, * * *

ART. VI. That there shall be no future confiscations made * * *.

Then in the Jay treaty (1794), to make more certain our fulfillment of the obligations we provided for a commission to fix the amount of loss or damages on account of failure to restore or compensate for confiscated property; and later in the treaty of 1802 we provided for the payment of $2,664,000 in settlement of these claims.

And the same arguments of self-interest were made then as now. Alexander Hamilton answered them so conclusively in his articles signed "Camillus" that what he said has almost become the American textbook on rights of private property of belligerents on land, and is quoted by most authorities on international law as the statement of the modern doctrine upon the subject.

I quote briefly:

the subject.

I quote briefly:

Letter XVIII. No powers of language at my command can express the abborrence I feel at the idea of violating the property of individuals, which in an authorized intercourse, in time of peace, has been troversies between nation and nation. In my view, every moral and every political sentiment unite to consign it to execration. (Hamilton's Works, p. 60, vol. 5, Lodge.)

LETTER XIX. The right of holding or having property in a country always implies a duty on the part of its government to protect that property and to secure to the owner the full enjoyment of it. Whenever, therefore, a government grants permission to foreigners to acquire property within its territories or to bring and deposit it there, it tacitly promises protection and security. It must be understood to engage that the foreign proprietor, as to what he shall have acquired or deposited, shall enjoy the rights, privileges, and immunities of a native proprietor without any other exceptions than those which the established laws may have previously declared. How can anything else be understood? Every State, when it has entered into no contrary engagement, is free to permit or not to permit foreigners to acquire or bring property within its jurisdiction; but if it grant the right, what is there to make the tenure of the foreigner different from that of the native, if antecedent laws have not pronounced a difference? Property, as it exists in civilized society, if not a creature of, is, at least, regulated and defined by the laws. They prescribe the manner in which it shall be used, alienated, or transmitted; the conditions on which it may be held, preserved, or forfeited. It is to them we are to look for its rights, limitations, and conditions. No condition of enjoyment, no cause of forfeiture, which they have not specified, can be presumed to exist. An extraordinary discretion to resume or take away the thing, without any personal fault of the proprietor, is inconsistent with the notion of property. This seems always to Congress did not confiscate private property and carefully preserved the rights of individual owners in the ceded lands. Article 8 of the treaty of 1848 provided:

Article 8 of the treaty of 1848 provided:

Mexicans now established in Territories previously belonging to Mexico, and which remain for the future within the limits of the United States as defined by the present treaty, shall be free to continue where they now reside or to remove at any time to the Mexican Republic, retaining the property which they possess in the said Territories or disposing thereof and removing the proceeds wherever they please, without their being subjected on this account to any contribution, tax, or charge whatever.

In the said Territories property of every kind now belonging to Mexicans not established there shall be inviolably respected. The present owners, the heirs of these, and all Mexicans who may hereafter acquire said property by contract shall enjoy with respect to it guaranties equally ample as if the same belonged to citizens of the United States.

(3) THE CIVIL WAR.

(3) THE CIVIL WAR,

The action of the Congress during the Civil War resembled confiscation. In reality, however, it was merely confiscation of property used and employed in promoting insurrection.

Charles Cheney Hyde (1922) volume 2, on page 238, analyzes our action:

Our action:

In the course of the Civil War, the United States, in its endeavor to suppress the insurrection, and by way of punishment for disloyalty and treason on the part of the owners, undertook by an act of Congress of July 17, 1862, to confiscate property found within the Union lines. The principle acted upon differed essentially from that involved in confiscating property of alien enemies, and gives no support by way of precedent to such procedure. On August 6, 1861, the Congress enacted a law for the confiscation of property purchased or acquired, sold or given with intent to aid or abet or promote the insurrection or resistance to the laws, or in case the owner of property should knowingly use or employ it, or consent to the use of employment of it, for such purpose. It was thus the nature or the use of property rather than the character of the owner which was made the ground of confiscation. It is not believed that this law, in view of the nature of the confiscation in a foreign war of the property of alien enemies within the national domain. As careful an observer as Hall declared that this act of Congress was the only instance of belligerent confiscation of private property from the close of the Napoleonic wars until the time when he wrote; yet he expressed doubt as to whether the usage was old and broad enough to establish a rule applicable to all forms of private property.

The Confederate Congress passed an act of confiscation which

The Confederate Congress passed an act of confiscation which applied as such laws usually do, to all persons living in the enemy country

Great Britain protested against this act in the language:

Her Majesty's Government have received urgent representations from parties in this country connected in business with, and having establishments in, the Northern States of America, of the hardship and injustice which this act of the Confederate States, if applied to British subjects domiciled in the United States, can not fall to inflict upon them.

Now, whatever may have been the abstract rule of the law of nations on this point in former times, the instances of its application in the manner contemplated by the act of the Confederate Congress in modern and more civilized times are so rare and have been so generally condemned that it may almost be said to have become obsolete. The conclusion expressed by Wheaton on this subject (Elements, 6th ed., p. 369) is as follows:

"It appears, then, to be the modern rule of international usage that property of the enemy found within the territory of the belligerent State, or debts due to his subjects by the Government or individuals at the commencement of hostilities, are not liable to be seized and confiscated as prize of war.

(4) THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR.

(4) THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR.

There was no confiscation by Congress. In the treaty there was a mutual relinquishment of claims, each Government agreeing to take care of the claims of its own nationals, and this has been erroneously cited as a precedent for taking this property. It clearly is not. The doctrine of nonconfiscation of private property on land belonging to enemy nationals rests upon the theory that the property was brought here in reliance upon our hospitality and justice. A mere vague, unliquidated claim growing out of some alleged wrong to a Spanish citizen, only enforceable through diplomatic correspondence, stands upon an entirely different footing.

(5) THE WORLD WAR.

The very enactment of the sections of the "trading with the enemy act," providing for taking over enemy property, was the announcement of a policy of respecting the property of enemy nationals.

A. THE LANGUAGE OF THE ACT.

The "trading with the enemy act" provides that the property shall be held in trust and that-after the end of the war any claim of any enemy or ally of enemy to any money or other property received and held by the Allen Property Custodian or deposited in the United States Treasury shall be settled as Congress shall direct.

B .- IN THE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

1. HOUSE.

Moreover, the preservation of enemy property by governmental agencies is to the best interest of the enemy subject himself. The fortune of trade in time of war renders precarious the solvency of debtors or holders of property, and the assumption of the debt or custody of the property by the Government gives the enemy or ally of enemy the best possible protection. (H. Rept. No. S5, 65th Cong., 1st sess.)

2. SENATE.

Under the old rule warring nations did not respect the property rights of their enemies, but a more enlightened opinion prevails at the present time, and it is now thought to be entirely proper to use the property of enemies without confiscating it. * * In other words, we fight the enemy with his own property during the war but we do not permanently confiscate it. This temperary conscription of enemy property is also conservation of enemy property, for it takes the property from the hands of debtors or agents, as to whose solvency the enemy would otherwise be obliged to assume the risk, and it invests the property in the safest security in the world—bonds of the United States—or deposits it in Government depositories. (8. Rept. No. 113, 65th Cong., 1st sess.)

C. DEBATES.

Mr. Hill. Then, as I understand it, it is practical confiscation now, but subject to the courtesy and kindness of Congress after the war is over, so far as actual money is concerned, but giving a legal right to recover in case of patents.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Not confiscation at all. The Government will act. if I may use the legal term, as bailee. It will take this property and invest it in the best security in the world. It will take property which does not belong to debtors in this country, and who may not be solvent at the end of the war, and hold it for final disposition after the war. In other words, the Government undertakes to do by these enemy creditors better than the resident debtors or such emeny creditors could do for themselves.

Mr. HILL. * * Why not permit it to be placed in the bill and not say, as this bill does, that we will invest it for our own benefit, and perhaps by and by, after five years from now, after the war is over, Congress may take some action for their relief?

Mr. MONTAGUE. My individual views are that by impounding this property it is made to serve the interests of America in this great struggle, and at the same time its final and honest payment to the creditor is made more secure. (Vol. 55, Part V, Cong. Recerd, 65th Cong., 1st sess., pp. 4844 and 4845.)

D. STATEMENT OF ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN.

Cong., 1st sess., pp. 4844 and 4845.)

D. STATEMENT OF ALLEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN.

Having in mind these two provisions, this office has recommended in a public hearing before the proper congressional committee that legislation be enacted as indicated above, which is a preliminary step in the altimate return of all of this property, bearing in mind the time-honored principle that private property of citizens is not to be utilized for the payment of national debts. If the legislation suggested is enacted into law, there will be ample property left to properly guarantee the settlement of American claims in accordance with the terms of the peace resolution. (Annual report of the Alien Property Custodian for the year 1922, p. 8.)

Mr. Lea. Mr. Miller, suppose that Congress should now definitely determine that it will not take private property for the satisfaction of claims. Would you then know of any reason why Congress should any longer hold this property?

Mr. Miller, No; if that policy is arrived at there would not be any further reason why we should. (Hearings before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, 67th Cong., 4th sess., p. 17.)

E. STATEMENT OF DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

(a) THE SECRETARY.

Up to this time, Congress has not committed itself to a confiscatory policy. (Letter, Secretary Hughes to Senator Nelson, July 29, 1922, House Hearings, p. 301.)

(b) MR. CARR.

Mr. Sanders. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I lay that foundation about the State Department and the Congress, Mr. Carr, so that it may be clearly understood what I am driving at. If there is any policy up to date with reference to a confiscation, or any partial confiscation, it is to be found in the resolution of the Congress.

Mr. Carr. That is true.

Mr. Sanders. And at most that can be regarded only as a reservation of the rights to confiscate.

Mr. Carr. To the extent of these claims?

Mr. Carr. To the extent of these claims.

Mr. Carr. I do not understand that there is any policy whatsoever of confiscation. Certainly I do not understand that the Secretary of State would favor a policy of confiscation. The Secretary of State has been merely carrying out what Congress itself required should be done looking to the early settlement of the matter and the protection of the interests of the American claimants.

Y.—The American Policy of Inviolability of Private Property on Land Belonging to Enemy Nationals Should be Continued.

From an economic standpoint. American interest dictates

From an economic standpoint, American interest dictates that course. American investments in foreign countries amount to approximately five and one-half billions of dollars, according to a letter written to me on January 20, 1923, by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Our foreign trade touches every country in the world. We need foreign invest-ments here in order to furnish facilities for our great export trade. It would pay many times over to pursue the course that would inspire the greatest confidence in those whose investments we seek.

But from the standpoint of national morality and self-respect we must not retain the property. While the Government has very properly retained the funds and property for such reasonable time as was necessary for legislation to be passed to turn it back in an orderly way, nevertheless an indefinite retention of the property for the purpose of security or pledge in favor of claims of our own nationals against Germany, or as a supposed means of pressure to accomplish the satisfaction of such claims, would amount to partial confiscation and would be repugnant to the most enlightened principles of international law.

The bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Underwood (S. 3852) must never be agreed to by this body. My interpretation of the trading with the enemy act, its various amendments, the Knox-Porter resolution, the Versailles treaty, and the Berlin treaty, which confirms the Knox-Porter resolution and preserves the rights accruing to us by the terms of the Versailles treaty, leads me to the conclusion that we have merely preserved the right, if we should see fit to exercise it, to confiscate the property held by the Alien Property Cus-todian and have left the determination of the American policy in that regard to the Congress of the United States.

The establishment of the general principle of the inviolability of the right of private property under international law is as important to international trade as was the inviolability of private property secured by the Constitution of the United States to domestic trade.

This Government is basing its refusal to recognize Russia and Mexico upon the failure of these Governments to respect the rights of property. It is therefore extremely important, in respect to property situated in the United States which may not perchance be under the protection of our Constitution, that we scrupulously give it the protection which by our assertions it ought to have.

We declared war because other nations destroyed the lives and property of American citizens in violation of international law. In the prosecution of that war we poured out our treasure and the lifeblood of our sons. It was not in vain. The world in the centuries to come will remember we were not too proud to fight and will know that we shall not count the cost when confronted with like violations of our sacred rights.

Our cost to date in treasure is above $30,000,000,000, and our cost in life is over 75,000 souls.

Shall we, in the aftermath and as a part of that great world tragedy, for a few paltry millions pursue a course which is inconsistent with our national honor and self-respect?

Our duty seems so clear that we ought not to hesitate. fact that by our violation of duty we may enhance the interest of certain claimants who are American citizens ought not to affect the performance of the duty. It is easy to do right when we are not tempted to do wrong, but our fidelity to justice ought not to be shaken by temptation. By refusing to yield to that temptation we shall give stronger evidence of our national courage. The world is now threatened with Bolshevism, whose very sands of foundation are disregard of property rights. If America speaks out in ringing tones for the rights of property, so sacred to the progress of society, the whole civilized world will hear, and what America says will then be indelibly written into international law for the guidance of civilization in the centuries that are to come.

Mr. Chairman, in voting for this measure returning a portion of this property and even in voting against amendments providing for complete return I do so with the firm conviction that this property should all be now returned, and that the passage of the measure in its present form is the nearest approach to that result possible with only seven days of Congress remaining.

America must never apply this property to the payment of American claims, but must see that the just claims are paid in some other way. [Applause.]

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDX].

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, if this were a proposition depending upon the inability of our Government because of its financial strength to pay in full what we owe, I should favor a proposition by which we might pay 10 per cent new, postponing the final payment to a future date; but we owe this property to certain people who were in our midst as residents here, or who invested money in property here under our laws and under our invitation, as well as under the specific terms of our treaty with Germany at the time they came here. They invested their money here—and there was a guaranty for them under that treaty, and under our law and international law, that in ease of war with Germany we would protect their property. Suppose it is true that Germany guaranteed to our citizens the same thing; and that is true. Suppose it is also true that we recognize now that Germany is bankrupt and can not or will not keep her promise, will not pay what she owes to American citizens; still I assert that that does not give us the right to repudiate our obligation to individuals or to deny or to refuse to pay what we, as a people, owe to the German citizen under our guaranty and under our laws. It is the same thing as if A owes a debt to B and D owed a debt to C. When it comes time for A to settle his debt to B he says, am responsible, I have got the money, but C, a friend of mine, has a debt against D and D is bankrupt, and I am going to cancel my debt to you by setting it off against the debt that D owes to C." We propose here to pay the obligation that our Government owes to German nationals who came here under our laws by setting that debt off against what Germany, a bankrupt, owes to some of our citizens. The proposition is immoral, it is a clear repudiation of an admitted obligation. And for Members to declare that they do not intend to confiscate property while they are in the very act of confiscating it seems to me simple hypocrisy and false pretense. They say they may hold this property 50 years until its owners are dead, and yet they say they will not confiscate it.

Suppose we assume that Germany never can or never will pay what she may owe to some of our citizens. Then the principle embodied in this law is that we will hold thereafter the property of Germans here as security, and it can not be security to be realized out of unless it be sold.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I will yield.
Mr. MONDELLI Just who is it that proposes what the gentleman has just stated? Just who is it that proposes that we shall confiscate these properties?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Why, if the gentleman does not know that when you hold property as security you can only make it security by the sale of it in case of default in payment. If he does not know that the very assertion of the right to hold it as security is an assertion of the right of appropriation.

Mr. MONDELL. Then, when the Democratic administration took this property over, by taking it over the Democratic administration said that they proposed its confiscation?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I am glad the gentleman made that statement, because it was asserted here yesterday on that side that we had declared the original taking over was wrong. Never so. But when our Nation got at war with Germany it was right; it was our duty to do two things to protect our people in the stress of war, so we took over these properties to keep them from being used for the benefit of the German Government during the war and also to protect it while the war

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. HARDY of Texas. The declaration on this side was Mr. HARDY of Texas. we took the property for these two purposes-that is, to prevent it being used against us and to preserve and protect it for its owners. I will yield to the gentleman, Mr. SNYDER.

Mr. SNYDER. The fact that we are paying back 92 per cent of these claims under this legislation-that is, 92 per cent in number of the claims—is not that a very fair indication that we intend to pay all of them?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. If you intend to do it, why do not you pay them; you are able to do it.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman knows as well as every other gentleman it can not be done at this time.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Ah, I know no such thing. I know the Government of the United States proposes now by a bill to pay hundreds of millions of dollars out to help certain interests. I know we have got money enough to pay our just debts. We took this property to protect it and prevent its hostile use, and now the war is ended. We are obligated to return the property, we acknowledge it, but we say we will not return it yet.

Mr. SNYDER. But we are paying 92 per cent of the claims so held.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. May I have one minute additional? want to answer the last suggestion.

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield the gentleman one additional minute. Mr. HARDY of Texas. We are paying 92 per cent in number, and politically that may be wise, because you may thereby get 92 per cent of the German vote affected.

Mr. SNYDER. I hope that is so, but I doubt it.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. I do not know whether it will or not, but that is the reason, or one of the reasons, why you pay these little claims and refuse to pay the big ones. If you are honest you will pay both. For this Government to repudiate its obligations in whole or in part-repudiation is as dark, as damnable when perpetrated by a government as it is when perpetrated by an individual under any excuse whatsoever.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Would it not be better to pay a certain percentage of these claims rather than not to pay any?

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, as one of those who have always held, and have frequently stated, that whatever our rights may be under international law we never shall confiscate the property of allens taken during the war, I am a good deal surprised at the sudden interest evinced by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN], who up to this good hour has been entirely indifferent to the whole matter but who now insists that we return, without regard to existing conditions, all of this property. If anybody in authority under the American flag has by direct action or inference held or suggested that America will confiscate such property, it was the Democratic administration and Democratic Members who, not protesting the attitude of the administration, agreed to it. It was a Democratic administration that took the property, and it was right that they should, although they went far afield in doing so. It was under a Democratic administration that the questionable practices occurred which have reflected on the fair name of America in our handling of this property. It was a Democratic administration that negotiated the treaty under which this property might be confiscated. Now, I am not charging my Democratic colleagues with being favorable to or in approval of such action, but up to the end of their administration, that lasted more than two years and a half after the signing of the armistice, no voice on that side of the aisle was raised for the return of a dollar of this property and no word came from the administration proposing it.

Mr. RAYBURN. The Democrats did not have the House of Representatives until immediately after the signing of the

Mr. MONDELL. The gentlemen were not necessarily speech-less because they did not have a majority, but they did not speak. But now, when we are proposing to do the fair, the just, and the reasonable thing, gentlemen insist we return all You want us to do this, notwithstanding the the property. effect it might have on the mixed commission now sitting or on the European situation.

With Europe on the verge of an explosion and conditions existing under which everything done here is magnified in the minds of those people over there, the gentleman proposes action which would be interpreted in Germany as an entire reversal of American opinion and approval in toto of the present German attitude.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MONDELL. I have only a brief time.

I am glad that all the gentlemen on that side are not trying to play politics with this tremendously important question. I am glad that some of the gentlemen on that side-a considerable number, I hope-will join with us in doing this thing which should have been done long ago, and in doing it in a reasonable way, returning the property of three-quarters of those who have property with our Government; relieving those of limited means, doing as much as can be crystallized into action by the Alien Property Custodian's office between now and the meeting of the Congress in December.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MONDELL. I am glad there are a few gentlemen on that side who are willing to take the same patriotic attitude toward this problem that we on our side assumed toward all the problems of the war. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has expired.

RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Garrett] five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, it has remained for the gentleman from Wyoming to utter the first partisan words that I have heard in the course of this discussion.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Yes, Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman could not have been listening when the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Hardy] made his speech just a moment ago.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennesse. Oh, I believe the gentleman from New York did ask a question, which caused the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY] to answer. I am sorry I had forgotten the question of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SNYDER. I am sure the gentleman overlooked that.
Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The test of the pudding is in the chewing of the string. The gentleman from Wyoming. speaking, I assume, for his party-because he made party references throughout-undertook to leave the impression that that side of the House would stand for a return of this property and against confiscation. In a few moments the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] will be voted upon, and gentlemen on that side of the House will have the opportunity of letting the country know how they stand upon that matter.

Why is it, since this is a question of principle, that we should not return all if we return any? The gentleman speaks of the fact that the Democratic administration was in power at the time the property was seized. Quite so. But would any gentle-man on that side have had the Democratic administration act differently? Oh, but the gentleman from Wyoming said that during the first Congress after the armistice had been signed no Democratic voice was raised upon this subject. There could be no Democratic voice raised here in any authoritative way

Mr. MONDELL. A Democratic President was

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Because the Republicans controlled the Congress, and by reason of the machinations of those who wrote round robins and who were willing to destroy the peace of the world in order to defeat the Democratic Party, the efforts of the Democratic President were nullified by the Republican Senate.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Yes, Mr. MONDELL. Was the Democratic President without voice, or simply without inclination in regard to this matter?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The Democratic President had wrought out a great treaty looking to the settlement upon terms of justice of all these questions, and that treaty was held up in the treaty-ratifying body by a power that was willing to send the world to damnation if that would hold the Republican Party in power right there?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman said that the Democratic President negotiated a treaty on terms of justice. The gentleman knows that one of the provisions of that treaty contemplated the confiscation of this property? [Applause.]

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The gentleman does not know anything of the sort. It did not contemplate the confiscation of property. No administration of this country at any time, any where, ever committed itself to a principle of confiscation of property. [Applause.] That which was done in the treaty, as the gentleman from Wyoming well knows, was that it should be held, not for the purpose of the payment of private claims or of Government claims

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman two additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for two additional minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question? Everybody except the gentleman from Wyoming knows that for four years the Republicans have been in charge of the Speaker, of all committees, of the organization in the House, and of all legislation, and have not made any attempt to return this property.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. No; not until just now.

Mr. BLANTON. Not until just now. Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. And then return small amounts, about 93 per cent of the number but a small per cent

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. It has taken about four years to find out where it was hid. [Laughter.]

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I do not understand what the gentleman means by that.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. It has taken four years for the present administration to find out where the last administration had put that question.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. What does the gentleman mean by that?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I mean that all kinds of sales and contracts had been entered into by the Alien Property Cus-todian for the disposal of this property. It was almost impossible to find out where it was and to whom it belonged,

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. You have found out, as I understand it now, where it is up to $10,000. Have you not found out anything about the other? [Laughter.]

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. It has taken a good deal of time and effort to do it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennesee. What is the difference in principle between $10,000 and about $10,000?

Mr. DENISON. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Gar-RETT made a statement which I think he did not intend to make. He said the treaty of Versailles did not give the allied Governments the power to use the property of German nationals for the payment of private claims. Let me read this and see if he does not think he is wrong.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Oh, no. The gentleman is mistaken. I did not say that. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] stated that it gave the power of confiscation. I stated that there was never any intention in the treaty of Versailles of confiscating this property. [Applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Longworth having. taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message in writing from the President of the United States was presented by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

On February 13, 1923: H. R. 18696. An act making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924. and for other purposes;

On February 14, 1923:

H. R. 855. An act for the relief of Fred G. Leith, United States Navy

H. R. 10211. An act authorizing an appropriation to meet proportionate expenses of providing a drainage system for Plute Indian lands in the State of Nevada within the Newlands reclamation project of the Reclamation Service;

H. R. 10817. An act to amend section 100 of the judicial code of the United States;

H. R. 11389. An act for the relief of Robert Guy Robinson; and

H. R. 13593. An act making appropriations for the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes.

On February 15, 1923:

H. R. 6204. An act to grant the military target range of Lincoln County, Okla., to the city of Chandler, Okla., and re-serving the right to use for military and aviation purposes, and

H. R. 12887. An act granting a pension to Jacob F. Rosen-berger.

On February 16, 1923:

H. R. 5224. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to certify to the Secretary of the Interior, for restoration to the public domain, lands in the State of Louisiana not needed for naval purposes

On February 17, 1923: H. R. 12007. An act providing for the conveyance of certain land to the city of Boise, Idaho, and from the city of Boise, Idaho, to the United States, and

H. R. 13046. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to convey to the city of Wilmington, N. C., marine hospital reservation.

On February 19, 1923:

H. R. 13760. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of drawless bridges across a certain portion of the Charles River, in the State of Massachusetts," approved November 14, 1921.

On February 20, 1923: H. J. Res. 440. Joint resolution to satisfy the award rendered against the United States by the arbitral tribunal established under the special agreement concluded June 30, 1921, between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Norway, and

H. R. 13926. An act making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes.

On February 21, 1923:

H. R. 369. An act for the relief of the owner of Old Dominion Pier A; H. R. 7583. An act for the relief of Henry Peters; and H. R. 13351. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, to deliver to the Daughters of the American Revolution of the State of South Carolina the silver service which was used upon the battleship South Carolina.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON].

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, in the interest of accuracy I want to read a paragraph of the treaty of Versailles. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Garrert] did make the statement, although he may not remember it, that the treaty of Versailles did not authorize the allied Governments to apply the property of German nationals seized by the allied Governments to the payment of the claims of nationals of the allied Governments. The section I have reference to and which I wish now to read to the gentleman from Tennessee is as follows:

Tennessee is as follows:

All property, rights, and interests of German nationals, within the territory of any allied or associated power and the net proceeds of their sale, liquidation, or other dealing therewith may be charged by that allied or associated power in the first place with payment of amounts due in respect of claims by the nationals of that allied or associated power with regard to their property rights and interests, including companies and associations in which they are interested, in German territory, or debts owing to them by German nationals, and with payment of claims growling out of acts committed by the German Government or by any German authorities since July 31, 1914, and before that allied or associated power entered into the war. The amount of such claims may be assessed by an arbitrator appointed by Mr. Gustave Ador, if he is willing, or if no such appointment is made by him, by an arbitrator appointed by the mired arbitral tribunal provided for in section 6. They may be charged in the second place with payment of the amounts due in respect of claims by the nationals of such allied or associated power with regard to their property, rights, and interests in the territory of other enemy powers, in so far as those claims are otherwise unsatisfied.

This treaty provided in positive, direct, and unmistakable

This treaty provided in positive, direct, and unmistakable terms that the property of German citizens in the allied countries might be applied by the allied Governments to the payment of the claims of their nationals against the German Government. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT] said that the President signed a treaty whose provisions were just. Now, I may say that my own view is that that is not confiscation. I differ with the gentleman from Indiana and with a number of others on this side, and I think that a study of international law on this subject will show that it is not confiscation within the proper meaning of that term.

Mr. COCKRAN. What is it—appropriation?

Mr. DENISON. It is an appropriation of the property by the German Government.

Mr. COCKRAN. By the German Government? Mr. DENISON. An appropriation by the German Government of the property of her nationals in this country for the payment of the German debt to the nationals of this country, and the German constitution gives that Government the right to do that Mr. RAYBURN. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this is the most astounding proposition that has been presented by any committee since I have been a Member of the House. The committee expects and desires us in a few hours of debate to violate a well-established principle of international law that has been built up for a thousand years.

Ever since the Crusades, step by step, this principle of protecting enemy property has been developed, and in the last century the United States Government has led the way. We have been the foremost champions of this very principle that the committee is asking Congress to vitiate at least in part. Why, what is this property? It is the property of German citizens taken over in accordance with international law during the war so that it could not be used against this country, and to be held in trust until the end of the war. But in accordance with every principle of international law that property should have been returned within a reasonable time after the armistice, and it certainly should have been returned after the signing of the Porter-Knox peace resolution. This property belonged to private citizens of Germany who invested in our industries or to those who came over here and accumulated wealth under the protection of our laws. Suppose, for instance, this property had been seized in Germany. Suppose German valuables, gold and silver, had been seized by the army of occupation. What would the world have said if our army of occupation had taken that wealth and kept it until the claims of our citizens against the German Government had been settled? Where is there any distinction? This property was taken over from peaceful citizens, and that would have been taken over from a conquered country. Imagine what a howl there would have been if we had done such a thing as that.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. No; I do not yield. Why, the United States of America have gone much further than this. They instructed their delegates to the first Hague Conference and to the second Hague Conference to support the proposition that enemy property should not be seized on neutral boats upon the high seas. I myself believe that such a policy is un-tenable, because a government at war should be permitted to bring pressure upon an enemy government and not permit an enemy government to use these goods for its own advantage. But here we have a clean-cut issue whether Congress will uphold a long-established and recognized principle of international law or whether it will emasculate or ignore the principle. I resent the speech of the majority leader trying to inject partisan politics into this proposition, because it is one of principle and nothing else. Either you believe that we should give back this property in accordance with international law or you do not believe in the principle that has been built up through a thousand years and adopted by every civilized country. A vote against this amendment is a vote against the hopes and aspirations of civilization itself. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Dempsey].

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, much learning, much research, much eloquence have been displayed in the course of this debate upon questions of international law, and we have harked back also to an ancient treaty with Prussia. The real question here does not involve international law, and for a very obvious and simple reason. Parties have the right to take their case out of the binding effect of a particular law if they desire to do so, and this country, acting through its Secretary of State, negotiated a treaty with Germany in August, 1921. In that treaty Germany represented all those for whom these eloquent pleas have been We did not have the right to go back of the returns and ask Germany whether she in fact represented her nationals. When she said, "We represent them and act for them," as a matter of international law we were bound to accept her say-We did accept it, and we negotiated a treaty with her by which she waived any right to the return of this property until her debts to us were paid. Now, will the gentleman say that the Secretary of State was not performing a great public service when he negotiated that treaty? We had piled up a debt of $42,000,000,000 during the war. We were not asking a cent by way of reparations.

All of the other allies were receiving island possessions, were receiving pay in property and in money. France to-day is occupying the Ruhr to collect Germany's indebtedness to her. Our expenses were greater than any of our allies, and we did not ask a cent. Why should not we say, having all that in mind, "You at least ought to pay to our citizens the small sum you owe them before we return this property." Was it not natural and proper for Germany, seeing the generous course we were taking, to make the reply and the contract which she did? When she made that contract it superseded all other contracts, it superseded international law, it took the place of it. That was the agreement between the parties, and it superseded all else. These debts which Germany owes us or our citizens amount to a small sum; they will not exceed $15,000,000. We have $350,000,000 in money and property, besides $200,000,000 in ships, perhaps $550,000,000 in all, and they speak of that as if it was a reason why we should return all of it. Why, it is going to be easy for Germany to live up to the terms of that contract. We have $550,000,000 and we can return a great part of it, and Germany can without difficulty of any kind pay our nationals the trifling sum of $15,000,000 which they owe us. We could in good conscience compel Germany to live up to the terms of the treaty that she made with us, a treaty made in times of peace, when Germany was a free agent, three years after the end of the war; but we say by this bill that we are not going to exact the full terms of the treaty, we are going to return 92 per cent in number of all the claims you have, we are going to return to you $45,000,000 in value, we will give your nationals the net income of all their property in our hands, and we do that despite the fact that we have Germany's agreement to the contrary. [Applause.] This is kindness, not simply justice. It is a long step toward the complete adjustment of all the claims of German citizens who had their property seized. It affords complete relief to all those of small means, to those in most need of relief, and it gives their net incomes to those of larger means. The claims of our own citizens against Germany will no doubt soon be adjusted, being small in amount, and we will be in position to close this whole matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COCKBAN].

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Chairman, I hesitate to take the floor at this moment, it being quite impossible in seven minutes to explain with any degree of clearness the reasons which impel me with all the energy at my command to support the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]. But in these few minutes I may be able to state the issue before us, as I understand it, even though I am denied sufficient time to make clear the momentous consequences which in my opinion will follow our action on it.

This debate, it seems to me, has run into the domain of attorneyship rather than that of statesmanship. venture to remind gentlemen, considering a dispute between individual citizens about ownership of property, but a great question of public and international policy. We are to determine whether, in disposing of certain property taken from enemy aliens by this Government, we will obey the humane principles by which this civilization has mitigated in some degree the worst horrors of war, or follow the immeasurably harsher methods which all other civilizations have sanctioned and maintained. Obviously this matter of universal importance and capital gravity should not be decided according to legalistic methods of interpreting written documents but in the high spirit of statesmanship which should govern a great nation in the exercise of its sovereignty.

But even on the basis of attorneyship, I doubt very much whether any gentleman who is a lawyer would in his own conscience attempt to justify an invasion or disturbance of individual property rights by anything contained in that so-called treaty with Germany. Sir, that was not a treaty. It called treaty with Germany. Sir, that was not a treaty. It was a capitulation. Everybody knows that when she executed it Germany was in no condition to refuse any demand made upon her by this country. She was in no sense free to decide her own course concerning the different stipulations she was required to make. She could but do whatever we prescribed. And surely I could appeal to my good friend from New York, Judge Dempsey, with his large experience on the bench, to tell us if an agreement affecting property between private parties extorted under such conditions came before him in a court of law whether he would not interpose the equitable powers of the court to forbid enforcement of it.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCKRAN. I can not yield; I have only a few minutes. I want to say now that if anybody wants to ask me a question in his own time I will gladly answer. But I must insist on occupying the brief time allotted to me in placing my own views

Mr. Chairman, the task before us, I repeat, is to determine the course which the American Nation, in the exercise of its sovereignty, will pursue with respect to property taken from nationals of an enemy conquered in battle, prostrate and helpless at our feet.

What disposition will we make of it? Our conclusion, whatever it may be, there is none to question or dispute, at least none who can question it to any effect. We have Germany by the throat; in a grasp so firm that she is utterly incapable of resistance.

But there is one force that has always controlled America in the exercise of its sovereignty; and that is justice-justice as the Christian revelation has established it.

A condition has now arisen in which we must be governed either by these American principles and traditions of justice or revert to the ruthless methods which governed war under all other civilizations; the methods of væ victis—" woe to the vanquished.'

Few Members of this body, I believe, would openly profess willingness to disregard or nullify the rules and limitations which our civilization has imposed on methods of waging war. But there are several gentlemen-I must confess I have little patience with them-who tell us that while they abhor confiscation of private property seized in war, yet as a matter of prudence they will not vote at the present time to return more than about 10 per cent of this particular property. Why this limitation on their capacity for virtuous conduct? Because they say it is not feasible to secure legislation directing return of the whole.

Mr. Chairman, I have never heard drop from the lips of an American citizen a confession so painful. Why is the return of all this property not feasible? Because, forsooth, these gentlemen believe that the Representatives in Congress of the American people—the depositaries of American sovereignty—can not be induced to do full justice, while they may be persuaded or cajoled into declaring a 10 per cent dividend on justice. Surely it must be obvious that if Congress or the American people have the right to hold this property even for a week after the estab-lishment of peace they can hold it for a century. Holding it for any purpose, for any length of time beyond which regard for the public security requires, is an exercise of ownership over it. And that is confiscation, even though the confiscator may choose afterwards to return a part of it.

Mr. Chairman, I am invoking now no particular provision of any treaty. I am discussing the duty which a great Christian State—the greatest of all Christian States—owes to Christian civilization.

But even if we are to dispose of this matter in the light of specific international agreements, I would remind the committee of the treaty made nearly 100 years ago between Prussia and this country, which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HUDDLESTON] read yesterday. In the light of its stipulations, immunity of this property from confiscation is not a question of general international law. It is not even a question of Christian usage. It is an absolute right, specifically granted and recognized by this country in a solemn treaty negotiated in a time of peace, when each party to it was absolutely free to accept or reject its conditions. And a treaty made under such conditions can not be annulled or displaced by the terms of a capitulation, a submission, or a surrender by a vanquished country to its conqueror, especially when that conqueror was itself one of the parties to it.

But, Mr. Chairman, above and beyond all questions of specific agreements or treaties is the overshadowing importance of guarding and preserving what Christian civilization has accomplished in mollifying the horrors of war. Among the most important of these is the immunity of private property from seizure or destruction. This, together with immunity of noncombatants from enslavement or death, are the two most important features of the contributions made by Christianity to the civilization of mankind. Under all ancient civilizations the rule governing war was væ victis. The vanquished was entitled to no consideration of any kind. Not merely was all his property seized but he himself was killed or made captive and sold into slavery. By making universal the law of chivalry which held noncombatants immune from injury to their property, their liberty, or their lives, and which not merely forbade taking the life of a man captured in battle but made protection of his captive from injury of any kind the first duty of the captor, Christianity worked a profound revolution in the methods of warfare which proved to be of incalculable value to the civilization of mankind. And these humane principles, broadened and confirmed by the experience of mankind, became, mainly under the leadership of America, the international law of Christian civilization, that law which has for one of its cardinal features the principle that private property must never be destroyed or confiscated. [Applause.]

Immunity of private property in war will be endangered, if not destroyed, should this property be withheld from its owners. under any prefense or for any length of time, now that peace is

The late war has wiped away much of the progress which civilization has made in robbing conflict of its worst bar-Let us at least hold fast that which remains. Let us not suffer anything to impair the full measure of security which every private individual should enjoy in the possession of his property. The American people have always struggled to extend these principles of humanity. Let us not suffer anything to be done here which will not merely impede the course of that beneficent tide but stop it, and even reverse it.

Before this war the American people contended strenuously in many international conferences and congresses to make private property at sea as immune from seizure as private prop-If the amendment of the gentleman from Texas be defeated, it will be a proclamation to the world that not merely has America ceased to contend for extension to merchant ships at sea of immunity from seizure but has actually endangered if not destroyed the immunity now enjoyed by private property on land in time of war. And this surely would be not merely a grave discredit to ourselves but a calamity of measureless proportions to the whole human race.

Mr. Chairman, I am not speaking now through regard for the German nationals who are the legitimate owners of this property. I speak only and solely for the credit and welfare, aye, for the future safety, of the American Nation. She can not directly or indirectly seize or countenance seizure of this private property and maintain unsolled the glorious record of successful efforts for the humanizing of war, which she has established for over a century. America has longed passionately to make war infrequent, if she can not wholly end it. Some of our prominent citizens have been heard to urge that That, indeed, is an extravagant conception. we outlaw war. War is itself outlawry; and you can not outlaw outlawry any more than it is outlawed already. But we can hope to hold secure the advances which have been made in removing from war many features of its savagery. And one step, a most important step, in that direction we can take here and now by guarding and preserving the rights of these German nationals to this property seized in the last war. At least we can see to it that these rights are not impaired or destroyed by anything this House will do. [Applause.] Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I yield four and a half minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HUSTED].

Mr. Chairman, the Berlin treaty was entered into three years after the war was over. It was not entered into under duress or coercion. America under such circumstances never has and America never will exercise duress or coercion, The provisions of the treaty of Berlin were thoroughly understood by both parties to the treaty and were freely and willingly accepted by both parties to the treaty. One of the provisions contained in section 5 was that the property of German nationals taken in America during the war should be held by us until some arrangement had been made for the payment of the claims of American nationals. I believe that we are doing exactly what we ought to do in the premises, exactly what we are under moral obligation to do in the premises. We are returning to the Germans all of the money that we can spare, without prejudice and peril to the rights of American nationals. We are giving every one of these German claimants an amount up to at least $10,000 in full satisfaction or on account of the principal of his claim. In addition to that, we are giving the full amount of the net income derived from these trusts to them, and we are holding the balance until some adjustment has been made for the payment of the American claims. If that is not justice, if that is not right, if that is not a fair settlement under all of the circumstances, especially considering the shocking circumstances under which some of these claims arose, then I do not know what a fair settlement is. I do not yield to any man in my wish to have America in the future, in the present case, as she always has in the past, adhere with the greatest scrupulosity to international practice of high moral authority, but here we have put these provisions in a treaty, and that treaty must not be disregarded. It must be carried out in justice to American claimants. When it comes to a question of protecting American claimants I think we would be remiss in our duty if we did not use the means which the treaty between the nations has provided.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, if the motion of the gentleman from Texas prevails, we agree to turn back all of the property now in the possession of the Alien Property Custodian. If we vote down his amendment we permit the return of a substantial amount to each and every claimant but retain a sufficient amount whereby the payment of the claims of American citizens will be secured. In drawing up this bill we have only sought to carry out terms and provisions set forth first in the treaty of Versailles and, secondly, in the treaty of Berlin. As was said yesterday, and has been repeated here to-day, those treaties made specific provision for the retention of this property here in the United States until the claims of American citizens had either been satisfied or that Congress had directed the return of the property. If we adopt the gentleman's amendment we tell these American claimants that, so far as we are concerned, they shall not have their day in court; that their Government will not permit them to satisfy any judgment that they may obtain for the payment of these claims. I want to see these American claims paid, and paid in full; and if you leave this bill the way it was drawn, eventually our countrymen who have been victims of the perfidy of Germany will be able to recover that which is justly due them.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I am sorry, but I can not yield at the present time. Here is the situation: These American claimants have claims aggregating millions upon millions of dollars. It has always been my idea that the first duty of a government is to protect the lives and the property of its citizens. [Applause.]

As far back as 1785 we negotiated a treaty with Germany wherein Germany agreed, in the event that she became engaged in war with another power, to treat our citizens fairly and in accordance with well-recognized principles of international law. The debate yesterday showed that that treaty was still in full force and effect when the World War broke out in 1914. Germany proceeded to violate its obligations and destroyed the lives and property of our citizens. The damages run into the millions. Are we now to tell them that the Government has abandoned them? Are we going to tell them that we had the means of securing the payments of these claims but relinquished them before they were satisfied? Mr. Chairman, it is unthinkable; it is surprising that any such proposal should be submitted.

I am astounded at the statement of the gentleman from New York [Mr. COCKRAN]. He says that we obtained the signature of Germany to the treaty of Versailles and the treaty of Berlin by duress. In other words, he says that we forced Germany to agree to the provisions of these treaties which hold this property for the securing of the payment of American claims. Of course the vanquished in a war are subdued by force, but is that any reason why agreements therein entered into should be repudiated?

Let us look at this proposition. When we met Germany at Versailles she knew that she had destroyed the lives and the property of our citizens in violation of her own agreement voluntarily entered into. Our commissioners must have told her that. In any event, they participated in securing benefits of these provisions. When the guilt was brought home to Germany in this manner she then agreed to make restitution, in so far as restitution could be made, for having violated a contract that had been in force and effect for years and which contract she had voluntarily entered into. This is the first time that I have ever heard the defense of duress invoked seriously in a situation of this kind. If this is to be carried out, then some objection can be raised against every treaty that is entered into by the vanquished party following a war.

Now, then, if we agree that it is the business of a govern-ment to look after the lives and the property of its own citizens, let me ask, who is going to pay the claims of these American citizens if we relinquish this security? In the treaty of Versailles Germany obligated herself to pay millions upon millions of dollars in reparation for wrongs committed by her. The Reparations Commission provided for in the treaty of Versailles have a first lien, so to speak, upon the assets of Germany. We all know the present condition of Germany. If we relinquish this security it will be decades and decades before American claimants get what is coming to them, even if Germany in the best of faith seeks to pay them. arations Commission will get everything that Germany can possibly spare for years to come.

This being the case, if we return this property now, and all of it, as the gentleman from Texas desires to do, we place the Government in a position where it must itself, in honor, pay the claims of its citizens. Do you want the Government to do this? Do you want to let Germany go free and draw out of Uncle Sam's Treasury the necessary moneys with which to pay these claims? [Applause.]

Again let me refer to these earlier German treaties-treaties of amity and commerce, as they were designated. They provided, in the event that either of the contracting parties should be engaged in war with another power, for the free intercourse and commerce of the citizens of the party remaining neutral with the belligerent powers. Free vessels were to make free That same freedom was to be accorded to the persons on board those vessels. No sinkings were to be allowed, and damages were to be properly assessed to the owners of cargoes for losses produced by unwarranted searches and seizures. "Women and children" were to be unmolested in their persons and property. This treaty was in effect for decades, and during that time was kept by both parties. Germany commenced breaking it shortly following her entry into the war by violating almost every part and portion of the specific articles that have been referred to in this debate.

Let me remind you of what happened to an American vessel in 1915 off the coast of Ireland. The Lusitania was torpedoed by a German submarine and sent down with 112 American citizens on board. Most of these were women and children. Among them was an American mother with four Americanborn children, who were going over to join their father, whose business had theretofore carried him abroad. They were all drowned. It was all in gross violation of these earlier treatiestreaties wherein Germany obligated herself not to molest the lives of any of our citizens upon the high seas. These treaties Germany treated as mere scraps of paper as she systematically proceeded to drown our men, women, and children. It was by sinking the Lusitania, the Sussex, the Gulflight, and numerous other American ships that Germany made a dead letter of the treaty.

Gentlemen, it is unthinkable as we view the past that anyone can advocate the present returning of all of this property. [Applause.] The motion of the gentleman from Texas should be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LONDON. Is it in order for me to ask unanimous consent to speak for five minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks, the time having been limited by unanimous consent, the Chair ought not to put that Mr. LONDON. But is it in order to ask unanimous consent to speak for five minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks he ought not to entertain that request. The question is—
Mr. LONDON. Well, I do make that request.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will not submit it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. The time was not limited in the House, but it was limited in the committee. I remind the Chair of that distinction. Would not the same right prevail for unanimous consent to be changed?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is a Member of the House, and the Chair can object. The Chair will not consider the question of extending the time which has been fixed by action of the committee. The question is on the amendment offered by the committee. The questi gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken; and the Chair announced the "noes" appeared to have it.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The House again divided; and there were—ayes 65, noes 95. So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hoch: Page 13, after line 7, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"(1) With respect to such allen property held by the Alien Property Custodian, the return of which is not herein provided for, it is hereby declared that the United States has no purpose of confiscating the same, but that such property is to be held in trust for the owners thereof until its return shall be provided for by Congress: Provided, That in the return of patents, trade-marks, and copyrights this declaration is not intended to preclude any conditions or reservations that may be necessary in order to protect the interests of the United States."

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to the section of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. The amendment, as I have gathered it from hearing it read—I have not seen it heretofore—is an expression of public policy, being to the effect that it shall be the policy of the Government to return all other property not specifically mentioned in this bill. Now, that is not germane to the purposes of this bill.

The bill consists of certain amendments to the trading with the enemy act and provides, in brief, for the return of certain specific property to certain claimants. It provides, for instance, as to German nationals who have not been able heretofore to obtain any return of their property, that this property may be paid back to them, up to $10,000. It also provides that of the trusts now in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian the net income or profit shall be paid to the cestui que trust from now on. There are other provisions, but they are all for certain specific purposes, namely, the payment of certain sums of money to certain claimants. Nowhere within the limits of this bill can be found any expression of any legislative intent; nowhere in the bill, as I read it, is there anything from which the Chair might gather or from which anyone else might gather what the ultimate purpose of the United States Government is as to the disposal of this property. It has been discussed here on the floor in the presence of the Chair as to what the meaning of this bill was, whether the return of $10,000 was an expression of the idea that we intended to give back the rest of it or, in fact, whether it was an expression that we intended to confiscate the rest of it. As to that matter the bill is entirely silent.

The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Hoch] offers an amendment, and in his amendment he proposes, as a policy, to express the opinion of Congress that we shall ultimately turn back all of this property and for the first time injects into the bill an expression of the policy of the United States Government.

Now, there was nothing in the original trading with the enemy act and there has been nothing up to this time in the way of an expression of sentiment on that subject, and particularly there is nothing in this particular section on that subject.

I think it is not necessary for me perhaps to go in particular length into this matter, except to call the attention of the Chair to the general rule on the subject, and that is that where specific subject matters are mentioned in a bill, amendments which are general in their nature have been held on repeated occasions to be out of order. I think that is the rule here, inasmuch as the bill is confined to specific purposes. I do not believe that a general expression of policy is at all germane to the original object to be accomplished by the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. HOCH rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Hoch.]

Mr. HOCH. Mr. Chairman, the whole question before the Chair is the question of the germaneness of this amendment. The object of the bill is to amend the trading with the enemy-

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Graham] urged the fact that this bill is silent as to any policy as to the property not to be returned. But the fact that the bill is silent on that certainly does not prove that a declaration on that subject would not be germane.

What is the purpose of the bill before us? It is not simply for the purpose of returning a certain amount of property, but the bill deals in a general way with the provisions of the trading with the enemy act. In numerous places in this bill there are references to all of the alien property. Can it be said that we can bring in here a bill having to do with turning back a certain part of the alien property, and referring to all the alien property, and yet it is not permissible to make a declaration about the alien property which is not to be returned under the provisions of the bill?

I would call the attention of the Chair to the expression on page 3, line 18, in respect to all money and other property. All through this bill we find references to the total amount of property held by the Alien Property Custodian. It also deals with the income of all the remaining part of the property, and specifically turns it back to the owners.

Now, it seems to me on the question of germaneness there can not be any question that on a bill dealing in a general way with a whole subject like this it is in order to make a general declaration of policy with reference to that part of the property which is not turned back to the owner.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The trading with the enemy act deals with the seizure, holding, maintenance, operation, and disposal of the property of alien enemies and others. This amendment is to section 9 of the bill, which deals directly with the disposal of property so seized and held by the Government.

If this bill provided only for the consideration of claims of $10,000 and under, the Chair might be inclined to think that the point of order made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Graham] should be sustained. But this bill deals with a part, at least, of all the property held by the Alien Property Custodian. It undertakes to dispose of the income of all of the property held by the Alien Property Custodian. It deals with claims other than those of $10,000 and under.

The Chair thinks that when a bill undertakes to deal with all of the property in the hands of the Alien Property todian in a particular way it is then in order to deal with that property in any other way, and the Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. HOCH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I feel that we must expedite the consideration of this measure. I think the gentleman from Kansas ought to be able to present his case in five minutes.

Mr. HOCH. I hope the gentleman will yield. This is a very fundamental proposition. I am a member of the committee. I was not able to be here yesterday, and had no opportunity to express myself. Of course, if the gentleman insists I shall not press my request.

Mr. MONDELL. I must say, Mr. Chairman, that I shall have to insist on keeping the debate within reasonable bounds.

I shall not object.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOCH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, we are dealing here in this proposition not only with a matter of property interests, but we are touching upon a fundamental of government, and indeed I think we may say even a larger question, a fundamental upon which civilization itself in a measure has been established. It is true that I have just voted against the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Ray-BURN], and yet I believe that my reasons are entirely good, and not out of harmony with the amendment which I have offered liere.

It must not be forgotten that the committee was dealing not merely with theories, but was dealing with a very practical situation which confronted it, and a situation, I may remind gentlemen, which had its inception in the preceding administra-tion. Undoubtedly the treaty of Versailles did revive in a measure the principle of confiscation, long repudiated by en-lightened peoples, and as a result of that revival there has arisen a practical difficulty which has presented itself with reference to this property.

Now, my amendment simply seeks to place in this bill a statement of policy with reference to the property which is not returned by the provisions of this bill. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] said a few moments ago that no one is proposing a policy of confiscation. If the gentleman had attended the hearings I am inclined to think he would not have been quite so certain about that. Some gentlemen do propose confiscation, and some very influential gentlemen. And they do not want anything said in this bill which will condemn the policy of confiscation. It is true that the official spokesmen for the administration do not argue for confiscation, but on the other hand deny that a policy of confiscation is contemplated. Mr. Carr, of the State Department, speaking before the committee as the one representative of the department to be heard on the subject, over and over again said that the State Department certainly was not advocating any policy of confiscation. I wish I had time to read his statement about that from the hearings. Then, I ask, if all are agreed that there is to be no confiscation, why not now write that conviction into the statute?

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOCH. Yes; for a brief question.

Yes; for a brief question.
If the gentleman's amendment were adopted, Mr. BEGG. would that bind another Congress if they wanted to do other

Mr. HOCH. It might not bind a future Congress, but I think it would be a tremendously wholesome thing in connection with this legislation, in order that there might be no misunderstanding as to our attitude on so important a matter of principle not only in this country but throughout the world. [Applause.] In order that it might be understood that the United States does not propose to take any backward step, but that the United States proposes to maintain a moral leader-ship in the world and to take its stand upon the highest plane of international ethics and international probity. Why, gentlement, this is a fundamental proposition. It has been a long pathway of civilization leading up to the establishment of the inviolability of private property, and it seems to me that any man is blind who does not see that there are still abroad in the world influences that would deny the right of private property. The right of a man to the fruits of his honest effort, subject only to the limitations which the public interest may impose, is one of the priceless heritages made possible by long and bloody struggle. I do not speak for any claimant for any of this property. If I may say this personal word, as far as I know, not a person in my district is personally interested in a dollar's worth of this property. But I am jealous for the good name of my country—that by no act, official or otherwise, it add to those forces that would turn the world away from the principle of inviolability of private property. I am anxious that there may be no misunderstanding about America's attitude. We have not only permitted citizens of foreign countries to make investments here, but we have openly encouraged it. We have to-day all over the world representatives of the Department of Commerce who are inviting investments in American industries and the purchase of American securities. we now give the world to understand that in case those investments are made they may be subject to confiscation in case of war? And what shall be said of the safety of the investment of American citizens in every corner of the world if a policy of confiscation should find lodgment in the practice of the nations? Surely America will never adopt such a policy. Then why not now write it in the bond?

As to the claims against Germany-and I yield to no Member in the desire to see every honest claim adjusted and I yield to no Member in condemnation of the infamous acts which gave occasion to some of those claims—the proper pressure will bring adjustment. Our Nation is not helpless, and has never found it necessary to violate sacred rights of third parties in order to protect the interests of its citizens. Let America have no part in any "scrap of paper" policy.

Mr. McPHERSON. Does the gentleman question the right of Germany to pledge this property to America?

Mr. HOCH. I say to the gentleman that in my judgment any citizen of any country has a right under international law to make investments in any other civilized country under the assurance that those investments will be held inviolate, in peace and in war, save only as they may be sequestered in protection of the vital interests of that country in time of war. plause.] And I say that if we should abandon that principle we would take a backward step in the history of the world.

Mr. McPHERSON. Does the gentleman mean to deny or to admit that the German Government in the treaty of Berlin had the power and the right, if it saw fit to do so, to pledge this property?

Mr. HOCH. I say that neither the German Government nor any other government has the right to say to this country, "You need not protect the inviolability of private property. [Applause.]

Mr. FAIRCHILD. In answer to the question just asked, I attended every meeting of the Committee on Foreign Affairs when this very provision of the treaty was under discussion, and at no time was there any such interpretation of that clause as has been given by the proponents of this legislation.

Mr. HOCH. Gentlemen, let us not allow this legislation to go out to the world silent upon this proposition.

Mr. McPHERSON. One further question. Mr. HOCH. I can not yield further. If we do permit this legislation to go out without any statement of policy, gentlemen will not only fondle the hope that we intend to confis-cate the property but they will foster that hideous doctrine throughout the world. [Applause.] Let us say to the world now that we propose, in harmony with all those things which have made us glorious as a Republic, to stay true to the principles enunciated by Franklin, to the principles enunciated by Hamilton, by Jefferson, by Marshall, to the principles enunciated by the great founders of the Republic and enunciated at the time the trading with the enemy act was passed, when we deliberately said again and again that we had no purpose of confiscation.

With this amendment adopted there will still be retained for the present, for such purpose of delay as may expedite adjustment of American claims, a vast amount of this property. But while returning a part of this property, let us make it clear that the agent of the Government who administers these remaining trusts is to continue to be what his name implies, a custodian and not a confiscator of private property.

[Applause.]

Mr. HAWES. Mr. Chairman, we have at last got to the heart of this matter, so that every man in this House who is opposed to the ultimate confiscation of this property will have an opportunity to say so. I am not concerned whether we return $10,000 of this money, or whether we return 50 per cent, or whether we return all of it. The big question is the preserva-tion of an old American principle and again asserting our opposition to the confiscation of private property to pay a public debt. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. Mondell] asserted that he was opposed to confiscation; that there was no intention to confiscate. My distinguished colleague on this committee [Mr. Sanders of Indiana] made a most effective appeal, but the basis and strength of that appeal was founded on his own opposition to confiscation. When this matter came up in our committee this same question was presented clearly and a vote was taken.

The Republican leader says there will be no confiscation; the Democratic leader says there will be no confiscation; with two exceptions, every Member who has spoken on this subject denies that there will be confiscation. Then, why not write it into the

The State Department stands for security which, under certain conditions, means confiscation, but it seems to stand almost alone.

No other branch of the Government has taken that position, and only two Members of the House have indorsed it.

We will have no trouble collecting our just claims against Germany if the State Department has the old-time courage and ability.

Our State Department in the past has not been driven to the program of seizing the property of private citizens to pay public debt, and the present department will not be supported by the American people or either branch of Congress if it drags American diplomacy back to the dark ages of brute force in dealing with the property of noncombatant civilians who entrusted their property to our keeping.

We should not be concerned with what Germany wants us to do; our concern is standing for the right kind of civilized adjustment.

Insurance claims should not drive us from the fundamentals of property rights and national honor. The lawful claims of the Lusitania sufferers will be paid, and they must be paid as all proper claims for loss or damage suffered by Americans should be. But the payment must be made by Germany, not by the guests of America. When the gentleman from Kansas wanted to incorporate in this bill a statement that it did not mean confiscation, his motion was defeated by a vote of 10 to 7. Do not let any man fool himself; do not let any man be deceived here to-day; this is the critical vote. It is not the return of all the property; it is not a return of part of the property; but it is a clear question which each man will take home to his own constituents sooner or later: Does he believe in violating all American traditions; does he want to return to the medieval doctrine of savagery; does he want to inaugurate a new doctrine in America of seizing the private property of individual citizens to pay a public debt? I am not concerned with Germany's position. Germany might ask us to take this property and pay our bills. She might say, "Take our nationals in this country, put them in the workshops, put them in the mines, and then take their wages and pay our public debts." Germany can not tell the American Congress what our duty is. [Applause.] It can not tell us what to do; it is for us to decide this question in accordance with American traditions and American honor. [Applause.]

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this is a very important amendment. The House has just now voted by a vote of 95 to 65 that in its judgment it ought not to make a declaration that all of this property be returned at this time. The reasons that animated the member-ship of the committee in deciding that way were doubtless good ones. If they were good-and we must assume that they were the same method of reasoning would lead any reasonable man to conclude that it would be unwise at this time to adopt this amendment. Let me read it to you:

With respect to such alien property held by the Alien Property Custedian, the return of which is not herein provided for, it is hereby declared that the United States has no purpose to confiscate the same, but that such property is to be held in trust for the owners thereof until its return shall be provided for by Congress: Provided, That in the return of patents, trade-marks, and copyrights this declaration is not intended to preclude any conditions or reservations that may be necessary in order to protect the interests of the United States.

Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I would like to, but I can not. Now, what is first in this amendment? It is in effect a declara-tion that we do not intend, under any circumstances, to hold this property, but that we propose to turn it back, every cent of it, in spite of anything that may occur in our international relations and irrespective of American claims. In the second place, the reservation is made, curiously enough, that as to patents involved in the worst mess our Government has to deal withnamely, the Chemical Foundation—as to these patents they shall not be turned back without first looking after American Why the discrimination? Does any reasonable man interests.

conclude that it is advisable for us, at the same time we are holding this property as a pledge, to announce in this public manner that we do not intend to hold it under any circumstances or keep it for any purposes except to hand it back? What good could it do? Can anyone see any sense in it? If we adopt that policy the thing to do is to turn it all back now.

Mr. HUSTED. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes.

Does the gentleman think it necessary, or Mr. HUSTED. desirable, or dignified for the Congress of the United States to declare in a statute that our Government does not intend to violate the well-established principles of international law?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. It is a ridiculous proposition and makes the condition much worse; it puts us in the light of people trying to do something and not doing it.

Mr. HOCH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. HOCH. Does the gentleman agree with the gentleman from Wyoming and others who have announced that no one intention of ever confiscating this property?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I have said repeatedly, and if the gentleman had been here yesterday he would have heard me state at length, that that question is not involved in this We are only carrying out the provisions of the proposition. resolution that Congress passed and the treaty concluded between our country and the German Republic, a treaty justified by the Constitution and the decisions of the supreme court of the Republic of Germany, as I showed yesterday. [Applause.] That is what we are doing, and you would have it announced to the world by this amendment that we do not propose to do anything with it except to hold it for somebody. Why hold it? What is the object, what is the sense or reason of the committee voting in one breath that it will not turn it all back and then turn around and say something else? [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois

has expired.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five more minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, the gentleman has spoken on this question several times. There are a number of us who would like to speak upon it for a minute or two, but we have not been given an opportunity. We would like to know what liberality of debate there is going to be in the discussion of this question. If some few gentlemen are going to take up all of the time, then some of us will get none.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes. Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I do not think the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] ought to complain about taking up time.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I shall finish in a couple of minutes. Let me tell you what this amendment will mean. I know the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Hoch] is moved by high idealism and by the finest of sentiments. I know the man and I know how his heart and conscience operate, but I want to tell you as a practical proposition, and that is what we are dealing with here, what the effect of this thing will be. It will be to take away from American claimants all right or hope of ever recovering what is coming to them, because the very moment we make this announcement the German Gov-ernment will then know that there is no longer any pressure that can be applied. Suppose there were not this fund in our hands. By virtue of these two treaties—the treaty of Versailles and the treaty of Berlin—what opportunity would you have to get our American claims from Germany at this time? Do you suppose that France and Great Britain would permit us to draw a cent from the German treasury? If we now give up this pledged property and then go to the Reparation Commission and say that we want this money out of the German treasury to pay the American claims, not a cent would be forthcoming. because we would be met with the objection that, having given up the pledged property in our hands, we had voluntarily re-linquished it, and therefore had no further standing in the court of nations

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Does the gentleman think that the German Government has the right to pledge the property of German citizens in America?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Absolutely, and if the gentleman will read my remarks of yesterday he will see that I quoted sections of the German constitution, decisions of the Supreme Court of Germany, in which they held that they did have that

It is written into article 153 of the German constitution right. that the Government has the right of expropriation of the property of German nationals anywhere in the world.

Mr. LONDON. On the subject of expropriation I would say that the word expropriation when used in Germany means nothing more than the right of eminent domain, when that phrase is used in Anglo-Saxon law.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. That is all that expropriation means anywhere. It means the right of eminent domain to be exercised by the Government for the common good as to any property within its boundary or jurisdiction. Do not do anything foolish, gentlemen. This amendment ought to be defeated. To do otherwise will be to defeat every American claimant of any hope of getting his claim allowed.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object. Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that all debate upon this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. Is there objection? Mr. BLANTON. I object. The gentleman will save time if he gives us some time for debate now.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate upon this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, make that more than 10 minutes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, it seems to me that an accommodation of this matter might be had which would result in the saving of time.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. There has been considerable debate and as I understand it there will be an amendment offered on the Austrian proposition.

Mr. BLANTON. But I want mine on this amendment. The gentleman will save time this evening by granting some time

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Fifteen minutes are desired on this side for this particular amendment.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Let us say 20 minutes then, 10 minutes on a side.

Mr. BLANTON. Three of us want to speak on this side.

Mr. HICKS. I demand the regular order

Mr. BLANTON. I move to amend by making it 15 minutes on a side. The gentleman will save time not only this evening but next week. I will hold you up next week.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas will have to state a specific amount of time.

Mr. BLANTON. Thirty minutes.
The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Texas that debate close in 30 minutes

Mr. BLANTON. You gentlemen will save time. I will hold up matters next week.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Blanton) there were—ayes 45, noes 95.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I demand

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mr. Newton of Minnesota and Mr. Blanton to act as tellers.

The committee again divided, and the tellers reported-ayes 51, noes 96.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota that debate close in 20 minutes. The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, when the President of this great Nation called the War Congress together in special session on April 6, 1917, in his message to us he then said:

We have no quarrel with the German people. We have no feeling toward them but one of sympathy and friendship. It was not upon their impulse that the Government acted in entering into this war. It was not with their previous knowledge or approval. It was a war determined upon as wars used to be determined upon in the old, unhappy days when the people were nowhere consulted by their rulers.

Upon that message the Congress declared a state of war to exist against a cruel, autocratic German Government. It was the Kaiser's Government that violated our rights and forced us upon the battle fields to protect them.

We then had a good reason for taking into our custody the property of all people who were subjects of that Imperial Government. War was the reason. It was the only reason. The reason was that we were engaged in deadly conflict with a Government, whose subjects in this country might use their property and finances in helping our enemy. We had the right to take their money and property and hold it in custody until the war ended. We never at any time intended to hold the property of individuals longer than the end of the war.

Remember that this $350,000,000 is not the property of our enemy, the German Government. It is the property of individuals, many of whom lived in this country for years, who had never become citizens of the United States, hence were subjects of our enemy. If it were the property of the German Government I would be in favor of holding it all until Germany settled all of the just claims of our citizens whose lives and property were wrongfully destroyed. But as before stated, it is the property of individuals and not the property of the Government.

Our reason for taking over the property has long since ceased to exist. It is now four years and three months since the armistice. We are now presumed to be at peace with the German Government. If during the war President Wilson was correct when he said:

We have no quarrel with the German people, toward them but one of sympathy and friendship-We have no feeling then certainly we should now have no quarrel with these German people in the United States four and one-fourth years after the war was over. What has become of the said feeling of sympathy and friendship?

The time has come, Mr. Chairman, when we can do but two things, either we must turn this property back to them, or we must confiscate it. If we do not turn it back, it ipso facto becomes confiscation. When you have the custody of another's property, and you no longer have any just right to hold it, then whenever you decide to hold it, your act of holding it becomes confiscation.

The question now is, What are we going to do, hold it or confiscate it? Our Republican friends on the other side of the aisle in one breath assert that they do not intend to confiscate this property, yet in the next breath they vote to hold it, which in fact confiscates it. Thus they speak one way and act another.

The amendment of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Hoch] is the product of a lashed conscience. He realizes just what import our retaining 90 per cent of this property will carry to the civilized peoples of the world. He realizes that such action must be explained if we are to retain our standing and integrity. He is trying to absolve his country from wrong intentions when he realizes that his party is now doing something for which it has no reasonable excuse whatever. He is trying to hide your wrongdoing with a declaration of good purpose and intent. For he realizes that you have no excuse whatever for holding 90 per cent of this property.

What excuse have you for holding this property longer? Why do you still want to retain the custody of this $300,000,000 of property that belongs to other people for two more years when you know that eventually our Government is going to have to return it? I do not know. But I saw in the Washington Times the other day a statement that may throw some light on the subject. I do not know how authentic it is, but it comes from one of the leading newspapers here in the Nation's Capital. Here is what the Washington Times says:

Congressman Frank Mondell, Republican floor leader of the House, who retires from Congress on March 4, after 25 years of service, may succeed Miller, the Alien Property Custodian, it was reported to-day.

If the Times knows what it is talking about it seems to be a proposition of retaining a good berth for a lame duck. All politicians believe in taking care of lame ducks, but do you want to continue this office and all of its great force and incidental expenses for two more years just to take care of somebody? Why, there are to-day 138 employees in this Alien Property Custodian's office. We fixed his salary at $5,000, but we neglected to fix the other salaries, and he is now paying his chief lawyer $8,000 per year, more than a Senator or Congressman gets, and he is paying his director general $7,000 per annum. He has quite a number of lawyers employed and they, with the chiefs of divisions, all draw good salaries, and their positions are all good patronage plums for the party in power.

There are 23 good positions there under the custodian that are not under the civil service, but are appointive offices. eventually we must return this property—and we must—then why continue this office and its host of highly paid employees for two more years? That is the question you must answer by your vote this evening. You Republicans are going to have to answer to the American people for it. For four years you Republicans have been in charge of this House of Representatives and Senate. For four years you have had your Speaker, you have had control of every organization and committee of this House, you have been in control of every piece of legislation that has been passed here for four years, and you are to account to the people of this country on this question. You are the ones the people should and will look to, because you have been in power here for four years and will be in power for two more years. I want to answer the question of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Hoch]. What excuse have you for holding it? If you have a good excuse, what reason have you for not telling the world that your policy is not to confiscate it? That is the question you have to decide here.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee. There seems to be a lot of anxiety about some property belonging to some nationals of another country. I am not one-halfand I can not understand the men of this House-I am not onehalf as much interested in what becomes of the property of some nationals that must have been seized honestly and for a purpose because they were doing something to handicap the prosecution of the war, as I am interested in seeing to it that the property of the American citizen and his life is properly indemnified by a people who wrongfully took that property and life. I want to ask men on that side and on this side, I do not question your patriotism or loyalty, but is it possible that time has dulled the insult to the American Government when American property, when American manhood and womanhood were destroyed without justification? The seizure of this property which you are to-day for ulterior purposes, for selfish motives, for private gain, willing to forget was to compensate the sorrows of the dead-property loss to the living. hereby make a solemn declaration to surrender back that which we have rightfully come in possession of, as my good friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. Temple] so clearly outlined to you My good friends, the treaty had been held up to you which gives the absolute right to the control of this property until the satisfaction of all the claims against the German Government has been had. Some of my colleagues on this side, and my good friend from Kansas, seem alarmed that unless we make a declaration, a renewal of our pledge of faith to the policies on which we have builded and from which we started-unless we make a new declaration of the principles for which that flag stands, the world will misunderstand and misinterpret our motives. My God, my good colleagues, I would rather have the world misunderstand my motives in protecting the dead who sacrificed their lives than to have the American citizen believe I was more interested in the restoration of a little property to an enemy than I was in protecting the rights of those principles for which they died. [Applause.]

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Does the gentleman favor or not the appropriation of this money to the payment of claims against the German Government?

Mr. BEGG. If that is the only way that Germany can compensate the loss of life unlawfully, illegally, and wrongfully taken by Germany of American citizens, yes [applause], with-

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield further? Mr. BEGG. I would take the last red cent of it if I could not get justice for the American citizen who was wronged when we were a peaceful neutral, not during the war time, but when we were living under a solemn declaration of Germany as well as this country. I will not barter away those privileges and those principals which were purchased by the blood of American manhood four or five times. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. RAYBURN. I ask that the amendment be again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks that the amendment be again reported. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota was that debate should close in 20 minutes; 10 minutes to a side.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is in error. The gentleman from Minnesota moved that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. There was an effort made to arrive at 20 minutes, offered by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. I understood it was 20 minutes, and therefore I moved to make it 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will again report the amendment.

The amendment was again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Hoch].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the appeared to have it.

Mr. WOODRUFF. I ask for a division, Mr. Chairman. The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided, and there were—ayes 58, noes 84.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I think we ought to have tellers on that vote. It is close enough. I ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks for tellers.

As many as favor taking this vote by tellers will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Nine gentlemen have risen-not a sufficient number.

Tellers were refused.

Mr. MACLAFFERTY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MacLafferty: Page 3, line 17, after the word "terminated" strike out the period and insert a colon and the following language: "Provided further, That no statute of limitations shall be pleaded or be a defense to any claim made under this section against any enemy fire insurance company and the surplus funds of such enemy fire insurance company and the surplus funds of such enemy fire insurance company and the surplus funds of such enemy fire insurance company for debts, claims, or demands remaining unpaid by such enemy fire insurance company for losses; and any number of claimants of demands or claims arising under contract or collateral thereto, whether based upon fraud or otherwise, against the same enemy or ally of enemy may join in the same action provided that the aggregate amount sought to be recovered therein by such claimants equals or exceeds the sum of $3.000."

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the amendment.

Mr. MACLAFFERTY. Will not the gentleman reserve it?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. MacLAFFERTY. No; I make it.

If gentlemen on that side of the House or on this side knew the meaning of the amendment, they would not make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from California desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. MacLAFFERTY. No, sir; I do not.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard on it if the gentleman from California does not.

Mr. Chairman, I am not speaking of the merits of the gentleman's amendment, but the amendment is certainly germane. This bill deals with the specific property of the insurance companies which are involved in the gentleman's amendment. certainly is a proper limitation on a germane subject, and this Congress has a right to properly indicate what it wants to do with these particular nationals property. I think the gentleman's amendment is clearly in order, regardless of its merits.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. MacLAFFERTY. Mr. Chairman, may I be heard?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; the Chair will be very glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. MacLAFFERTY. Mr. Chairman, I simply wish to say this, that in my opinion the amendment is germane to the bill because it deals with certain funds of certain specific people in this country whom I can name, whose funds are now in the custody of the Alien Property Custodian.

This amendment refers to certain claims of certain people in the city of San Francisco which they have against these fire insurance companies, who, when the great San Francisco fire occurred, walked out of the State and said, "If you want to sue us, come to Germany and sue." They represented that they did not have funds in this country to properly pay their claims, and the war came along and developed the fact that they had over $4,000,000. Therefore that settlement was made by fraud. and such of the claimants as accepted 50 cents or 75 cents on the dollar did so because of fraud and they were deceived.

I want to call attention to this fact: This amendment does not deal with taking money that belongs to certain nationals of Germany and paying the debts of the German Government with that money, but it refers to those people with whom these fire insurance companies had contracts, the insured or assured, who were mostly poor people; people whose insurance policies were almost all they had left in the world. These German insurance companies fraudulently, after collecting the premiums for 50 years in the city of San Francisco, regarded those policies as mere "scraps of paper," and walked out of the country. We have those funds in charge now, and I ask that they be used in this way. I believe there is not a m who will not stand with me on that. I believe there is not a man on the Democratic side

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I want to speak on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.
Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. This is the suggestion I have to make to the Chair: This bill deals with certain rights of other people with reference to property held by the Alien Property Custodian. The proposed amendment deals solely with the question of establishing some claim against some possible claimant and not against the alien property.

Mr. MacLAFFERTY. I disagree with that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The pending portion of the bill deals with the rights of persons who are not enemy aliens against the United States, while the amendment of the gentleman from California deals with claims of American nationals against enemy aliens. The Chair thinks that fact alone would be sufficient to justify him in sustaining the point of order at this particular place. However, in addition, while the bill under consideration provides for the payment of claims against the Government of the United States, the amendment proposed by the gentleman from California apparently deals with another class of claims not included within the purview of the pending bill, namely, claims against nationals of Germany. The Chair therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. MacLAFFERTY. I thank you. You heard my speech anyhow. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. HAWES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. Hawes: Page 4. paragraph 1, lines 4 and 5, strike out the words "or Austria or Hungary or Austria-Hungary," so that said paragraph 1 will read as follows:

"(1) A citizen or subject of any nation or State or free city other than Germany, and is at the time of the return of such money or other property hereunder a citizen or subject of any such nation or State

Mr. HAWES. Mr. Chairman, we have many red-blooded representatives of this Government, and amongst others is the present Alien Property Custodian. He is an ex-Member of Congress. He is a soldier who served on the other side. He is a man of fine capacity, who has investigated most carefully, most conscientiously, the whole subject of allen prop-When we came to the question of the restoration of the Austrian property he unqualifiedly recommended to our committee the return of that property. I will read part of his statement before the committee:

statement before the committee:

Mr. Hawes. So the status of the Austria-Hungary portion of this bill is this; In the first place, they did not seize the property of Americans during the war; and, in the second place, what was Austria-Hungary is now six different republics or monarchies; and we are trying to hold the Austrian Government responsible, in an indirect way, for the conduct of five other governments over which they have no control.

Mr. Miller, Yes, sir. That is the situation, and I have recommended to the chairman, in response to his letters to me, as chairman, action on the Austrian-Hungarian property as I have outlined.

Mr. Hawes. And you would recommend an amendment in this bill which would release all property of the former Empire of Austria-Hungary that is held?

Mr. Miller, I do; and a number of those cases are pathetic cases. We hold hundreds of death benefits which we have collected on account of their nationals who were killed out in the steel mills and in the mines of the West, and we would like to give that back to them.

Mr. Hawes. So we are violating the traditions of international law, the opinion of Marshall, and the dictates of humanity and all spirit of equity in holding these claims?

Mr. Miller, May I put in there so anyone reading this testimony will understand my position? I am willing to recommend this; but, on the other hand, if the State Department comes to the hearings and through their representatives say that there are claims against Austria, I do not want to be criticized for suggesting this, but I have done it personally.

Mr. HAWES. As to the character of those claims against the Austrian Government, are not nearly all of these made by insurance companies?

Mr. MILLER, I think they are, sir; but I am not certain.

Now, there was a time when the people in that territory made war, and when they went into the nation of a neighbor they took back with them the persons and property of their enemies. They were sold as slaves. But gradually we drew away from that ancient and brutal custom. The treaties of The Hague, and great conventions of enlightened American men and women have tried to put some humanity into the brutal doctrine of war. When this Nation went into war some of the citizens of Austria-Hungary had invested their money in the United States. Since that time all of the citizens of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania, Serbia, and Italy have had their money returned to them. Originally Mr. Miller had $30,000,000. He has given back $20,000,000 to the citizens of the countries which you see in red on the map, and he is holding $10,000,000, representing, if you please, security for the acts of 52,000,000 people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. RAYBURN. Ioask that the gentleman may have five minutes additional.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HAWES] be extended five minutes. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. HAWES. Two minutes will do. Now, we have as security, if you want to take that position, $350,000,000 and $200,000,000 more in ships. We are returning only $44,000,000. That leaves us—those of you who are interested in the question of security—over $590,000,000. To restore to Austria all of her property which we hold—and she never held any of ours at any time during the war-would be increasing this amount only $10,000,000.

There is nothing left of Austria. Her capital city of Vienna has 2,000,000 people and is surrounded by mountains. All of the alluvial country which formed her hinterland is cut off. She is embarrassed in every way. She has the sympathy of everybody in the world. Why can we not be generous and in releasing this $44,000,000 add the other $10,000,000 to it and preserve American tradition at least to that extent?

Mr. MONTAGUE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAWES. Yes. Mr. MONTAGUE. Will the gentleman permit me to suggest that Austria now has a population of less than 7,000,000 all

Only six and one-half million people.

Mr. MONTAGUE. She does not raise within her present boundaries enough foodstuffs to last her two months out of the twelve

Mr. HAWES. And she has no coal.
Mr. MONTAGUE. No coal and no forests to any amount.
Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. HAWES. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.
Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will the provision for the return of the $10,000 be sufficient to satisfy in large measure the small compensation claims in this territory?

Mr. HAWES. The gentleman can figure it for himself, when the total we are holding is $350,000,000 and the total amount we are holding from Austria is only $10,000.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. The gentleman did not get my question. Are there any large amounts held back from the citizens of Austria and Hungary?

Mr. HAWES. I do not know that. Mr. REED of West Virginia. Would not the $10,000 provision largely relieve all those claims?

Mr. HAWES. It is only a small percentage-a large number of claims but a small percentage of the whole.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Chairman, I hope it is not too late to take up the bigger issues involved in the controversy. A great deal of confusion has been artificially created here by the legal The trouble with some lawyers is that their minds are so stuffed with legal precedents that they resemble a crowded warehouse with the index lost or with the catalogue missing. [Laughter.] They can not get down to fundamentals. During the last World War no nation which felt strong enough to do so failed to disregard the tenets of international law, and in no case was the flouting of all principles of international justice more flagrant than in the treatment accorded to the persons and property of the individual nationals of the belligerent

The Magna Charta 700 years ago proclaimed the principle which some would evade now, more than 4 years after the armistice.

In its forty-first paragraph, the Magna Charta provides as

All merchants shall have safe and secure exit from England and entry to England, with the right to tarry there and to move about as well by land as by water, for buying and selling by the ancient and right customs, quit from all evil toils, except (in time of war) such merchants as are of the land at war with us. And if such are found in our land at the beginning of the war, they shall be detained, without injury to their bodies or goods, until information be received by us, or by our chief justiciar, how the merchants of our land found in the land at war with us are treated; and if our men are safe there, the others shall be safe in our land.

That the noncombatant is to be protected both in his life and in his property is a principle as old as civilization itself.

Professing to adhere to the principle in theory, those who would withhold the greater part of the property of German and Austrian nationals are violating the principle in practice.

The situation is simple. Germany has returned to American nationals all their property. We are asked to withhold the bulk of the property of German nationals. We have no right to hold the property of the individual German to satisfy a claim against his Government. It is a most absurd thing to take the property of a German servant girl, take her savings, in order to satisfy some claim that the Americans have against Germany. Only a few weeks ago we voted to the powerful and one of the greatest nations in the world billions of dollars when we voted for the liquidation of the debt that England owes us. I voted for it. I was glad to vote for it as a measure calculated to promote peace, amity, and concord among nations. [Applause.]

But here men have the courage to assert that the property of German individuals should be retained by the American Government. For what? To satisfy claims against the German people or against the German Government. Gentlemen, the 60,000,000 Germans will not disappear. Do not believe that they are doomed forever. Germany has a glorious past and it The forces of democracy are at work there. has a future. The Germans have made invaluable contributions to science, literature, and philosophy, and if they have produced a Wilhelm, they have given to the world such men as Goethe, Schiller, and Heine, champions of liberty, progress, and of truth. [Ap-The dollars that you are worrying about are historically safe, financially safe, legally safe. Let me say that to the lawyers who have a lot of legal knowledge but no principle left. [Applause.]

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman——
Mr. LONDON. Oh, I am not through yet. I do not know why the gentleman from Illinois should have taken it as a why the gentleman from Finness personal reference. [Laughter.]

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman, I rose to ask for the floor.
Mr. LONDON. I understand the situation. Now, let us not make any mistake about the meaning of the treaty of Berlin.

That Gerwhich you rely—what does it say? That Ger-The treaty upon which you rely—what does it say? That German property shall be held subject to the action of Congress. Now, Congress acts upon it. It is its duty to act. Shall our action be honorable, broad-minded, and humane, or shall it be the contrary?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for two minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks for two minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LONDON. If we are to act, let us act honorably; if we are to release the property, let us release all of it, or at least have the courage to say that we are determined to return every piece of property at the earliest possible moment. Because the danger is if you pass the bill allowing only the smaller claims to be paid you assert by the very same act that you intend to confiscate the rest.

If for technical reasons you are unable to return all the property at once, say so.

Let there be no doubt left as to the intentions of this Gov-

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DENISON. Mr. Chairman, there is a great deal about the situation of Austria that excites our sympathy. Austria-Hungary began the war, but she came out of it in the worst fix of any of the European nations. The Austrian Government is no doubt in a serious situation to-day; but that does not change her status in international law and does not change her status as a nation in dealing with the United States as a nation. The fact is that the claims of Austrian citizens for property in the hands of the custodian amount to about $11,000,000, and the further fact remains that a large part of those claims come within the $10,000,000 that we are returning; so that the bill that is now before you will dispose of nearly all of the Austrian claims. Those that are left represent a few wealthy Austrian citizens, living in Austria, who had property invested in this country in large amounts; so that the legislation that we are now considering will result in no serious hardship to any large number of Austrian citizens.

I want to read to you a letter that the Secretary of State addressed to the committee that considered and reported this bill. There seems to have been a mistaken opinion passing about that there were no considerable claims against Austria by citizens of the United States. Here is a part of the letter, which appears in the hearings, from the Secretary of State:

In so far as shown by the records of the department, 61 claims have been filed by American citizens against the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government for compensation for losses resulting from the torpedoing of vessels by submarines of that Government, for military requisitions made by that Government, and for damage or injury to persons and property. The total amount of these claims is approximately $13,043,913.

In addition to the foregoing claims filed with the department against the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, it is not unlikely that many of the claims of American citizens filed with the department against the Government of Germany may, upon investigation, be found to be claims for losses for which the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government should be responsible. This possibility arises from the fact that claims for losses resulting from submarine warfare have been filed against Germany in cases where the Government responsible for the act has not been determined.

The State Department thinks that a great many of the claims that have been filed against Germany are really against the Austro-Hungarian Government, and will be found to be so when fully investigated.

The claims of American citizens against Austria will amount to many million dollars. We can not tell how far they will be reduced by the investigation of the commission, but it will not be safe to do more than we are doing by this bill; and it will not do for us as a government to make any distinctions as between nations. We can not treat one nation in one way and another nation in another way. There is no difference in dignity and sovereignty as between nations. A small nation is entitled to the same consideration and has the same dignity as a large nation. The strength of their armies or the amount of their resources makes no difference in their standing in international law. We must, above all things, make no distinction or discrimination in our actions toward nations with whom we are on friendly terms.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, during the discussion of the peace resolution in both the last and the present Congress, all of which is a matter of record, the question of protecting American rights was under consideration and became the chief subject of debate. Our Democratic friends bitterly assaulted us upon the charge that we were forfeiting these rights against Germany. These charges were answered by our providing for protection of these rights in the resolution. During the discussion of the anticipated treaty the same question was discussed here in the House. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Hardy], who spoke so seriously awhile ago, was very eloquent against the resolution back in 1921, and equally so to-day, but speaking from different view-points. Then he charged us with wanton willingness to forfeit the claims against Germany. At the time to which I refer, June 13, 1921, in his objection to the resolution ending the war, this is what he said (Congressional Record, Sixty-seventh Congress, first session, page 2504):

It is said that in the prospect of this resolution passing, lawyers have been retained already to bring suits for the recovery of the property of many German citizens seized by the United States. In like manner our citizens whose property was seized in Germany must go to Germany for relief—a beautiful prospect for thousands of lawsuits and rich pickings for hundreds of lawyers.

And so on. That was the strong argument of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY] in his discussion of the peace resolution which ended the war and preserved all our rights by specific stipulation. He argued that it should not be passed. because, among other reasons, we had no protection of the right of American citizens as against Germany. This, mark you, in the face of the specific provision guaranteeing protection, still he argues that if we passed the resolution we would lose all protection over the alien property, which we had rightfully seized and should hold until our claims were adjusted, and, as I recall, it was a rather strong position at that time.

One of the best, if not the best, speech that was made on the floor of the House at the time was made by our friend Mr. Con-NALLY of Texas, representing the Foreign Affairs Committee. Speaking for the Democratic side of the Chamber, speaking with great emphasis and with powerful conviction, not only upon his part but with impressive results upon many of his hearers, for I was wonderfully persuaded by his argument.

He said:

Where is the man who doubts that German citizens will demand the return of their property? Are there not hundreds of claims for such return now pending with the Alien Property Custodian? If Germany hesitates to perform obligations which she has solemnly assumed, will she be timid in asserting claims that possess the color of lawful rights? So that by the treaty of 1828 as well as the law of nations the moment this country declares peace every German alien may go into court, and will have the right to go into court, and demand the return of his part of the $400,000,000 of property held by the Alien Property Custodian. We have the right to retain that $400,000,000 and say to Germany, "We hold it in pledge to offset your damages due to American citizens in the sum of $221,000,000." Will you pass this resolution and run the risk of surrendering the position which the United States may occupy at the council table?

"Oh, but," they say, "we can attend to that later." Who doubts, gentlemen, but that after this resolution passes the United States will deal with Germany not as a victor, but as an equal? When she goes to the council table I want my country to be in a position to absolutely dictate the terms of peace. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I want to give your and my President the power to settle these matters in the interest of the people of the United States. I do not want him to be humiliated in dealing with an enemy over whom we have triumphed. America should be able to exact as a victor in war into which she was forced, what she was unable to exact while she was yet at peace. I shall never vote to make my country an humble mendicant, cringing and fawning before the enemy she has conquered, to secure unquestioned rights as a matter of grace. [Applause on the Democratic side.] cratic side 1

With peace formally declared may not Germany and her nationals demand: Give back my ships! Give back my property—my stocks and bonds—my moneys and my lands!

What will you say to American claimants to justify your course?

When it was urged that no such forfeiture was possible because of the terms of the resolution which assured protection, he replied:

"Oh," the gentlemen on the majority side say, "section 2 takes care of these things. Section 2 reserves all the rights we have." Let us see what that does.

of these things. Section 2 reserves all the rights we have. Let use what that does.

Here is section 2:

"SEC. 2. That in making this declaration, and as a part of it, there are expressly reserved to the United States of America and its nationals any and all rights, privileges, indemnities, reparations, or advantages, together with the right to enforce the same, to which it or they have become entitled under the terms of the armistice signed November 11, 1918, or any extensions or modifications thereof; or which were acquired by or are in the possession of the United States of America by reason of its participation in the war or to which its nationals have thereby become rightfully entitled; or which, under the treaty of Versailles, have been stipulated for its or their benefits; or to which it is entitled as one of the principal allied and associated powers; or to which it is entitled by virtue of an act or acts of Congress; or otherwise."

Section 2 undertakes to reserve rights under the armistice. When

Section 2 undertakes to reserve rights under the armistice. When peace is declared the armistice is terminated because an armistice is merely a truce to allow diplomatic negotiation.

This Chamber resounded from the Democratic side with the charges that Republicans were jeopardizing American rights by a course designed to forfeit all of our protection which we now have to hold the property of the foreign nationals. Even the able and talented floor leader, Mr. GARRETT, who spoke with so much vigor to-day, spoke then as follows (Congressional Rec-ORD, 67th Cong., 1st sess., p. 2573):

ord, 67th Cong., 1st sess., p. 2573):

The passage of this resolution throws away every moral and physical advantage which we now possess; it places us alone among nations, with all our vital interests exposed to the constant menace of a selfish and irritated world.

Surely we do not need to pass it in order to insure that we shall ourselves be just in negotiating with Germany and her allies. Is there anything in German history or any evidence in the manifested spirit of present-day Germany which encourages the belief that she will be more likely to make a just and righteous treaty after we have thrown every advantage away? Surely not. By passing it we are but depriving ourselves and our posterity of all the advantages accruing from a victory of arms honorably won by our bravest and our best and surrendering, perhaps for all time, the opportunity which has been ours and which still is ours to advance civilization and to calm at least in measurable degree the awful apprehensions of the mothers of men.

As an American Congressman I must be excused from aiding in such a denouement. [Prolonged appliause on the Democratic side.]

It is a singular situation, with that provision determining the position then, charging us with turning all the property back by the peace resolution against which they rallied, rallied. now they come unitedly and demand that we do precisely what they united against us for doing. Then we were condemned because our resolution, they asserted, would turn back the property. Now we are condemned because this resolution does not turn back all the property.

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FESS. Oh, my friend from New York [Mr. COCKRAN] made a fine speech upon the right side of that question when it was under discussion, and voted right. I looked up his record at that time, because he spoke to-day. I am glad to announce that, unlike his party, he is consistent, and I compliment him upon it.

The American Government will, of course, never confiscate property. We will ever respect the rights of private property inviolable. Everyone knows that, [Applause 1] That is related to the rights of private property inviolable. inviolable. Everyone knows that. [Applause.] That is why it is perfectly useless to adopt an amendment such as that of my friend from Kansas [Mr. Hoch], because it is merely a certificate that we are honest; and it is nothing else. I hope that the American Congress does not need to certify to the people of the country that it means to do the right thing, not only for its own citizens but all other nationals. necessary for Congress to declare our honor by resolution. It is an imputation that might lead to a doubt of the Nation's integrity in our foreign relations.

The war left us in a complicated situation, with many problems for attention. One by one they have been taken up. This one of alien property is serious and must be properly handled.

To protect all rights we entered into a treaty. This que was covered and agreed upon by both parties to the treaty. This question

Section 5 gives us the right we are now exercising:

SEC. 5. All property of the Imperial German Government, or successor or successors, and of all German nationals which was, April 6, 1917, in or has since that date come into the possession under the control of, or has been the subject of a demand by United States of America or of any of its officers, agents, or employees, from any source or by any agency whatsoever, and all property of the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, or its successor or successors, and of all Austro-Hungarian nationals which was, on December 7, 1917, in or has since that date come into the possession or under control of, or has been the subject of a demand by the United States of America or any of its officers, agents, or employees, from any source or by any agency whatsoever, shall be retained by the United States of America and no disposition thereof made, except as shall have been heretofore or specifically hereafter shall be provided by law until such time as the Imperial German Government and the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, or their successor or successors, shall have respectively made suitable provision for the satisfaction of all claims against said Governments, respectively, of all persons, wheresoever domiciled, who owe permanent allegiance to the United States of America and who have suffered, through the acts of the Imperial German Government or its agents, since July 31, 1914, loss, damage, or injury to their persons or property, directly or indirectly, whether through the ownership of shares of stock in German, Austro-Hungarian, American, or of other corporations, or in consequence of hostilities or of any operations of war, or otherwise, and also shall have granted to persons owing permanent allegiance to the United States of America most-favored-nation treatment, whether the same be national or otherwise, in all matters affecting residence, business, profession, trade, navigation, commerce, and industrial property rights, and until the Imperial German Government and the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government, or their successor or successors, shall have, respectively, confirmed to the United States of America all fines, forfeitures, penalties, and seizures imposed or made by the United States of America during the war, whether United States of America or of any of its officers, agents, or employees,

It will not be overlooked that this treaty is signed by Germany, and our procedure under the terms is not a violation of international law nor the common law of nations. That treaty sets up an agency for adjusting the points in dispute. are many items involving controversies growing out of prewar contracts. That agency is now at work on these controverted items. To reverse the course and thus to nullify by turning everything back, even including what is now in dispute in the courts, as many cases are, would be a very unwise step at this juncture for all concerned—our own citizens as well as those of other countries. We are doing precisely what the treaty provides and what we ought to do in honor to ourselves and in respect for the nationals of other countries. [Applause.]

This bill when it becomes law will clean up 93 per cent of the In money it makes a small per cent of the totals. When these are out of the way the balance can be expedited under the provisions of the treaty, which is clear in its pro-cedure and which, so long as it is followed, is complete defense against the charge of confiscation. We are here endeavoring to do justice to nationals of other countries as provided in the treaty and at the same time protect all the rights of American citizens. I predict that the record will show quite unanimity of decision when the final vote is taken.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired, and the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri. The question was taken, and the Chair announced the noes appeared to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. RAYBURN) there wereayes 55, noes 56.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. Newton of Minnesota: Page 7, lines 13 and 14, strike out the words "was at such time and."

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, the amendment is a formal one that has been submitted to members of the committee on both sides of the alsle. It corrects the text by striking out certain words which were placed in there inadvertently because the phrase is to be found in the original act. As amended it will better express the purpose of the paragraph.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York.
Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I would like to call attention of the committee to the remarks made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Begg], who questioned the motives of those of us who favored the return of all of this property, and I would like to avail myself of this opportunity to say that his statement was absolutely unjust and unfair, and further to say, using an old and fitting expression, "O, patriotism, what crimes are committed in thy name," and recommend to the gentleman that he go to a primary school and study international law.

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman Mr. FISH. When I get through. Will the gentleman yield?

18 19 19

Mr. BEGG. I want to correct the gentleman's statement.

Mr. FISH. I do not yield. Mr. BEGG. Well-

Mr. FISH. I do not yield.

Mr. BEGG. Does not the gentleman want to quote me correctly?

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order-

Mr. FISH. I heard the gentleman and heard him very cell. I do not yield. Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, the greatest thing that was done by the United States in the World War, except that of turning the tide of defeat into victory, was the fact that we asked for no reparations, the fact that we asked for no indemnity, and the fact that we asked for no territory, and now, the first time that Congress has been put to the test, it has violated a funda-mental principle of international law by refusing to return property held in trust to its lawful owners. [Applause.]
Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield? I want to know just when that first test came.

Mr. FISH. I do not yield. We have been found wanting to a sacred trust. We have been preaching for generations from the housetops the doctrine of inviolability of property taken from an enemy, and when we are actually put to the test Congress denies that principle; it denies it in part, and only turns back a certain percentage of the property.

That is what the action of the House amounts to in continuing to hold this property over four years after the war. I do not question the spirit and motive that animates any Member of the House, but at least, gentlemen, I can not help but feel that we have repudiated our traditional policy, that we have literally kicked out of the window an established international principle that has been gradually built up during a

Let me quote what Alexander Hamilton, the great proponent of the Federal Constitution, had to say on the sacredness of private property seized in time of war (see Camillus letters, 18 to 22): "No powers of language at my command can express the abhorrence I feel at the idea of violating the property of individuals which in an authorized intercourse in time of peace has been confided to the faith of our Government and laws, on account of controversies between nation and nation." * * * "The right of holding or having property in a country always implies a duty on the part of its government to protect that property, and to secure to the owner the full enjoyment of it; whenever, therefore, a government grants permission to foreigners to acquire property within its territories, or to bring and deposit it there, it tacitly promises protection and security."

Again let me call your attention to section 38 of Instructions for the Government of the Armies of the United States, issued on April 24, 1863: "Private property, unless forfeited by crimes or by offenses of the owner, can be seized only by way of military necessity for the support or other benefit of the Army, or of the United States. If the owner has not fled, the commanding officer will cause receipts to be given which may serve the spoliated owner to obtain indennity."

Practically all authorities on international law from the time of Grotius and Vattel to Hall and Wheaton agree that private property of enemy nationals should not be confiscated when found in a State on the outbreak of war. Modern international custom and usage is emphatically opposed to the idea of confiscation or reprisal. We have not confiscated private enemy investments in any of our wars from the Revolution to the present.

It is the business of civilization to create such conditions as will render victory less brutal and defeat more bearable. It is within the power of Congress to set a glorious example to the world by restoring all the private property of German and Austrian nationals, excepting ships in which the German Imperial Government had an interest, and of patents which are still in litigation. It is a wonderful opportunity to demonstrate the still in litigation of the still in litigation. strate our sincerity by upholding international law and American traditions, irrespective of any interest we may have to the contrary. We have a real duty to perform in behalf of established law and order. We must not shirk the responsi-bility and put our own selfish interests above those of the civilization of the world. What a glorious climax it would be to the part played by our country in the World War if we should in these days of passion and hatred by act of Congress comply with the established principles of international law and help by our example to lead the way to peace.

Under the provisions of this bill only forty-four millions out of three hundred and fifty millions are to be returned. In addition we are holding two hundred millions in seized ships and many millions of dollars worth of patents.

We have laid ourselves open to suspicion by the manufacturers, by the exporters, by the importers, by the merchants of Europe, who believed we went into the World War from the purest, the highest, and the most idealistic motives, when we say that this property, which should have been returned a long time ago, is not to be restored, but by an act of Congress it is to be held in reprisal for claims against the German Government. Why, the gentleman from Ohio got up here and said that he would like to see every cent of the property belonging to enemy aliens used to offset the claims of our citizens against the German Government, and he was applauded on this side-

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I will yield.

Mr. BEGG. I only made this statement, that if Germany did not indemnify in any other way I would then take it.

Mr. FISH. I will say to the gentleman we are holding by this bill $200,000,000 of shipping, we are holding four or five thousand patents, far more than is required to cover every single legitimate claim against the German Government even. single legitimate claim against the German Government even if we restore all private property.

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I can not yield. Why, it is said that the total legitimate claims amount to $15,000,000, not insurance claims. I am in the insurance business, and a large part of them are not legitimate. They were paid for [laughter] by the 10 per cent war-risk insurance, but the total claims amount to from $15,000,000 to $30,000,000—less than the cost to the United States of one day of actual warfare—and now we propose to re-pudiate for this sum one of the greatest and most important principles in international law, and the principle that this Nation has always been foremost to champion. [Applause.]

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I move that the debate on this section and all amendments thereto be now

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota moves that the debate on this section and all amendments thereto be now closed. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. No; I can not.

Mr. SABATH. I have an amendment that I desire to be heard on. I want to be heard on that amendment for five

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Then, Mr. Chairman, I make it

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minneseta modifies his motion. The gentleman from Minnesota moves that the debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota, Mr. Chairman, is it in order to have a vote now on the slight amendment I have offered, or will that go over until the debate is closed?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Sabath: Page 5, line 16, after the word "or," insert "an individual who was at that time a citizen or subject of Germany, Austro-Hungary, or who is not a citizen or subject of any nation, who prior to April 6, 1917, was and is now a permanent resident of the United States, or."

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, nearly every one on that side, as well as on our side, has positively stated that he is in favor of returning the property that is now being held by the Allen Property Custodian. It is true that one or two gentlemen have qualified their statements. But I venture to say that 95 per cent of the membership are in favor of returning and not confiscating this property of the alien enemy. Consequently, I am hopeful that all of the Members will be in favor of this amendment, which provides for the return of property of resident aliens, men who have lived in America from 10 to 40 years. The gentleman from Missouri has stated that no such property has been taken. He, of course, is mis-taken. Many an estate and many a man's property has been taken who has been and who is now a resident of the United

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SABATH. I regret I have not the time.

During the year 1914—yes; and for many years before—thousands of our citizens, and some who were not citizens, were in Germany when the war broke out-three years before we entered the war. These people, though residents of the United States, were unable to return to the United States. They were held in Germany against their will and against their protest, and notwithstanding the fact that they had not been guilty of any wrongdoing, but because of the fact that they were temporarily absent from the United States, their property has been taken by the Alien Property Custodian, and up to this day it has not been returned to them.

Now, I believe in all fairness that the least thing which we can do to-day, two years after peace has been declared between our country and Germany—the least thing we can do is to return the property belonging to those who have made their home in this country and who are permanent residents in the United States. In the act of 1920 we provided for the return of the property of those aliens who were sent to detention camps because of suspicion and acts of disloyalty. In view of that fact what excuse have we to retain the property of those who were not accused but found to be loyal and patriotic?

I do not know how many of these claimants there are, but I am of the opinion that there can not be more than 100 or 200. and that the sum total of all will not be great. In justice I plead with the committee that this amendment that I have offered be adopted. Of course, we must bear in mind, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, that Germany four years ago by legislation ordered the return of property of American citizens, and in nearly every instance it has been returned, with the exception of cases where there was a question of the amount due. and this only as to before the war-money that was deposited with the banks. But all the private claims have been paid. Now when Germany has returned the property to all of our citizens I hope we will not continue to hold property belonging to people, formerly German subjects, who have made their homes here, many of whom have filed a declaration of their intention to become citizens; and the chances are that in a year or two they will become American citizens. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows:

SABATH. Mr. Speaker, during the general debate on the bill each and every Member who took the floor has gone on record in the strongest and most positive terms that the Government has no right, nor was it intended, to take over or confiscate the property of German nationals. They have set forth clearly that under the treaty of 1785, entered into between the United States and Germany, in the event of war between the two nations the rights and properties of German citizens were guaranteed. Of course, it is not my intention in any way to defend the cause of the Imperialistic German Government. I, with a great many other Members, enjoined and condemned that Government for violating and disregarding the treaty during the war, and I ask now, Should we in peace be guilty of that for which we so strongly condemned the former German Government? Surely, Mr. Speaker, no one will contend that two wrongs will make a right. Very early in the war President Wilson and A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian, gave expression in messages and announcements with regard to the conduct of the war in accordance with the principles of international law. President Wilson in one of his messages stated:

We shall conduct our operations as belligerents without passion and ourselves observe with proud punctilio the principles of right and of fair play that we profess to be fighting for.

In the Official Bulletin of November 14, 1917, appeared an announcement of the then Alien Property Custodian, A. Mitchell Palmer, stating:

The purposes of Congress are to preserve enemy-owned property in the United States from loss and to prevent every use of it which may be hostile and detrimental to the United States. The Alien Property Custodian exercises the authority of a common-law trustee; there is no thought of a confiscation or dissipation of property thus held in trust.

With such expression from the President of the United States and the Alien Property Custodian at that crucial stage of the war, it is undisputed that they were aware of the rights and immunities of holders of private property. It is one of the most settled rules of international law that private property is immune and inviolable in time of war, and even in cases of conquest. Why, then, Mr. Speaker, the continuous holding of properties taken over during the war? The time is long past for the return of the properties, so why delay longer? I hope this great Nation of ours will not hesitate now in doing the proper, right, and honorable thing in returning the properties without further delay. It will demonstrate that we still adhere to old, honest traditions and will prove to the German citizenry that our fight was not against them but against the then German Imperialistic Government.

There are some who claim that section 5 of the treaty of January 5, 1921, gives us the right to hold the property for claims of our citizens. That might be so, but section 5 was embodied in the treaty in violation of the strict and positive provisions of the treaty of 1799, which provided:

ART. XXIV. * * And it is declared that neither the pretense that war dissolves all treaties, nor any other whatever, shall be considered as annulling or suspending this and the next preceding article, but that on the contrary that the state of war is precisely that for which they are provided, and during which they are to be as sacredly observed as the most acknowledged articles in the law of nature and nations.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in the taking over of the property by our Government and the placing of it in the hands of the Alien Custodian we need but to revert to the hearings and the speeches made on the floor of the House when we considered the legislation providing for it to determine what the true intent of Congress was. A perusal of the debate will satisfy the most doubtful person that the property was taken only to be held by the Alien Property Custodian so that it could not be used against our country during the war. The gentlemen who had charge of the bill on the floor of Congress, Mr. Montague, of Virginia, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Dewalt], both so positively stated. Therefore I ask, Mr. Speaker, what right have we to hold the properties any longer?

It is my opinion that a great injustice has been done; that all of the property has not been returned before this time; and, further, notwithstanding that all admit the property should be returned some day, why does this bill provide that but 10 per cent of it should be returned now; in other words, that we should do 10 per cent justice? Of course, I realize that even the return of 10 per cent of the properties will relieve about 30,000 people in starving and straitened circumstances, yet the lame justification is given that we should hold the balance as security for the claims of our own citizens. I am satisfied, Mr. Speaker, that we could return all of the property now in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian and that by retaining the German ships seized during the war we will find that the value of these ships alone will be more than sufficient to take care of every just claim of American citizens. It is a fact that we seized 126 ships during the war; 21 of them were turned over to the Army and Navy, and the balance, 105 in number, were held and used by our Government. The total tonnage of the 105 ships was over 700,000 tons. It is asserted that nearly a billion dollars' worth of claims will be filed with the Mixed Claims Commission against Germany and Austria. Precedents and statistics show the settlement of war claims in past wars have been adjudicated on an 8 per cent basis. Hence full settlement of all claims would be in the neighborhood of $80,000,000 or $100,000,000. Can it be denied that the value of a fleet of 105 vessels, whose tonnage is Letween 700,000 and 800,000 tons, will not serve as a guaranty for the payment of all claims allowed?

I am of the opinion that the people of this country are unwilling that our Government should hold this property to satisfy unreasonable and illegal claims filed by marine insurance companies. These companies charged tremendous premiums during the war, which premiums were added to the cost of transportation and merchandise shipments.

It is a source of regret that not even a provision was made in this bill for the return of the properties of Austrians and Hungarians, against whom, I understand, we have no claims, unless it be that of some fictitious claims of the marine insurance companies. The Government of Austria-Hungary has not seized or taken any property or business owned within its borders by the citizens of the United States. Of course, it was decreed that no such property or income therefrom could be taken or sent from Austria to the United States or its allies during the war.

The committee, Mr. Speaker, also failed to include a provision in the bill which would allow the return of property of persons permanently resident of the United States, Today, as before the war in 1914, we have hundreds of American citizens in every country of the world. When the war broke out there were thousands of American citizens in Germany and Austria-Hungary, there were also some who were not citizens but who were permanent residents of the United States, they having resided in our country upward of 10 years and longer. They were of that class of former subjects of Germany and Austria who had expatriated themselves by reason of absence from their native country beyond the period of 10 years

The German military law required that all reserves present themselves within 10 years after their regular service and a failure to so report would revoke their citizenship. There were many of this class who temporarily left the United States to sojourn in Germany and Austria, some on business, some for their health, others visiting their relatives, many of whom had return transportation to this country, who, when the war broke out, found it impossible to return to the United States, they being held there against their will by the German Government. Notwithstanding that they made many efforts to leave they were unable to do so, owing to the strict regulations governing the entry and departure of persons to and from the country. However, when opportunity did present itself they did leave and are again in the United States. Though we have authorized the return of the property of those who were suspected in the United States during the war, of those who were placed in detention camps, and those who were compelled to report to the offices of the Department of Justice throughout the war, we, at this late day, still refuse to return the property of these permanent residents of the United States who were not suspected and against whom no charges of disloyalty were What possible reason can there be that their property should not be returned to them immediately? Is there any possible justification for holding it longer? It is true that they not acquired American citizenship, but they have lost their German citizenship and are now, in the strictest legal interpretation, eltizens without a country but permanent residents of the United States. And yet they are denied the return of their property, and that, notwithstanding the fact the German Government nearly four years ago, by proper legislation, ordered the return of the property of American citizens which they seized.

Some gentlemen, Mr. Speaker, maintain that we are holding the property as security. Can anyone contend that international law or justice will permit the taking of property that we hold as custodians or bailees. It must and no doubt will be conceded by all familiar with the laws of our land that if any individual acting as custodian or bailee of any property taken by him as such who should fall to turn over property so taken and held by him when the action, cause, or time for which he received such property would no longer exist or would be terminated, could not only be prosecuted against civilly and in trover, but could be prosecuted criminally for wrongful conversion or larceny by bailee. The property held by the Alien Property Custodian was taken by him during the war for the purpose to preserve and, secondly, to prevent it from being used against our country during the duration of the war and for no other purpose. Therefore I feel that it is our duty—yes; justice demands—that the property shall be returned, and we can not justify in doing what our laws and what the international laws say is illegal and unlawful.

Mr. Speaker, if the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee had given any consideration to the evidence and to the law I feel that they would have, in addition, provided for the return of the property owned by the Austrian and Hungarian citizens and also by the resident aliens. In fact, I honestly believe that if the membership of this House could have considered the evidence and heard the legal arguments of some of the ablest international authorities and would be familiar with the precedents established by all the civilized nations, that the private property of enemies is inviolate, I feel that the amendment of the gentleman from Texas, or, at least, my amendment, would prevail. By continuing to hold 90 per cent of the property we are violating our precedents and the precedents established, as I said, by every civilized nation and are doing what no other civilized nation has ever been guilty of, namely, taking and holding property of individuals for liquidating claims of the Government.

Mr. Speaker, I again state that justice demands that we without delay order the return of this property.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I make the same

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the same request. The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, just a word about this amendment. It will hardly take me a minute to state it. If this amendment is agreed to it will return all property that belongs to Germans or Austrians. Notice the language of the amendment-

An individual who was at such timethat is, the time of the seizure a citizen of Germany, Austro-Hungary, or.

I imagine we do not want to do anything of that kind. This is the same question that was presented a while ago. It is unnecessary to talk about it. If this amendment is agreed it returns all property of every kind.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is in error.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath].

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. Sabath) there were—ayes 44, noes 84.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. That the "trading with the enemy act," as amended, is amended by adding thereto the following sections:

"SEC. 20. That no money or other property shall be paid, conveyed, transferred, assigned, or delivered under this act to any agent, attorney, or representative of any person entitled thereto, unless satisfactory evidence is furnished the Alien Property Custodian or the court, as the case may be, that the fee of such agent, attorney, or representative for services in connection therewith does not exceed 10 per cent of the value of such money or other property; but nothing in this section shall be construed as fixing such fees at 10 per cent of the value of such money or other property; such 10 per cent being fixed only as the maximum fee that may be allowed or accepted for such services. Any person accepting any fee in excess of such 10 per cent shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished as provided in section 16 hereof.

"SEC. 21. That the claim of any naturalized American citizen under the provisions of this act shall not be denied on the ground of any presumption of expatriation which has arisen against him, under the second sentence of section 2 of the act entitled 'An act in reference to the expatriation of citizens and their protection abroad, approved March 2, 1907, if he shall give satisfactory evidence to the Alien Property Custodian of his uninterrupted loyalty to the United States during his absence, and that he has returned to the United States, or that he, although destring to return, has been prevented from so returning by circumstances beyond his conbeen prevented from so returning by circumstances beyond his control.

"SEC. 22. No person shall be entitled to the return of any property or money under the provisions of this act who is a fugitive from justice from the United States or any State or Territory thereof or the District of Columbia.

"SEC. 23. The Alien Property Custodian is directed to pay to the person entitled thereto, from and after the time this section takes effect, the net income dividend, interest, annuity, or other earnings, accruing and collected thereafter, on any property or money held in trust for such person by the Alien Property Custodian or by the Treasury of the United States for the account of the Alien Property Custodian, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe.

Custodian, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe.

"Sec. 24. The Alien Property Custodian is authorized to pay all taxes (including special assessments), herefore or hereafter lawfully assessed by any body politic against any money or other property held by him or by the Treasurer of the United States under this act, and to pay the necessary expenses incurred by him or by any depositary for him in securing the possession, collection, or control of any such money or other property, or in protecting or administering the same. Such taxes and expenses shall be paid out of the money or other property against which such taxes are assessed or in respect of which such expenses are incurred, or (if such money or other property is insufficient) out of any other money or property held for the same person, notwithstanding the fact that a claim may have been filed or suit instituted under this act."

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amend-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Graham of Illinois: Page 14, line 8, strike out the word "Custodian" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Custodian or the court, as the case may be."

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, this is simply to make this section conform to the preceding sections of the trading with the enemy act, by which a claimant can either go into court or go before the Alien Property Custodian.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, if this bill becomes a law it will relieve all but about 7 per cent of those whose property is now held by the Alien Property Custodian. I sincerely hope that there will not be a single vote against the passage of this bill. The distress that is now prevalent among those whose property we are holding beggars all possible description. I trust this vote will be unanimous for the purpose of showing to these people who were our combatants only a short time ago that there is no animosity and no rancor in the hearts of Americans against the German people. We have many reasons to entertain a feeling of friendliness toward them. Sixty years ago, when this country was trembling in the balance and when it was not known from one day to another whether this Union would survive, the German people came to our relief in a most magnanimous way. Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Robert J. Walker, a citizen of Mississippi, and who remained loyal to the Union, was sent by Abraham Lincoln to the German people for relief. He succeeded in borrowing $250,000,000 from German citizens with which the North could prosecute the war. He succeeded in selling a billion dollars worth of bonds over there, the proceeds of which made it possible that our Government might survive. I know that war makes bitter enemies, but I do not believe that during the existence of the late war, with few exceptions, there was any hatred or feeling against German citizens. I do not believe there is any feeling of that character now, and there should not be; and if this bill is passed by the unanimous vote of this House, it will be the best possible assurance of this fact to these people who are so much in need of the friendly offices of this great Government

There is no need of our making a declaration that we will return the balance of this property. That goes without saying, for we have declared that we do not intend to confiscate portion of it. We have asked for no reparation. have asked for nothing except that which it is our duty to ask, that our nationals also receive the same treatment, which I believe they will receive at the hands of the German Government. I regret exceedingly that we have so long delayed the passage of this bill. But through the red tape that is ever present in transactions of this character it seems that it has been impossible to reach it sooner. But this Congress is drawing rapidly to a close, and we should be derelict in our duty, this Nation would be derelict in the duty it owes to these suffering people, if we should permit Congress not to pass this bill. I trust it will go through here at the earliest possible moment, so that there can be no excuse for its not passing at the other end of the Capitol. In so doing we will have performed a duty to humanity and a duty to our country. [Applause.]

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota, Mr. Chairman-

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Alabama on a motion to strike out the last word. Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. If it will not be taken out of my time. Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Not to be taken out of the gentleman's time, I should like to submit a request for unanimous consent, that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Reserving the right to object, I want five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. RAYBURN. I object.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas objects. Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I should like to amend the request by making it 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, upon yesterday the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, Doctor Temple, in undertaking to assert that there was justification by well-recognized precedents for the position for which he was contending, asserted that during the Civil War the officials of the Confederacy confiscated private property belonging to citizens of the Northern States. I am not in a position to deny the accuracy of that statement, but rather assume that it is true, because Doctor TEMPLE asserted it. But I think, for the sake of the RECORD and for students of this question who may read this debate, it may be a contribution to the literature on the subject to insert in the RECORD a quotation on this subject from Charles Cheny Hyde's recent work on international law, on page 238, as follows:

In the course of the Civil War the United States

Not the Confederacy, mark you-in its endeavor to suppress the insurrection, and by way of punishment for disloyalty and treason on the part of the owners, undertook by an act of Congress of July 17, 1862, to confiscate property found within the Union lines. The principle acted upon differed essentially from that involved in confiscating property of alien enemies, and gives no support by way of precedent to such procedure. On August 6, 1861, the Congress enacted a law for the confiscation of property purchased or acquired, sold, or given with intent to sid or abet or promote the insurrection or resistance to the laws, or in case the owner of property should knowingly use or employ it, or consent to the use or employment of it, for such purpose. It was thus the nature of the use of the property rather than the character of the owner which was made the ground of confiscation. It is not believed that this law, in view of the nature of the conflict then existing, indicates legislative approval of the confiscation in a foreign war of the property of alien enemies within the national domain. As careful an observer as Hall declared that this act of Congress was the only instance of belligerent confiscation of private property from the close of the Napoleonic wars until the time when he wrote; yet he expressed doubt as to whether the usage was old and broad enough to establish a rule applicable to all forms of private property.

Mr SANDERS of Indians. Will the gentlemen yield?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield. Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I would like to suggest to the gentleman along the same line that the Confederate Government passed a confiscatory act and Great Britain protested vigorously against it with reference to her nationals living in the North.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I thank the gentleman for his statement. Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I was supporting the gentleman. Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Alabama. referred to some remarks that I made yesterday. Here is what I said yesterday:

T. J. Lawrence, the author of an exceedingly valuable discussion of international law, says that only one instance of such confiscation can be found in the history of warfare since Napoleonic times, and that was in the heat of a civil war which we in America would like to forget, and consisted of confiscation by the Confederate Government of the property of those living within its borders who remained loyal to the North.

In the fifth edition of Lawrence's Principles of International Law, page 424, I find this language:

Law, page 424, I find this language:

The growth of the practice of allowing enemy subjects resident in a country to continue there unmolested during the war carried with it permission for them to retain their property; and in modern times the real property of enemy subjects has not been interfered with by the belligerent States in whose territory it was situated, even when the owners resided in their own or neutral States; the one exception being an act of the Confederate Congress, passed in 1861, for the appropriation of all enemy property found within the Confederacy, except public stocks and securities. This proceeding was deemed unwarrantably severe; and contrary usage has been so uniform that we may safely regard the old right to confiscate or sequestrate as having become obsolete through disuse.

I have here the act of the Confederate Congress, approved. August 30, 1861, that is referred to by Lawrence. I do not care to print it in the RECORD. I have also in my mind the correspondence between Fred J. Cridland, the acting consul at Richmond, and Lord Lyons. Cridland reports the seizure of 2,500 hogsheads of tobacco that belonged to British subjects because this property was in some way connected with the firm of August Belmont & Co., of New York. Lord Lyons in a dispatch dated at the foreign office, December 6, 1861, replies and discusses at considerable length the principles involved, and closes with the following paragraph:

Under these circumstances. I have to instruct you to remonstrate strongly with the secretary of state of the so-called Confederate States on the hardship and injustice of confiscating the property of neutrals under the sequestration act of the Confederate Congress.

I only rose because what I stated yesterday was referred to, and I think I have shown that my statement on yesterday was absolutely accurate. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to get into the discussion of the confiscation by the Confederate States and by the Federal Government of private property during the Civil War, but those of us who live in the South have understood that a good deal of cotton belonging to private citizens, animals, corn, and so forth, was taken, even the cover from the beds of the homes, and after the war the Federal Government confiscated millions of dollars under the guise of a cotton tax, which it has failed to pay back, though violative of every principle of right and justice operative in behalf of a defenseless people. I do not want to bring that into this controversy. But it does remind me that it was not what was taken for the maintenance of the Federal Army and the depredations during the war that has been so hard to forget, but what was done after the war. Things like this cotton tax, the period of carpet-bag rule, and so forth. When the war is on fight the best you can, and then when the war is over quit fighting. Either destroy utterly or leave the fellow you have been fighting in the best possible mental attitude to take his place in the world as a good neighbor. [Applause.] I think that is a sound proposition. I know it is. Now, I can not see the philosophy or reasoning for the procedure here contemplated.

Everybody says, you all say, that it is not contemplated that one single cent of this money being held by the Alien Property Custodian is to be confiscated. We proclaim that to the world in no uncertain terms. Then, in the name of common sense, what coercion, what advantage can we expect to exercise by reason of the retention of property which we declare we intend eventually to turn over to the owners? I can not get the sense of this from any angle. We have claims, I understand, of about a billion dollars filed against Germany and its nationals. We have claims, I understand, of We do not have enough on hand now to pay these claims if we retain all we have. If we are going to retain part, as is proposed by this bill, why not retain all? If we are going to return a part, why not return it all? I do not see the common sense of it, nor any possible benefit from this piecemeal procedure. We say we are not going to confiscate a cent, and yet our procedure is enough to make the world doubt the honesty of our declaration. The only thing I can see in this procedure is that it will make it necessary to retain on the pay roll the custodians, clerks, lawyers, and others who are holding this property.

There are too many of that sort of people living off of the wreckage of the war. The more they absorb the less there will remain to pay the world's war debts and rebuild its devastated areas and revive its normal activities. If we are going to confiscate this property finally, do it now. If we are going to turn it back, do it now and let these people who have been living off of this property for years find something else to do.

Somewhere, somehow in the economy of the world some one must pay the alien property custodians for their retention of this stuff. I say the world has enough debt and enough burden upon its back, without retaining those which can be gotten off. Turn back a part of what is not enough now to pay our claims, declaring at the same time we are going to turn the remainder back, but retain enough to justify hiring a lot of lawyers, clerks, and an Alien Property Custodian to fool around with this property, which we say we will eventually turn over, is a policy the wisdom of which I can not understand. That policy brings nothing to those who have suffered loss. It postpones the owners to whom we say we will eventually return it. It helps nobody except the custodians who are drawing their salaries from the earnings of the property, and possibly the banks in which money is deposited. I repeat, that the wise policy is to fight until the war is over. Then quit. Wind up as quickly as possible. Take what is to be taken. Give back what is to be given and get rid of the army of noncombatants who live off, as long as possible, that which is salvaged from the war. I hope the Senate will insist upon doing now the plain and common-sense thing, and that is to wind up the whole matter and let whatever of this property we say we are not going to confiscate, and we say we are not going to confiscate any of it, go back to the owners to whom we expect to give it in the next year or so.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman says that he hopes the Senate will do something. The gentleman is aware that the Democratic leader has a bill now before that body to take this property and with it pay American

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I do not care what the Democratic leader has done. I do not want the Republican side of the House when it occasionally gets half right to spoil its position by undertaking to follow the Democratic leader of another Chamber. What you ought to do when you are uncertain is to follow the Democratic leader on this side of the House. [Laughter and applause, l

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 14, line 22, strike out the words "Property Custodian or by the Treasury" and insert "Property Custodian or by the Treasurer."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill with the amendments to the House with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the committee rose, and Mr. Campbell of Kansas having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. Anderson, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 14222, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendments to final passage, The SPEAKER pro tempore. The previous question is ordered under the rule. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en grosse. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. RAYBURN moves to recommit the bill H. R. 14222 to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, with instructions to report the same back forthwith with the following amendment: On page 1, lines 5 and 6, strike out the words "not an enemy or ally of enemy."

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 125, nays 181, answering "present" 2, and not voting 119, as follows:

ernethy	Dunbar	Lee, Ga.	Sabath
non	Favrot	Linthicum	Sandlin
well	Fields	Logan	Sears
nkhead	Fish	London	Sinclair
ek	Fisher	Luce	Sisson
The state of the state of	Frear	Lyon ·	Smithwick
ick	Fulmer	McClintle	Speaks
inton	Funk	McDuffie	Sproul
wling	Garrett, Tenn.	MacGregor	Stafford
X	Garrett, Tex.	Maloney	Steagall
ggs	Hawes	Mansfield	Stedman
tten	Hayden	Martin	Stevenson
owne, Wis.	Herrick	Mead	Sumners, Ter
chanan	Hickey	Montague	Sweet
rnes, S. C.	Hogan	Moore, Va.	Tague
rns, Tenn.	Hooker	Morgan	Ten Eyek
ntrill	Huddleston	Nelson, J. M.	Tinkham
rew	Hudspeth	Norton	Turner
rter	Hukriede	O'Connor	Tyson
almers	Hull	Oldfield	Upshaw
gue	Humphreys, Miss.	Oliver	Vaile
rk, Fla.	Jacoway	Patterson, Mo.	Vinson
ekran	James	Perlman	Weaver
lier	Jeffers, Ala.	Quin	Wilson per, Wis.	Johnson, Ky.	Rainey, Ill.	Wise
ighlin	Jones, Tex.	Raker	Woodruff
8p	Kissel	Ramseyer	Woodyard
llen	Kraus	Rankin	Wright
vis, Tenn.	Lanham	Rayburn	Wurzbach
al	Lankford	Riordan
minick	Larsen, Ga.	Roach
ughton	Lazaro	Rouse

	NA	15-151.
ckerman nderson ndrew, Mass. ndrews, Nebr. nthony ppleby rentz keson arbout gg xier and, Va. oles ond rooks, Pa. alwinkle artness utler uble urtness utler uble nindblom arke, N. Y. ole, Iowa ole, Ohio olton ooper, Ohio ppley ago	Drewry Driver Dupré Edmonds Elliott Ellis Evans Fairfield Faust Fenn Fess Focht Frothey Foster French Frothingham Fuller Gallivan Gensman Generd Gifford Gilbert Graham, Ill. Green, Iowa Greene, Wass. Greene, Vt. Griest Griffin Hadley Hammer	Humphrey, Nebr. Husted Ireland Jefferis, Nebr. Johnson, S. Dak. Kearns Kelley, Mich. Kelley, Mich. Ketly, Pa. Kendall Ketcham Kincheloe Kirkpatrick Kline, N. Y. Kline, Pa. Langley Larson, Minn. Lawrence Layton Lea, Calif. Leatherwood Lehlbach Lineberger Little Longworth Lowrey Luhring McArthur McCormick McFadden McKenzie	Michener Miller Mondell Moore, Ohio Moores, Ind. Mott Murphy Nelson, Me. Nelson, A. P. Newton, Min Newton, Mo. Nolan Ogden Paige Parker, N. J. Parker, N. Y. Parks, Ark. Paul Perkins Porter Pou Purnell Ransley Reed, W. Va. Reed, W. Va. Rhodes Riddlek Robertson
ramton	Hardy, Colo.	McLaughlin, Mich	Robsion
ale	Haugen Hawley	McLaughlin, Nebr McPherson	Rogers
allinger	Henry Hersey	MacLafferty Madden	Sanders, Ind. Shaw
empsey enison	Hicks Hill	Magee Mapes	Shelton Shreve
ickinson	Hoch	Merritt	Sinnott

Smith, Idaho
	Temple	Underhill	Winslow
Snyder Stephens	Thompson Thorpe	Vestal Walters	Wood, Ind. Wyant
Strong, Kans.	Tillman	Ward, N. Y.	Yates
Summers, Wash,	Tilson	Wason	Young
wank wing	Timberlake Tincher	White, Kans. Williams, Ill.
aylor, Tenn.	Towner	Williamson
	ANSWERED	"PRESENT "-2.
	Lee, N. Y.	Rucker
	NOT VO	TING-119.
nsorge	Dyer	Knight	Scott, Mich.
Bacharach Barkley	Echols	Knutson	Scott, Tenn. Siegel
leedy	Fairchild Fitzgerald	Kopp Kreider	Slemp
enham	Free	Kunz	Smith, Mich.
lird lakeney	Freeman Gahn	Lampert McLaughlin, Pa.	Snell Steenerson
land, Ind.	Garner	McLaughlin, Pa. McSwain	Stiness Stoll
rand	Glynn Geldsborough	Michaelson Mills	Strong, Pa.
rennan	Goodykoontz	Moore, Ill.	Sullivan
brooks, Ill. brown, Tenn.	Gorman Gould	Morin Mudd	Taylor, Ark. Taylor, Colo.
Burdick	Graham, Pa.	O'Brien	Taylor, Cole. Taylor, N. J.
urke turton	Hardy, Tex. Hays	Olpp Overstreet	Thomas Treadway
annen	Himes	Park, Ga.	Tucker
handler, N. Y. handler, Okla.	Huck Hutchinson	Patterson, N. J. Petersen	Volgt Volk
lasson	Johnson, Wash.	Pringey	Volstead
louse odd	Johnson, Wash. Jones, Pa.	Radeliffe Rainey, Ala.	Ward, N. C. Watson
ollins	Kahn	Reber	Webster
Connally, Tex.	Keller Kennedy	Rose Rosenbloom	Wheeler White, Me.
rowther	Kiess	Rossdale	Williams, Tex.
Davis, Minn. Dowell	Kindred King	Ryan Sanders, N. Y.	Wingo Woods, Va.
rane	Kitchin	Sanders, Tex.	Zihlman
)unn	Kleczka	Schall
	on to recommit		A SAME THE AS
		llowing additions	il pairs:
On the vote:		mass days - (to the bart had been Treadway (agai
Mr. Kindro	d (for) with	Mr. Pottoner	Jersey (against). of New Jersey against).	a (101) WITH	mi. Patterson	of New Jersey
	(for) with Mr	. Crowther (aga	inst).
	way watti mat. Is	urdick (against)	A ST. Martinari Ly face
General pair	8:		· The Australia (6)
General pair Mr. Cannon	es: with Mr. Taylo		• Continue (6) 160 Continue (10) 20 Continue (10)
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi	es: with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand.		The continuent of the con
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w	es: with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand, with Mr. Kunz,	r of Arkansas,
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller	es: with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. ith Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie	r of Arkansas,
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller w Mr. Connolly	with Mr. Tayle th Mr. Brand, oth Mr. Kunz, with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan	r of Arkansas, en. ia with Mr. Woo
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w	with Mr. Tayle th Mr. Brand. oith Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of	r of Arkansas. n. ia with Mr. Woof Georgia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. ith Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park o with Mr. Garne	r of Arkansas. n. ia with Mr. Woof Georgia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oth Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kit	en. ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r.	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oth Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kit of Pennsylvani	r of Arkansas. ia with Mr. Wood Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sand	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis oi	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oith Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park or with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani Minnesota wit Minnesota wit	r of Arkansas, in. ia with Mr. Woo f Georgia, r. chin. a with Mr. Sano h Mr. Tucker,	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oith Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park or with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani Minnesota with fillineis with	r of Arkansas, in. ia with Mr. Woo f Georgia, r. chin. a with Mr. Sano h Mr. Tucker, Mr. Barkley,	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller w Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi	with Mr. Tayle th Mr. Brand. ith Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kit of Pennsylvani f Minnesota with ft Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor	r of Arkansas, in with Mr. Woo f Georgia, r. chin. a with Mr. Sand h Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough,	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oth Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani Minnesota with ff Illineis with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. McSw:	r of Arkansas, in with Mr. Woo f Georgia, r. chin. a with Mr. Sand h Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough,	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand, oith Mr. Kunz, with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Collins, e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvan Minnesota with Mr. Hilmois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. McSwith Mr. Stoll.	r of Arkansas. ia with Mr. Wood Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sand Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough.	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy w	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oith Mr. Brand. oith Mr. G'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvan Minnesota with ff Illnois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. McSwi th Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woo f Georgia, r. chin. a with Mr. San h Mr. Tucker, Mr. Barkley, ough, ain, n of Mississippi,	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy w Mr. Fitzgera	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oith Mr. Brand. oith Mr. G'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani Minnesota with fillinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. McSwi th Mr. McSwi th Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ld with Mr. Th	r of Arkansas, in with Mr. Woo f Georgia, r. chin. a with Mr. Sand h Mr. Tucker, Mr. Barkley, ough, ain. n of Mississippi, omas.	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy w Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. ith Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani ' Minnesota with ff Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ld with Mr. Thech with Mr. We	en. ia with Mr. Wood f Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sand h Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. 'ingo.	ods of Virginia, ders of Texas,
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Bachara Mr. Freeman	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand, with Mr. Brand, with Mr. G'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Callins, e with Mr. Collins, e with Mr. Kitz of Pennsylvani Minnesota with fillinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll, with Mr. Johnso ld with Mr. Taylo th Wr. With Mr. We with Mr. We with Mr. We with Mr. Taylo	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woo f Georgia, r. chin. a with Mr. San h Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley, ough, ain, n of Mississippi, omas. 'ingo, or of Colorado,	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Freeman Mr. Johnson	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand, with Mr. Brand, with Mr. G'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Callins, e with Mr. Collins, e with Mr. Kitz of Pennsylvani Minnesota with fillinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll, with Mr. Johnso ld with Mr. Taylo th Wr. With Mr. We with Mr. We with Mr. We with Mr. Taylo	r of Arkansas. ia with Mr. Wood Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sand Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ('ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia	ods of Virginia.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Johnson Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaele Mr. Brennar	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani ' Minnesota with ff Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Holnso ld with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ld with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha with Mr. Dran	en. ia with Mr. Wood f Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sand h Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia ardy of Texas. be.	ods of Virginia. ders of Texas. ms of Texas.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Freemar Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani Minnesota with ff Illineis with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha i with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Dran ith Mr. Dran ith Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chia. a with Mr. Sanda Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia ardy of Texas. ie.	ders of Texas.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Johnson Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Brand. with Mr. Garne to of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Glarne th Mr. Collins. with Mr. Kit. of Pennsylvani Minnesota with fillineis with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Johnso ald with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illineis with	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia, r. chia. a with Mr. Sanch Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley, ough, ain. n of Mississippi, omas, 'ingo, or of Colorado, with Mr. Willia ardy of Texas, ie. f. North Carolina, Mr. Overstreet,	ders of Texas.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Burton Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Freeman Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. oith Mr. Brand. oith Mr. Garne to of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Carne to Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Goldsbor ith Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Holmso ld with Mr. The ch with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha with Mr. Drar ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey	r of Arkansas. ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sandh Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Williamrdy of Texas. ie. in North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alsbama.	ods of Virginia. ders of Texas. ms of Texas.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result of	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Carne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvan i' Minnesota with ff Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey f the vote was	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sandh Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. lingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia nrdy of Texas. ie. line. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as al	ders of Texas. ms of Texas.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Freeman Mr. Johnson Mr. Heeman Mr. Brennan Mr. Brennan Mr. Brennan Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The SPEAK assage of the	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Kit. of Pennsylvani Minnesota with ff Illineis with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ald with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illineis with ith Mr. Rainey f the vote was ER pro tempor bill.	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chia. a with Mr. Sanch Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. (ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia nrdy of Texas. ie. f North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as al	ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Burton Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzera Mr. Bachara Mr. Freeman Mr. Johnson Mr. Heeman Mr. Brennan Mr. Brennan Mr. Brennan Mr. Brennan Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The SPEAK assage of the	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Kit. of Pennsylvani Minnesota with ff Illineis with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ald with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illineis with ith Mr. Rainey f the vote was ER pro tempor bill.	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chia. a with Mr. Sanch Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. (ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia nrdy of Texas. ie. f North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as al	ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Burton Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Freemar Mr. Johnson Mr. Heemar Mr. Brennar Mr. Brennar Mr. Brennar Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result of The SPEAK assage of the Mr. MONDE	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Kit. of Pennsylvani Minnesota with ff Illineis with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ald with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illineis with ith Mr. Rainey f the vote was ER pro tempor bill.	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chia. a with Mr. Sanch Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. (ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia nrdy of Texas. ie. f North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as al	ders of Texas. ms of Texas.
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Breons Mr. Breons Mr. Mudd w The result o The SPEAK assage of the Mr. MONDE nd nays. The yeas and	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani ' Minnesota with of Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Hohnso ld with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey of the vote was ER pro tempor bill. LLL. Mr. Speal	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sandh Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. lingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia nrdy of Texas. ie. lingo. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as all re. The question ker, on that I of	ods of Virginia. ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the demand the yeas
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Fachara Mr. Freemar Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result o The SPEAK assage of the Mr. MONDE nd nays. The yeas and The Clerk ca	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani ' Minnesota with ff Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ald with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha in with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey of the vote was ER pro tempor bill. LLL. Mr. Speal	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chia. a with Mr. Sanda Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia ardy of Texas. ie. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as all re. The question ker, on that I of	ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the demand the yeas
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Freemar Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result o The SPEAK assage of the Mr. MONDE nd nays. The yeas and The Clerk ca	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani ' Minnesota with ff Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Johnso ald with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha in with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey of the vote was ER pro tempor bill. LLL. Mr. Speal	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sandh Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. lingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia nrdy of Texas. ie. lingo. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as all re. The question ker, on that I of	ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the demand the yeas
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Fachara Mr. Freemar Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result o The SPEAK assage of the Mr. MONDE nd nays. The yeas and The Clerk ca	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Park of with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani ' Minnesota with ff Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Holmsold with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey f the vote was ER pro tempor bill. LLL. Mr. Speal I nays were ord uled the roll, an sent "1, not vot	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chia. a with Mr. Sanda Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia ardy of Texas. ie. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as all re. The question ker, on that I of	ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the demand the yeas
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Counolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Freemar Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Brennar Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result of The SPEAK assage of the Mr. MONDE nd nays. The yeas and The Clerk ca nswered "pre	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani ' Minnesota with of Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha i with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Rainey of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey of the vote was ER pro tempor bill. LLL. Mr. Speal d nays were ord ulled the roll, an sent " 1, not vot YEA	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sandh Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia ardy of Texas. ie. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as alire. The question ker, on that I of	ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the demand the yeas
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore o Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Burton Mr. Beedy w Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result o The SPEAK assage of the Mr. MONDE nd nays. The yeas and The Clerk ca nswered "pre	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. Co'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Carne th Mr. Carne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kite of Pennsylvan if Minnesota with ff Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. HeSwi th Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey f the vote was ER pro tempor bill. LLL. Mr. Speni d nays were ord lled the roll, an sent " 1, not vot YEA Arentz Asweft	r of Arkansas. ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sandh Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. (ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Williandy of Texas. ie. f North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as alle. The question ker, on that I of lered. dethere were—ying 115, as follor s—300. Benham Bixler	ders of Texas. mes of Texas. coverecorded. n now is on the demand the yeas reas 300, nays 11, ws: Box Brand
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Connolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Burton Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Freeman Mr. Johnson Mr. Heeday Mr. Brooks Mr. Brooks Mr. My. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result o The SPEAK Massage of the Mr. MONDE	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Brand. with Mr. Brand. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Callins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Collins. with Mr. Goldsbor of Pennsylvani Minnesota with fillinois with fillinois with Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Hon with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey f the vote was ER pro tempor bill. ELL. Mr. Speal Anays were ord and nays were ord and nays were ord led the roll, an sent "1, not vot YEA Arentz Aswell Atkeson Rankhead	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chin. a with Mr. Sanda Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia nrdy of Texas. ie. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as all re. The question ker, on that I of ered. d there were—ying 115, as follor S—300. Benham	ods of Virginia. ders of Texas. ms of Texas. bove recorded. n now is on the demand the yeas reas 300, nays 11, ws:
General pair Mr. Cannon Mr. Cannon Mr. Snell wi Mr. Morin w Mr. Keller v Mr. Counolly Mr. Kiess w Mr. Dowell Mr. Olpp wi Mr. Radcliff Mr. Graham Mr. Davis of Mr. Moore of Mr. Free wi Mr. Burton Mr. Dunn w Mr. Beedy v Mr. Fitzgera Mr. Bachara Mr. Freemar Mr. Johnson Mr. Michaels Mr. Brennar Mr. Kahn w Mr. Brooks Mr. Mudd w The result o The SPEAK Massage of the Mr. MONDE Ind nays. The yeas and The Clerk ca	with Mr. Taylo th Mr. Brand. with Mr. Kunz. with Mr. O'Brie of Pennsylvan ith Mr. Collins. with Mr. Garne th Mr. Collins. e with Mr. Kito of Pennsylvani Minnesota wit of Illinois with th Mr. Goldsbor with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Stoll. with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Tayl of Washington son with Mr. Ha in with Mr. Dran ith Mr. Ward of of Illinois with ith Mr. Rainey of the vote was ER pro tempor bill. LLL. Mr. Speal d nays were ord ulled the roll, an sent " 1, not vot YEA Arentz Asweh Atkeson	r of Arkansas, ia with Mr. Woof Georgia. r. chia. a with Mr. Sanda Mr. Tucker. Mr. Barkley. ough. ain. n of Mississippi. omas. ingo. or of Colorado. with Mr. Willia ardy of Texas. ie. North Carolina. Mr. Overstreet. of Alabama. announced as all re. The question ker, on that I of ered. dethere were—ying 115, as follor S—300. Benham Bixler Elack	ods of Virginia. ders of Texas. ms of Texas. cove recorded. n now is on the demand the yeas reas 300, nays 11, ws:

Burdick	Gifford	McArthur	Rodenberg
Burtness	Graham, Ill.	McClintic	Rogers
Butler Byrnes, S. C.	Green, Iowa Greene, Mass.	McCormick McDuffie	Rouse Rucker
Byrnes, S. C. Byrns, Tenn. Cable	Greene, Mass. Greene, Vt. Griest	McFadden McKenzie	Sabath Sanders, Ind.
Campbell, Kans. Campbell, Pa.	Griffin	McLaughlin, Mic McLaughlin, Neb	h.Sandlin
Campbell, Pa. Cantrill	Hadley Hardy, Cole.	McPherson	r.Sears Shelton
Carew	Hardy, Cole. Hardy, Tex.	MacGregor	Shreve
Carter Chalmers	Haugen Hawes	MacLafferty Madden	Sinclair Sinnott
Chindblom Christopherson	Hawley	Magee Maloney	Sisson
Clague	Hayden Henry	Mansfield	Smith, Idaho Smithwick
Clark, Fla. Clarke, N. Y.	Herrick Hersey	Mapes Martin	Speaks Sproul
Cockran	Hickey	Mead	Stafford
Cole, Iowa Cole, Ohio	Hicks Hill	Merritt Michener	Steagall Stedman
Collier	Hoch	Miller	Stephens
Colton Cooper, Obio	Hogan Huddleston	Mondell Montague	Stevenson Strong, Kans.
Cooper, Obio Cooper, Wis. Copley	Hudspeth	Moore, Ohio Moore, Va.	Strong, Pa.
Coughlin	Hukriede Hull	Moores, Ind.	Sumners, Tex. Swank
Crago Crisp	Humphreys, Miss.	Morgan	Sweet Swing
Cullen	Husted	Murphy	Tague
Curry	Ireland Jacoway	Nelson, Me. Nelson, A. P.	Taylor, Tenn. Temple
Dallinger	James	Nelson, J. M.	Ten Eyck
Darrow Davis, Tenn.	Jeffers, Ala. Johnson, Ky.	Newton, Minn. Newton, Mo.	Thompson Thorpe
Deal	Johnson, S. Dak.	Nolan	Tilson
Dempsey Denison	Kearns Kelley, Mich.	Norton O'Connor	Timberlake Tincher
Dickinson Dominick	Kelley, Mich. Kelley, Pa. Kendall	Oldfield	Tinkham Towner
Dowell	Ketcham	Oliver	Turner
Dunbar Echols	Kirkpatrick Kissel	Paige Parker N I	Tyson Underhill
Edmonds	Kline, N. Y. Kline, Pa.	Parker, N. J. Parker, N. Y. Patterson, Mo.	Upshaw
Elliott Evans	Kline, Pa. Kopp	Patterson, Mo. Paul	Vaile Vestal
Fairfield	Kraus	Perkins	Vinson
Faust Favrot	Langley Lanham	Perlman Porter	Veigt Volstead
Fenn Fess	Lankford	Pou	Walters
Fields	Larsen, Ga. Larson, Minn.	Purnell Quin	Ward, N. Y. Wason
Fish Fisher	Lawrence Lazaro	Rainey, III. Raker	Weaver
Focht	Lea, Calif.	Ramseyer	White, Kans. Williams, III.
Fordney Foster	Leatherwood Lee, Ga.	Rankin Ransley	Williamson Wilson
Frear	Lehibach	Rayburn	Wingo
French Frothingham	Lineberger Linthicum	Reece Reed, N. Y.	Winslow Wise
Fuller	Little	Reed, W. Va.	Wood, Ind.
Fulmer Funk	Logan London	Rhodes Ricketts	Woodruff Weedyard
Gallivan	Longworth	Riddick	Wright
Garrett, Tenn. Garrett, Tex.	Lowrey Luce	Riordan Roach	Wurzbach Wyant
Gensman	Luhring	Robertson	Yates
Gernerd	Lyon	Robsion	Zihlman
Diana Va	Dupré NAYS		There are
Bland, Va. Drewry	Gilbert	Hooker Jones, Tex.	Parks, Ark. Tillman
Driver	Hammer	Kincheloe PRESENT "-1.
		N. Y.
A more than the least least		ING—115.	Court Tree
Ansorge Bacharach	Fairchild Fitzgerald	Knutson Kreider	Scott, Mich. Scott, Tenn.
Barkley	Free Freeman	Kunz	Shaw
Beedy Bird	Gahn	Lampert Layton	Siegel Slemp
Blakeney Bowers	Garner Glynn	McLaughlin, Pa. McSwain	Smith, Mich. Snell
Brennan	Goldshorough	Michaelson	Snyder
Brooks, Ill. Brown, Tenn.	Goodykoontz Gorman	Mills Moore, Ill.	Steenerson Stiness
Burke	Gould	Morin	Stoll
Burton Cannon	Graham, Pa. Hays	Mudd O'Brien	Suffivan Summers, Wash
Chandler, N. Y. Chandler, Okla.	Himes Huck	Olpp Overstreet	Taylor, Ark. Taylor, Colo.
Classon	Hutchinson	Park, Ga.	THEOR. N. J.
Clouse Codd	Jefferis, Nebr. Johnson, Miss. Johnson, Wash.	Patterson, N. J. Petersen	Thomas Treadway
Collins	Johnson, Wash,	Pringey	Lucker
Connally, Tex. Connelly, Pa.	Jones, Pa. Kahn	Radcliffe Rainey, Ala.	Ward, N. C.
Cramton Crowther	Keller Kennedy	Reber Rose	Watson
Davis, Minn.	Kiess	Rosenbloom	Webster Wheeler
Donghton Drane	Kindred	Rossdale Ryan	White, Me. Williams, Tex.
Dunn	Kitchin	Sanders, N. Y.	Woods, Va.
Dyer Ellis	Kleczka Knight	Sanders, Tex. Schall	Young
So the bill w	A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR
	nonnead the fall	owing milition	ol material

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:
Mr. Cramton with Mr. Garner.
Mr. Treadway with Mr. Doughton.

Mr. Snell with Mr. Kindred.

Mr. Lampert with Mr. Sullivan. Mr. Bacharach with Mr. McSwain.

Mr. Snyder with Mr. Kitchin.

Mr. Taylor of New Jersey with Mr. Drane.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. On motion of Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORBOW.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee.

see objects.

INCOME TAX OF NONRESIDENT ALIENS.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 14050) a bill unanimously reported by the Committee on Ways and Means, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. It will only take a short time to dispose of it.

Mr. MADDEN. Is it a privileged bill?
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa calls up a bill which the Clerk will report.

Mr. BLANTON. May I understand what it is that the gen-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman presents a privileged bill which the Clerk will report.

Mr. BLANTON. But I do not want the unanimous-consent privilege to pass

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It has not been put yet. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14050) to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to income tax of nonresident aliens.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Green] asks unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, how long will it take to pass it?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. About 10 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. There will be debate on it. It is now half-past 5. Why not put it off until to-morrow?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I did not think there would be any debate on it. It has been unanimously reported by the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, this bill has had a unanimous report from the Committee on Ways and Means. I have discussed the matter with my two Democratic colleagues that I could get access to—the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Coller], and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Oldfield] and they will have no objection, and I myself shall not object to the consideration of this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole. I want to say that if that is done there will be no general debate at all. It will be considered under the five-minute rule, and I should not think it would take more than a very few minutes to dispose of it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, let the bill be reported be-fore the stage of the unanimous-consent privilege is passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 210 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended, to take effect January 1, 1922, to read as follows: " NORMAL TAX.

"SEC. 210. (a) That in lieu of the tax imposed by section 210 of the revenue act of 1918 there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every individual (except as provided in subdivision (b) of this section) a normal tax of 8 per cent of the amount of the net income in excess of the credits provided in section 216, except that in the case of a citizen or resident of the United States the rate upon the first $4,000 of such excess amount shall be 4 per cent.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It will be practically impossible for a person who is not familiar with the revenue act to understand the reading of the bill. Perhaps the gentleman would be satisfied if I made a statement about it.

Mr. STAFFORD. If it is an important amendment we should have a statement of it. It seems to be an amendment of an important revenue act.

COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Iowa, if I understood it correctly from the reading, if that is ex post facto law, to take effect January 1, 1922, a year ago?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The bill would apply to taxes to be paid this year. This is simply a reciprocity bill with Canada, Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas ob-

AMENDMENT OF THE WAR RISK INSURANCE ACT-CONFERENCE REPORT (REPT. NO. 1697).

Mr. SWEET, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, submitted for printing under the rule the conference report and accompanying statement on the bill (H. R. 10003) to amend and modify the war risk insurance act.

RURAL CREDIT LEGISLATION.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the Record, in 8-point type, a letter from the Secretary of Commerce, and another letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, in regard to pending rural credit legislation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minne-sota asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject indicated in 8-point type. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Following are the letters referred to:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE. OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY. Washington, February 23, 1923.

Hon. SYDNEY ANDERSON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Congressman; I have your letter of to-day's date requesting my present views as to the Lenroot-Anderson rural credit bills. As you know, this department recommended the principles now incorporated in this bill over a year ago, and we would feel it would be a great disaster if it should fail to become law.

It is scarcely necessary to repeat that the principles of this bill were recommended by the Joint Commission of Agricultural Inquiry after consultation with responsible banking authorities. It was formally approved by the Federal Reserve Board on January 26, 1922; indorsed as sound by the Treasury Department on February 22, 1922; was again recommended by the credits committee of the Agricultural Conference, upon which the Federal Reserve Board, the War Finance Corporation, were represented, together with other responsible financial authorities. It has been earnestly recommended and supported by the President and has been passed unanimously by the Thus the bill has had most unusual consideration and Senate. the widest of support.

This bill extends the functions of the Farm Loan Board so as to adequately mobilize that part of needed farm credit "intermediate" between farm mortgages and commercial paper, the former being now organized under the Farm Loan Board, the latter under the Federal reserve system. It is no departure from the underlying principle of the public support to mobilization of private credit, as exemplified and in successful operation by the Farm Loan Board in farm mortgages. Its funds, except the temporary capital advanced by the Treasury, must be obtained from the investing public, and are thus under constant check of confidence of the investors. is my own opinion that this machinery should be set in motion at the earliest moment.

The diminished buying power of our farmers to a point below pre-war levels and the fact that they are in the middle and far West paying 8 to 12 per cent interest at the present moment on this type of credit should be ample evidence of necessity for constructive aid. The only way to secure a reduction of these rates is to erect the machinery by which the investment capital of the East may flow easily and safely into these areas.

There are many useful provisions in the Capper bill, but I do not believe that its author expected that its permissive character would replace the positive machinery and assurance to the farmer of immediate remedy through an existing and definite agency, as provided in the Lenroot-Anderson bill.

A very important reason for the provision of this credit ma-chinery is that much of the "intermediate" farmers' credit falls outside of the real field of the Federal reserve system. is just as important to the farmer as to the commercial public that the demand deposits of the country should be confined to very short term credits. And unless some organized institution is provided which can positively mobilize investment capital of the country to supply credit need which lies outside of the natural and economic purview of the demand deposits mobilized under the Federal reserve system then the system itself will be in constant danger of encroachment.

I am advised that even if it should come about that ade-"intermediate farm credits" were organized through the Federal reserve system there is danger that they would be secured in emergency through inflation of the currency. To expand the ability of the Farm Loan Board to mobilize the private investment capital of the country through a temporary advance of capital from the Treasury would not have this result.

Yours faithfully,

HERBERT HOOVER,

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, Washington, February 23, 1923.

Hon. SYDNEY ANDERSON, House of Representatives.

Dear Mr. Anderson: I have your letter of February 22, in which you suggest that, in view of what has been said recently with regard to rural-credits legislation, it would be helpful if I would restate my position on this question. I am glad to comply with this suggestion.

A considerable part of the farmer's credit needs are to be classed neither with short-time credit, as thought of in commercial circles, nor long-term mortgage credit, but are represented by what we have come to call intermediate credit; that is, a term of credit which corresponds fairly well with the farmer's turnover period, which varies from six months to as long as three years in the case of breeding stock. The need for some such system of intermediate credit has been recognized for 30 years or more, and has been brought to public attention in a strikingly emphatic way during the past three years. The lack of it has caused hundreds of thousands to fall, has imposed great financial suffering upon millions, and has injuriously affected general business and industry. In my opinion, there is nothing that can be done through legislation that will be so helpful in reestablishing agriculture on a sound basis as the prompt enactment of a satisfactory rural credits bill; and the reestablishment of agriculture is now generally looked upon as a national need.

The two bills passed by the Senate and now in the House, while similar in some of their provisions, have little in common in their main features.

The Lenroot-Anderson bill is a true rural-credits measure as that term is generally understood.

The Capper bill is not a rural-credits measure in the usual meaning of the term, but is designed to encourage by Government authority the organization of private corporations organized and operated for the profit of their stockholders and supervised by the Comptroller of the Currency. These corporations are to have a capital stock in a minimum amount of $250,000 and are authorized to issue debentures to an amount not exceeding ten times their paid-in capital and surplus, on the basis of live-stock paper and agricultural paper when secured by warehouse receipts. The debentures are further secured by certain deposits in a Federal reserve bank. Larger rediscount corporations with a capital stock of not less than $1,000,000 may also be organized, and these, too, may issue debentures on a plan similar to the smaller corporation. Special provisions are made for the supervision of corporations organized under the act from the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, as well as for the examination of the institutions and inspection of the security back of the paper handled by them. The bill is carefully drawn and the credit facilities it authorizes may prove highly useful to ranching interests, if actually brought into ex-The plan does not, however, meet the farmer's needs for intermediate credit. It is not designed to meet the needs of the great surplus-producing States in which diversified farming is followed. It does not protect borrowers against excessive interest rates. It gives the color of Federal support to large money-making corporations organized for that especial purpose.

The Lenroot-Anderson bill, on the other hand, sets up definite intermediate-credit facilties, with powers and functions broad enough to serve agriculture in all its phases. The bill owes its origin to a plan devised about a year ago as a result of the thorough and exhaustive studies by the Joint Commission of Agricultural Inquiry. The plan has received the careful study of a large number of persons outside of Congress, as well as within, who know the credits needs of agriculture not only from the banker's standpoint but also from that of the farmer. As a result of this study the original plan has been amplified and amended in many particulars.

The Lenroot-Anderson bill as it passed the Senate has re-celved the cordial approval of the President and has been received by the farmers of the country as a well-considered effort to meet their credit needs. The outstanding features of the bill are:

- 1. A farm-credits department is set up in each of the 12 Federal land banks, to be managed by the "district directors" appointed by the Federal Farm Loan Board for the various banks.
- 2. The Federal Government will subscribe to the capital stock of each farm-credits department, as called for by these departments, up to an amount of $5,000,000. If in case of any department such capital should prove insufficient, it may, with the approval of the President of the United States, be increased. provided that the aggregate of such increase for all departments shall not exceed $60,000,000.
- 3. The earnings of each department are to be applied in turn to expenses of operation, to a 4 per cent dividend on the stock, to the building up of a surplus until such fund reaches $2,000,-000, after which 25 per cent of the earnings go to the retirement of the Government's capital stock until it is reduced to $1,000,000.
- 4. The farm-credits departments are authorized to discount and to purchase agricultural and live-stock paper having a maturity of not less than six months nor more than three years, for and from banks, live-stock loan companies, and farmers' cooperative credit associations, and may also make loans direct to associations under specified conditions.

5. To provide additional loanable funds, collateral trust debentures may be issued by the departments in an amount not to exceed ten times their paid-in capital and surplus.

6. Rates of discount may not exceed by more than 1 per cent the rate paid on debentures, and paper discounted must not involve a rate to the farmer higher than 13 per cent above the discount rate.

The debentures issued by the farm-credits departments of the Federal land bank will be secured not only by specific collateral and the capital of the issuing department, but each of the 12 departments assumes a contingent liability on all debentures issued by any other department.

8. The assets and liabilities of the farm-credits departments will be separate and distinct from the assets and liabilities of the existing farm-mortgage departments in each Federal land bank, so that farm-loan bonds as at present issued will in no respect be affected by the establishment of the farm-credits departments.

9. The farm-credits departments will be under the general supervision of the Federal Farm Loan Board, and means are provided for the examination of institutions offering paper for discount and of the specific security back of such paper.

10. The Federal reserve act is amended by extending the term of discount on agricultural and live-stock paper from six months to nine months, by slightly increasing the permissible dividend rate to member banks in order more generally to induce State banks to enter the Federal reserve system, and by temporarily reducing the capital requirements for the admission of such banks.

Much of the comment and newspaper discussion on these bills would lead one to think that either one will meet the farmers' intermediate credit needs and that the problem is that of a choice between them. Such is by no means the ease. One is a rural credit bill. The other is not.

It is highly doubtful that corporations of the kind authorized in the Capper bill would be organized outside of the districts where considerable volumes of live-stock loans are needed, and even if such corporations were organized in other parts of the country, they would be absolutely ineffective in providing the farmer with better facilities for working or production credit in general agriculture.

The Lenroot-Anderson bill, on the other hand, embodying the original joint-commission plan in amplified and amended form, would provide a channel for all kinds of legitimate agricultural and live-stock credit paper drawn for a term of from six months to three years. In brief, the following significant merits may properly be claimed for this bill:

1. It utilizes existing credit machinery to the fullest possible extent.

2. It can be put into operation promptly and will reach every section of the United States.

3. Because it so largely utilizes existing machinery the necessary overhead expense can be held to a minimum.

4. It can be expanded to meet emergencies without requiring new legislation.

5. It will make available to the farmer credit for such term as synchronizes with his period of production and make unnecessary the present practice of agreeing to repay before the borrowed capital has yielded returns to the borrower and user. 6. It will reduce the cost of credit to the farmers, particularly for sections remote from centers of surplus capital

7. It will transform the farmers' intermediate credit paper into standardized investment securities which can be safely bought by investors anywhere without investigation of the specific security back of them.

8. While subscription to capital by the Federal Government is called for by this plan, the amount required is moderate and adjusted to the actual needs of agriculture. It does not, like some of the other plans proposed, tie up $300,000,000 to $500,000,000 of the Government's funds. The use of the Govern ment's capital is for the most part temporary, and provision is made for a reasonable return to the Government on such capital.

I believe the Lenroot-Anderson bill as it passed the Senate offers a satisfactory basis for a real rural-credit system which would promote more stable farm production and more orderly marketing. It is a response in good faith to the repeated promises which have been made to the farmers.

I can see no strong objection to the enactment of the Capper bill also, but to offer the latter as a rural credits bill or a substitute for the Lenroot-Anderson bill would give the farmers of the Nation the best of reasons for feeling that in reply to their request for bread they had been offered a stone.

Very sincerely,

HENRY C. WALLACE, Secretary.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LARSEN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the Near East

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the Near East question. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full

Mr. LARSEN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, during recent years no subject relating to Europe perhaps has had a more sympathetic consideration of the people of this Nation than that which relates to the Near East. For hundreds of years the Turk in his relation to civilization, and especially to the inhabitants of western Europe, has been one of deep concern to Christian

An editorial appearing in the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph on February 16 is so elucidating that I believe it is worthy of the consideration of this House, and therefore desire to bring it to the attention of this body. It is entitled "Justice to the Turk," and follows:

[From the Macon Daily Telegraph.] JUSTICE TO THE TURK.

[From the Macon Daily Telegraph.]

JUSTICE TO THE TURK.

Editorial reference has already been made to Editor Julian Harris's astounding defense of the Turk. His charity would be admirable were it supported by any measure of facts and were it not an implied criticism of a long list of martyrs of which the world is not worthy, and even of fine girls who have been outraged by multiplicity of Turks in succession and then sent to Turkish harems. The Telegraph acknowledges its lack of first-hand information, but evidently our lack is no greater than that of Editor Harris.

To-day we wish to put on the witness stand Charles F. G. Masterman, who has had a long career in English public life, being several times member of Parliament, undersecretary of the State home department, and financial secretary to the treasury. Mr. Masterman is author of "The Heart of the Empire," "In Peril of Change," and "The Condition of England." His testimony appeared in the Atlantic Monthly for January under the caption "The return of the Turk." He quotes from official documents and eyewitnesses of the highest dependability. Here are some of his remarkable statements:

"The Turk has returned to Europe. His return will mean the despair of all those who are working for the return of permanent peace. " " The Turk never has had and never will have a homeland in Europe. He entered as a barbaric tribe, like a scourge or a plague. " " There seems to be in the Turk an unalterable and inexplicable element of blight after victory."

The Turk says Mr. Masterman, has never worked and produced; he has only lived upon the Christian populations over whom he has missuled, plundered, outraged, and massacred.

"The Turk has produced nothing in music, art, science, or any of the prominent elements of civilization. " " He is alien to everything that Europe regards as legitimate methods of treating people who have subject to another's sway. And he has now grown so tired of such interference in the future by the simple method of extermination of all the Christian

Mr. Masterman makes a terrific indictment of the governments of western Europe, especially his own government, for allowing the Turk to have continued his inhumanities, barbartites, and unnameable crimes against women and girls who prize their virtue as highly as our own mothers and sisters prize theirs.

While Mr. Masterman would not dare to criticize the American Government as he does his own Government, and recognizes that America has shown an enormous compassion in deeds as well as in words, he coalcesses his great surprise at "the comparative indifference of America, has shown an enormous compassion in deeds as well as in words, he coalcesses his great surprise at "the comparative indifference of America, has allowed the noble work being done for the Christian populations in Turkey to be almost obliterated.

"During the war," says Mr. Masterman, "the Turks wiped out the whole of American civilization (in Turkey) in pursuit of the policy of murder and torture, when it would have been better for the most part that their victims had been kilded outright."

Under Mr. Masterman's supervision was compiled a record of crimes of the Turk during the World War, with Professor Toynhee, the histomission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and correlating the evidence for over six months. This commission of and over the second of the six of the content of t Ill treatment."

If the Armenian Christians had gone all the way with the Master and always turned the other cheek, perhaps by this time the Turk would have been converted; but until we ourselves learn to turn the other cheek our tongues and pens and arms should be lifted in the defense of the martyrs and not in the defense of the monsters.

Mr. ROUSE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on House Resolution 492.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on House Resolution 492. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman from Kentucky whether he would touch upon the action of the majority in laying this matter on the table?

Mr. ROUSE. That is the resolution.

Mr. STAFFORD. That was the one that was slaughtered. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection. The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows

Mr. ROUSE. Mr. Speaker, the law relative to the appointment of postmasters, which was approved by the President April 24, 1920, states:

Whenever a vacancy occurs from any cause the appointment of a regular postmaster shall be made without unnecessary delay.

House Resolution, 492, which I introduced on the 23d day of January last, reads as follows:

Resolved, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the House of Representatives—
(1) Of the post offices in which a vacancy in the postmastership thereof has occurred since May 10, 1921, for which no certified eligible or list of eligibles for appointment, as regular postmaster therein, obtained at the time the vacancy arose; of the name of each such office, the date on which the vacancy arose, the date of the request of the Civil Service Commission for a certified eligible or list of eligibles for regular appointment thereto, the date of the receipt from the Civil Service Commission of a certified eligible or list of eligibles therefor, and the date on which appointment of a regular postmaster was made; and

(2) Of the post offices in which a vacancy in the postmastership thereof has occurred since May 10, 1921, for which a certified eligible or list of eligibles for appointment as regular postmaster therein obtained at the time the vacancy arose; of the name of each such office, the date on which the vacancy arose, and the date on which appointment of a regular postmaster therefor was made; and

(3) Of the appointments of temporary postmasters since May 10, 1921, if any, of the offices for which such temporary appointments were made, of the date on which the vacancies arose, of the date on which such temporary appointments were made, and of the date on which the appointment of a regular postmaster was made.

The House earlier in the day voted, by a strict party vote, to deny the membership of the House and the country the information relative to the appointment of postmasters. that the Postmaster General has violated the law by not complying with the law of April 24, 1920, and I also contend that the Civil Service Commission is a party to this violation. desire to cite one case, and there are many other cases which are similar.

About the middle of August, 1921, a civil-service examination was held for applicants for the post office at Bedford, Ky. In this examination five applicants contested, three applicants receiving a passing grade, namely, W. T. Bare, C. A. Bell, and B. B. Black, and two applicants failed to receive a passing grade, although one having been given credits allowed to exservice men. During the month of October, 1921, the Civil Service Commission certified the three eligibles to the Post Office Department to be considered for appointment of postmaster at Bedford, Ky. The three men certified are highly respected citizens of the county in which they live. The Post Office Department declined to appoint any one of the three. Some time during the early summer of 1922 charges were filed with the Post Office Department against one of the eligibles, by name, William T. Bare, because he had permitted some political literature to be posted in his place of business. Bare had, about 10 years previous to taking this examination, been elected clerk of the circuit court of his county. as clerk of the circuit court honorably and faithfully for six years; he had also been elected to various offices connected with the Order of Red Men in the State of Kentucky, and several months before he took the civil-service examination for postmaster at Bedford had been elected to the highest office of the Order of Red Men of the State of Kentucky. Notwithstanding these honors which had been bestowed upon Mr. Bare by the citizens of his county and by the Order of Red Men of the State of Kentucky, the Civil Service Commission decided that Mr. Bare was not a suitable person to be appointed postmaster, and his name was stricken from the eligible register. By this order of the Civil Service Commission the Post Office Department was enabled to appoint a temporary postmaster at Bedford, and appointed one of the applicants who failed to receive a passing grade in the examination, and who is serving as a temporary postmaster to this day.

After the facts relative to the charges which had been filed against Mr. Bare had been reported to me I immediately took the matter up with the Civil Service Commission and stated to the commission that if their action in removing Mr. Bare with notation opposite his name "that he was not a suitable person to be considered for postmaster at Bedford," was made permanent their action would be held to be absurd and ridiculous and would be disapproved and condemned by every person whose privilege it was to be acquainted with Mr. Bare and place the Civil Service Commission in rank disrepute. I also stated that the great Order of Red Men of the State of Kentucky should, and no doubt would, adopt suitable resolutions condemning the Civil Service Commission for removing Mr. Bare. The Civil Service Commission referred the papers to some agent of the commission, who after two or three months made a report which restored Mr. Bare's name to the eligible register for postmaster at Bedford. This eligible register has been maintained by the Civil Service Commission, and the Post Office Department has had the list of the three eligibles for more than 16 months, and no permanent appointment has been made. I contend that the Postmaster General is violating the law by not making a permanent appointment from this eligible register. I also contend that the Civil Service Commission is a party to this violation because they ordered the removal of one of the eligibles, thereby paving the way for the Postmaster General to appoint a temporary postmaster and evade the law, and those who permitted this violation of the law or those who are connected with the Civil Service Commission who are winking at the violation of the law should be removed from office.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the bill just passed. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the proposed admission of refugees from the Near East, on the inspection of immigration in foreign ports, and on the regulation of immigration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows:

REFUGEES FROM THE NEAR EAST.

Mr. BOX. Mr. Speaker, by this bill it is proposed to admit into the United States an indefinite number of refugees from Turkish territory. No good reason has been suggested for the selection of the unfortunate from Turkey and Greece as distinguished from the unhappy, the oppressed, the persecuted, the homeless, and the starving from many other lands. There are many such who want to come from Poland, from Russia, and many other places where people are in great distress. admit all who are thus distressed would be to repeal or disregard the system of restrictive immigration laws which the people have caused to be enacted during the last 40 years. It would subject the country to the peril against which the people and their Government have been trying to protect the country.

The causes of these wretched conditions among the people in other lands are in the people themselves, not in the climate or soil or atmosphere of the countries from which they come. In importing such people in great numbers we are introducing into America the forces which have created confusion and unhappiness in the foreign lands from which they come. It would be more accurate still to say that we would be greatly aug-menting those same forces of disorder and dissolution which already exist here to an alarming extent.

But it is claimed that the people from Greece and Turkish territories are especially desirable. They are not. Present keen distress is not limited to them. Their distressing conditions are not new.

Some Members of this House and people outside speak of the distress in the Near East as if it were new, creating an unusual, present, but temporary, emergency. Such conditions have been recurring in that region for 3,000 years. The story would be even older if history extended back far enough to record it.

Witnesses have testified before your committee that these Greeks are pure Ionian Greeks who have not been mongrelized by race mixture. To refute that, I quote a few bits of history which I have gathered from a vast mass to the same effect:

In racial characteristics the Greeks belong to the Mediterranean race of are akin to the Iberian of Spain and the Ligurian of Italy.

In recent times education, intermixture with other races, and com-merce have to a great extent removed their distinctive peculiarities.

The life of the true Greece was obscured for several centuries, only appearing as the peninsula became the object of conquest or an arena of strife.

From the sixth to the eighth century Slavic peoples from the north crowded into the Balkan Peninsula. The invaders were merged to some extent with the ancient race and remained in occupancy of Illyria and Thrace, producing a mixture of nationalities which constitutes at the present day one of the chief elements of confusion in the puzzling problems of the Balkan Peninsula.

Of the present Greek Army it is said:

Fifteen per cent of the army recruits can only read, and 30 per cent are totally illiterate. (The New International Encyclopedia, volume 10, pages 292, 293, 297).

That emergencies similar to this have been arising for hundreds of years and that serious consequences may result to outside countries from dealing unwisely with them is shown by the following quotations from Gibbons's account of an occurence in the third century:

But the attention of the emperor was most seriously engaged by the important intelligence which he received from the civil and military officers who were intrusted with the defense of the Danube. He was informed that the north was agitated by a furious tempest, that the irruption of the Huns, an unknown and monstrous race of savages, had subverted the power of the Goths; and that the suppliant multitudes of that warlike nation, whose pride was now humbled in the dust, covered a space of many miles along the banks of the river. With outstretched arms and pathetic lamentations, they loudly deplored their past misfortunes and their present danger; acknowledged that their only hope of safety was in the clemency of the Roman government; and most solemnly protested that if the gracious liberality of the emperor would permit them to cultivate the waste lands of Thrace, they would ever hold themselves bound, by the strongest obligations of duty and gratitude, to obey the laws and to guard the limits of the republic. These assurances were confirmed by the ambassadors of the Goths, who impatiently expected from the mouth of Valens an answer that must finally determine the fate of their unhappy countrymen. The emperor of the East was no longer guided by the wisdom and authority of his elder brother, whose death happened toward the end of the preceding year; and as the distressful situation of the Goths required an instant and peremptory decision, he was deprived of the favorite resource of feeble and timid minds, who consider the use of dilatory and ambiguous measures as the most admirable efforts of consummate prudence.

When that important proposition, so essentially connected with the public safety, was referred to the ministers of Valens, they were perplexed and divided; but they soon acquiesced in the flattering sentiment which seemed the most favorable to the pride, the indolence, and the avarice of their sovereign. The slaves, who were decorated with the titles of prefects and generals, dissembled or disregarded the terrors of this national emigration; so extremely different from the partial and accidental colonies, which had been received on the extreme limits of the empire. But they applauded the liberality of fortune, which had conducted, from the most distant countries of the globe, a numerous and invincible army of strangers to defend the throne of Valens; who might now add to the royal treasures the immense sums of gold supplied by the provincials to compensate their annual proportion of recruits. The prayers of the Goths were granted and their service was accepted by the imperial court, and orders were immediately dispatched to the civil and military governors of the Thracian diocese to make the necessary preparations for the passage and subsistence of a great people, till a proper and sufficient territory could be allotted for their future residence.

It was thought expedient that an accurate account should be taken of their numbers, but the persons who were employed soon desisted, with amazement and dismay, from the prosecution of the endless and impracticable task; and the principal historian of the age most seriously affirms that the prodigious armies of Darius and Xerxes, which had so long been considered as the fables of vain and credulous antiquity, were now justified, in the eyes of mankind, by the evidence of fact and experience. A probable testimony has fixed the number of the Gothic warriors at 200,000 men; and if we can venture to add the just proportion of women, of children, and of slaves, the whole mass of people which composed this formidable emigration must have amounted to near a million of persons, of both sexes and all ages. (Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Vol. II, pp. 499-501.)

These immigrants soon became restless and lawless and arose

These immigrants soon became restless and lawless and arose in rebellion. They defeated the imperial army, slew the emperor, who had admitted them, and, being joined by masses of their kinspeople from the homeland, for a long time overran the country. They were never expelled. But they and other invading immigrants like them finally completely subverted the national life and almost destroyed the civilization of Rome and ushered in the long, dismal period of human history known as

The record of that transaction and of the period to which it belongs is found in Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, in Myers Ancient History, West's Ancient World, and other authentic histories covering the period from A. D. 200 to 800.

That region was invaded and subjugated 1,300 years before Christ.

Christ.

We know that at a very early date there was a vigorous race dwelling in central Europe, with the beginnings of a civilization and with some knowledge of the use of iron. Presumably about 1300 B. C., bands of these fair-haired, blue-eyed, ox-eating warriors from the north, drawn by the splendor and riches of the Mycenaean south, broke into Greece, as men of the north so many times since have broken into southern Europe. These mighty-limbed strangers, armed with long from swords, easily established themselves among the short, dark, bronze-weaponed native, dwelt in their cities, became their chiefs, married their women, and possessed their wealth. (Ancient World, West, p. 86.)

What took place here in the Greek Peninsula a thousand years before our era has been likened to what took place in the Italian Peninsula in the fifth century after Christ, when the invading German tribes overwhelmed the civilization of Rome. (Myers Ancient History, p. 120.)

When the Turks captured Constantinople in 1453 there was

When the Turks captured Constantinople in 1453 there was a massacre of Greek people in which thousands were slain, thousands of women outraged, and tens of thousands of both sexes enslaved. The woeful story extends down to now. Practically every witness before your committee who answered inquiries on the point expressed the fear that things as bad or worse are ahead, and must continue indefinitely.

I call your attention to the population of all that vast region, consisting of scores of millions of antagonistic, intolerant races and religions, and remind you that no strong guardian appears to keep the peace among them. I see nothing to change the current of history as it has flowed through that part of the world for 3,000 years. You are not dealing with a problem of to-day merely but with a problem older than America and much older than modern Europe. It is folly to treat it as a temporary emergency.

America has sympathized with the Armenians because they are Christians. America now sympathizes with the Greeks because of their past history and present distress. These refugees came from both races. Their present plight is due to defeat and withdrawal of the armies of Greece. Greece cut a queer figure in the recent World War. At first its German King sided with Germany. Later he was dethroned. Later still a German prince was called to rule over the Greeks. Now he has been banished. Greek officers conducted themselves so shamefully during the recent war with the Turks that they were executed.

They were either grossly guilty or the present Government of Greece is corrupt and cruel. Consul General Horton, stationed at Smyrna at the time of the recent horrible occurrences, testified before your committee that the Greek Army, in its retreat before the burning of Smyrna and the massacres there, had engaged in practices of a similar kind upon their retreat; that their general told him in advance that his army would have to engage in such practices. Nothing can excuse the horrible crimes committed by the Turks or equal them in enormity, but the Greeks, by similar practices just a few days before, had furnished them a horrible excuse which they probably did not need. You have race hatred against race hatred, religious intolerance against religious intolerance, burning against burning, murder against murder, cruelty against cruelty, following the precedents of thousands of years and with those who are worsted now clamoring to us for an asylum and for subsistence, just as the Goths clamored to the Romans 1,600 years ago.

In this connection I want to insist that whatever may have been the faults or mistakes in America's foreign policy, no mistake or weakness in our foreign policy makes us responsible for the woes of the foreign world to an extent which obligates us to take these unhappy thousands, scores of thousands, or millions, into our own borders to help reproduce here the conditions from which they flee. Some of the very gentlemen who were before your committee urging the admission of some thousands of these fugitives have based their demands for the admission of these people on a statement that America is responsible for their condition in part at least. If America is responsible at all, I am afraid the bloody blot can never be washed out, but I do not believe that our people should be made to atone for a mistake in foreign policy by their Government in the manner here proposed. I quote from the "News Bulletin of the Foreign Policy Association," dated November 17.

AMERICA WATCHES HERSELF.

The crisis in Constantinople continues desperately tense. It is fraught with possibilities of tragedy of incalculable proportions. America stands by helpless, watching intently and hoping almost against hope that peace may be maintained and the Christian populations saved from slaughter and the Turks from the inevitable bloody retaliation. Washington satisfies itself with "observing."

WHAT IS THE UNITED STATES DOING?

The United States does next to nothing. If a peaceful solution is found, this Government will deserve none of the credit. If the terrible calamity anticipated by many observers becomes a reality, the United States will inevitably be drawn in. If massacres were to follow the withdrawal of the allied contingents, it is doubtful if Washington could resist the imperative demand for action which, incited by the evangelical forces throughout the country, might sweep away all counsels of conciliation and restraint.

AMERICAN ISOLATION NONEXISTENT.

AMERICAN ISOLATION NONEXISTENT.

American isolation is a myth. The United States can not dissociate herself from a European question like the Near East. It touches too deeply many of the most cherished interests of millions of our citizens. The difficulty of the United States playing a successful rôle as mediator or the even more modest rôle of offering its good offices has been made much more difficult if not hopeless by the announcement of a policy of aloofness. No such announcement, even when phrased by a brilliant advocate like Secretary Hughes, can free Washington from its full measure of responsibility. Such a declaration can have one result: It prevents effectively this Government having an opportunity for constructive helpfulness before the crisis becomes insoluble.

Mr. B. P. Salmon, former president of the American Chamber of Commerce in Greece, appeared before your committee urging the passage of the bill introduced by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. White]. In the issue of the News Bulletin mentioned above Mr. Salmon has a signed article, from which I

AMERICA'S RESPONSIBILITY.

Part of the responsibility for this situation (to-day in the Near East) is due to our own lack of a definite foreign policy at Washington, which in turn is due to the fact that the American people themselves have no well-defined ideas on foreign policies, and therefore the State Department has been content to do nothing in the Near East, thinking that this would be acceptable to the American people  *. The situation has become increasingly difficult and the need of urgent action in connection with the final settlement is increasingly apparent. .

Another matter on which I believe American sentiment should be clearly defined is our responsibility toward Greece in connection with the so-called three-power loan of 1918. In this matter we have not only refused to pay the balance due under the loan agreement, but what is worse, we have held Greece to a clause of the agreement which provides that she shall not pledge security for further exterior loan until the so-called "three-power" loan has been liquidated. In other words, we have held the Greek security while we have only advanced a third of the money for which the security was given. It is my personal belief that this loan agreement is a valid contract and that the United States is morally and legally bound to recognize it as such. If, on the other hand, the State Department can show that it is not either a legal or moral obligation, they should reach some agreement with Greece on the subject. The great problem which confronts Greece to-day is that of constructive relief which will enable them to place as rapidly as possible the hundreds of thousands of refugees pouring into the country into gainful occupations, turning them from a liability into an asset. into an asset.

One of the first things that will have to be done will be to clear up the unfortunate situation created by the present status of the American loan to Greece.

B. P. SALMON.

If a mistake has been made in our foreign policy, it does not entail upon the people of the United States the obligation to provide a home for the people made unhappy and homeless by the racial and religious antipathies of the regions involved. The acceptance of such a consequence would bring upon us serious calamity, if not early ruin.

In an effort to persuade your committee to report favorably a measure providing for the admission of some thousands of these refugees, the number of which witnesses estimate at from 5,000 to 100,000, some have extelled the virtues of the Greeks as prospective citizens of the United States.

That the people of all that region are mongrels, mixed and intermixed from invading and near-by races from the north, from the brown people of the east, and the black people of the south is well known to every student. That they are incapable of working out the problems of government and pro-tecting themselves against the destructive forces moving among them is made plain by their present plight and by conditions prevailing among them since antiquity and promising to continue forever. That the masses of such people will not contribute to what is best in the life of America is plain.

I call your attention to the fact that there is a vast system of peonage or slavery practiced by the Greek people in the United States now. I refer, gentlemen, to the extensive report made on this subject by the Immigration Commission, composed of such men as Senators Dillingham and Lodge, Hon. John L. Burnett, then of this House, and Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks, which will be found on pages 391 to 408 of volume 2 of Abstracts of Reports of the Immigration Commission. ask that the Clerk read these extracts from that report, which I am handing him: The poorer classes in Greece, and particularly those of the Provinces from which bootblacks are drafted, have little ambition to educate their children, because they themselves are to a large degree ignorant and unable to appreciate the value of education.

The Greek peasant is therefore more concerned with the income he is able to derive by placing his children at work than with educating them

In countries where the laboring classes are wholly under the control of their employers the term "padrone" is applied to the manager, superintendent, foreman or proprietor of any mercantile establishment, and signifies that in the person designated as padrone absolute authority is vested to control employees. He has the right to prescribe the character of the work that each laborer shall perform, to increase or decrease at will the hours of work and the wages received, and to punish him physically at times.

Among the Greeks the padrone system is in operation in every city of the United States of over 10,000 population with few exceptions, and is confined in the main to shoe-shining establishments, aithough it is to a considerable extent prevalent among rallroad laborers in the Western States, and among flower, fruit, and vegetable venders in Chicago. The aliens utilized by the system in peddling and in shoe shining are, as a rule, from 12 to 17 years of age, while those employed on railroad work are generally adults.

There are several thousand shoe-shining places in the United States operated by Greeks, and with few exceptions they are under the padrone system.

The boys, in their helplessness, believe that were it not for the opportunity of employment offered them by padrones they would starve, because of their ignorance of the language and labor conditions in this country.
In some

In some cases padrones utilize the following means to compel boys to remain in their employ: As they pay their help their wages at the end of each year, as a rule forwarding direct a draft to the boy's parents in Greece, they claim they are short of money and fall in arrears in such payments. As a result the boys remain in their service in the hope of receiving what is due them. On the other hand, the padrones avail themselves of all technicalities in law, secure numerous continuances, and, without exception, appeal all such cases. The young plaintiffs become gradually disheartened and abandon the suits, deeming such a course the least expensive and most logical, and convinced that there is no justice for the poor in this country.

Though the shoe-shining business is the main field of the system in the United States, quite a number of Greeks are brought here in viola-tion of law and are placed at work on railroads in Western States under the padrone system.

He is generally brought here from Greece on an agreement, secured by a mortgage or a promissory note, to pay from $130 to $250 for his steamship passage and "show money." Upon reaching his destination in the United States he is usually charged $10 labor agent's fee for putting him to work; he is charged $1 per month interpreter's fee, as it is commonly called, this being the monthly tribute of each laborer to the interpreter of the gang, notwithstanding the fact that he is a salaried employee of the railroad company. Every three months the laborer is told to contribute $1 or more, intended as a present to the foreman or readmaster, and every spring and fall he may be called upon for another $10 by the labor agent, who promises to prevent his discharge from work through his influence with the roadmaster or those higher up.

The money for steamship tickets is often furnished by the padrone interpreters, who are in nearly all instances in partnership with their relatives in Greece—that is, they divide their profits.

It is, in my opinion, more humane and infinitely better for young Greeks to be refused admission into the United States than to be permitted to land if they are intended for such employment. (N. Salopoulos, Greek consul general, November 16, 1910.)

Several Greek physicians in Chicago, in a joint letter to the Immigration Commission, dated November 16, 1910, say, among other things, the following:

We deem this occupation highly injurious and destructive to the physique of young Greek boys, and believe that the United States Government would do better to deport them rather than to allow them to land if they are destined to this employment under existing conditions .

Without exception, all the Greek physicians of our large cities who were interviewed on this subject expressed substantially the same views as those embodied in the foregoing letters.

Not all of the immigrants from Greece and Turkey belong to the class mentioned or to other objectionable groups. But the simple truth is that they are very heavily represented among the undesirable kinds. For instance, the evidence submitted to your committee in its hearings upon this proposition shows that venereal and other dangerous diseases are widely prevalent among these refugees.

In the annual report of the Commissioner General of Immigration for 1914 will be found the report of a special investigation of immigration conditions in Eastern Europe and Asiatic Turkey, made by Mr. W. W. Husband to Hon. A. Caminetti, then Commissioner General of Immigration, which position Mr. Husband himself now holds. In that report Mr. Husband repeatedly states that diseases which bar immigrants from admission to the United States and Canada are widely prevalent in that region. The following are some of his remarks on that Diseases which bar immigrants from the United States and Canada are very prevalent in Turkey, but as a rule emigrants are not examined in this regard until arrival at some intermediate port. Although strongly opposed by the French Academy of Medicine, emigrants afflicted with trachoma and other diseases are freely admitted at Marseille.

It is said that in one quarter of Paris trachoma has become quite prevalent because of Syrian immigrants who have settled there.

Mr. Husband even suggested that because of the number of diseased immigrants coming from that region through France and England some agreement be made between the United States and England "under which better protection will be afforded the United States in that regard."

Mr. Chairman, every group which presses a demand for the admission of aliens to the United States claims that an emergency exists in their case. That was the claim made three years ago, when your committee was asked to report a bill authorizing the admission of 4,000,000 Russians and Italians and their families. When the committee was urged to report a bill providing for the admission of 40,000 Chinese coolies to Hawaii, it was claimed in support of the measure that a most acute emergency existed. In all of the numerous measures for the admission of the relatives of foreign-born people in the United States an effort is made to show a distressing emergency in each instance. On the two eccasions when we have taken down the bars imposed by the 3 per cent restriction it has been done under the claim that an acute emergency existed. Here comes another emergency. Every case of hard-ship and distress presents an emergency to those concerned. There are enough such emergencies to absolutely overflow America with their victims and to create here an emergency a tragedy—equal to the worst. When we have foolishly listened to a sufficient number of such appeals to fill America with the pandemonium and woe which now curse so many parts of the world, who will relieve our children from the distress which we are cooking up for them now?

THE SELECTION OF IMMIGRANTS AT FOREIGN PORTS AND THE REGULATION OF IMMIGRATION.

Mr. Speaker, I have heretofore addressed the House at some length on the subject of the selection of immigrants at foreign ports and the regulation of immigration by the treaty making power as necessarily involved in the selection of immigrants abroad.

At the request of the chairman and some members of the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, I made a statement before that committee on January 22, 1923, as appears on pages 488 to 495, inclusive, of the hearings of the House committee on the subject of immigration and labor. For the purpose of helping, if I can, those who are interested in arriving at a correct understanding of what is involved in that proposition, I make this statement:

I have been surprised to hear intelligent business men, and others who are supposed to have reached conclusions concerning it based on information and consideration, criticize their Government for not having adopted a proposition which, according to the easy words of the critics, would be so "humane," "scientific," "simple," "practicable," and "easy" that any legislator, though a fool, could provide for it. Several gentlemen, who would not be expected to adopt or indorse any important business or legislative suggestion without information and consideration, have urged the adoption of this measure, and, when questioned, have frankly confessed that they have not inquired whether the Government has considered such a plan and found it unworkable, or whether other governments would permit us to maintain immigration inspection stations and forces in their countries. Such trivial questions as whether it could be done at all, or whether it would work, if foreign governments would permit it, are passed over as of no importance, while these gentlemen and ladles speak and widely print their criticisms of the Government of the United States for not having done this thing which they treat as simple and easy. Unfortunately, those who make or administer law have to deal with the facts as they are. Lecturers, speakers, and newspaper and magazine writers can either ignore or assume facts, as may be convenient, but facts bristle in the paths of those who have to do things rather than talk or write about them.

The Secretary of Labor, whose utterances show his lack of knowledge concerning it, has evidently, by advice based on lack of information, led the President into recommending that Congress do what his own Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, knows can not be done under present conditions, as will be seen from documents herein submitted.

Even the First Assistant Secretary of Labor under Secretary of Labor Davis, Mr. Henning, having to deal with facts rather than words, knows something about this problem, as proven by a recent press statement widely published. By disregarding the headlines and reading what he says, we have such expressions as the following:

Foreign countries steadfastly have refused to allow the United States to examine immigrants at ports of departure on the ground that the exercise of that function by another nation would be an invasion of sovereignty. * *

Attempts to extend these powers to include direct action in examination and selection of immigrants have been consistently objected to by France, Italy, and other foreign governments. A formal protest was made by the Italian, Government to the State Department last year when bills were introduced, one in the Senate and two in the House, providing for such examination in United States consulates or elsewhere by United States medical and immigration officials.

To disregard the steadfast refusal of foreign governments to give us permission to build, acquire, or maintain such stations within their borders is manifestly impossible unless we enforce our desire with the Army or Navy or by retaliatory measures, which would violate our treaties with many countries and embroil us seriously and widely.

The Immigration Commission created by the act of Congress of February 20, 1907, consisting of nine members, three of whom were appointed by President Roosevelt, three by the Vice President, and three by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, were charged with the duty of making a full investigation of the whole subject of immigration. It was given full authority and provided ample means to travel either in the United States or in any foreign country and otherwise to carry on its investigation. Its membership consisted of such men as Senator DILLINGHAM, Senator Lodge, Senator McLaurin, and Hon. John L. Burnett, Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks, and other men of legislative experience, great learning, and familiarity with immigration problems and legislation.

Among the questions which it studied and upon which it reported was the one now under discussion. On pages 26 and 27 the commission discussed this problem:

It has been strongly urged by immigration officials and other students of the question that the embarkation at foreign ports of persons not admissible to the United States because of their physical condition would be more effectually prevented by a medical inspection by American officers at such ports. This plan was so strongly urged that this Government a few years ago made official inquiry respecting the probable attitude of European Governments toward it. At that time one or two governments expressed a willingness to permit such an inspection by American officials; others made indefinite replies to the inquiry, while others were positively opposed. No attempt was thereafter made to further the plan. After an investigation by the commission of the situation at all the principal ports of Europe it is clear that even were its consummation possible such an arrangement would not materially improve conditions.

It has been suggested that some system ought to be devised by which intending emigrants could be physically examined as to their admissibility to the United States before leaving their homes for ports of embarkation. While an effective arrangement of that nature would be of great benefit to the many thousands annually who are turned back at foreign ports of embarkation, it is a matter over which our Government has no jurisdiction. (Reports of the Immigration Commission, Vol. 1, pp. 26-27, presented Dec. 5, 1910.)

First, let us understand that the maintenance of embassies and consulates in foreign countries is a matter of diplomatic usage and treaty agreement. We could not maintain an ambassador, a consul, or any kind of an official representative in any foreign country without its agreement. Diplomatic usage sanctions the maintenance of embassies and consulates which promote ends desired by both parties to the arrangement. Their establishment and activities are wholly subject to treaty agreement with foreign powers, or their consent in some form. Their withdrawal may be demanded and enforced by such power at any time.

The scope of the activities of consuls, ministers, and ambassadors is fixed or limited by usage and agreement and can be extended only by such consent. The selection of would-be immigrants is not one of the usual functions performed by consuls or diplomatic representatives. The treaties under which such representatives are maintained do not authorize the establishment or maintenance of immigration stations of any kind, nor the performace of any of their functions, on foreign soil. Neither does diplomatic usage sanction it. These officers and the performance of these functions within the territory of a foreign sovereignty is not possible unless such countries would give their consent.

The motives which prompt them to consent to the establishment and maintenance of consulates and embassies is mutual commercial and diplomatic interest. But this mutuality of interest does not exist as to immigration. Japan, China, England, Spain, Italy, Poland, and other Old World countries usually want a place to which they can send their surplus or undesirable population. Our immigration laws are designed to prevent their unloading this surplus and burdensome population on us. We want to prevent the very thing they want to do. Instead of mutuality of interest there is conflict. Generally speaking, they will not go beyond the limits of diplomatic usage to agree with us upon our establishment upon their soil of agencies by which we can accomplish that which it is their desire to prevent. This is not merely natural and logical; it is actual.

The House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization has given much consideration to this subject, continuing its investigation and study from time to time. In its report to the Sixty-seventh Congress (No. 710), accompanying House Joint Resolution No. 268, the following appears:

OBJECTIONS TO EXAMINATIONS OVERSEAS,

The hearings of the committee have covered all phases of the subject. Considerable time was spent in attempting to develop a plan of examination of immigrants at ports of embarkation, but these efforts were met with a letter from the Secretary of State.

Some Members of the House and Senate had written bills which proposed to deal with this situation in the easy manner proposed. That gave rise to the writing of the letter from Secretary of State Hughes, which is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 28, 1921.

Washington, December 28, 1921.

My Dear Mr. Johnson; I inclose copy of a memorandum of September 15 from the chargé d'affaires ad Interim of Italy, in which he discusses certain bills which have been introduced in Congress providing for the examination in American consulates of allens destring to emigrate to the United States.

Informal objections to the proposed legislation have been made by representatives of other countries, and I shall endeavor to keep you informed as to any further objections which may be received by this department from representatives of interested foreign countries.

As this matter touches upon the foreign relations of the United States, I would ask that you be so kind as to keep me informed concerning the progress of the proposed legislation.

I am, my dear Mr. Johnson, sincerely yours,

Charles E. Huches.

Among the things which made necessary the writing of the above letter by Secretary Hughes is the following:

MEMORANDUM FROM BOYAL ITALIAN EMBASSY.

MEMORANDUM FROM ROYAL ITALIAN EMBASSY.

The royal chargé d'affaires for Italy presents his compliments to his excellency the Secretary of State and has the honor of bringing the following to his attention:

During the special session of this Congress there have been presented bills—one in the Senate and two in the House of Representatives—by the terms of which, among other provisions, it is proposed to have United States medical and immigration officials in the United States consulates, or elsewhere, to exercise functions not purely informative in character but of direct action in the medical examination and definite selection of the emigrants, connecting such functions with that of the granting of the consular visé to passports.

Such action, even if exercised in the interior of the consulate offices, would go beyond the usual consular functions recognized by treaties and pertaining, as it does, to interests connected with emigration whose regulation is reserved to the sovereignty of each State, could not be considered as conforming with either treaty or law on emigration in Italy.

It is true that this is a matter relating merely to proposed legislation; nevertheless, the intense desire to avoid later any possible motive for discussion between our two countries inspires the friendly intention of the present recommendation, especially since it has been stated to the Secretary of State that the Italian Government would be most willing to meet the wishes of the United States in conforming the action of its emigratory services so as to satisfy the reasonable requirements of the American regulations if both can be made the subject of a specific agreement beforehand, as already suggested.

The embassy would certainly have hesitated to approach the Secretary of State on this matter were it not that the Secretary of Labor, in recommending the above-quoted bills according to public press statements, had not made it felt that the measures before Congress probably expressed views not contradictory to those entertained by the United States Government, whereupon any assurance on the subject, if possible, on the part of the Department of State, so that in time to the forwarded to the Italian Government, would be highly appreciated by the Italian Embassy.

Washington, D. C., September 15, 1921.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 15, 1921.

The committee in this connection was reminded that the Immigration Commission of Congress, after exhaustive investigation, dropped the matter of inspection at foreign ports. (See p. 26, vol. 1, Abstracts and Reports of the Immigration Commission, 1911.)

It will be noted that Mr. Secretary Hughes, in the second paragraph of his letter to Chairman Johnson, informs him that 'informal objections to the proposed legislation have been made by other countries," which is in line with the statement made by the Immigration Commission in the quotation given above. It must not be understood that Italy is the only country making these objections. The country which does not make them is an exception.

On June 2, 1922, while I was presenting this situation to the House of Representatives, I was interrupted by Chairman JOHNSON, of this committee, when the following colloquy occurred, as shown by the Congressional Record of that date:

curred, as shown by the Congressional Record of that date:

Mr. Johnson of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. Box. Yes.

Mr. Johnson of Washington. If the gentleman will permit me to say so, as chairman of the present House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization I congratulate the membership on the work the gentleman from Texas has done on the committee and the study which he has given to this particular phase of the matter. I would suggest that he do not omit from his present discussion the fact that other Governments are at this time making protests, quite similar to the one that he has just read from the Italian Government, against proposed provisions in the so-called shipping bill, clauses of which would authorize investigation overseas. I am told that these present protests against that new legislation, now being considered before another committee, are much stronger than have been made heretofore.

Mr. Box. I thank the gentleman for his suggestion, because it helps to present the problem which I want the House to see.

I was again interrupted by Mr. Connally of Texas, a mem-

I was again interrupted by Mr. Connally of Texas, a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, when the following occurred:

Mr. Connally of Texas. And, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, in that connection I would say that, as I recall now our hearings on the passport control bill, it developed that practically all of the foreign countries objected to the setting up in their countries of agencies for the investigation and examination of immigrants.

Mr. BOX. I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]. The viewpoint of these people on our immigration policies is very different from ours.

Mr. Connally's statement shows that the Committee on Foreign Affairs had met the same difficulty in dealing with one phase of this question.

Many of the immigrants which reach foreign seaports on their way to the United States have already left their homes and come great distances into other countries on their way to the United States. If these seaport countries should let us do our selecting and rejecting within their borders, they would have those rejected as undesirable thrown on the nations at whose ports they sought to embark. This is another substantial reason for their objecting to our sifting out the refuse and dumping it on them. Some countries have complained that they do not like to have such people as are coming to America even pass through the midst of their people. Would the United States want Canada or Mexico or Europe to select immigrants from other countries within our country and leave the refuse here?

America is the last country where there is room and oppor-mity. They nearly all want to get rid of their surplus population. That is and has been the cause of trouble. We have the land to which they want to come. Nations and races have struggled for a place in which to exist and enlarge since before the years covered by human history. We are trying to maintain a place here for us and our children to which the crowded-out, hungry, unhappy millions of the Old World are struggling to come. Our right to guard it must not be impaired. That would be perilous. It would be ruinous. If we make treaties at all we will have to make them on terms satisfactory to the people who want to unload their surplus population on America. The regulation and control of this worldwide movement toward America must be retained unimpaired by Congress.

I invite special attention to the polite, diplomatic phraseology used by the representatives of the Italian Government, in which it says that the Government of Italy would be "most willing to meet the wishes of the United States in conforming the action of its emigratory services so as to satisfy the rea-sonable requirements of the American regulations if both can be made the subject of a specific agreement beforehand, as already suggested." Note the requirement that our regulations must be made the subject of a specific agreement with Italy beforehand. This makes it plain that any effort to bargain with foreign powers about foreign inspection and selection, if inaugurated, would at once place them in a position to claim a voice in the making of our immigration regulations. That is the very thing that America must not do. That is the very thing that the friends of restriction do not want. Even the opponents of restriction certainly would not favor the adoption of a policy by which we surrendered our right to deal with the subject in our own way. The right once lost would be hard to regain. The permanent loss of that right would be an irreparable calamity to America.

Very definite conclusions necessarily follow the existence of this situation. Since we can not maintain such agencies in foreign countries without their consent, and such consent has not been and probably can not be obtained, it is vain to depend upon foreign examinations.

If possible and desirable, such examinations would be impracticable because of the expense and other administrative difficulties attendant upon an effort to maintain immigration stations or an immigration inspection force at all the sources of immigration. The immigrants come from 10,000 places—throughout Mexico, Canada, and beyond, for myriads come from those countries and through them. Can we maintain immigration stations or agencies at the door of every would-be immigrant? Such a plan would be like the effort of a farmer, whose field was surrounded by an open range, trying to build inclosures around the live stock on all the range to avoid maintaining a fence around his own field. From Japan, China, India, much of Asia, much of Africa, and from all of Europe men are coming to Mexico and Canada for the purpose of gaining access to the United States. Where would you establish your stations and guard lines against them? At their homes? At a thousand places in Mexico and Canada?

Immigrants come to America on irregular and tramp ships from all the ports of the world. This, and their coming through Canada and Mexico, would force us to maintain our seaport and land frontier stations and to turn back many from them. Establishing foreign stations would merely add a great system of distant stations without eliminating home stations or avoiding the necessity of rejecting great numbers of immigrants at them. If foreign countries would permit it, which we have found they will not do, the plan is impossible. Of course, the only place for our stations and guards is at our own ports and on our own frontiers.

It is urged that if prospective immigrants were inspected and selected abroad, they would be protected from the hardship resulting from their selling their effects and breaking themselves loose from their homes and sources of livelihood, expecting to be admitted to the United States only to find themselves denied admission and be thrown adrift penniless, friendless, and far from home. Unless the stations were located, at prohibitive cost, in hundreds of places, the prospective immigrants could not be selected near their present homes. The establishment of immigration stations in a few great cities on the coasts in Europe, Asia, and Africa would not meet this difficulty. seaports are hundreds of miles from the present homes of most of the immigrants and in countries fereign and strange to them. They would have to go in families hundreds of miles, often across national boundaries, necessitating passports, and a great part of the travel, expense, and difficulty which they now meet.

The average immigrant can not, without selling all, carry his family from the center of Europe to the seacoast for examination. If he could, he would not know how long it would require him to return to his home with his family to sell out and return to the immigration station on the coast. The uncertainty, delay, expense, and other difficulties of such a course would forbid its adoption by the immigrant, who usually has little or nothing. He sells all, and even under the proposed plan would sell all and break up completely, before leaving his old home to go to the place of inspection and embarkation. The risk and loss of this breaking up would have to be incurred under any system except one that sent the inspector to the prospective immigrant at or near his present home, which is manifestly impossible.

The steamship companies, relatives, and other opponents of restriction are all talking much of regulating immigration by treaty agreements. I have shown that this plan of foreign inspection depends upon treaty agreements. I suspect that their agitation for foreign inspection is prompted by the desire to have the control of immigration away from Congress and give it to the treaty-making power. It is certain that the adoption of the system of foreign inspection would have that very effect. Treaties establishing such a system, if made at all, could be made only upon such conditions as were satisfactory to foreign governments, so that the whole system of immigration control would pass to the treaty-making power. Treaties made on the subject would become the supreme law of the land. Immigration regulation would pass to the President as the treaty-making power, subject to the ratification or the rejection of the Senate. The House would lose all voice in this question of the greatest importance to the people, who are most directly and truly represented in the House, and whose desires on this subject they have so much more frequently and truly voiced.

I have stated other vital reasons why we must never let the control of immigration become a matter of treaty making. For that involves the surrender by us of our present sole right and power to regulate it. Confessedly, we now have this right and power regardless of the wishes of foreign countries. When immigration control is passed to the treaty-making power we will have surrendered this right and consented that we must consult foreign countries in fixing our immigration regula-tions. Foreign countries such as Germany, Japan, Italy, Poland, and Spain want to unload their unfortunate, starving surplus population on America. When through the surrender of our sovereign right to control it we agree to make it subject to the approval of foreign countries, they get the right to reject our plan for dealing with it. We will thereby become helpless to prevent their hungry and wretched millions from coming to America at will. Our complete and overwhelming ruin would follow inevitably and soon.

Moreover, our experience as to the attitude of our Presidents toward this problem should warn us of the great danger of passing absolute or chief control of it to him.

The President's constant contact with delicate and difficult questions of our foreign relations and the necessity of maintaining cordial diplomatic relations with foreign countries expose him and his advisers and agencies to the constant tendency toward too great liberality in immigration regulations.

Our own people now almost uniformly confess that we have in the past been liberal to the point of rulnous looseness in our immigration policies, but even such restrictive measures as have been adopted in the past have nearly all been enacted in the face of Executive opposition. Nearly every step forward in the policy of restriction has been taken by overstepping the President's veto of restrictive laws.

In 1879 President Hayes vetoed the first Chinese exclusion act (2 l. C. R. 580). In 1882 President Arthur vetoed an act suspending Chinese immigration for a period of 20 years (2 l. C. R. 581). On March 3, 1897, President Cleveland vetoed an immigration act excluding illiterates (2 l. C. R. 573). President dent Taft vetoed an immigration bill in 1913 containing a restriction against the admission of illiterates (p. 101, Rec., special sess., 59th Cong.). In 1917 President Wilson vetoed an act excluding illiterates, but Congress passed it over his veto.

In 1868 the Burlingame treaty between the United States and China declared it to be the inalienable right of men to migrate and emigrate at will. California had then been, for 15 years, alarmed and in trouble on account of the coming of great num-bers of Chinese. The California Legislature had passed laws in efforts to protect the State. Pacific coast cities had passed ordinances for the same purpose. Congress itself, in 1862, had taken note of the degradation and slavery of Chinese coolie laborers, and had forbidden American ships to transport them. This was seven years before the Burlingame treaty was made by the President and ratified by the Senate, declaring the right of such people to migrate to the United States to be "inalien-So aptly did the treaty-making power deal with the problem in that instance.

Conditions in California and on the Pacific coast were then and soon afterwards so bad that, in 1872, California was pleading with Congress for the exclusion of the Chinese; that is, for the deprivation of the "inalienable right" of Chinese to come to America in tens or even hundreds of millions

A congressional committee was sent to California, where it found conditions very bad. In 1879 Congress passed what was practically a Chinese exclusion act and undertook to abrogate the obnoxious sections of the Burlingame treaty of 1868.

Here another unfortunate incident to immigration regulation by treaty developed.

President Hayes vetoed the exclusion act, giving as one reason his contention that Congress had no right to abrogate a treaty. His action illustrated the fact that the President can nullify an exclusion act of Congress and that Congress has no power to relieve the country of a treaty so dangerous as was that one by any majority less than two-thirds of both branches. President Hayes claimed that Congress had no power to abrogate a treaty at all.

The President can make such a treaty with the approval of two-thirds of one branch of Congress.

A new treaty was made by the United States and China in 1880, in which China succeeded in limiting the freedom of the United States to deal with Chinese immigration in its own way. This treaty stipulated that the United States might limit or suspend the coming of laborers only and prohibited the United States to forbid general Chinese immigration,

In 1880 Congress passed an act suspending Chinese immigra-tion for 20 years. President Arthur vetoed the act, chiefly on the ground that a 20-year suspension of Chinese immigration was not "reasonable" within the meaning of that term in the clause of our treaty with China permitting the United States to limit or suspend the coming of laborers in such a manner and to such extent as "shall be reasonable."

It was soon found that this immigration treaty was unwise, and the United States asked China to agree to its abrogation. She objected and delayed until Congress passed a drastic Chinese exclusion law, from which the President withheld his approval until he became convinced that China would not enter a new treaty abrogating the treaty of 1880, of which the United States was now anxious to be rid.

President Roosevelt made an agreement, which he insisted on having treated as valid and binding, as being supreme law. without even consulting the Senate about it. He called it a treaty.

I doubt, if I may be permitted to say so, whether the gentleman's agreement made by President Roosevelt, to which the gentleman evidently refers, has any force or has ever had any To say that the Presiforce that America ought to recognize. dent can by some secret understanding hidden in his bosom or by some written memorandum hidden in the archives of the Department of State, never submitted to the Senate, establish a law, a supreme law of the land binding on the legislatures of States, binding on this body and the whole country would be most extraordinary. That is the construction given to the gentleman's agreement. President Roosevelt, who made it, based his action on the facts as he saw them then. He would unquestionably say now that it did not work properly.

ROOSEVELT ON THE GENTLEMEN'S AGREEMENT.

After a good deal of discussion, we came to an entirely satisfactory conclusion. The obnaxious school legislation was abandoned, and I secured an arrangement with Japan under which the Japanese themselves prevented any emigration to our country of their laboring people, it being distinctly understood that If there was such emigration the United States would at once pass an exclusion law. It was, of course, infinitely better that the Japanese should stop their own people from coming rather than we should have to stop them, but it was necessary for us to hold this power in reserve.

Unfortunately, after I left office, a most mistaken and ill-advised policy was pursued toward Japan, combining irritation and inefficiency, which culminated in a treaty under which we surrendered this Important and necessary right. It was alleged in excuse that the treaty provided for its own abrogation; but, of course, it is infinitely better to have a treaty under which the power to exercise a necessary right is explicitly retained rather than a treaty so drawn that recourse must be had to the extreme step of abrogating if it ever becomes necessary to exercise the right in question. (Theodore Roosevelt; An Autoblography, p. 414.)

Immigration legislation

Immigration legislation should be handled by Congress through the agency of its appropriate committees, and by itself. It will be dangerous, indeed, to turn over this important subject to a committee not familiar with its difficult details and to the Shipping Board and others, whose knowledge of the subject is superficial and whose interests are divergent from the great public interest to be served by proper immigration legis-

The statement made by the chairman of the House Committee on Immigration on the floor of the House, quoted above, to the effect that the provisions of the shipping bill relating to immigration have provoked emphatic protests from foreign Govern-ments is not surprising. Orderly legislation can be obtained and the best public interest promoted by having immigration legislation reported by the proper committee. The policies behind it should be prompted by the public interest, and not by The policies the financial gains of Shipping Board vessels or of subsidized American shipping.

Mr. Speaker, I insist that Congress must retain unimpaired its full power to deal with this great problem. It must not be admitted that foreign powers have any right to a poice in dealing with it through a policy of treaty making. Foreign inspection necessarily involves that idea. This great question must not be, wholly or partly, passed to the Shipping Board or to subsidized American vessels to be handled for the purpose of money-making. The present and future welfare of American men and women, of this and future generations, must be the supreme consideration in the minds of all who deal with it. Congress must not lose its supreme control over it.

The foregoing documents and the facts stated in connection with them show that, under conditions now prevalent and likely to continue, the foreign selection of immigrants is impossible; that such a plan would be unworkable, and that it would be undesirable because it would involve the surrender of our present right to exercise exclusive control of our immigration policy and force us to consult other nations concerning it.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the bill just passed. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RETIREMENT OF CIVIL-SERVICE EMPLOYEES.

Mr. A. P. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by inserting some information, facts, and figures in regard to the retirement fund of date January 24, and a very brief statement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection. Mr. A. P. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to extend my remarks in the RECORD by giving the following information about the retirement law furnished to me by Robert H. Alcorn, chairman of the joint conference on the retirement, representing the civil-service employees of the United States. Mr. Alcorn has constantly been one of the great friends of the United States employees, and the beneficiaries of the retirement law owe him a debt of gratitude for his splendid services in their behalf before the committees on retirement in the two Houses of Congress

The data which he has submitted to me, furnished by the Treasury Department, is as follows:

Number retired.
Total number of employees retired up to Jan. 24, 1923 Average annual increase is about 30 per cent.	8, 500
There will be on the retired list on July 1, 1923 (approximately)_	9,000 6,667 909
Male retired	7, 071 505
Retirement and disability fund.

Retirement and disability fund. Contribution, Aug. 1, 1920, to Jan. 24, 1923: Contribution from employes salary Profits and interest on investments
Total Total amount of annulties paid out Balance on hand, which has been invested in Gov-	41, 147, 264, 89 14, 131, 514, 89 ernment securities. Of this fund there is a temporary investment of Supposing that the $4,000,000 is temporary and that it can be drawn on to pay the annuities up to July 1, 1923, would leave a balance, on July 1, 1923, of $22,984,250. The oldest annuitant on the roll was born January 10, 1828, retired August 21, 1920, after nearly 72 years' continuous service. The youngest annuitant was born June 1, 1888, and was retired January 1, 1922, on account of disability.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the pending immigration

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the pending immigration bill. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, I assume that they are the gentleman's own remarks?

Mr. RAKER. I am going to refer to some distinguished gentlemen who have taken the same view that I take on the subject. It will be interspersed with my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the proposed amendment to the Constitution on marriage and divorce laws.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the subject indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman withhold that for a moment?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE-AMERICAN RELIEF IN RUSSIA (S. DOC. NO. 307).

The SPEAKER pro tempore submitted the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and with the accompanying report, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, a report by the American Relief Administration of the disposition made of certain medicines, medical, surgical, and hospital supplies, which were transferred to said American Relief Administration by virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress approved January 16, 1922, for the relief of the distressed and famine stricken people of Russia.

WARREN G. HARDING.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 23, 1923.

ANNUAL REPORT OF GOVERNOR OF PORTO RICO (H. DOC. NO. 602).

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which, with the accompanying documents, was referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs and ordered printed:

To the Congress:

As required by section 12 of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1917, entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress the Twenty-second Annual Report of the Governor of Porto Rico, together with the reports of the heads of the several departments of the Porto Rican government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922.

I concur in the recommendation of the Secretary of War that this report be printed as a congressional document,

WARREN G. HARDING.

THE WHITE House, February 23, 1923.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. TUCKER, for to-day, on account of illness.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. LOWREY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing in 8-point type a very brief article from ex-Governor Taylor of Tennessee, apropos to the speech of the gentleman from North Carolina recently in relation to the monument to the colored mammies.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippl asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in 8-point type for the purpose indicated. Is there ob-

There was no objection.

The article referred to is as follows:

"SWING LOW, SWEET CHARIOT."

Bob Taylor, in his published lectures, makes this beautiful and touching allusion to a former slave of his family: "Not long ago I buried one of the last of our old family darkies. He had been a preacher for 50 years. When I was a child he often had been a preacher for 50 years. When I was a child he often led me, together with my brother, to his meetings. He had never learned the art of reading. But many a time have I seen him rise in the pulpit and say, 'My congergashun, you'll find my text somewhar 'twixt de lids of de Bible, whar it reads, "You must be born agan and agan." And then he would warm up to his theme until he plunged out far beyond the ratiocination of man. During the last 20 years of his life he made sight drafts upon my treasury and my wardrobe, just as thousands of oldtime darkies still make drafts upon their former masters in the South, and they are always honored. When I was a candidate Uncle Rufus was a Democrat. When my brother was a candidate he was a Republican. When we were candidates against each other he was neutral. The old man came one evening and sat with me in the twilight under the trees, and our minds wandered back together to the happy days of the past when he was a slave and I was a barefooted boy. He reviewed many a ghost story he used to tell us in the firelight around the hearthstone of his cabin in the happy long ago. And there was many a joke and jest and merry peal of laughter. But as the shadows thickened around us the old darky grew serious. He spoke tenderly of my father and mother and his old wife and all the old folks who had gone before. With tearful eyes he left me. But he paused as he departed, and leaned upon his staff and said, 'You may not see me again. I has had two visions of de charlot of de Lord descending from heaven to bear me away. The next time it comes your Uncle Rufus is a-gwyne home,' and as he hobbled away in the darkness I thought I heard a song:

Swing low, sweet chariot, coming for to carry me home, Swing low, sweet chariot, coming for to carry me home."

"I never saw him again. Before a week had passed, the chariot had swung low; the faithful old servant stepped in and was caught up into heaven. As I looked upon him for the last time, with the dews of life's evening condensing on his brow and the shadows of death falling around him, his simple words of faith in God were more beautiful to me than the most impassioned eloquence that ever fell from the lips of the brilliant Ingersoll."—Alabama Baptist.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Speaker, before leaving Congress I feel it to be an imperative personal duty again to lay before Congress and the public certain facts and observations regarding not only the Sterling-Towner bill, concerning which I have already spoken briefly, but what is known as the Fess amendment, the Fess general welfare bill, and what is ascribed to the President as a plan to create a department of general welfare "which," to use the language of one of its women advocates, "is to look after health, education, both physical and mental, and the things closest to human life." All of these measures are pernicious in character and if enacted into law will mark the decline and fall of constitutional government in the United States.

Insidiously and with relentless purpose many powerful elements in the country are combining in support of all of this legislation. They are not all of the same profession, nor animated by the same desires. We find in support of these measures the theoretical professorial class whose vanity is tickled by the assumption that it has discovered something new for the benefit of mankind. We have the self-interested classes who, without reflection or a care for consequences, seek only an enlargement of pay-roll opportunity. We have all of those socialistic, Bolshevistic, and paternalistic classes who favor any legislation that looks to the destruction of constitutional government. Added to these are the leaders of various so-called blocs, whether of labor or agriculture or of industry, whose measure of power depends upon the increased powers of Congress which they can bend to their will more easily than a supreme court created to preserve constitutional liberty. Finally, we have a large number of simple-minded, good-hearted people, to whom numerous idealistic and altruistic appeals are irresistible. Together they make a powerful force, and, judging from the past, will make an irresistible one unless the real substantial citizenship and productive forces of the country are organized against it.

Let me take up the Sterling-Towner bill, which proposes to nationalize education. Briefly this bill creates a new department of the Federal Government of equal authority, power, and prestige that the other departments of the Government poss The secretary of education so created would have a seat in the President's Cabinet, becoming, therefore, one of the President's councilors upon all questions affecting the Nation. He would receive a salary of $12,000 per annum, which is the same that the Secretaries of other departments now receive.

There would be an assistant secretary of education, whose salary would be later fixed by Congress, but which undoubtedly would be commensurate with the salaries of assistant secretaries of the other departments. There would also be of necessity a growing differentiation of the work of the department, which would result in the creation of many and varied bureaus, each one of them having a chief or a head, with salaries commensurate with their respective positions. Added to this would be a constantly increasing clerical force commensurate with the differentiations of the department. What I desire to impress upon you is the fact, with which you are already acquainted, that the creation of this department of the Government would inevitably follow the evolution and the growth witnessed in every other department of the Government since they were created. It is not too much to say that not since they were created. It is not too much to say that not only the possibilities but the probabilities of the growth of this one department, if created, would exceed that of any other under the Federal Government, because it would comprehend within its scope of facts not only every new development in the realm of knowledge but the administrative activities within every little school district in every State of the Federal Union as well. Especially will this be true if a department of public welfare be created according to the President's plan, which will include maternity, childhood, child labor, mothers' pensions, old-age pensions, old-age insurance, home economics, medicine, surgery, and, as I have already quoted, "all the things closest to human life." There is no escape from this conclusion, unless the advocates of this measure assume that the inherent expansion of all other departments, bureaus, and commissions of the Federal Government will not attend upon this department.

This would mean, therefore, that for the department of education alone the first appropriation of $100,000,000 would be increased inevitably year by year because of the expansion and growth inherent in the proposition, until national taxation for this purpose alone would run ultimately into billions of dollars. Add to this all of those things I have already mentioned, and which are proposed to be undertaken by the Federal Government by legislation already on the calendars of both Houses according to the reputed presidential plan of a general welfare department which shall take within its care "all the things closest to human life"—and you will see a people ultimately staggering under such taxation as to compel another revolution for adequate relief. The Revolution of 1776 was against an imbecile king. It is not certain that there will not have to be another revolution against a future imbecile Congress and President. The tyranny of a king is no more intolerable than the tyranny of a majority. This was plainly foreseen and feared and the endeavor made to provide against it by the framers of our Constitution. The pace, and a fast one, has already been set for this sort of legislation, gentle-men of the House, and if you keep it up you will either be displaced from your seats or an indignant people will have lost all the blessings of their birthright, and sooner or later will be compelled to overthrow a government which has become intolerable by senseless violations of the covenant of their union. If this legislation is enacted, and the measures proposed by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Fess], and that by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Towner], and other related schemes of the same bureaucratic character, the hopes of the citizen for lessened taxation and economical appropriation will forever go glimmering. To such an extent would Federal taxation expand and draw upon the resources of the taxables that sooner or later the peoples of the communities and of the States would find it impossible to meet these demands and at the same time retain the ability to levy taxes for their own community and State purposes.

What I wish to emphasize is that if this and other numerous forms of legislation of a bureaucratic and paternalistic character are to be accepted as the basis of a new policy for national government, the time will come, and it is not far distant, when the peoples of the various States and communities will have no money for their own expenditure, because the demands of the Federal Government will be all, if not more, than they can endure.

I do not mean to have it understood that I am opposed to education. It would be unfair and unjust to place me in such a position because I oppose the nationalization of education. It would be as absurd as to charge me with being an atheist because I was opposed to nationalizing religion. On the contrary, I am in favor of education, and believe that it should be the supreme purpose of every boy and girl in the land to secure an education, just as it should be a matter of pride and settled purpose for every man and woman to secure a home and the means of a comfortable living. What I do desire to have understood is that neither the State nor the Federal Government should be responsible any more for education than for Every State in the Union already provides food and clothing. not only food and clothing but shelter as well for the indigent and helpless—a humane and altogether proper provision.

I do not believe that the Federal Government has any right to interfere in what should be essentially and primarily the direct concern of the communities within the States. further and say that I believe that the respective States themselves should limit their State activities in this direction and place not only more responsibility directly upon the people but protect the people in the matter of taxation and expenditure for this and other State purposes which are essentially matters of community interest. In other words, I do not believe that the State itself has any duty to perform or should have any concern over the matter of education except to see to it that its future citizens are made sufficiently literate to fit themselves for the proper exercise of the right of suffrage. If it can be constitutionally upheld that the State should educate its children up to and including 12 grades of knowledge, why stop before the highest college course is reached? Further, if this principle be admitted, why should not the State tax its people to educate its ministers, its lawyers, its dectors, its scientific men in all employments, just as there seems to be a growing assumption that the State should give vocational training to all its boys and girls. How did the people of the United States become what they are, not in aggregate but in distributed wealth, not alone in power but in diffused prosperity, and an unchallenged esteem throughout the whole world for the blessings enjoyed by our people? Is it possible that our institutions have been wrong; that our former government was founded upon false principles; that, like Topsy, we have "just growed"; that grapes have been growing from thorns and figs from thistles for more than 150 years?

Let us give a little serious reflection to the fact that without these new schemes of government with which we are being so afflicted we have become a Nation such as no other in the world exceeds. And right here let me emphasize another thought, that national control of education is not the cure for every national ill, nor is it necessarily a matter prerequisite to the preservation of American civilization. There is no dispute except by a Gompers, a Marx, or a Lenin that this Government has not had a marvelous record of human attainment for all purposes for which governments have been instituted. There is no questioning our prosperity, our greatly distributed power, nor the more important fact, our peace and happiness in a land where from the foundation of our Government there has been secured more safety to the individual, more peace to the home, and a greater protection to the life and the property of the individual than has been given by the most favored government hitherto throughout the ancient or modern world. Therefore, let me ask again, how is it that we have attained to and obtained all of these things if illiteracy was a menace to good government? That illiteracy was not an obstacle to the foundation of our Government is very clear. The illiteracy of the Colonies at the time they met the armed forces of the most powerful nation of the world was not less than 75 per cent of the three million and a half who were involved in that great struggle. At the time of the adoption of our present Constitution in 1789 the illiteracy of the country was hardly less than in the colonial period. I again ask you to remember that the greatest and the most beneficent government that the world has ever known was instituted on a 75 per cent illiteracy and decade by decade has expanded and preserved itself on a far greater illiteracy than now exists. Again I ask, can grapes grow from thorns or figs from thistles? Cold logic historically would seem to prove that an illiteracy of 75 per cent was beneficent rather than harmful.

Ever since time began the human race has been subject to periods of mental prepossession. The receding wave of Coueism is now visible. We had a Perkins in the eighteenth century. It was the fashion at one time, especially for fashionable people, to have appendixes removed whether there was anything the matter with them or not. There are constantly changing fashions in dress and customs. There are temporary prepossessions in medicine and even in religion. Just now we are in the throes of violent spasms over education throughout the whole country, intensified and propagated chiefly by those who are self-interested—by the thoughtless and conscienceless politician—abetted by the dreamers and altruists, who fondly think that they are engaged in a great, noble, and necessary propaganda which will have for its results a real millennium; but chiefly by professorial educators and teachers seeking an enlarged opportunity under a Government pay roll.

Gentlemen of the House, let me remind you of two established facts: First, you can not educate every child alike nor to the same degree. Cold scientific ascertainment shows a biological inability to be highly educated on the part of a large proportion of the youth of the land. Second, no greater disaster could fall upon this country than to have every boy and girl possessed of a Harvard diploma, assuming that they were able to secure the same. This is a world, my friends, that you and I did not make. The Creator made the world and all that therein is. He made it according to His plan; and as far as His fundamental laws are concerned, you and I are powerless to change them. He did not make all men free and equal, although that beautiful euphuism appears in our Declaration of Independence.

The weakling is not equal physically to him who is strong. The lame, the halt, and the blind are not equal, either in fact or in their power to seize upon opportunity, to the individual who can run and who can see. The vicious born is not equal spiritually to him who is congenitally good. The idiot, the moron, the mentally defective is not equal to him who is endowed with congenital intelligence. All that that beautiful sentiment means is that under our institutions and laws everyone shall be equal in sharing their beneficence—the guaranties which they give for the protection of life, for the preservation of liberty, for the unimpeded pursuit of happiness, and for that chance of opportunity commensurate with the individual capacity. For years the world was under the delusion of the fallacy promulgated by Lamark, whose biological theory was that education would produce intelligence. The Socratic method, thousands of years old, is now known to have been established on a scientifically sound basis. It is now an established fact coming from physiological, sociological, psychological, and biological sources that education is one thing and intelligence quite another; that education can progress exactly and only in proportion to the congenital capacity of the individual to acquire education; that intelligence is born within the individual and can not be acquired by any process of culture, education, or by any environment whatsoever, any more than by any process of training, of feeding, or of culture whatsoever you could convert the finest beagle hound into a blue ribbon Irish setter.

I say this is an accepted scientific truth, and I only mention it in order to show not only the futility of hope and desire entertained by a large number of our educators who seem to think that by education you can increase the Aristotles, the Platos, the Ciceros, the Bacons, the Shakespeares, the Humboldts, the Lincolns, and the Roosevelts of the world, but also to show the waste of the taxables' money that is created by attempting to do impossible things. The great men whom I have just mentioned were born, not made. Their respective opportunities for culture and for knowledge only added to their greatness. Their greatness was inherent and could come from no o er source than their congenital inheritance.

Addressing myself again to the Sterling-Towner bill in particular, let me speak more plainly of a matter which the proponents of the bill claim robs it of all undestrability and all harm. I refer to the claim made that under the provisions of this bill the rights of the communities and the States are specifically safeguarded. I desire to be perfectly frank and admit that the bill does so provide in more than one section as far as words go. I desire, however, to declare also that every such apparent prohibition against national interference in the matter of community and State education contained in .his bill is a gross deception and altogether impudent when carefully looked at with the eyes of experience. Let us consider this matter with the clear eyes of common sense. Let us not be deluded or confused by words.

The plain facts are that if this bill becomes a law the secretary of education will necessarily be a man not only of educational fitness but a man of marked individual character, a man of strong will, a man of defined and resolute purposes, who will at once begin to carry out his ideas in respect to everything comprehended within the great word called education, and therefore will endeavor to establish his unrestricted influence within the sphere of his activities. Let me call your attention to the influence of a President upon Congress, owing to the patronage and other favors at his disposal. As men of experience recall the power of a governor within a State and his influence by reason of that power. There is not a human activity that does not have attached to it the power of influence. How many of the superintendents of education in the various States of the Union would resist the blandishments, the cajolements, and the opportunities enticingly displayed for elevation to some high position under a department where many such positions would be at the disposal of a secretary of a great and constantly growing department? Superintendents of public schools, whether State or county, are human, and a secretary of education, without coercion, without seeming ference on his part, would be able to establish any policy he He could institute textbooks for the inculcation of principle of political economy, of history, or of anything within the scope of a school curriculum, and thus secure control over education generally without seeming to have interfered to any degree whatever.

If every line of the bill was a prohibition against interference with the communities and the States, the practical control of a hundred millions of dollars to begin with, the great number of appointments at his disposal, together with the high prestige he would enjoy as a Cabinet officer, would inevitably make a secretary of education supreme by every rule of experience and common sense. There is not a small bureau established under the Federal Government that has not gradually expanded its power beyond the limitations of the act which created it, and which has not gradually encroached upon the individual rights that were specifically safeguarded therein. Let me give you an instance which I know to be fresh in your minds in respect to the statement which I have just made.

In 1913 the Child's Welfare Bureau was created, chiefly through the propaganda of Madam Kollantai, a grossly corrupt and profligate Russian Bolshevik now enjoying the connubial bliss of an eighth husband. While she was in this country acting in cooperation with various men and women whose interest in and admiration for foreign persons and ideas are distinguishing characteristics, the establishment of this bureau was consummated. When Mrs. Julia Lathrop, Miss Alice Paul, Miss Grace Abbott, and numerous other women id genus omne, and some men of the same genus, appeared before the committee that had such matters in charge they positively declared—the printed hearings will prove it—that they wanted only to establish a little bureau for the statistical purposes of childhood and motherhood; that all they desired was an appropriation of $25,000 a year, and that this $25,000 a year would be all they would ever require for such a purpose.

This was in 1913. After eight years only, this same crowd of people, augmented by thousands of others who saw a way to get upon the Federal pay roll, and so secure a Federal livelihood, came before Congress and asked for $150,000,000 under the guise of a maternity bill, and tried to convince the committee before whom they appeared that there was such an alarming mortality affecting the expectant mother and the new-born babe, that if not checked by the enactment of the law which they demanded, the extinction of the human race, in the United States at least, was a matter of serious apprehension. All this was put forth impudently in the face of the knowledge possessed even by fools that motherhood and childhood were at that very moment at-tended by less mortality, were better safeguarded by scientific discoveries in sanitation, dietetics, and medicine, through the individual efforts of the great medical profession throughout the world, than in any other period hitherto in human history. They did not hesitate, in fact, to falsify statistics bearing upon the subject, and in some cases actually to conceal them so as to better forward their desires. In eight years the demands for a $25,000 bureau per annum expanded into a $150,000,000 proposition per annum. The Congress, playing its usual game of politics, granted a million and half of dollars as a complacent compromise between their consciences and the fear of club-icomen voters.

In answer to the claims made by some of the proponents of this measure that there is no desire to curtail or interfere in the slightest degree with the power of the community or State in educational matters, I desire to say that it is unfortunate for those propenents who took this position that they should not have conspired together more intimately and learned to speak phonographically the same piece. When this educational bill first came to my attention I sent out nearly 2,000 questionnaires for the purpose of ascertaining the sentiment of the public. A questionnaire was sent to the president of every American college, to the editor of every daily newspaper, to the governor of every State, and to every State superintendent of public schools. In reply to this questionnaire there were numerous advocates of the absolute control of education by the Federal Government as against the rights of the community and the State. Let me quote a few of them.

L. B. Powers, president Kansas Wesley University, says: "I am in hearty sympathy with the main tenets of the Smith-Towner bill and other proposed legislation looking toward the nationalization of education," because, among other reasons, he says, "a much more complete standardization of schools could be achieved."

F. G. Coffin, president Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa, says: "Upon the general subject I may say that the central government might well have a place in relationship to our States and have a joint authority or an associate authority * * * greatly to their advantage. State rights have almost entirely disappeared in almost every department of our national life, and it is an anachronism to have it prevailing in educational circles." * * *

Howard A. N. Briggs, Strait College, New Orleans, says: "I favor placing education under a central authority of the Government, taking it out of the hands of the communities and the States".

W. H. Black, president Missouri Valley College, Marshall, Mo., says: "* * * I have no hesitation in approving the nationalization of education. * * * It seems to me that * * * there should be national standards for courses of study, for teacher qualifications and certifications, and also standards of salaries and pensions."

J. N. Tilden, president Lombard College, Galesburg, Ill., says: "In reply to your circular letter of December 9, I am pleased to state that I am unalterably in favor of the nationalization of education."

R. M. Montgomery, president Parsons College, Iowa, says: "It properly relates the great subject to the administration of our Government."

R. T. Camel, president Sterling College, Kans., says: "The nationalization of education, in my judgment, would be a great help to our educational institutions."

John W. Hoffman, president Wesley University, Delaware, Ohio, says: "I am certainly in favor of the nationalization of education. * * * I am thoroughly committed to the idea of centralization in this respect."

A. E. Turner, president Lincoln College, Lincoln, Ill., says: "Referring to your inquiry of December 9, I beg to say that it is the feeling of this institution to place education under a central authority of the Government."

U. S. Smith, president Iowa Wesley College, says: "Suffice to say that I am in sympathy with the bill and believe that a nationalization of our educational system would be in keeping with the advancement of the age."

Frederick Lent, president Elmira College, New York, says:
"I am in favor of the nationalization of education." * * *
To these frank expressions I could add largely, but I have not the space in this address. When the proponents themselves are divided upon the question and some of them frankly avow their purpose to nationalize education, openly advocating the placing of education under the control of national authority, distinctly demanding that all community and State activity be eliminated in order that principles and policies, textbooks and salaries, certifications and pensions may be standardized, and taxation and expenditure be placed entirely in the hands of a majority of Congress, it behooves every intelligent man and woman to consider whether this Prussianizing of education in the United States is desirable; and if not, to organize against it. Personally, I deny the right of the professional educator, whether of high or low degree, to dictate a policy the burdens of which the taxpayer will have to bear, especially when that policy must necessarily result in widespread and deteriorating effects upon the individual character of the American citizen. In concluding this part of my remarks let me say that an analysis of the opinions of the presidents of colleges shows a marked opposition to this bill on the part of the great colleges of the country, such as those of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, and Williams, with a lessening opposition as you go down the scale of institutional importance.

I received also a large number of replies from presidents of colleges who favored the nationalization of education but who, fatuously, did not believe that this would interfere in the slightest degree with the liberty of the communities and of the States—a reductio ad absurdum.

Of the replies I received from the daily newspapers of the United States a large majority were opposed to the measure. Of the governors, so far as answers were received, a majority did not favor the proposition. Finally, of the superintendents of education of the several States an overwhelming majority of them favored the bill. A scrutiny of these replies revealed fact that those who were looking after jobs were overwhelmingly behind the legislation, while those who were looking after consequences were opposed to it. It might just as well be said now, so that the general public may know it, that all the 4,000 counties of the United States are being organized by their respective superintendents of education and their assistants in order to secure the passage of this bill, making it, beyond all question, a professional propaganda. This is not only dangerous, but it does not in any way determine the will of the tax-payer. Take as an illustration any town or community, and the entire profession of teachers will not comprehend more than one-half of 1 per cent of the tax-paying community. It is proposed that this one-half of 1 per cent shall determine the passage of a law affecting the rest of a community. And yet, notwithstanding its absurdity, this is likely to be effected unless the taxpayers themselves rise up and by equal organization defeat the passage of such legislation, the burdens of which, if consummated, they themselves will have to bear, leaving out of the discussion any comment upon the disastrous effects of such a national policy.

Having inserted letters and quotations from those in favor of nationalizing education, I think it proper to insert here a few letters and quotations from distinguished educators and journalists who oppose the creation of a department of education, in order that their views may be given through the means of the Congressional Record to the people of the entire country, and provoke, if possible, universal thought and discussion for the salvation of our constitutional citizenship.

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in his annual report of that institution last January put himself on record as follows: The plan to nationalize education "is to bureaucratize and bring into uniformity the educational system of the whole United States while making the most solmen assurances that nothing of the kind is intended." He says further, "The free and natural system of education that has grown up among us should be continued," for, "the glory and successes of education in the United States are due to its reflection to the needs and ambitions and capacities of local communities, and to its being kept in close and constant touch with the people themselves.

> HARVARD UNIVERSITY, PRESIDENT'S OFFICE, Cambridge, December 12, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

Congress of the United States,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. LAYTON: Your letter about the Smith-Towner bill has come. I do not believe in the provision in that bill to create a Department of Education, with a member of the Cabinet at its head. I believe that would be simply putting education into politics; nor am I yet convinced of the wisdom of a national appropriation for education on the lines laid down in that bill.

Very truly yours,

A. LAWRENCE LOWELL.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT'S ROOM, Princeton, N. J., December 10, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. LAYTON: I have just received your letter, and am glad to give you the following statement concerning the Smith-Towner bill:

I have expressed myself as opposed to this bill because, in my opinion, a centralized bureau having supervision of the education of the country would be always subject to political interests and ultimately to political control. The result for America would be, in all probability, similar to that in Ger-

The German system of centralized educational control is, of course, carried to the extreme, but it shows the tendency of such an organization. In Germany the results have proved disastrous not only to education but to the general spirit and morale of the German people. As a particular instance, I would cite the letter which the 93 professors of various German universities sent out to the so-called intellectual world at the beginning of the war—a letter they were all compelled to sign by a central educational authority. While we might not have the same disastrous experience in America, the Smith-Towner bill opens up possibilities in this direction.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN GRIER HIBBEN.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Chicago, Ill., December 12, 1921.

Mr. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 9th instant is received. not in favor of transferring the control of education from the States to the Federal Government. Neither am I in favor of the principle of Federal subsidies to the States for educational or other purposes. Education, it seems to me, is far more effective when controlled and financed by the communities immediately concerned. The steady drift toward remote control of local affairs from Washington is wrong in principle and injurious in It is contrary, I believe, to the fundamental principle of our Constitution, which implies local self-government and not Prussian centralization. The injurious effect of subsidies is so obvious and has so many implications that I need not discuss it here. It seems to me that the Federal Government should confine itself to those vital necessities which concern it alone and leave as much as possible to the States and to local initiative.

Very truly yours,

HARRY PRATT JUDSON.

MUHLENBERG COLLEGE, Allentown, Pa., December 12, 1921.

HOB. CALEB P. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In replying to your letter I would say that I am at present in a position to know the general sentiment of the colleges of Pennsylvania, as I happen to be for this year president of the College Presidents' Association of Pennsylvania.

Our opinion is that while certain advantages may seem to be derived from the Smith-Towner and similar bills in unifying the education of our country, and in helping us to greater com-mon standards, neverthless we believe that there is a great danger in the present strong movements toward taking away from States and communities many of the privileges which they have hitherto exercised.

The reason is that a people should be allowed as much local freedom as possible in developing our American educational system. It is the close touch with educational problems, with educational problems which touch every sphere of education, that insures those rights which we as American people possess in education as a part of our democracy.

It is our opinion in Pennsylvania that there are too many movements that look toward strong paternalization and toward an oversocialization of our modern life. We see in all of these movements in education the approach to a situation which shall rob us of our personal freedom.

It must be remembered that there are many private institutions of learning which are supported by the gifts of many people, and which form a real contribution to American education without imposing general taxation. Is it right that a central government shall pass laws which will affect at least indirectly the life of these institutions?

While the Smith-Towner bill guarantees local State rights in education, yet the effect of central appropriation of money will after all make State authorities quite willing to follow the indications of the Federal Commissioner of Education.

Furthermore, if the Federal Government will appropriate moneys to States without control it is not a fair procedure, for the money will be expended and given to the States to do with as they please. However, the Smith-Towner bill does not provide for such freedom at all. There will come about through these new plans a double taxation of the people for the same cause, which is always unfortunate.

We hold in Pennsylvania that common standards can best be arrived at through free conferences rather than through pressure from above. We are already being overregulated by numbers of societies and standard-fixing agencies outside of our own States, and we feel that any kind of additional Federal control will add further confusion and difficulty.

Yours very sincerely,

JOHN A. W. HAAS, President.

WILLIAMS COLLEGE. OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Williamstown, Mass., March 4, 1922.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

Representative from Delaware, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: During my absence abroad you made inquiry of me concerning the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of a similar character now on the congressional calendar. Possibly it is too late to reply, but the subject is of first-rate importance, and therefore I send you the following brief comment in answer to your specific question whether or not I favor placing education under a central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of the communities and the States.

There is a place for both the private and the State university. While I am aware that the advocates of the Smith-Towner bill deny any purpose to interfere with the educational policies now laid down by the States, my judgment is that if that or any similar bill is passed the advisory attitude will in course of time give way to supervision, and that our State universities will therefore be compelled to conform to a general educational policy rather than to the policies suited to the needs of the several States. We are too vast a territory to make it reasonable to impose a uniform educational system upon the schools With even more and colleges of all sections of our country. force this observation would apply to privately endowed colleges and universities.

Granted the value of a state educational system among the European States, it by no means follows that such a system would be applicable here. To make the comparison one would have to consider the effect of a proposal to impose a single educational system upon all of western Europe, while, of course, admitting that the differences there are greater than with us. But my chief objection lies in a different direction.

Since the war we have heard much comment upon Americanization. What does it mean? It may have a very good meaning or a very sinister one. Washington, the Adams family, and Lincoln were products of uncontaminated Americanism. pose they had been trained under a single, central policy, formulated by a group of officials entertaining their own particular notions of Americanization. It seems clear to me that under those circumstances those three types could not have been produced. A centralized uniform system means a centralized policy. A centralized educational policy will stunt our best growths and destroy the variety making for the richness as well as the strength of American life. We need more Lincolns, but we also need more Washingtons and Adamses.

We can carry to every section of our country necessary financial support and what is of even greater importance, the influence and training of the best which each section affords without the menace of a centralized educational system. In my judgment we are throwing away part of our birthright if we adopt such a policy. The Bureau of Education as a central, advisory body, organized as at present, is doing valuable service on right lines and within proper limits.

Sincerely yours,

H. A. GARFIELD.

THE JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY. PRESIDENT'S OFFICE. Baltimore, Md., December 10, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have your letter of December 8 asking my opinion with regard to the nationalization of education as expressed in the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of similar character now on the congressional calendar.

I am personally opposed to the proposal. In the first place, there will be a necessity for a further centralization of our Government in the hands of the Washington authorities along other lines, such as transportation and perhaps public health. I feel that the centralization which will necessarily take place will put upon the Federal Government all the burden which it should be expected to bear.

I do not believe that centralization of the educational system is necessary nor at the present time desirable. I further feel that it is very unwise to carry this centralization any further than is absolutely necessary, and that, owing to the present conditions of the finances of the United States Government, it should not assume any further burdens than it is absolutely necessary that it should assume.

I am, yours very truly,

FRANK J. GOODNOW.

CONCORDIA COLLEGE. Fort Wayne, Ind., December 20, 1921.

Hon. CALEB LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SIR: In a recent letter you asked the opinion of Prof. M. Luecke, president of Concordia College, on the Smith-Towner

We are opposed to the Smith-Towner bill, which "places education under a central authority of the Government and takes it out of the hands of communities and States," because a subsidy of the Federal Government to the States would empower the former to specify the conditions on which their financial assistance would be contingent. But the same conditions do not obtain in all counties and States, and the vital interests of certain communities and States might be affected adversely by the official action of a central authority in education, which must necessarily apply equally to all communities and States.

On behalf of the faculty of Concordia College,

Very respectfully yours, [SEAL.]

M. LUECKE. President.

SIMMONS COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Boston, Mass., December 12, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: In reply to the question in your letter of December 9, I would say that I am entirely opposed to the transfer of educational responsibility from the State and its communities to a Federal authority. ties to a Federal authority. * * * Any further transfer of responsibility and control to an authority outside of the State would, in my mind, be a very great misfortune, because I be-lieve that the responsibility of the community for the training of its children is one of the best elements in promoting true citizenship. I hope that the States are not to be bribed to surrender their present control of this important function.

Yours truly,

HENRY LEFAVOUR.

OKLAHOMA AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Stillwater, December 16, 1921.

HOD. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter to hand regarding the Smith-Towner bills and other bills of similar character now on the congressional calendar, and in reply will say that I am absolutely opposed to any form of legislation which places education under central authority of the Government and takes it out of the hands of the communities and the States.

I regard it as one of the most dangerous tendencies in our modern educational policies. As to my reasons against such legislation, it seems to me that the stating of the objection carries the reason therefor, and that is: Communities and States should be allowed to direct their educational policies, whether they have much money or little money. I for one prefer to have no money and local and State autonomy to a large budget, the control thereof centralized at Washington, or any other place, for that matter.

Furthermore, my own feeling is that should the time come when the United States Government can control one type of education it will control another, and the step to the control of it all will soon be accomplished. When that is done, in my judgment it means the fading away of the Republic and the bringing in of the empire. We have had a sample, to the sorrow of the world, of centrally controlled education, such as was developed in Germany, and it seems to me that a little reflection upon the disastrous effects of such a policy would be enough to cause educators, legislators, and all friends of freedom to stop and think. These and other reasons might be assigned, but I am sure you understand what I mean.

Thanking you for having written me, and with my best wishes, I am,

Cordially and sincerely,

J. B. ESKRIDGE, President.

FORDHAM UNIVERSITY, PRESIDENT'S OFFICE, Fordham, N. Y., December 12, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am decidedly opposed to the plan of centering the educational power of the country at Washington.

The plan is unnecessary. Local control is much better be-cause the appreciation of the local needs will be much keener on the part of those concerned than would be the case if there were a central board of control located at Washington. You will appreciate this from your own legislative experience.

The plan is dangerous. It savors too much of the Bismarckian scheme which placed the German Nation where we find it to-day.

Uniformity in the system of education is bad for any country and the result of this plan must be a uniform system of education.

The appropriation is inadequate for the purposes specified. Even the present figures impose an unnecessary burden of taxa-

Education is thus brought into the realm of national politics, a circumstance which we would certainly have speedy reason

When our desire now is to teach the growing generation what the real American should be, it seems sad that our legislators even consent to discuss a plan which is so thoroughly un-American.

My personal opinion in this matter is vastly strengthened by the fact that so many of the real educators of the country, not those who exploit education for their own selfish ends, are thoroughly opposed to the spirit and principle of the bill. Such men, in constant touch with the problems of education, are much better qualified to pass judgment on such a matter than are they who are members of various associations who discuss without proper knowledge the serious questions involved in this branch of the national welfare.

Finally, it behooves us to see to it that no further inroads be made on the Constitution of the United States. If we continue to pass such measures as the Sheppard-Towner maternity bill and the Towner-Sterling bill, we might as well fling the Constitution to the winds and devise some other scheme of Trusting that the above will be of some assistance to you in opposing, as I feel you will, what every true American ought to oppose, I am.

Very sincerely yours, E. P. TIVNAN, Jr., President.

> GUILFORD COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Guilford College, N. C., December 12, 1921.

Hon. C. R. Layton, Representative to Congress from Delaware,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I have your letter of December 9 inquiring concerning my opinion on national or central authority or control of education.

In reply I wish to say that I am emphatically opposed to it. Germany gives us a fine illustration of the evils of national control in education. Whenever a group of Government officers can dictate to the public how they shall spend their money for education and the things that they shall teach, democracy is doomed. I am not opposed to strong centralization of control of our industries, transportation, etc., but when it comes to religion and education the people must be free to conduct it in a way that most strongly realizes their highest ideals. In education more than in religion diversity of instruction and purpose is essential to the development of a freethinking people.

Very sincerely yours,

RAYMOND BINFORD.

WHITMAN COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Walla Walla, Wash., December 14, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives Building,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am glad to receive your letter of December 9 asking my opinion concerning the Smith-Towner bill. I am heartily opposed to that bill and to the nationalization of education which it provides. Inclosed is a letter which I have addressed to members of the Educational Committees of the House and Senate.

With high regards, I am, very truly yours,

STEPHEN B. L. PENROSE.

WHITMAN COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Walla Walla, Wash., December 2, 1921.

DEAR SIR: I have recently received a copy of a bill known as the Towner-Sterling bill, and also a pamphlet entitled "Facts about the educational bill," prepared in Boston, Mass., by a "National Committee for a Department of Education." have long been familiar with the movement to create a department of education, with a secretary in the President's Cabinet, and am strongly opposed to it. Will you allow me to present some of the reasons for my opposition?

For 27 years I have been president of Whitman College, a nonsectarian but Christian institution of higher education. During this time I have taught the history and principles of education and have studied education broadly and minutely, both in the Northwest and in the country at large. I am by birth and upbringing a Pennsylvania Republican, born in Philadelphia, and therefore I might be expected to favor the centralization of power in the hands of the Government; nevertheless, I believe that the Towner-Sterling bill is inexpedient, un-necessary, and prejudicial to the best interest of education and the Nation.

First. It is inexpedient. The bill proposes the annual expenditure, for an indefinite time, of $100,500,000. This expenditure is not for one year or for a term of years, but runs on without limitation as a permanent feature of our national life. seems to me that, in the present juncture of immense national indebtedness and extraordinary taxation necessary for carrying our war debt and the increased cost of Government, it is unwise to burden the Nation with such an expenditure unless it can be proven to be absolutely necessary.

Second. The proposed expenditure is unnecessary

From the begining of our history education has been a func-tion first of the locality and then of the State. The advocates of the bill assume that all functions of the national life, including education, must be directed by the National Government from Washington, and that a Government department of education is necessary to create a proper interest in education. But education has been a primary interest of the American people from the earliest days, and has not waited for the National Government to call it into being. The interest of the people has been widespread and generous to an unparalleled degree. burden of proof must rest upon supporters of the bill.

It is true that several educational activities, chiefly of research, are carried on at present by several departments of the Federal Government, and that wasteful overlapping is a result. But it is not necessary to organize a department of education in order to unify these activities. Let the disposition to unify such activities appear, and the problem can be solved economically and effectively.

Third, The proposed bill is dangerous in its tendencies.

(a) Local initiative has heretofore characterized education in the United States. This bill will teach the States and their normal schools to look to the National Government for yearly support. It will stimulate a feeling of dependence rather than of independence and thus tend to pauperize the people of the

(b) It places the responsibility for educational development upon the wrong shoulders. Make the people of each district and of each State feel that they must manage their own affairs as best they can and they will manage them better than if they expect continual relief from a benevolent and paternal Government.

(c) The independence of the States is undermined by the proposed measure. Money in large amounts is offered to them for unnecessary objects. Their normal schools need no aid for unhecessary objects. Their normal schools need no all from the United States Government. The problem of illiteracy should be met at its source; namely, Ellis Island and the gates which admit immigrants, rather than thus tardily. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Moreover, the present efforts of the States to Americanize their foreign element do not require the vast scheme of aid proposed in this bill.

Arouse the States to the problems which are involved by the presence of an ignorant body of foreigners within their borders; when they realize their danger, they will find adequate means to overcome it. At present they are often unaware of the economic and moral loss which they sustain by the presence of this unassimilated element. They need enlightenment rather than Government bounty. Unnecessary and lavish expenditure on the part of the General Government is a danger

For these reasons I earnestly hope that you will oppose the passage of any bill to establish a national department of edu-

STEPHEN B. L. PENROSE, President.

HOPE COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Holland, Mich.

MY DEAR SOR: In reply to your letter of the 9th instant, I am glad to give a brief statement of my personal attitude in the matter.

1. I am opposed to "nationalization of education" because each community faces conditions peculiar to itself and must be allowed to develop itself in detail to suit these conditions. A few general broad principles might be enunciated from time to time by a conference board which could guide but should have no legislative or executive power. Nationalization means bureaucracy and a scaling down of standards rather than a free scope for higher-and perhaps newer-ideas and ideals in education.

2. Nationalization means standardization. Standardization may be desirable in machinery, but men and women are individuals, and above all human individuals for whom standardization would be fatal. Any real "educator" is wary of "methods" because they produce types rather than men. Again, a properly constituted board could suggest models which might be of assistance in might be of assistance in many quarters, e. g., "standard buildings," but there should be no constraint. If a California community wished to adapt its whole educational scheme to its out-door possibilities, it should be free to do so. If a Chicago board desired to stress "vocationalism" to the elimination of e erything else it should have the privilege, while a farming community might wish to develop the purely agricultural aspect.

3. The taxing power should remain local, unaided by Federal grants, for in this way any community can get just what it wants and what is fitted for it. A large increase of expenditures upon some rural communities would be sheer waste of Federal funds. The national experience in "pork-barrel" politics should give instances enough of this phase of the question.

4. Carried to its limit the idea of Federal control will work out into a low-grade mass of teachers safeguarded by a minimum wage, carried along by a pensioner's hope, and operated by a time clock's "off-and-on" movement, which must be destructive of real personal power.

Paternalism is fatal to real democracy, and in education more than anywhere else it will eat at the very root of our national spirit and reduce us to a group without individualism or initia-Better an inadequate building with real "American and girls than a "standard school" with truancy laws and every boy outwitting the truant officer; better a teacher with real love for his work and interest in boys and girls than a "trained expert" and cut-and-dried methods guaranteed to turn out "graduates" (mostly famed for batting averages or beautycontest votes); better a community idea in education, even though it fall a little below up-to-the-minute tests, than a servile or snobbish aping of metropolitan "ideals."

5. "Nationalistic" ideas are not less subject to error than local ones; and their worst aspect is that if they do err, their harm is so much greater in that they have had the wider application. And they are less easily corrected because they must of necessity go through a formal routine of change, whereas when a fault has been detected in a small and a local unit the correction is a matter of little expense and trouble and time.

Finally, in constructive matters, such as education and religion and art, there is litle need of control such as there must be in destructive elements. Dynamite must be surrounded with all sorts of precautionary measures, because it is latently harmful. Bread does not need such laws. So industry may need safeguarding because of inherent dangers; but education is constructive, and, unless it partakes of theories inimical to our national genius, it can always take care of itself. It should be free—free even from being fostered by public grants if the local community prefers its own method of development.

These are the notions of a "common citizen" whose business is education. They are no better and perhaps no worse than any others; they are, it is believed, calculated for use in America.

Very truly yours,

EDWARD D. DIMNENT.

The honorable the Member of Congress from Delaware, Washington, D, C., December 19, 1921.

Office of the President, Jamestown College, Jamestown, N. Dak., December 16, 1921.

Hon. C. R. LAYTON,

Member of Congress from Delaware, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: The chief fear I have is the possibility of political manipulation in education, such as we have discovered in Germany. It would be better to have progress a little slower than ultimate Federal domination. The States of the Union have articulated beautifully and their responsibility must be carefully guarded. Too much centralization may prove expensive and disastrous, especially where a dominant spirit is at the helm. Our State has been going through too much is at the helm. Our State has been going through too much centralization under a socialistic organization, and people are too ready to think that all their ills can be solved by Federal or centralized processes.

Very truly yours, B. H. KROEZE, President.

> NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT.

Watertown, Wis., December 14, 1921. Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON.

Member of Congress from Delaware.

DEAR SIR: I have your letter of inquiry regarding the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of similar character. I sincerely hope that any bill placing education under a central authority of the Government or creating a department of education will be rejected by Congress. I am opposed to such bills for the following reasons:

1. They would give a central authority the power to direct the energies of the schools into such channels as that authority should choose, to mold the policies of the schools, and to determine their character.

2. The education of the child should be left in the hands and under the direct control of the parent of the child. child belongs to the parent and not to the State. The establishment of a central authority, however, would have the effect of removing the control of the education of the child one more step away from the parent. The tendency is already too much toward bureaucratic control and away from parental control.

3. It is the nature of a department to multiply its functions, broaden its powers, and strengthen its authority in order to prove its usefulness and justify its existence. If a department of education did not completely control the education of the Nation in the first few years of its existence, it would do so in less than a decade after its establishment.

4. The effect of the proposed laws would be to deprive the States and communities of initiative in matters regarding education. The loss of the freedom to make their own decisions would entail the further loss of the feeling of direct responsibility for the effective education of their children and for the moral and financial support of education.

5. The establishment of a Department of Education would not solve the problem of financing education. If the schools can ever be adequately financed under central Federal control, they can be financed under the present system, for eventually the money comes from identical sources. The Department of Education would have no source of revenue that is not already open to the schools. It would be more likely to lose the best and most ready source—the personal interest and feeling of in answer to your letter of December 9 that in his opinion responsibility of the parent for the education of the child. Moreover, a great part of the increased expenditure under the new system would not inure directly or indirectly to the benefit of the schools but would be used to support another army of clerks at Washington.

6. Central control of education is undemocratic. It gives central authority the power to dictate what the Nation shall think, what its ideals shall be or not be, how it may vote and not vote. The history of the schools in Germany, Poland, and other European countries, which for many years have had central control of education, shows how completely the thought of a nation can be controlled by the power that controls the schools. The clamor for central control seems to show that we are in a fair way to adopt the autocratic principles and methods of European governments which but a year or two ago were anathema.

I gather from your letter that you are not now in favor of the pending education bills establishing control. If such is the case I congratulate you, for I am convinced that you are right, that you are upholding the cause of democracy, and that you are doing a service to every father and mother in the land who wants his children educated, not merely sent to school.

Respectfully yours,

E. E. KOEVALKE.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Brunswie:, Me., December 12, 1921.

MY DEAR SIR: I do not favor placing education under a cen-It believe strongly in local responsibility for our schools. For that reason I have always opposed the Smith-Towner bill, and shall continue to oppose bills of that type. My reasons are as follows

1. It means inevitably the bringing of politics into our school system. A secretary of education in the President's Cabinet must necessarily be of the same political party as the President, and there will be all sorts of pressure brought to bear on this appointment. It does not seem to me that there is bear on this appointment. It does not seem to me that there is any analogy between a secretary of education and a secretary of agriculture. From the very nature of the case proclamations, suggestions, and advice from the secretary of education would be carried into every public school in the country, and there would be an inevitable bearing toward a bureaucratic system of education. The argument that the office would not have a political color seems to me without weight when one considers the way in which our Government works. I have seen enough of political influence in State governments to be afraid of the same thing being introduced into any Federal system of education.

2. I believe that education should be looked after by the fferent States. This country is so large and the population is so great that to centralize in Washington authority and control over its school system would be to complicate matters unduly. I think, also, that by having the Government at Washington subsidize the States, if the secretary of education approved of the policies of the different State superintendents, would be to take away responsibility from the State and at the same time build up a great deal of centralized power in Wash-

There are other features of the bill to which I object; for example, the sum of one hundred millions is pure hit or miss, and a portion of the bill is very badly drawn, so as to give the secretary of education very great power; but perhaps this will at least start some discussion.

I am well aware that the bill is heartily favored by many people who know much more about education than I do; but in closing I desire to state that the bill was carefully studied by the members of our faculty last fall, arguments for and against the bill were considered, and the faculty by a tremendous majority registered its disapproval of the bill.

Yours very truly,

KENNETH C. M. SILLS.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON, House of Representatives, Washington.

> UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN, PRESIDENT'S OFFICE. Ann Arbor, December 12, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON, Member of Congress from Delaware, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. LAYTON: President Burton asks me to say it would be unfortunate to take the control of educational matters of the separate States and communities out of the hands of these States and communities and place them under the central authority of the Government. It would be, for example, undesirable that the central control should have the authority to dictate to any State or community the subjects or the methods to be followed in the educating of the citizens of that community.

Yours very sincerely,

FRANK E. ROBBINS, Assistant to the President.

UNIVERSITY OF SANTA CLARA, PRESIDENT'S OFFICE, Santa Clara, Calif., December 16, 1921.

Hon. CALEB LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. LAYTON: I thank you for giving me the opportunity of expressing my opinion on the Sterling-Towner bill.

I am opposed to it for many reasons:

1. I consider it an ill-timed and gigantic piece of extravagance. Any proposition, no matter how innocuous in itself, which proposes to bleed the people for an extra $100,500,000 and more annually in these days of unrest and distrust between class and class, and of high cost of the necessaries of life, and of high taxes, and of so much unemployment, is ill timed, is

2. I am opposed to it also because it is against the spirit of ir system of government. The Federal Government is encroaching upon the government of the States. This is fatal. Our Government will soon bring upon the people all the evils of

I consider it a matter of the highest patriotism to oppose all those bills that tend to amplify the power of the Federal Government over the States, even though they disguise their purpose by the words "to aid the States."

The burden of proof must be against all extension whatever in any direction of all Federal invasion into the rights of the individual State. Many ignorant, though well-meaning up-holders of these bills seem to think just the opposite, that you have to show cause why the States should not be interfered

John Fiske well said: "The progressive political career of the American people will have come to an end on the day when the people of the different parts of the country shall allow their local affairs to be administered by prefects sent from Washington.'

3. I am opposed to it, also, because the Federal Government is not successful or efficient in many of its newly acquired or usurped functions. It is a bungler in these matters. does it not take care of its soldiers? They belong to it. post office is not such a wonderful success, neither did it manage the railroads so wonderfully well.

4. I am opposed to it not because I do not esteem education, but because I do value education and love it so much. And therefore education is not to be Prussianized, it must not be throttled, it must not be put into the clutches of some dictator in Washington, using his power for political propaganda. If this is to be a free country, the Sterling-Towner bill and others of that brood must be defeated.

Sincerely yours,

. Z. J. MAHER.

WILSON COLLEGE, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Chambersburg, Pa., December 19, 1921.

HOR. CALEB R. LAYTON.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. LAYTON: Your letter was duly received, and I am answering on a separate sheet your inquiry.

I am strongly opposed to the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of a similar character. I am obliged to you for giving me an opportunity of expressing my opinion on what I believe to be a very important subject.

I have done some speaking during the last year on this matter, and in preparing for such work I have been particularly impressed by the statement of Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, former president of Yale University, which I did not see until I had fully formed mown opinion. I a sure that I can add nothing fully formed m own opinion. I a sure that I can add not to what he has written. I feel sure his letter is in your file.

Yours very truly,

E. D. WARFIELD.

THE SMITH-TOWNER (TOWNER-STERLING) BILL.

I am opposed to this bill and to all similar bills for several reasons which are entirely distinct but which have a cumulative effect. Either of these reasons might not be sufficient to counterbalance the advantages which are claimed for the proposed legislation if it were free from the other objections. Taken together they constitute an argument the weight of which I am confident if carefully considered will be seen to be sufficient to make this legislation seem both unwise and un-

1. The first objection to the Smith-Towner bill that occurred to me was not at all with reference to its relation to education but with reference to its undesirability. At a time when the country is carrying an enormous burden of taxation anything that unnecessarily adds to the expenditures of government and the burden of taxation is certainly unwise. This bill proposes to appropriate an enormous sum of money for the creation of a department of education with a very extensive administrative staff, and provides Federal aid for education throughout the country. It is proposed to spend $100,000,000 a year. Of this great sum one-half is definitely assigned to four purposes but without any definite indication that the amounts appropriated are needed or related to any known

Fifty million dollars in the broadest and most general terms are assigned for the purpose of equalizing education throughout the States. The vagueness of the appropriations of the first half of the great sum of $100,000,000 is more than reproduced here. All that can be said for it is, give us $50,000,000 and we will find some way of spending it.

An official argument in favor of this expenditure is to the effect that "Congress now appropriates to the States about $100,000,000 a year to promote the building of roads." It is easy to prepare on the basis of such argument an unlimited schedule of expenditure.

Has not the time come for retrenchment and reduction of needless expenditure and excessive taxation?

2. The second question that suggests itself is, Is there any real need of a department of education with a secretary in the President's Cabinet? The Cabinet was originally planned as a body of executive heads, under the immediate direction of the President, embracing only a few major departments of government. Subsequently the Cabinet became, as in all great States, a body of statesmen advising with the President on the major matters of government and directing, through experts in their respective departments, the growing business of government. A government needs a small body of highly competent statesmen to direct its policy and to provide for the public welfare. qualifications of such men are not the same as those required for bureau chiefs. The multiplication of members in all cases has made cabinet government extremely difficult, and in a country like ours, where the Government is directed by the President without a responsible Cabinet, it is particularly desirable that the Cabinet advisers should not be so numerous as to obstruct the business of government by lack of cooperation. Large cabinets tend to break up into cliques, which foster jealousies and impede the administration of public affairs.

In recent years the number of Cabinet officers has been materially increased. It is certainly not desirable to continue this increase indefinitely. It is especially unfortunate that the Department of the Interior has been successively relieved of important departments, diminishing the dignity of the Secretary, who was intended to be of the same rank as in foreign cabinets attaches to the secretary of state for home affairs.

It is especially to be noted that the head of the department of education should rather be an expert chief of a bureau than an adviser on the great matters of state.

3. The educational argument against the bill centers in the fact that it represents what must ever be repugnant to a free people occupying a vast territory—the concentration of educational influence and authority in a central government. It is alleged that this bill provides Federal aid but prohibits Federal control, but it specifically provides for the distribution of $50,000,000 among the States under certain conditions, of which the new department is to be the judge. The power of the purse has everywhere succeeded to the power of the sword. The beginning represented by this bill, great as it is, is no measure of the end. We have escaped from a great experiment in government which would have brought all the world in subjection to "a beneficent autocrat." There survives to-day in the educational world many tendencies that were created by the dominance of the Prussian idea of education. Nothing can be more perllous to the free development of American education and scholarship than the dominance of a bureau.

It is not too much to say that every experiment hitherto made in the centralizing of education has resulted in injury to popular education. It is easy to point out achievements which are notable in the Prussian system. It is just as easy to point out injuries that have been far more extensive and ultimately fatal to that freedom of thought, action, and faith which are so dear to our great tradition. Germany was content to think what Berlin thought. May America never learn its lessons of life from any official source!

4. The technical educational problem turns on the removal of the center of authority from the State government to the National Government. This is greatly to be deplored. States are aroused as never before to meet the problems which were set by the Great War. There is no State in the Union which is incapable of solving these problems. The particular problem that is most often pressed is that of illiteracy. Where exists it is not for lack of ability to solve it but for the will to take it seriously in hand. Expenditures have been unwisely scaled. Insufficient expenditure has been made on primary education. The weakness of the secondary school lies in the failure of the primary school to do its work thoroughly.

One of the purposes most vaguely conceived in this legislation The revelation of the physical deficienis physical education. cies of American youth made by the Great War is not so much a criticism of the educational work of the school as of the general intelligence of many communities. Formal education will not correct this error until the public, especially the medical public, has come to understand the obligation of proper medical inspection and local support is given those who are seeking to improve public health,

5. The real issue in this bill is between those who advocate the requirement of education by government according to a single standard and those who prefer to cultivate in many independent centers a vigorous and varied educational activity. Uniformity is set against vital unity in the pursuit of a common

Communities will not criticize educational work imposed upon them from above with that intelligence which they will bestow upon work done by themselves for their own advancement. A great national educational department will only reproduce on a much larger scale the weakness of many State organizations by creating a large body of officials out of touch with the people and the pupils of the country. The encouragement of an educational spirit which will find expression in local pride and local performance is far more needed to-day than any top-heavy body of highly paid officials, remote in place and still more in understanding from the great body of boys and girls who need to be inspired, instructed, and trained to meet the varied requirements of a highly complex civilization.

> ST. JOHN'S UNIVERSITY. Collegeville, Minn., December 23, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House Member from Delaware, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE AND DEAR SIR: Your letter regarding nationalization of education was handed to me for answer. I am distinctly opposed to nationalization of education, as expressed in the various bills under consideration, for the following reasons:

I. It increases taxation as a burden. The money for education would flow through a central channel. The purpose of the taxation producing it would be lost sight of and thus increase the general discontent over taxation. Local taxation for direct application to local needs would not have that result.

application to local needs would not have that result.

II. It works for centralization and increases possibilities of Federal inefficiency needlessly:

(a) Nationalization of education is contrary to our principles of States rights and States activities. The diminishing of State jurisdictions has already gone too far, with the resultant loss of active and sincere public interest in governmental actions and legislation. Washington is too far away to be the one center of public interest in a democratic people as large as ours.

(b) It will increase the possibilities of playing politics in the sphere of education, and that with much less chance of speedy redress or change than when that occurs in local communities. It increases red tape, possibilities of money grafting,

(c) It increases the complexity of centralized bureaucratic government, with resultant greater inefficiency in a large country and possibilities of a blundering that is far-reaching

III. Nationalization of education destroys proper spirit and initiative in the people at large and rests on a vicious motive of appeal.

(a) Backward countries are seemingly rewarded for their inertia; while others suffer proportionately for their progressiveness. There is no proportion between merit and reward, between effort and result.

(b) The remoter connection between education and taxation-complete taxation-makes education look too gratuitous. It can be had without any effort-in reality, of course, this is not so-to all appearances and will not be properly appreciated. The value of education will come home to the people only if they must consciously exert themselves in some way to achieve the possibility of education.

(c) Educational institutions and systems springing up from the soil and by local effort are a source of just local pride and a strong community bond. This is not so if initiative and effort or indirect compulsion come from the Federal Govern-

(d) The method of fostering education appeals to the money sense of the backward people or to any other people wishing to promote education. It appeals distinctly to the material in order to work up a sense of spiritual or intellectual need. It is like educating children by holding candy and fruits before them continuously; a most pernicious educational principle.

Sir, by all means let us spend more money on education. But let us look for a close connection in place and time between the money raised for that purpose and the results to be gained from such money.

I am, yours very sincerely, VIRGIL G. MICHEL.

> GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY. OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, Washington, D. C., December 13, 1921.

The Hon, CALEB R. LAYTON,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Layton: In reply to your communication of December 9, I beg to say that I am opposed to the Smith-Towner bill and to other bills of similar character on the congressional calendar.

The main reason for my opposition is that there is no provision in the Constitution for placing in the Central Government the control of education, and I think it is unwise to establish such a monopoly. I shall have sent to you in a day or two a pamphlet which contains more at length my views on the subject

Respectfully yours,

J. B. CREEDEN.

CARSON AND NEWMAN COLLEGE, OFFICE OF PRESIDENT, Jefferson City, Tenn., December 13, 1921.

Mr. CALEB H. CLAYTON, M. C., Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Your favor of December 9th to hand, and I am frank to say that I am not in favor of placing education under a central authority of the Government. * * *

* * To my mind, the downfall of Germany and the great

World War can be traced to the fact that the entire school system was under the control of the State. An institution, as well as an individual, does not feel free to criticize the hand that feeds it. The German critics were given great liberty in the field of theology, but had to be "mum" on the question of education. To my mind, America comes nearer having the ideal school plan of any nation, the private and public schools being complementary of each other.

Yours very truly,

OSCAR E. SAMS, President.

THE COLLEGE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, December 12, 1921.

Hon, CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Answering the specific question in your letter of December 9, I will say that I am not in favor of placing education under the central authority of the Federal Government, but that I believe it should continue to be administered and in the main supported by the States and local communities within them.

The statement of these views almost carries with it the reasons for them. A too highly centralized system of education becomes remote from the people and can not engage their interest as can a system which involves their cooperation in the thousands of localities throughout the Nation. The very process of securing support and a proper organization of education from the people themselves is educative and of the highest value. Moreover, it is impossible for the Government at Washington to adjust any educational scheme to the varying needs of our many local communities. Furthermore, our system, everything considered, is probably at least as wholesome, I be lieve myself far more wholesome, than any other in operation in any other nation, and certainly has borne fruits in an intelligent and informed citizenship unsurpassed elsewhere. With this record there is no good reason for departing from past practice.

Very truly yours,

SIDNEY EDWARD MEZES, President.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, Columbia, December 13, 1921.

Hon. C. R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Any tendency or influence which removes Government from local responsibility and accountability is dangerous. Centralization has already gone too far at Washington and ought to be stopped.

Yours respectfully,

J. E. SWEARINGEN. State Superintendent of Education.

STATE OF FLORIDA. DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION. Tallahassee, December 14, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

Member of Congress from Delaware,

Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter of December 9 received. I confess to you that I stand almost alone among the State superintendents of public instruction in the United States (the only other exception that I know of being Superintendent only other exception that I know of being superintendent Harris, of Louisiana) in not being enthusiastic over the pas-sage of the Smith-Towner bill and kindred educational meas-ures pending before Congress. Though I stood entirely alone, I would be false to myself unless I represented my own convictions.

I will state that I am opposed to placing public education under the direction and control of the Federal Government. I know it is disclaimed that there is any intention in pending legislation to take education from under the control of State and local authorities, but it has been the history of the General Government in the past that wherever it places a dollar, it provides some authority to look after the disposition of that dol-lar and to seek to control its disposition. I believe it is honestly the intention right now to make an appropriation for education in the States and to leave it to the direction of the States, but I confidently expect, as time moves on, to see a gradually continuous encroachment on the State authorities until, within less than half a century, the General Government will be directing public education in this Republic just as in the limited monarchies of Europe and elsewhere.

I have a fixed fear that party necessities will, sooner or later, if the General Government takes over public education, demand that no distinction be made in each individual schoolhouse on account of race, color, or previous condition. would mean absolute injury to the colored race and absolutely destroy the efficiency of the public schools in many of the States of this Union. The people of the South just will not mix with the Negro race. If forced to do so, the schools will not prosper. I surmise that the same conditions will obtain in an increasingly larger degree in many of the Western States.

Finally, public education has always been under the control of the individual States and the United States has prospered under this system, and I believe it would be best and safest to let it remain under such control; I further believe that each State is absolutely able to take care of public education within its own bounds, and that public sentiment is intensifying in behalf of greater support of public education in every State. Each one is now vying with the other in trying to develop the best educational status possible. The money to support the public schools originally comes from the neglects of the resolupublic schools originally comes from the pockets of the people, and if collected and used in the States, it will save the cost of much overhead Federal Government supervision. Hence, I believe that a less per cent of the money actually contributed to the support of public education in the United States will go directly to the support of the schools under Federal collection than if the funds were raised in each State and applied to its own educational system.

The above are my honest convictions.

Yours very truly,

W. N. SHEATS. State Superintendent.

STATE OF KANSAS, DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION. Topeka, January 3, 1922.

HOD. CALEB R. LAYTON.

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. LAYTON: Yours of December 9 reached my desk a few days ago, seemingly having been delayed some place along the line. I thank you for your letter and for the interest which you are taking in educational and other national matters. wish I might talk to you regarding these matters instead of writing you, as it would take too lengthy a letter to give you a proper idea of my view on the matter. After the little effort Representative ALICE M. ROBERTSON made in the House of Representatives that the people might have control of their own health regulations in their own communities, I wrote Miss Robertson on November 28, and as your question covers something similar, I am inclosing to you a copy of the letter which I wrote Miss Robertson.

To your specific question, I do not believe in placing education under a central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of the communities and the States. believe it is legal under the Constitution. It is not in keeping with our form of government.

If any more of the States' activities are taken over by the Government and managed by various boards and commissions, the United States will soon be in as deplorable a condition as Rome was at the time of its downfall. The people are not benefited by centralized authority, but are hampered in every way as a result of centralized authority; their taxes will increase and their burdens become greater and greater. can judge the future by the history of the past, such has been the downfall of the nations in the past. I do not believe the United States should change its constitutional policy and at this late day pattern after nations whose downfall was caused by such methods in government.

The only persons who seem to be benefited by centralized government are the persons who administer that government and their traveling boards, commissions, inspectors, and supervisors, all of which increase the burden upon the people, who must earn the wherewithal to pay for such a form of government.

I will be in Washington, D. C., some time during the second week of January and I shall be very glad to call upon you at a time when we may have a little talk regarding these educational matters and other such measures along the same line that are now being presented to Congress. The secretary of the National Educational Association has called a meeting for Washington, D. C., on January 7. This meeting conflicts with the National Vocational Association, which meets in Kansas City, Mo., on January 5, 6, and 7, which association I wish to attend and am a directing member of its activities. I have asked Mr. Magill to change the date of the Washington meeting until January 10 or 11. However, if he does not do so I will be in Washington, D. C., as soon as I can reach there after caring for my duties in Kansas City.

Appreciating your interest in these matters, I am, with best wishes.

Sincerely.

LORRAINE ELIZABETH WOOSTER, State Superintendent.

STATE OF KANSAS, DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, Topeka, November 28, 1921.

Hon. Miss Alice Robertson, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

My DEAR COUSIN: I wish to congratulate you upon your efforts to save the various States from having put upon them a trust as it were and a board to look after maternity affairs. Some women were very active in Kansas during the last legis-lature in behalf of a nurse bill. They secured the passage of the measure, and later on found they had just completed a nurses' trust by getting their bill passed

Seward County, the home of Mrs. Minnie J. Grinstead, the State representative who worked the hardest for this nurse bill and whose county employed a county nurse, secured their own unpleasant lesson first hand. They went to the expense of sending their county nurse to St. Louis for the short course in training for nurses, and the body of nurses who had the course in charge would not receive the little Kansas lady from Seward She didn't quite meet their rules and regulations and as the rules and regulations in their own opinion could not be changed, the little lady had all the expense of going to St. Louis and returning to Seward County without even a peep at the august body who were giving nurse instruction. I give you this as it is just one little sample of what these Federal boards do to the various States as soon as they have secured the power for these boards.

I had my experience first hand immediately upon coming into this office. Kansas, as you know, is an agricultural State, and the Federal Government gave us the Smith-Hughes Federal Vocational Act. Kansas was receiving aid for but 26 schools when I came into office, because the rules and regulations of the Federal board would not permit other schools to receive this aid, although they were doing their best to comply with the Federal board's rules and regulations. After some time we did get changes in these rules and regulations, and the next year I secured aid for 44 schools. This year I hope to secure aid for 75 schools.

I regret very much that the Federal Government is taking friendly attitude toward these various State-aid measures. It does not mean betterment for the States, in my opinion, but does mean inefficient management. It means Federal positions for many more people for every Federal board that they create to take charge of measures in the various States. It means that these Federal boards will have their traveling propagandists going out about the various States telling them what they can do and what they can not do in order to get Federal aid to match their own home State appropriations.

It looks to me just about as sensible as for a man who has seven children and has the sense to earn the money to buy the clothes for his seven children but not the sense to buy the clothes, but would be willing to send the $40, if that were the sum, to some man a hundred miles away and have this man buy the clothes for his children without really any knowledge of the children or the needs of the children, and he might wish for his children two dresses for a pair of twins and a pair of boots for his boy, and he might receive in return from this faroff purchasing agent two pairs of boots for his twins and a party dress for his boy, and with a string tied to both stating to him that these children might wear these clothes only under certain circumstances and after certain acts had been performed by the father, and then only at certain times of the year, etc. That is just about the way the various States are served by these Federal boards.

I wish we had a Senate and House full of Miss Robertsons in Washington, D. C., with voices that could extend to the various States and educate these innocent persons who are willing to support and who do frantically support bills for Federal aid, to be matched by State funds, thinking that they are going to get something for nothing for the States, when in fact every dollar that the Federal Government has has to be earned and produced in the States and then sent to Washington, D. C., and when it comes back to us through a Federal board it comes back not as much as we have sent, but less, and with a string tied to it, and the States are not being benefited but are imposing an unnecessary tax upon themselves, from which they are becoming poorer instead of richer. To centralize government and activity means narrowness and poverty and is un-American. I do not believe it is lawful according to the United States Constitution for the Government to enter into any activity in competition with the States or its citizens.

I hope you will keep up your good fight to enlighten the public and educate as many of your colleagues as possible. When I can be of any aid to you please call upon me and I shall be glad to send you data from Kansas at any time I can help you in any way.

With love and best wishes, sincerely, LORRAINE E.

LORRAINE E. WOOSTER, State Superintendent.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA, DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, Charleston, December 15, 1921.

Hon. Caleb R. Layton,
Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: I have your letter dated December 9, requesting my opinion in regard to the nationalization of education as expressed in the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of similar character new on the congressional calendar.

You state that the specific question you desire to have answered is "Whether or not you favor placing education under a central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of the communities and the States."

In replying to this permit me to state that I have not taken the time to make a careful study of the various bills prepared and presented to Congress relative to the creation of the office of secretary of education and national aid for education in the States.

As the matter has been explained to me by the friends of this movement, the intention is to secure aid for the States, a secretary of education who shall collect the facts regarding education in the States, and transmit this information to superintendents of public instruction in the various States. The friends of these measures are very insistent and very plausible.

As an old-fashioned American citizen, and one who has descended from long lines of men, all of whom have been loyal to the National Government, and who have supported it in every war that has been fought, from and including the French and Indian War, on down to the present time, I wish to say that I have not been favorably impressed by these proposals. I am thoroughly in favor of the strong central Government endowed with a sufficient power to conduct the national affairs of these great United States.

I am not a State rights man in the sense of the Civil War definition of that term. But I do believe very strongly that the States will have reserved to them many and peculiar rights which the National Government has no authority under the Constitution to infringe upon.

I also believe that it is quite necessary that the local affairs of the people shall be left in the hands of the people of the locality which has the greatest interest in these local affairs, and that the tendency to extend the authority of the United States Government by stretching the powers given it under the Constitution is dangerous to the peace of this country and to the perpetuity of our Government.

The history of this country shows that whenever Congress has extended the authority of Federal efficials they very quickly begin to usurp the authority of local officials, and that the General Government never has surrendered any power which it has taken unto itself.

The education of the children is a peculiarly local affair. Harmless as the proposition to create a secretary of education appears upon its face, it is very clear to my mind that once the position of secretary of education has been established, and the policy of granting national aid under his supervision has been entered upon, his office will immediately insist upon an extension of powers, and will secure such extension from year to year until it has usurped complete authority over the administration of education in the States.

Much as I should like to see the General Government of the United States make a grant of money to the various States by means of which educational opportunities as between the various States might be equalized in a measure, I would not be content to accept such assistance from the United States Government were it coupled by Federal control of the educational system in my State.

As an illustration of what I mean by Federal interference in local affairs I refer you to title 12 of the revenue act of 1918. Section 1200 of that act proposes a tax upon employers of boys and girls beneath a certain age. Section 1203 provides that exemption from tax shall be secured by the holding of a certificate of age from the United States Government, providing that the United States Government may accept the certificate of the local State authorities.

There has just been in my office a representative from the Treasury Department by the name of Miss Barbour, who has been making an inspection of the State of West Virginia relative to the enforcement of this act, and who took it upon herself to visit our commissioner of labor and my office and proceed to instruct us as to the manner in which we, as elected and appointed officers of the State of West Virginia, should carry into effect the local laws of the State of West Virginia. If this is done in a matter of comparatively small importance, how much greater would it be done in a matter of so great importance as the education of the entire body of children of the United States.

At the risk of repetition, I wish to say again that I believe it to be the part of a patriotic citizen to resist the undue extension of Federal control of local affairs to the utmost limit consistent with a view observant of the laws of the country. You may record me as opposed to the creation of the office of the secretary of education under any of the plans so far proposed and, furthermore, as being opposed to the idea in all its essential elements.

I am, very truly yours,

GEORGE M. FORD.

At this point I will insert a few letters from journalists who oppose the creation of a department of education:

THE GULFPORT-BILOXI DAILY HERALD, Biloxi, Miss., Decomber 12, 1921.

Hon. Caleb R. Layton, M. C., House of Representatives, Washington.

DEAR SIR: Answering your inquiry of the 9th instant as to whether I favor "placing education under a central authority of the Government" and "taking it out of the hands of the communities and the States," I have no hesitation in saying no.

My reasons are that such a proposal, as well as all the bills heretofore aimed at it, and the legislation thus far, are an encroachment of the Federal Government on the constitutional jurisdiction of the States.

Yours ve- truly,

GEO. P. MONEY, Editor the Daily Herald.

OFFICE OF THE NEW HAVEN JOURNAL-COURIER, New Haven, Conn., December 13, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have your letter of December 9 asking me whether I am in favor of placing the education of the country under a central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of the community and States.

I may answer most emphatically that I am opposed to any such proposition, on two grounds in particular: First, that the various States and communities are better able to judge of their needs than a bureau at Washington, and, second, because the idea is thoroughly Prussian in spirit, if not in origin.

Very truly yours,

N. G. OSBORN.

THE EVANSVILLE JOURNAL, December 12, 1921.

Hon. CALEB RODNEY LAYTON, M. C.,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Answering your letter of December 9 relating to the Smith-Towner bill and other measures of similar character now pending in Congress.

Any bill of sweeping powers with reference to the supervision and financing of education, such as are ascribed to the Smith-Towner bill, is open to serious question, however. There is already too much of a tendency toward paternalism in this country fostered by professional groups whose selfish interest or unbalanced enthusiasm leads them astray.

Every step toward the retention of paternalistic enterprises fathered and supported by the National Government tends to rob States and local communities of much of their self-reliance.

Education should be as free from official and governmental restraint as religion is, and in any proposal for the centralization of educational authority, with a consequent unification of ideas and methods for the whole country, the dangers might outweigh any possible benefits.

Very truly yours,

EARL MUSHLITZ, Editor and General Manager.

THE SUMMIT HERALD. Sunmit, N. J., December 12, 1921.

Hon, CALEB R. LAYTON.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your inquiry of the 9th instant would y that * * * in addition to unnecessary interference with community and State affairs it would result in largely increased Government expenses in order to provide jobs for a coterie of office seekers who, many believe, are advocates of the bills for this particular purpose, rather than for the good which might possibly accrue to the communities affected.

Very respectfully yours,

JOHN W. CLIFT.

MCKENDREE MOVEMENT, Lebanon, Ill., December 22, 1921.

Representative CALEB R. LAYTON,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your inquiry relative to my opinion in regard to the Smith-Towner bill, I would say that in the first place I think it is a dangerous thing to center practically entire control of all education in one man at Washington, especially since the position would be a political one, subject to the appointing powers of the President. * * * Yours truly,

G. E. McCammon, President.

RENO EVENING GAZETTE, Reno, Nev., December 15, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,
Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your inquiry of the 9th instant, we advise you that in the opinion of this newspaper it would be contrary to the principles of this Government to place "education under a central authority" and take "it out of the hands of the communities and of the States," where it properly be-

Truly yours,

GRAHAM SANFORD, Manager,

THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM, New Orleans, December 13, 1921.

Mr. CALEB R. LAYTON, M. C. United States House of Representatives.

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: This is an answer to your inquiry of December 9. You ask specifically whether or not I favor placing education under the central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of communities and States. I do not favor taking education out of the hands of communities and of the States to place it under the authority of the Government.

With best wishes, very sincerely,

MARSHALL BALLARD.

THE SACRAMENTO BEE, Sacramento, Calif., December 22, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIE: In answer to your request of November 9:

The Bee is strongly opposed to placing education under a central authority of the Government. Editorially it has taken its stand against the Smith-Towner bill in education, and the Sheppard-Towner, or similarly named measures, in regard to maternity.

The Bee holds that such matters are solely for State control and not for centralized bureaucracy, which can know nothing of local problems.

The financing scheme for these measures seems silly, for the money paid out of the Federal Treasury to the respective States is distributed as if it were coined out of nothing, whereas it can only be raised in the various States through that much increased taxation. The result, therefore, is only that States, through increased Federal taxation, send their money to Washington, where it is filtered through various bureaus with a loss proportionate to the number of heads and subheads and employees, and then handed back to the respective States without the Federal Government having contributed a single benefit that each State itself could not have done as well.

The fundamental objection against such a scheme is that it overturns our whole theory of government, which reserves to the States control over education and similar matters. I believe that the State Board of Education in California can handle our school system in this State far better on its own authority than under the suggestions and orders of a bureau in Washington, which is too far away for intelligent understanding and certain to become so filled with red tape and useless officials that it will be a sad drag rather than a help.

Yours very truly,

CARLOS K. MCCLATBY.

THE DAY, New London, Conn., December 12, 1921.

Mr. CALEB R. LAYTON.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIE: Replying to your inquiry of December 9, I am not in favor of the nationalization of education, as expressed in the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of similar character now before Congres

Respectfully,

THEODORE BODEN WEIN

NEVADA PRINTING Co., Carson City, Nev., December 15, 1921.

Hon, C. R. LAYTON, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In reply to the specific question propounded in your letter of December 9, "whether or not you favor placing education under a central authority of the Government," me to say that I am unalterably opposed to it. I believe that it is a matter for communities-the States-to decide. They understand the conditions and know how to handle them in a practical and not an academic way, as has the Government in so many instances

In my humble opinion there has already been too much centralization, and if it continues, well, we can go back to history to appreciate the results. Very truly yours,

T. D. VAN DEVORT.

MILWAUKEE HEROLD, Milwaukee, December 15, 1921.

Hon. CALEB LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your inquiry of December 9 relative to our sentiments in regard to the Smith-Towner bill and similar proposals we beg to submit the following:

From the excellent means of information which a newspaper such as the Milwaukee Herold affords we are convinced that a large majority of the people of this section are distinctly op-posed to the principle of "placing education under a central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of the communities and States."

Respectfully,

GUSTAV HAAS.

BANGOR PUBLISHING Co., Bangor, Me., December 12, 1921.

HOD. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIE: Your favor of December 9 received. I do not approve of the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of similar na-

Yours truly,

BANGOR PUBLISHING Co., J. N. Towle, Managing Editor.

THE SOUTH BEND TRIBUNE, South Bend, Ind., December 12, 1921.

Hon. CALEB LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We have your circular letter of December 9 regarding the Smith-Towner bill. In reply will say that a long time ago the Tribune took a position against this bill, believing it much better for education to be vested in the States.

Very sincerely yours,

SOUTH BEND TRIBUNE. F. A. M.

THE NEWS LEADER, Richmond, Va., December 13, 1921.

HOB. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your inquiry of December 9, I beg to say that this newspaper does not "favor placing education under a central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of the communities and the States." Altogether apart from the disastrous effect of such a measure upon the fabric of the American Constitution, it would, in operation, destroy those distinctive features of education in the different States that are now most useful in the development of a diversified culture.

Very truly yours,

D. T. FREEMAN, Editor.

THE COURIER, Connellsville, Pa., December 13, 1921.

HOD. CALEB R. LAYTON, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The very fact that the Smith-Towner bill, if enacted, would result in further centralization of governmental authority is, in my judgment, sufficient reason why it should be defeated. Applied to education, such centralization would assume its most objectionable form.

The principle of "home rule" should be preserved as the right of communities just as sacredly as the same principle applied to religion. Very truly yours,

JOHN L. GANS Managing Editor.

THE CHICAGO DAILY JOURNAL, December 31, 1921.

Hon. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: Replying to your inquiry of December 9, which should have received attention some time ago, I desire to say that the Journal is definitely opposed to "placing education under a central authority of the Government and taking it out of the hands of communities and States." The National Government is trying to do too many things now. For that reason most of them are badly done.

Yours very truly,

JOHN C. EASTMAN.

YOUNGSTOWN TELEGRAM. Youngstown, Ohio, December 12, 1921.

Hon, C. R. LAYTON, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIB: Replying to your circular letter of December 9. would say that we are firmly of the opinion that the nationalization of education, as contemplated in the Smith-Towner bill. would be a serious mistake. There is too much centralized authority now and not enough of that policy which develops individual initiative and self-dependence in the communities.

Very truly yours,

THE YOUNGSTOWN TELEGRAM. SAMUEL G. MCCLURE,

Publisher.

THE ROCHESTER HERALD, December 14, 1921.

HOD. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: Replying to your circular letter of December 9. inquiring whether I favor placing education under the central authority of the Federal Government and taking it out of the hands of the communities and States, I am not in favor of such action and should regard it as subversive of one of the fundamental intents of the founders of our Government and depressed infringement upon the rights and proper respona dangerous infringement upon the rights and proper responsibilities of local communities,

Yours very truly,

LOUIS M. ANTISDALE.

OFFICE OF THE POTTSVILLE DAILY REPUBLICAN. Pottsville, Pa., December 15, 1931.

CALEB R. LAYTON,

Member of Congress from Delaware,

Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: Replying to yours of December 9, I wish to place myself on record as opposed to centralizing the administration in the National Government. I am opposed to taking the educational authority out of the hands of the communities and the States. This country is getting too much paternalism, which makes the administration of the Government too unwieldly, too costly, and too ineffective, and to put the control of education in the hands of the National Government it would mean that it would be more dominated by politics than at present. Very truly yours,

J. H. ZERBEY.

THE DAILY BULLETIN. Bloomington, Ill., December 13, 1921.

Hon. CALEB LAYTON, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. LAYTON: Our schools are an institution closest to the hearts of the people, for they deal with the young of the land. For that reason they should be as closely identified with the people's management as possible.

I am inclined to think that it is the consensus of opinion out here that the schools be left as they are and not given that longdistance direction that must result under the central authority of the Government.

I thank you for the letter.

Cordially,

JAMES F. O'DONNELL,

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS. December 13, 1921.

Mr. CALEB R. LAYTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your letter of December 9, permit me to say that the Dally News does not believe in placing education under a central authority of the Federal Government and taking it out of the hands of the States and the different communities in those States. It particularly dislikes the policy of entering upon a varied program of expense, which the tax-payers have to foot, in order that the different States may be led into levying taxation with which to match their respective shares in these varied appropriations. The whole system, to my thinking, is loose and unscientific and calculated to pile up heavy cost for special educational features that do not go to the heart of the country's actual educational needs. This sort of congressional gift enterprise for the use and enjoyment of State officials, to my thinking, should be entered upon, if at all, only after the most thorough investigation by educa-tional experts and others specially equipped to count the cost. Very truly yours,

C. H. Dennis, Managing Editor.

C. H. DENNIS, Managing Editor.

THE JOURNAL PRINTING Co., Racine, Wis., December 13, 1921.

CALEB LAYTON,

Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Answering yours of the 9th, we believe the matter of education should not be centralized under the Government. Yours truly.

> THE JOURNAL PRINTING Co., F. R. STARBUCK, Secretary and Treasurer.

AMERICAN, LEADING BOHEMIAN DAILY, Cleveland, Ohio, December 15, 1921.

CALEB R. LAYTON,

Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: In reply to your inquiry of recent date, I wish to herewith express my sentiment on the particular Smith-Towner bill on nationalization of education.

It is our candid opinion that the said matter of education should be left entirely under the jurisdiction of the State, in order that less politics be played with this particular legislation. Respectfully yours,

FRANK J. SVOBODY.

Editorial Rooms, Nashville Banner, Nashville, Tenn., December 15, 1921.

Mr. CALEB EAYTON, Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. LAYTON: The Banner would oppose policy of public education under centralized Government authority. It is hardly necessary to be specific.

Yours truly,

RICHARD H. YANCEY,

LAFAYETTE JOURNAL AND COURIER, Lafayette, Ind., December 21, 1921.

Mr. CALEB R. LAYTON,

Member of Congress from Delaware, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR! Replying to your letter of December 9 regarding the nationalization of education as expressed in the Smith-Towner bill and other bills of similar character now on the congressional calendar, wish to submit the following:

Our national stability and progress will be better safeguarded by a great variety of educational institutions than by a standardized form of education. Education should be developed to suit the needs of our different communities and groups of people. This can not be accomplished when our educational system is administered by distant control. control has had very harmful effects upon the morale of the worker in industry. Will the worker in the idealistic profession of teaching do his or her best under a centralized and distant supervision which of necessity must be machinelike and inflexible? Unless our teachers are given intellectual freedom and opportunity to work under the most favorable circumstances, our schools will turn out men and women who lack breadth of vision, thinking powers, and self-reliance.

As a matter of fact, even our present system of public education has too much organization, centralization, and standardization. The factory system of education discourages the development of initiative on the part of teachers and students, emphasizes methods of instruction which follow a beaten path, and results in training very few men and women who are self-directed and independent thinkers. Standardization of education results in too much textbook instruction and does not aid in discovering and in developing the talents of the learner. Our schools and colleges are now too nearly of the same type, are usually too inflexible, are teaching too nearly the same subjects, have the same standards of rating which are not based upon the actual achievement of the learner, and are not fully serving the infinite talents of the American child and youth.

Very truly yours,

HENRY W. MARSHALL, Editor and Publisher.

In conclusion permit me to epitomize the reasons why the Sterling-Towner bill should not become a law-reasons which in the main are substantial for all of the legislation enacted, and for all of the legislation proposed, having a cognate bureaucratic and paternalistic character:

First. There is no necessity for this legislation, inasmuch as illiteracy is declining and not increasing in the United States. This is being achieved gradually and satisfactorily by commulposed.

nity and State efforts alone. The census of 1920 puts the average illiteracy in the United States at 6 per cent. It must not be forgotten that this is maintained in spite of the constant inflow of ignorant and foreign population.

Second. The bill is unnecessary because the people of the various States and communities expend now a sufficiently enormous sum upon education for all rational purposes. It is not true that education must be nationalized in order to compel the taxpayer to raise sufficient money for the purposes of education. The State which I have the honor to represent has a per capita tax of $7.50 and expends more than 60 per cent of her entire revenue for educational purposes. Massachusetts, a State distinguished for its interest in education, has a per capita tax of $10.61 only, notwithstanding the large yearly increase in her foreign population.

Third. The bill would destroy local control of education, and therefore individual interest in school matters. Sooner or later Federal control would encroach upon the power of the people, and exactly in proportion to this encroachment their own initiative in school matters and their sense of personal responsibility would decline, while their feeling of powerlessness to contend against the national power would create such a condition of ultimate indifference as to radically affect the character of American citizenship. The framers of our Constitution sought zealously to impose upon the individual a clear sense of his responsibility for taxation and for expenditure as well, because they knew that upon these two things hung all the peace, the liberty, and the prosperity of a people. Those great builders of the past endeavored in every way to inculcate in the minds of the whole people a profound sense of individual responsibility in all matters affecting the home, the community, and the Commonwealth, in order to produce from these schools citizens fit for national citizenship, and therefore fit to possess and to govern the Government, in order to avoid having the Government to possess and govern them.

Fourth. The plan would rob the people of the various States of their control over the amount of taxation, as well as deprive them of the power to expend it. This is very evident because It can be seen at a glance that the people of the State of Delaware having only one Representative out of 435 in the House, where all revenue measures are inaugurated, a combination of States sufficient to constitute a bare majority could impose, without their consent, a per capita tax, a real estate tax, a graduated income tax, or a graduated inheritance tax upon the Delaware taxpayer without the Delaware taxpayer having any means of protection whatever, except an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, where decisions are apt to run to popular favor rather than to a strict conservation of the constitutional compact.

Let me make a precise analysis of this bill as far as its effects upon the State of Delaware are concerned. Starting with an initial tax of $100,000,000, this bill levies upon the State of Delaware $391,448. Out of this sum Delaware would get back only $193,838.46, thus losing $199,709.54. This loss to Delaware would go to educate the children of other States, for which in my judgment there is no authority under the covenant: of the Constitution. Nor would this allotment to other States necessarily go to educate the children of poor States, because under the provisions of the bill Iowa, the richest State in the Union per capita, and I may say the home State of Representative Towner, the author of this bill in the House, would get: $2,273,214.16 more than Iowa would contribute to this $100,-000,000 appropriation. Let it not be forgotten in this connection that every Federal allotment out of this $100,000,000 must be matched by an equal amount raised by State taxation, thus doubling in every case taxation under the bill.

Fifth. Even if the bill is to become a law, the appropriation of $100,000,000 would be wholly inadequate, making hardly a drop in the bucket for putting such a scheme into proper operation, seeing that the entire country spends billions for this purpose now. Let me emphasize again the argument of the propagandist of this measure who would lead you to believe that the communities and the States do not now, and will not, raise sufficient money for educational purposes. The truth is the contrary. In all the States and communities as much money for educational purposes is now being raised as the taxpayers can afford to pay. It is a question if too much money is not being spent for so-called educational purposes now, seeing how it is spent. Let us not indulge in the fond delusion that the happiest people is one back-broken by taxation, or that inordinate taxation and expenditure are fair measures of national prosperity and progress.

Sixth. This and similar legislation is wholly inopportune because of the burdens of taxation which the late war has im-

Seventh. The plan would produce uniformity in education, which some think to be beautifully desirable. This is another of the foolish ideas of people who do not think but simply dream. In all of His grand planning of creation the Great Maker of all things reveals everywhere His splendid purpose of diversification. He made the United States partly tropical, partly polar, partly temperate. He made it also of valleys and wide and endless plains; of mountains and hills; He made it of rivers and of great lakes and surging oceans. He made the very fruits and plants that grow to accord in character with their environment. This idea of uniformity is the dream of the man and the woman who falls down and worships the Prussian idea of discipline and education, which would take out of the hearts and the souls of the citizens of the country that fine spirit of diversified interest, of diversified visions, of diversified purposes which constitute the charm and strength of our national character. The inspiration of such people-unfortunately in our midst-is due to a lack of confidence in representative democracy. They do not believe that the people are fit to be trusted with their own affairs. Gentlemen of the House, we want no Germanism in the United States to make automata of our citizenry. We want no Madam Kollontais to Bolshevise American womanhood. We want no Marxian philosophies to supplant our American Constitution by socialism and communism. Without, however, an eternal vigilance all these things will shortly subvert and supplant our present inestimable institutions.

Eighth. The plan would inevitably lead to political involvement. The secretary of education would necessarily be a political appointee. The office would be subject to the same political influences of party, of faction, of class, of race, and of religion to a far greater degree than any other Cabinet appointment. The school-teachers of the land would sooner or later constitute a political bloc, just as you see the organized labor bloc, the agricultural bloc, the soldiers' bonus bloc, the maternity bloc, and a multitude of other blocs, all tending to destroy the spirit of our fine nationality.

Ninth. The plan would invite, and undoubtedly provoke, a religious controversy by interfering with the parochial schools of various religious faiths, against the very provisions of the Constitution which guarantee the freedom of religious faith and worship.

Tenth. The plan is undemocratic. It is essentially bureaucratic, not to say paternalistic, and purely communistic, in that it assumes the right to tax the taxpayer of one State for the community and State purposes of other States. The plan is not drawn from American thought or American necessity, nor from the purposes of the founders of this Government so plainly revealed in the compact of the Federal Constitution of It is borrowed from Bismarck of Germany and those who succeeded him, whose purpose was to put the heart and the soul, stamping them with the same stamp, molding them in jackets, stamping them with the same stamp, molding them in the same mold, so that the junker element might the more easily prosecute their scheme of world-wide dominion by using people taught to obey, and not to think. We do not want in this country every boy and girl from Maine to Florida and from Texas to Alaska branded like a Uneeda biscuit. We want the free thought of Maine, and the free thought of Florida, in fact, the free thought of the whole country according to the environment of the various States. We got the "flu" from Europe that destroyed our bodies. In the name of sound wisdom and good sense, let us avoid intellectual contaminations from the same source-contaminations far more deadly because they would destroy the soul of America, whereas the "flu' destroyed only a few thousand bodies.

Education in a country like ours, based as it is upon constitutional representative democracy, is essentially and inseparably a home and a community matter, wherein the children belong to the parents and not to the State, much less to the Government of the United States. This ownership of children by the State, this State wardship over them, is essentially and eminently a socialistic and Bolshevistic doctrine. It should have no place in the creed of American citizenship. To admit such a proposition is to destroy the very foundation of all that is the finest in our civilization. To take away the feeling of responsibility for the child on the part of its father and mother and transfer that responsibility to a Government bureau in Washington, operating through a paid Government agent, would demoralize the people by destroying the very bonds of fatherhood and motherhood, and therefore destroy the home upon which essentially this Government is founded. I say it would be far better to have the children of the United States untaught and illiterate rather than to have the child belong to the State and the mother under official control, because, while you would have more illiterate men and women, you would still have free men and women, and you would have the home, which is the sanctuary of them both.

Eleventh. The plan is plainly unconstitutional and in clear conflict with the reserved rights of the States under our national organic law. If put into effect it will destroy the liberty of the people, their self-dependence, their sense of initiative and personal responsibility for self-government, and transform them more and more into dependents upon the Federal Government, thus killing the spirit of democracy.

thus killing the spirit of democracy.

Twelfth. The provisions of the bill and the proposed allotment to the States is not only unfair but the whole plan is uneconomical, wasteful, and extravagant. Inevitably collections of taxes for the purposes of the bill would be made by Federal agents; the amount would be determined by a Congress in which any State may be at the mercy of a majority of Congress, rather than safeguarded by the constitutional covenant; and, finally, there would be no voice but a Federal voice in the expenditure of the people's money. All of these facts are inconsistent with constitutional liberty.

Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, permit me to add a last word of warning. In the light of your oaths of office consider what has been done in the way of plain assaults upon constitutional government within the short period of 10 years. Illuminated by such a reflection, let me beg you to consider the future. Having viewed carefully the socialistic legislation already enacted, take the two calendars of Congress and observe what is proposed for the future in order to extend and cour plete the socialistic legislation already enacted.

If you will do this you can not escape the conclusion that a vast, comprehensive, and insidious scheme for the nationalization of all the activities of American citizenship is contemplated. The purpose is not only the nationalization of education but of medicine, so that a department of public welfare shall control not only the mental but the physical being of our people—supervising and controlling the expectant mother, the new-born babe, the youth in school and upon the playground, even old age itself—a Federal control from birth to death. All of this is purposed by those who distrust the ability of the people to govern themselves, and who believe in this widespread scheme to secure habits of obedience among the people through the discipline of Federal supervision.

Gentlemen, the moment such a plan is put into practice our Government is doomed, and civilization in the United States will be in the throes of utter chaos.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Saturday, February 24, 1923, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1019. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Treasury Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, to provide for the erection of additional suitable and necessary buildings for the National Leper Home at Carville, La., as authorized by the act approved February 20, 1923 (Public, No. 430), $650,000 (H. Doc. No. 599); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1020. A communication from the President of the United 1020. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, for reclamation investigations, $275,000 (H. Doc. No. 600); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

1021. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a list of 30 marine hospitals and quarantine stations requiring additional facilities, new construction, or improvements; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

1022. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriations to provide additional compensation for certain civilian employees of the Governments of the United States and the District of Columbia during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, $38,421,993 (H. Doc. No. 601); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. BOIES: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 14272. A bill to amend section 81 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 8, 1911; without amendment (Rept. No. 1692). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. DEMPSEY: Committee on Rivers and Harbors. S. 3968. An act to improve the navigability of waters of the United States by preventing oil pollution thereof; with an amendment (Rept. No. 1693). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. FOSTER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. J. Res. 458.

A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; without amendment (Rept. No. 1694). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. FESS: Committee on the Library. S. J. Res. 240. A joint resolution authorizing the erection, on public grounds, of a memorial to the late Joseph J. Darlington; without amendment (Rept. No. 1695). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ZIHLMAN: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 14372. A bill providing for charges against the general fund standing to the credit of the District of Columbia in the Federal Treasury; without amendment (Rept. No. 1696). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. McKENZIE: A bill (H. R. 14416) to provide for the return to the States of Georgia and Tennessee of the approach roads in the said States leading to the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SCHALL: A bill (H. R. 14417) to assist by loans any person holding an honorable discharge from the military forces of the United States of American during the World War;

By Mr. CHINDBLOM: A bill (H. R. 14418) declaring a portion of the west fork of the South Branch of the Chicago River in Cook County, Ill., to be a nonnavigable stream; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce

By Mr. STEENERSON: A resolution (H. Res. 555) of inquiry regarding Galena, Ill., plus freight charges on butter tubs; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin petitioning Congress to enact legislation relating to forest products; to the Committee on Agriculture

By Mr. CULLEN: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Oregon, petitioning the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States to so amend the Federal grain standards act that the Bureau of Markets shall have the authority to prescribe discounts of differentials similar to those prescribed in section 12 of the Oregon grain inspection law; to the Committee ca Agriculture.

By Mr. HAWLEY: Memori I of the Legislature of the State of Oregon, urging Congress to amend the Federal grain standards act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging Congress to enact such legislation as may be necessary to provide a vigorous and complete forest policy; to the Committee on Agriculture.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FOCHT: A bill (H. R. 14419) for the relief of Arthur

Cowsill, administrator; to the Committee on Claims. By Mr. SNELL: A bill (H. R. 14420) granting a pension to Elizabeth Gonier; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 14421) granting a pension to Addie Grat-

Also, a bill (H. R. 14421) granting a pension to Addie Gratton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TEN FYCK: A bill (H. R. 14422) authorizing the accounting officers of the General Accounting Office to settle the accounts of C. M. Omohundro; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

7399. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of American Association of Engineers, Chicago, Ill., urging immediate trial firearms; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

of men indicted for defrauding the Government; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7400. Also (by request), petition of Round Valley Chamber of Commerce, Springerville, Ariz., indorsing Senate memorial No. 1 of the State Legislature of Arizona; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

7401. Also (by request), petition of South Side Ebell Club, Los Angeles, Calif., expressing regret over the conditions that have been brought to bear upon the Volcan Indians of California; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

7402. By Mr. ANSORGE: Petition of the Woman's Republican Club, New York City, urging an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the labor of children; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7403. By Mr. BRIGGS: Petition of Mr. D. K. Smith, Crockett, Tex., and other signers, in support of the Norris-Sinclair bill; to the Committee on Agriculture. 7405. By Mr. CAREW: Petition of Alfred E. Smith, Governor of New York, urging that the national banking act be amended; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7406. By Mr. CULLEN: Petition of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, urging Congress to permit the State to validate prior taxes on national-bank shares; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7407. By Mr. HOGAN: Petition of United Singers, of Brooklyn, N. Y., condemning any act menacing peace and causing economic disturbances, and asking Congress to condemn acts of France in invading Germany; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7408. By Mr. KISSEL: Petition of General Lafayette Police Post, No. 460, American Legion, New York City, favoring the enactment of Senate bill 1565 providing for the retirement of disabled emergency officers; to the Committee on Military Affairs. 7409. Also, petition of the Merchants' Association of New York, N. Y., favoring negotiations with foreign governments in order to bring about reciprocal modifications of existing passport regulations and fees; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7410. Also, petition of Alfred E. Smith, Governor of the State of New York, favoring an amendment to the national banking act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.
7411. By Mr. LINTHICUM: Petition of Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, of Baltimore, asking for proper prosecution of mob outrages in Harrison, Ark.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7412. Also, petition of Burt Manufacturing Co., of Baltimore, favoring Sterling-Lehlbach bill on salaries for Patent Office; to the Committee on Patents.

7413. Also, petition of Gans Bros., Baltimore, favoring the Swing-Johnson bill; to the Committee on Flood Control.

7414. Also, petition of Gilbert Bros. & Co., of Baltimore, protesting against the Wood-Ernst bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7415. Also, petition of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Baltimore, favoring Senate bill 4399, fixing standards for hampers, round stave baskets, etc.; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

7416. Also, petition of F. Nollenberger, secretary Schley
Unit, No. 37, of Baltimore, favoring resolution of Mr. Newron of Minnesota to relieve famine districts of Europe; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7417. By Mr. PATTERSON of New Jersey: Petition of Pride of Diamond Council, No. 114, Sons and Daughters of Liberty of Diamond Council, No. 114, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, Swedesboro, N. J., indorsing restricted immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7418. By Mr. RIORDAN: Petition of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, recommending that the national banking act be amended; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7419. By Mr. ROSSDALE: Petition of citizens of New York, indorsing resolution purporting to extend immediate aid to the people of the German and Austrian Republics; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7420. By Mr. ROUSE: Petition of 261 citizens of Campbell County, Ky., protesting against the enactment of any legisla-tion toward the change of the present immigration laws that will permit admission of aliens other than provided by present law; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7421. By Mr. STEENERSON: Petition of C. G. Mattson et al., Thief River Falls, Minn., to abolish discriminatory tax on small-arms ammunition and firearms; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7422. Also, petition of Clarence F. Wallin et al., Argyle, Minn., to abolish discriminatory tax on small-arms ammunition and

SENATE.

SATURDAY, February 24, 1923.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.
The Chaplain, Rev. J. J. Muir, D. D., offered the following

Our Father, again are we the recipients of Thy mercies and permitted to enjoy the brightness of a morning freighted with opportunity. And we do ask that Thy grace may be supplied unto us, giving strength for every duty, wisdom in the midst of deliberation. So guide our thoughts and purposes that we may prove acceptable unto Thee. Through Jesus Christ. Amen.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of the legislative day of Monday, February 19, 1923, when, on request of Mr. Curtis and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL.

Mr. CURTIS and Mr. McKELLAR suggested the absence of a quorum

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ball	Frelinghuysen	McKinley	Shortridge
Bayard	George	McLean	Smith
Borah	Gooding	McNary	Smoot
Brandegee	Haie	Moses	Spencer
Brookhart	Harreld	Myers	Stanfield
Broussard.	Harris	Nelson	Stanley
Bursum	Harrison	New	Sterling
Calder	Heflin	Norris-	Sutherland
Cameron	Jones, N. Mex.	Oddie	Swanson
Capper	Jones, Wash.	Overman	Townsend
Caraway	Kellogg	Page	Trammell
Colt	Kendrick	Pepper!	Wadsworth
Couzens	Keyes.	Phipps	Walsh, Mass.
Culberson	King	Pittman	Walsh, Mont.
Cummins	Ladd	Poindexter	Warren
Curtis	La Follette	Pomerene	Watson
Dial	Lenroot	Ransdell	Weller
Dillingham	Lodge	Reed, Pa.	Willis
Edge	McCormick	Robinson
Fernald	McCumber	Sheppard
Fletcher	McKellar	Shields

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

DISPOSITION OF USELESS PAPERS.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, lists of papers and documents on file in certain field offices of the division of customs and Federal reserve banks, and in the Washington offices of the Public Health Service, Supervising Architect, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Comptroller of the Currency, and the Treasurer of the United States, which was referred to a Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Useless Papers in the Executive Departments. The Vice President appointed Mr. McLean and Mr. FLETCHER members of the committee on the part of the Senate. and ordered that the Secretary notify the House of Representatives thereof.

NEAH BAY DOCK CO.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill from the House of Representatives.

The bill (H. R. 9309) for the relief of the Neah Bay Dock

Co., a corporation, was read twice by its title.

Mr. JONES of Washington. A Senate bill identical with this is on the calendar and I do not think its consideration will take any time. If any time is to be taken on it, I will let it go to the calendar. It is a claim bill for the destruction of a dock that the Navy Department, so the report says, admits was entirely their fault. Every dollar is shown to have actually been expended on repairs. It is to pay the amount of damages, and there is no question as to the amount.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have no objection to its present con-

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Neah Bay Dock Co., a corporation, the sum of $4,507.71 as reimbursement for damages caused to the Neah Bay Wharf, the property of said company, by the U. S. S. Secallow, a mine sweeper of the United States Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THURSTON W. TRUE.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2984) for the relief of Thurston W. True, which was, on page 1, line 5, to strike out "$1,000" and insert "$794."

Mr. SMITH. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House and request a conference with the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on behalf of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the Vice President appointed Mr. Capper, Mr. Spencer, and Mr. Robinson conferees on the part of the Senate.

ESTATE OF DAVID B. LANDIS.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1599) for the relief of the estate of David B. Landis, deceased, which was, on page 1, line 4, after the word "pay," to insert "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Mr. PEPPER: I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment. The amendment merely adds the formal words which inadvertently were omitted from the bill when it was introduced in this body.

The motion was agreed to.

MARTIN CLETNER.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2632) to correct the military record of Martin Cletner, which was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, Martin Cletner, who served under the name of Martin Cubbler as a member of Captain Wrigley's independent company, Pennsylvania Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been discharged honorably from the military service of the United States as a member of that organization on or about the 24th day of November, 1862: Provided, That no pay, pension, bounty, or other allowance shall accrue prior to the passage of this act.

And to amend the title so as to read: "An act for the relief of Martin Cletner."

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

Mr. KING. I would like to inquire what the difference is between the House amendment and the Senate bill. Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Answering the Senator's question, I think there is very little material difference, but it makes it very certain that the party in interest is not to receive any benefits by way of back pay or pension. The bill passed the Senate in the form found in the original bill, but the House amendment makes it more definite.

The motion was agreed to.

G. DARE HOPKINS.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3351) for the relief of G. Dare Hopkins, which was, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$2,500 in full settlement against the Government."

Mr. CAPPER. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, there is so much confusion in the Chamber that it is impossible to hear on this side what What is the pending question and what was the is going on. request submitted or motion made by the Senator from Kansas?
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas moved concur in the House amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well, I have no objection.

The motion was agreed to.

ROBERT EDGAR ZEIGLER.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 107) for the relief of Robert Edgar Zeigler, which were, on page 1, line 4, after the word "pay," to insert "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated," and on page 1, line 5, to strike out "$725" and insert "$585."

Mr. TOWNSEND. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

ANTON ROSPOTNIK.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3594) for the relief of Anton Rospotnik and the exchange of certain lands owned by the Northern Pacific Railway Co., which was, on page 1, line 12, after the word "State," to insert "and of approximately the same value."

Mr. MYERS. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator explain what is the purpose and effect of the amendment in which he moves that the Senate concur?

Mr. MYERS. It is a bill involving a case of this kind: A man made a homestead entry in Montana. He was permitted through misinformation of the local land office officials to file on a piece of land which belonged to the Northern Pacific Railway Co., and which had been leased for years. He went on the land and improved it, and he was never informed of its real ownership. He spent five years on the land and at the end of that time when he went to make final proof he was suddenly and very surprisingly informed that the land did not belong to the United States. The bill simply authorizes the Secretary of the Interior in his discretion to negotiate an exchange for other lands.

Mr. ROBINSON. The House amendment does that?

Mr. MYERS.

No; the bill authorizes it.

No. What is the House amendment?

Mr. ROBINSON. What is the House amendment?
Mr. MYERS. I will come to that in a moment. The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to negotiate with the Northern Pacific Railway Co. to exchange for like land situated in Montana and let the railway company take the lieu land and give up this land and let the man take a patent to it.

The bill passed the Senate in that form and went to the House. The House has added an amendment to provide that any land selected by the railroad company in lieu of this land shall be of approximately the same value. That is the House amendment. I move— Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

Mr. MYERS. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent at this time to submit the unanimous-consent agreement which I

It is agreed by unanimous consent that at not later than 5 o'clock p. m., to-day, the Senate will adjourn until 11 o'clock a. m. Monday, February 26, 1928, and that immediately after the conclusion of the routine morning business on Monday the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the calendar under Rule VIII and continue such consideration until 1 o'clock p. m.; and that, if not sooner disposed of, the motion to proceed to the consideration of the shipping bill (H. R. 12817) be considered as pending at the hour of 1 o'clock p. m. on Monday, February 26, 1923 (February 24, 1923).

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, that proposal is satisfactory to this side of the Chamber.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to entering into the unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. BRANDEGEE, Mr. President-

Mr. CURTIS. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.
Mr. BRANDEGEE. I wish to ask the Senator from Kansas whether under the agreement the call of the calendar is to be under Rule VIII, so that a bill may be taken up upon motion in spite of an objection to its consideration, or whether the calendar will be taken up simply for the consideration of unobjected bills

Mr. CURTIS. The calendar would be taken up under Rule VIII so that a bill might be taken up by motion. It was agreed-Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to

Mr. CURTIS. I will ask the Senator to wait until I make this statement. It was agreed that this morning be devoted to the consideration of unobjected bills, and it seems to me that if we adhere to the regular business we can this morning finish the calendar of unobjected bills.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know that I caught the exact import of the statement which was made in reference to the shipping bill.

Mr. CURTIS. The statement was that if the shipping bill shall not have been sooner disposed of, the question as to its disposition shall be considered as pending at 1 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. ROBINSON. That is, the motion to proceed to its consideration shall be determined.

Mr. CURTIS. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Suppose it should be disposed of to-day?

Mr. CURTIS. That would settle it.

Mr. McKELLAR. If it were disposed of to-day, then that language would have no effect

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator from Kansas. The agreement as read provides that on Monday we shall consider the calendar under Rule VIII. That means if any Senator objects to the consideration of a bill, and then it is taken up by motion, the limitation of debate does In the interest of disposing of the calendar and getting some bills through that possibly might be objected to by one Senator, I wish to suggest that we include in the unanimous-consent agreement a further agreement that, on Monday if a bill is taken up by motion during the call of the calendar, under Rule VIII, the five-minute rule as to debate shall apply. That would prevent consuming the entire morning hour on one bill under unlimited debate.

Mr. CURTIS. So far as I am concerned that would be satisfactory to me.

Mr. JONES of Washington. But is not that the rule?

Mr. NORRIS. No. Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, that would be impossible, because under such an arrangement the Senate might proceed with the consideration of the shipping bill, apply a limitation of five minutes to debate, and vote on the shipping bill; and certainly no one, in view of the course that measure has taken in the Senate, would agree to that.

- Mr. NORRIS. No one would want to do that.

Mr. ROBINSON. I object to the suggestion of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. I ask unanimous consent that my request for unanimous consent be now put.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent agreement proposed by the Senator from Kansas? The Chair hears none, and the agreement is entered into.

LANDS IN CANON CITY, COLO.—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President-

Mr. CUMMINS. I call for the regular order.

Mr. SMOOT. I submit the conference report which I send to the desk, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The conference report submitted by the Senator from Utah will be read.

The reading clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7053) to grant certain lands to the city of Canon City, Colo., for a public park, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same.

REED SMOOT. I. L. LENROOT, Managers on the part of the Senate. N. J. SINNOTT, ADDISON T. SMITH, CARL HAYDEN Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

LANDS IN ESCAMBIA COUNTY, FLA.—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. SMOOT. I submit a further conference report which I send to the desk and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The conference report will be read.

The reading clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7967) granting certain lands to Escambia County, Fla., for a public park, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same.

REED SMOOT, I. L. LENROOT. H. L. MYERS. Managers on the part of the Senate. N. J. SINNOTT, ADDISON T. SMITH, CARL HAYDEN, Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Utah for the immediate consideration of the conference report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report,

The report was agreed to.

SENATOR FROM VERMONT.

Mr. DILLINGHAM presented the credentials of Frank L. GREENE, chosen a Senator from the State of Vermont, for the term beginning March 4, 1923, which were read and ordered to be placed on file, as follows:

STATE OF VERMONT.

To the President of the Senate of the United States:

This is to certify that on the 7th day of November, 1922, Frank L. Green was duly chosen by the qualified electors of the State of Vermont a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States for the term of six years beginning on the 4th day of March, 1923.

Witness his excellency our governor, Redfield Proctor, and our seal hereto affixed at Montpelier, this 19th day of February in the year of our Lord 1923.

[SEAL.]
By the Governor:

REDFIELD PROCTOR, Governor.

HARRY A. BLACK, Secretary of State.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, on yesterday afternoon at the time of adjournment I was endeavoring to present petitions from certain citizens in New Mexico. I desire now to call attention to those petitions in order that they may be properly referred. The petitions come in connection with a letter addressed to me; and the petitions themselves, it seems to me, call for action by the Committee on Interstate Commerce. In connection with the petitions is a printed statement regarding the recent machinists' strike. I ask that this statement which is printed here be also printed in the Record, but first that there be printed in the RECORD a letter addressed to me by Mr. W. T. Patterson, of Albuquerque, N. Mex.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MACHINISTS,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY TREASURER,
Albuquerque, N. Mex., February 17, 1933.

Hon. A. A. Jones, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senators: The inclosed petitions are, I believe, self-explanatory. They ask that our Representatives in Washington undertake, through legislative action or otherwise, to compel the railway executives upon roads where strike conditions still exist to arrange an adjustment of the controversy in line with President Harding's proposal of July 31. A copy of this proposal and other information upon the subject will be found in the pamphlet which we are also inclosing. You will, no doubt, remember that when President Harding made the proposal in question he stated that whichever side rejected his plan would be held as responsible for further continuance of the deplorable situation upon the railroads which has resulted from the strike. Our representatives agreed to accept the President's plan, and the railroads rejected it, which has resulted in a condition that has been nothing short of a lockout of the railroad mechanics since August 1. Since that time about 150 of the railroads have broken away from their association and arranged a settlement with ther former employees in line with Mr. Harding's suggestion; but the Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific, and about 50 other roads are still stubbornly holding out while the public suffers for lack of service. Thousands of their former employees are being brought down to starvation conditions, and millions and millions of dollars of unwarranted expense is being piled up by the railroads, which will sooner or later be an additional burden upon the public.

This is a very serious situation, and we hope that you and Senator Bursum, in conjunction with the other Representatives, who are receiving similar petitions from their constituents, will actively get in behind this matter and take such action as will speedily bring this long-drawn-out controversy to a close.

Thanking you in advance for the earnest consideration which we feel you will give the proposition, I remain,

Very respectfully,

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Without reading, I ask that one of the petitions may be p

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Without reading, I ask that one of the petitions may be printed in the RECORD. I may state that the petitions come from different communities in the State of New Mexico. Altogether I should judge that there are a thousand names signed to them. I will not ask that each peti-tion be printed in the RECORD, but simply that one of them be printed, for the petitions, coming from different communities, are in the same type. They come from Albuquerque, N. Mex., Gallup, N. Mex., Belen, N. Mex., and other communities.

The petitions relate to the strike of last August of the machinists of the country who were working for the railroads. do not pretend to make a statement regarding the merits of the transaction, but the statement of facts which is presented in the petitions seems to warrant investigation by the Committee on Interstate Commerce. After the printing in the RECORD I ask that the statement of facts and these various petitions be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the petition and statement referred to by the Senator from New Mexico will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears none. The matter referred to is as follows:

RATON, N. MEX., January 30, 1923.

Hon. A. A. Jones,
Senator from New Mexico, Washington, D. C.
Hon. H. O. Bursum,
Senator from New Mexico, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sirs: We, the undersigned citizens of Raton, N. Mex., and vicinity, having read President Harding's plan of settlement as submitted to Messrs. B. M. Jewell and T. Dewit Cuyler on July 31, 1922, having also read copies of correspondence which has passed between the representatives of the shopmen and the officials of the Santa Fe Railway Co., believe that everything has been done on the part of the representatives of the shopmen that could have been done to bring about a just and reasonable settlement of the controversy now existing between the railroads and their employees who went on strike July 1922.

between the railroads and their employees who went on strike July 1, 1922.

Knowing conditions as they now exist on the Santa Fe Railway and other railroads in this vicinity, we are now convinced that after a seven months' trial the Santa Fe Railway and the other railroads can not efficiently operate their transportation facilities with the class of employees they now have employed in the shops.

We therefore respectfully request that you use your good office to compel the Santa Fe Railway and other railroads in this vicinity to accept the plan of settlement as proposed by President Harding on July 31, 1922.

FACTS THE PUBLIC SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE RAILROAD SHOPMEN'S STRIKE,

On July 1, 1922, about 400,000 railroad shop employees walked out on strike, not, as was generally supposed, for the purpose of securing higher rates of pay, but because of the fact that 92 railroads had violated 104 decisions of the United States Railroad Labor Board and a number of railroads had refused to put into effect the rates of pay established by the decisions of the board, and in order to evade the decisions of the board had leased their shops, discharging all their employees, with instructions that if they wished employment they must apply to the contractor who had leased their shops. This resulted in wages being reduced in the contract shops far below the rates established by the United States Railroad Labor Board, and in many instances so low that men could not buy the necessities of life with the wages received. The leasing out of shops continued to spread until it had reached practically every section of the country, and until the shopmen themselves decided something must be done to compel the railroad companies to abide by the decisions of the Railroad Labor Board and pay the rates of wages established by its decisions; hence the strike, their only weapon of defense.

The President of the United States recognized the validity of the stand taken by the striking shopmen when, on July 31, he sent the following terms of settlement to Mr. B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor and head of the striking shopmen's organization, and to Mr. T. DeWitt Cuyler, chairman Association of Railway Executives.

President Harding's terms of settlement of the railroad shop strike, dated Washington, D. C., July 31, 1922:

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 31, 1922.

Col. T. DEWITT CUYLER,

Chairman Association of Railway Executives,

Care Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, N. Y.

MY DEAR MR. CLYLER: I am writing to convey to you the terms of agreement, as I understand them, upon which the railway managers and the United Shop Craft Workers are to agree preliminary to calling off the existing strike.

First Railway managers and workmen are to agree to recognize the of agreement, as I understand them, upon which the rallway managers and the United Shop Craft Workers are to agree preliminary to calling off the existing strike.

First. Rallway managers and workmen are to agree to recognize the validity of all decisions of the Rallroad Labor Board and to faithfully carry out such decisions as contemplated by the law.

Second. The carriers will withdraw all lawsuits growing out of the strike, and Railroad Labor Board decisions which have been involved in the strike may be taken in the exercise of recognized rights by either party to the Railroad Labor Board for rehearing.

Third. All employees now on strike to be returned to work and to their former positions with seniority and other rights unimpaired. The representatives of the carriers and the representatives of the organizations especially agree that there will be no discrimination by either party against the employees who did or did not strike.

In view of the things said in our personal interview, it is hardly necessary for me to emphasize my belief in the wisdom of the railway managers accepting this compromise in order to bring the strike to an end. I have made a very full appraisal of all the embarrasments involved in making the seniority restoration. It has seemed to me that the proposition that the order of things on the day the strike began be restored, and that both employers and workers agree against discrimination toward either those who struck or did not strike, will leave to the managers only the difficult problem of dealing with the new men employed. It would be futile for me to attempt to point the way of most easily solving that difficulty. I have only attempted to appraise the situation from the larger viewpoint. It seems to me that such a settlement brings, first of all, the restoration to normal operations in transportation for which the country is calling. In the second place, it establishes definitely the full recognition of the Railroad Labor Board by all parties concerned. I have not specifically stat decide and end such disputes as meners the contraction.

You are at liberty to present the situation as I have outlined it to you, and I hope you will convey to the members my deep conviction that this dispute must be brought to an early termination. I need hardly add that I have reason to believe these terms will be accepted by the workers. If there is good reason mby the managers can not accept, they will be obligated to open direct negotiations or assume full responsibility for the situation.

With very best regards, I am, very truly yours,

Warken G. Harding.

In the first paragraph of the terms you will please note that the President lays particular stress upon both the railroad management and employees agreeing to the validity of the decisions of the Railroad Labor Board and to faithfully carry out such decisions.

On August 1, 1922, Mr. Jewell and the international officers representing the organizations of railroad shopmen on strike accepted President Harding's plan of settlement. The Association of Railroad Executives refused to accept the President's plan of settlement, which has since August 1, 1922, changed the strike from a strike of railroad shop employees to a strike of the Association of Railroad Executives, or, in other words, into a "lockout" by a number of railroads whose officials refuse to meet the representatives of the men locked out on any terms. out on any terms.

whose omciais refuse to meet the representatives of the men locked out on any terms.

I now speak in particular of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, whose officials have to date absolutely refused to meet the representatives of the locked out men, and for your information we are quoting complete file of correspondence which has passed between representatives of the "locked out men" and Mr. A. G. Wells, vice president of this railway.

We wish to call your attention to letter to Mr. Wells of November 8, wherein it was pointed out to him the then existing conditions on the Santa Fe Railway, and to his reply to same, dated November 10, in which he made no denial of the facts submitted; and since November 8 conditions have continuously grown worse; passenger and freight train wrecks are frequent, causing great damage to property as well as endangering the safety of passengers and crews. These wrecks are, no doubt, caused by improper repairs made to, and improper inspection of, the equipment by inexperienced men now in the employ of the railway company.

no doubt, caused by improper repairs made to, and improper inspection of, the equipment by inexperienced men now in the employ of the railway company.

Having in mind the interest of the public, and the losses sustained by farmers, business men, and others through the lack of transportation, as well as the losses sustained by the "locked-out shopmen," we feel that the public is entitled to be advised as to why these conditions exist.

In President Harding's letter to Mr. Cuyler he said: "If there is good reason why the managers can not accept, they will be obligated to open direct negotiations or assume full responsibility for the situation." The managers have not accepted the President's plan of settlement, and have refused to open direct negotiations, therefore they must assume the responsibility for the deplorable conditions now existing. Regardless of the statements made by the railroad management that they are operating normally, transportation of both passengers and freight is continuously getting worse, and it seems to me that after seven months' trial on the part of the railroad management, in which they have failed to even make a semblance of efficiency in the operation of transportation, that the public would be convinced that the railroads can not properly or efficiently operate their transportation facilities with the class of employees they now have employed in their shops, and will demand of the railroad companies that President Harding's plan of settlement be recognized.

System Federation No. 97,

SYSTEM FEDERATION No. 97, By T. L. PERSONETT, President.

CHICAGO, ILL., October 2, 1922.

Mr. A. G. Wells,
Vice President and General Manager of Operation, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway System, Railway Exchange Building, Chicago, Ill.

System, Railway Exchange Building, Chicago, Ill.

DEAR SIR: In order to bring to an end the existing strike of employees on the Santa Fe Railway system and relieve the shippers and general public from the adverse effects thereof, Mr. Personett and the writer are in Chicago authorized to arrange a conference between the Santa Fe management and the executive committee of the striking employees for the purpose of effecting a settlement of the matters in contraversy. Santa re management and propose of effecting a settlement of the matters in controversy.

Awaiting an early reply, I am, yours very truly,

(Signed) A. H. Norris,

Chairman Executive Committee.

Address, Grace Hotel, Chicago, Ill.

(Copy.)

THE ATCHISON, TOPEKA & SANTA FE RAILWAY CO., Chicago, Ill., October 3, 1922.

Mr. A. H. NORRIS, Care of Grace Hotel, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir: In acknowledgment of yours of October 2, beg to advise that the subject referred to in your letter was discussed by me in my office Saturday morning, September 16, 1922, with Mr. Jewell, at his request, and definitely disposed of.

The strike has long since been settled in so far as this company is concerned; therefore nothing could be gained by a conference with you and Mr. Personett for the purpose you suggest.

Yours truly,

(Signed)

A. G. WELLS. (Signed)

(Copy.)

ALBUQUERQUE, N. MEX., October 15, 1922.

Mr. A. G. Wells, Vice President A. T. & S. F. R. R. System, Chicago, Ill.

Vice President A. T. & S. F. R. R. System, Chicago, III.

Dear Sir: Your letter of the 3d instant, addressed to Mr. Norris, declining to confer with him and Mr. Personett upon the strike situation as it exists on your railway system is before the executive board of the Santa Fe System Federation of Shop Crafts.

We are sorry you have assumed such an uncompromising attitude, not only on account of the adverse effect the controversy is having upon the earnings of your railroad but because of the great inconvenience and annoyance being caused the traveling and shipping public, who have heretofore enjoyed good service from the Santa Fe, of which we, as your employees, were just as proud as the management.

You say that in so far as the company is concerned the strike has long since been settled. This may be true, but the fact remains that 90 per cent of your passenger trains are and have been for some time running late, frequently many hours off of schedule; that shippers from one end of the line to the other are bitterly complaining as to their failure to receive freight, days and often several weeks over due; and that they are constantly sending complaints, not only to your office but to Washington as well, relative to their inability to secure cars for loading.

Were it not for a hopeless policy now being pursued by a number of different railroads, having for its purpose the discrimination of these organizations, we feel that we could get together with you and that these deplorable conditions would be speedily overcome. We do not, however, charge you, Mr. Wells, with the originating of this unfriendly and un-American policy, because we have generally found you fair in the treatment of your employees in the past, but we believe that some force beyond you is responsible for this condition.

Under the circumstances there is nothing else for us to do but to continue to make the strike as effective as is legally possible, and we are hereby giving you notice of our intention to do so; but nevertheless we want to assure you that we are ready and willing at any time to sit down to a conference table with you in an earnest endeavor to amicably adjust these difficulties, and in the meantime, as we presume you know, many of our members are finding employment upon the numerous other railroads throughout the country who are signing agreements and arranging just and reasonable settlements with their employees.

agreements and arranging just and responsible regards, we remain, Assuring you of our warmest personal regards, we remain, Executive Board System Federation No. 97, By A. H. Norms, Chairman, [Note.—No reply was received to this letter from Mr. Wells.]

(Copy.)

KANSAS CITY, KANS., November 8, 1922.

Mr. A. G. Wells,

Vice President A. T. & S. P. R. R.,

Radikay Exchange Building, Chicago, III.

Dear Sir: I have before me a clipping from a Chicago newspaper in which it is claimed there are now 18,972 men employed in the shops on the Santa Fe Railroad, that the conditions of monve power in which it is claimed there are now 18,972 men employed in the shops on the Santa Fe Railroad, that the conditions of monve power on the Santa Fe Railroad, that the conditions do now prover on the santa Fe Railroad that the conditions do now prover on the santa Fe Railroad that the conditions do now prover and the santa Fe Railroad that the conditions of mone and the santa Fe Railroad that the conditions of the santa Fe Railroad that the conditions in the shops are far from being normal, and that the officers of the Santa Fe Railroad have been ill advised as to the true conditions in the shops are far from being normal, and that the officers of the Santa Fe Railroad have been ill advised as to the true conditions.

Heretofore, when abnormal conditions arose, the representatives of the shop crafts were called into conference with the railroad officials and made to understand that the interest of the public must be taken into consideration in bringing about normal conditions. The shop crafts submitted to service from the railroad company and when that service can be properly rendered only when the shop crafts are restored to service, the shop crafts are restored to service, the shop crafts are denied the right of conference with the officials in the interest of the public. However, now, when the public expects and is entitled to (Signed) T. L. Personett, President System Federation.

(Copy.)

Subject: Desire of shop crafts to settle the strike.

November 10, 1922. File 123099.

Mr. T. L. PERSONETT, Peoples' National Bank Building, Kansas City, Kans.:

Peoples' National Bank Building, Kansas City, Kans.:

I am in receipt this morning of yours of the 8th instant, asking me to reconsider the character of reply rendered to Mr. Norris to his letter of October 2, and agree to meet with representatives of the striking shopmen in an attempt to reach an understanding. This I respectfully decline to do, but in turn would offer you the advice that you suggest to the men on strike that as many of them as possible apply for and obtain positions with the company. This is rather an empty offer because there is room for very few men, but the suggestion is dictated by a whole-souled desire to afford relief to as many of the misguided men who are on strike as possible.

I am fully advised of the conditions which exist on the Santa Fe Railway. For your information, will state that in September last past this company loaded on its own rails and received from connection more cars of freight than in any previous month in its history, and this satisfactory record was further increased in the month of October by over 21,000 cars. There is some delay to the movement of this abnormal business, but it is not attributable to the lack of the services of the men on strike, and indeed we have so few bad-order cars that we are giving serious consideration to the need of reducing the force in the car department.

Mr. Jewell called on me, seeking that which you now ask, on the morning of September 16. I told Mr. Jewell then and now repeat to you that there is no hope for the erstwhile shop crafts' organization to arrive at any settlement of the strike with this company. Aside from other considerations, there is no need for a settlement; our forces are practically full and such men as are needed are being supplied daily, and I am happy to say a large number of the men who went on strike have returned to work.

Yours truly,

(Signed)

(Signed)

A. G. WELLS.

(Copy.)

CHICAGO, ILL., January 5, 1923.

Mr. A. G. Wells, Vice President Santa Re Railwey System, Chicago, Ill.

Vice President Santa Re Railway System, Chicago, Ill.

DEAR SIR: We have on several previous occasions written you relative to a conference for the purpose of discussing a settlement of the shopmen's strike. In your replies you have made the statement that "in so far as the Santa Fe Railway Co. is concerned, the strike is over," which in part is true, as the strike was turned into a lockout when the Railroad Executives Association refused to accept President Harding's plan of settlement last August.

However, we find at all points that officials and agents of the company are doing everything within their power to induce merchants and others to refuse credit to the men on strike unless they agree to return to work for the Santa Fe. Further, that some of the men on strike have been offered $500 and over to return to work as individuals, and, in addition, $50 aplece for each striker they can induce to return with them.

in addition, $50 aplece for each striker they can induce to return with them.

Last, but not least, we find that systematic efforts have been and are being made to prevent the strikers from securing employment at other work, and upon numerous occasions when they did secure work they would be laid off within a few days and told that certain influences had been brought to bear which prevented their employment because of their being striking railway employees.

Now, Mr. Wells, it would seem to us that if, as you say, "the strike is over," why all this activity on the part of the company to induce or compel the strikers to return to service? Surely, you would not deny them their "constitutional rights" to work for whomsoever they please.

The conditions now existing on the railroad are bringing peril and disaster to the public, the railway company, and the striking shopmen, and we believe now is the time for us to get together and iron out all differences and start the New Year right.

Therefore we are again requesting a date for a conference and would thank you for an early reply.

Yours very truly,

(Signed)

T. L. PERSONETT,

(Signed) T. I. Personett,
President System Federation No. 97.
A. H. Norris,
Chairman Executive Board System Federation No. 97.

JANUARY 6, 1923, File 123099.

Mr. A. H. Norris and Mr. T. L. Personett.

836 Wilson Avenue, Apt. 3, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs: I have yours of yesterday's date, again asking for a conference for the purpose of discussing a settlement of what you are pleased to still characterize as the shopmen's strike, and can only say there is nothing to add in reply to your request to what was set forth in my letter of November 10 to Mr. Personett, a copy of which for your ready reference is inclosed.

The statement in your letter that officials and agents of the Santa Fe company are doing everything within their power to induce merchants and others to refuse credit to men on strike unless they agree to return to work for the Santa Fe I can not believe, and your further statement that some of the men on strike have been offered $500 and over to return to work as individuals and, in addition, $50 apiece for each striker they can induce to return with them also lacks the element of truth, as does your statement that efforts have been and are being made to prevent strikers from securing employment at other work.

Yours truly, made to prevent se Yours truly,

(Signed) A. G. WELLS.

How Much Will Your Dollar Purchase?—A SIMPLE PROBLEM IN ARITHMETIC CONCERNING RAILROAD SHOPMEN'S WAGES AND THE LABOR BOARD.

(By M. W. Martin.)

(By M. W. Martin.)

Question. If your daily wage is 70.3 cents per hour and you work 8 hours per day, how much per day will you be paid?

Answer, 70.3 cents times 8 = $5.624.

Question. If you worked 300 days a year (and this is fixing the number of days about the average), how much money has the employer paid you?

Answer, 300 days times $5.624 = $1.687.20, my income for one year. Question. If the real, actual purchasing power of the dollar, based on the cost of living retail prices, is 65 cents, then how much purchasing value will you have out of your yearly income?

Answer, $1,687.20 times 65 cents = $1,687.20

65

843600 1012320

$1,096.6800

Question. If $1,096.68 represents the real purchasing value of your money, earned in one year, and the family must live 365 days each year, how much money per day will your family have to live on?

Answer. As much as 365 will go into $1,096.68, which equals $3.0½ or day.

Answer. As Buch as 500 me of wage fixed by a board representing per day.

Question. Is this the standard of wage fixed by a board representing the United States Government?

Answer. It is, by the United States Railroad Labor Board, for skilled mechanics on railroads.

Question. How about the track workers, or laborers, whose wage rate this board fixed at 23 cents per hour; have you worked that out?

Answer. I have.

Answer. I have. Question. Will you let us have it? Answer. Here it is.

This class of labor will hardly average in one year 275 days (deducting holidays, Sundays, and bad weather days). At 8 hours per day, equals 2,200 hours they work in one year. The United States Railroad Labor Board reduced their wages to 23 cents per hour.

2,200 hours at
2,20 cents per hour

$506.00 - amount per year they will receive.

The purchasing power of the dollar, based on cost of living, retail prices, is 65 cents. The real purchasing power of $506.00 is times .65

$328 9000

Thus, these workers will have an annual income, of real purchasing

Thus, these workers will have an annual income, of real purchasing power, of $328.90.

To find out how much per day this sum will provide to "keep" (?) a family divide 365 into it.

Answer. 90.44 cents per day.

Think of it, here in the United States of America, practically 90 cents per day.

Russia, China, and heathen countries are a credit compared with this.

Do you condemn these workers for being stirred to unmeasured wrath? or are you with them to defeat this un-Americanism?

THE COMPANY UNION.

THE COMPANY UNION.

In order to deceive the public into believing that they are willing to continue the policy of collective bargaining with their shop employees, the railroads have caused to be formed, under the direction and guidance of railway efficials, so-called associations or unions upon each particular railroad, adopting the "check-off" system for payment of dues—something to which they would never agree with the bona fide organizations. Further, upon most roads, the employee upon entering the service is required to first cancel any affiliation he may have with a bona fide labor organization, and is compelled to join the "company union," thereby bringing into existence a closed-shop condition, something which the regular organization has never attempted to enforce upon railroads and a proposition which would be bitterly opposed by the carriers; all of which goes to prove that the company fostered unions are in fact not unions at all, but, on the other hand, purely company-controlled counterfeits.

Recently the officers of the bona fide organizations on strike upon the Missouri Pacific Co., on the same subject. This analysis applies equally as well to the Santa Fe Railway, and other railroads upon which the lockout exists, and for your information we are therefore publishing in full this document, which follows:

The Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. recently caused to be distributed a pamphlet which is reproduced in full in the right-hand column below. The left-hand column is the answer of the men, who have never permitted the railroad company to dominate or determine the form of organization they desired, and if the transportation act of 1920 guarantees anything to railroad employees, it guarantees them the right to establish and maintain organizations without interference, coercion, or intimidation by railroad employees, it guarantees them the right to establish and maintain organizations without interference, coercion, or intimidation by railroad employees, it guarantees them the right to antees anything to railroad employe establish and maintain organization or intimidation by railroad efficials. Why you should be a member of a bona fide trade-union, organized and dominated by the workers.

1. The bona fide trade-union is an institution born out of necessity by and for the workers for the express purpose of insuring its members against the injustices and tyrannies of the employer and his stool pigeons. It came into existence, not with the sanction of the employers, but despite the autocratic, black-listing practices so generally in vogue until curbed and practically eliminated by the trade-union movement.

2. No institution in this or any other country is more democratic than the trade-unions; they guarantee every member rights and privileges not obtainable by individual effort or company dominated associations, and membership does not cease when you are discharged, laid off, or quit of your own accord. The trade-union represents Americanism of the highest type; it is the defender of the weak, the women, the children, and the home,

3. The bona fide trade-union compelled recognition, negotiated agreements, and thereby established all the rules of procedure that are recognized to-day whereby the worker was protected from the arbitrary exercise of authority and humiliating abuses heaped upon the defenseless, unorganized workers. We have some very vivid recollections of the "full and fair consideration by the officials of the Missouri Pacific prior to the time we had an organization that was national in its scope.

4. The Missouri Facific Co, employs the best legal talent money can buy; it picks its officials from all corners of the globe; it maintains national and international associations; it has representatives in all the principal cities

Why you should be a member of the association.

- 1. The association gives assurance to the present working force that the Missouri Pacific Railroad officials have fulfilled the promise to stand by their loyal men by privileging them to form an organization for future negotiation.
- It provides the individual em-ployees with an adequate means of expression of any grievance.
- 3. It assures the workers that any just grievance will receive full and fair consideration by the officials up to and including the general manager, and, failing to agree, the case shall then be handled in accordance with the transportation act, 1920.
- 4. These benefits accrue to the worker without outside influence or domination being felt in the conduct of the affairs of the association or in the settlement of any origonome. grievances.

and towns, but it wants to deny the workers these same privileges, and naturally so, because they know that they can not dominate, coerce, or intimidate the national,
international, and other officers, including general chairman on salary, and they know also that any organization that must depend upon their sweet will for its very existence will never be of any real benefit to its members.

5. Every officer of the national and international railroad labor organizations comes from the ranks of the workers; they are elected by the workers; their salaries and duties are established and controlled by the rank and file and their continuation as representatives of the workers depends on their ability to get results for the men they represent.
These officers are not dependent upon the whim of the employer;
they are employed and paid by the workers to represent the interests of the workers, and the best evidence of their success is the policy of the railroad officials to establish company unions whose officers are dominated by the railroad to the detriment of the workers.

6. Representatives of the men whose bread and butter depend on the compensation they receive from the railroad are not desirable representatives of the men and never can be. Do you believe that a railroad company would employ a lawyer who was employees? The Missouri Pacific Railroad Co, is not so foolish, but it thinks its employees are. Hence the company association.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, in its wage statistics report for October, 1922, for 179 class 1 carriers, shows 191,804 salaried officials, agents, walking delegates, organizers, etc., including 19,604 policemen and watchmen. We-find an aggregate total of 211,408 people whose duties consist of managing the business of the railroads, fooling the public, and trying to infringe upon, dictate, and dominate the personal liberty and rights of the workers, disrupt the bona fide trade-union and continue in the service of the Missouri Pacifia Railroad on not. Memb

It is perfectly natural for the Missouri Pacific and other rall-roads to tell the employees that it is "expensive and useless" for them to spend a small portion of their earnings in an effort to elect members to office, whether in or out of their respective organizations; but what about the millions of dollars these same interests donate to secure the election of men to public office in order that the employer may profit thereby? The November, 1922, election, which moved many corporation and railway tools from public

5. All the representatives and officials of the association are workers themselves; their interests and the interests of the workers are identical,

6. The officials and representatives serve without salary or recompense of any kind, and the only cost to the workers is an amount merely sufficient to cover actual and necessary expense incurred by the representatives when engaged away from home at a meeting of the general board and in the interests of the workers.

The American Federation of Labor provides jobs for about 35,000 to 36,000 salaried officials, agents, walking delegates, organizers, etc., whose principal business is to keep matters stirred up so as to provide reasons for holding their jobs—and the worker pays for it.

7. The funds of the association belong to the worker; none of the money collected goes toward the support of labor leaders who would do nothing in return for it. None of it is used to pay for expensive and useless political campaigns within the organization. None of it is wasted or otherwise uselessly spent in any way outside.

(The annual income of the American Federation of Labor is from $40,000,000 to $55,000,000.)

If the 35,000 salaried agents and employees of the American Federation of Labor receive as little as $500 per year compensation, the bulk of the money collected would have been spent in this way, leaving little or nothing to provide benefits for the rank and file of membership.

The members of the United Mine Workers' organization alone pay out of their annual wage $17,500, none of which was returned as strike benefits to them during the five menths' strike just ended.

office, was most disconcerting. In fact, it is alarming to the special interests and, of course, it would never do for the workers to elect men and women who would represent the interests of the American people instead of the corporation.

There are between four and five million workers in the unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The miners' union, the largest craft union, with some 400,000 members, pays its president about $1,000 per year. The carpenters' union, with some 350,000 members, pays its president about $7,500. The machinists' union, with some 300,000 members, pays its president about $7,500 per year. Samuel Gompers, pays its president about $7,500 per year. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, receives a salaries are the highest paid of all the unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

B. F. Bush, president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co., is paid a salary of $50,000 per year for managing a property employing approximately 40,000 people.

Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, receives $75,000 per annum.

C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central, receives $75,000 per year.

E. Pennington, president of the Minneapolls, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, receives $75,000 per year.

Eleven others receive from $50,000 per year.

Eleven others receive from $50,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $75,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $92,580 per year.

In all, eight railroad officials receives $75,000 or more per year.

Five railway executives receives $92,580 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $70,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $75,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $70,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $70,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $70,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $70,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central system, receives $70,000 per year.

A. H. Smith, president of 8-9. The laws of the bona fide trade union are made by the will of the majority of the members. They establish the rate of dues and provide for the manner in which the funds are to be spent.

Approximately 400,000 members of the Federated Shop Crafts went on strike against an unwarranted reduction in their wages and changes in working rules, and although many of them are still on strike, they have not starved, and that is just what the railroads are proposing with their company unions. Keep the funds so low that the members will not be able to resist the introduction of low

8. Article 5, section 1, of the bylaws of the Mechanical Department Association provides:

"That funds may be used only as directed by the association as a body, such action to be taken by a majority vote of the members at any meeting and such disposition to be made with the approval of the president and majority of the members of the general board."

9. Thus, the members have a voice in the spending of their own money, a thing that no labor organization member has or has ever had except in connection with such union funds as might be the property of an individual local. In a wages and unwarranted working conditions, and they hope to re-coup the losses resulting from the present strike by making members of these company unions pay for it.

10. Certainly the company union members will not become involved in a strike; they stand alone; they have no funds and their organization is dominated by company tools. The poor fools who become members of these company organizations surrender their manhood and dare not offend the boss, because in their hearts they know that the only organization that can protect their interests is the organization of the Federated Shop Crafts, or other bona fide trades union.

ganization of the Federated Shop Crafts, or other bona fide trades union.

11-12. A lot of meaningless platitudes. The bona fide trade union is the property of the members, and the steady improvement in the conditions of employment of workers in the organized industries is the only answer necessary.

The history of the trade-union movement does not chronicle a single instance to justify the claim that any association of workers organized, dominated, and controlled by the employer proved beneficial to the worker. Shoddy goods can be sold cheap, but the buyer gets little for his money. So it is with the member of the company union.

The so-called "hard-bolled" executives know that sooner or later they will be forced to do business with the bona fide organizations. The lavish expenditure of the people's money in the foolhardy attempt to smash the organizations comprising the Federated Shop Crafts is only additional proof that the railroads are not now, never have been, and never will be conducted in the interests of the people of this country so long as the railroad executives are in a position to pass the burden of their mismanagement onto the public.

If you have carefully read the all lockout of shop employees upon the labor union the bulk of the money collected from members goes to the national body and the individual member has nothing more to do member has nothing more to do with it.

(In the carmen's organization of the B. R. of T. the monthly dues are $1.75, of which only 40 cents is retained in the local treasury.)

10. The association insures the worker against being involved in a strike or other time and money wasting controversy, at the instance of labor leaders, who sometimes use a strike to advance their own personal interests.

11. The association is in fact a workers' organization purely; the conduct of its affairs is left entirely to the members. In this connection it must be remembered that any voluntary organization, whether political, social, fraternal, or other, is of value to its members in exact proportion to the extent by which the individual members are permitted a voice in its activities and to help guide it intelligently and constructively.

12. It provides every benefit that may justly be claimed by the federated labor bodies and contains none of the many disadvantages and abuses that such bodies contain.

tain.

A member of any voluntary association in order to obtain the greatest good from it must maintain his interest in it; he must put himself into its affairs and see to it that the purposes and objectives are closely adhered to if the greatest benefits are to be obtained.

mismanagement onto the public.

If you have carefully read the above you will know that the present lockout of shop employees upon this railway is one of the most inhuman and unjustified programs ever mapped out by organized capital. We, as legitimate trade unionists, are first of all liberty-loving American citizens, interested in the peace, good welfare, and prosperity of our great Nation. Our policies are safe, sane, and conservative, and our organizations are doing more than any other one force to restrain the ultraradical, destructive forces now abroad in the land; but when predatory capital is permitted to inflict upon us such inhuman and unheard-of treatment as we are at present enduring, we believe that you will agree with us that if these quasi-public institutions are permitted to continue their present imperialistic and autocratic methods it can not but result in bitterness and encouragement to the development of a radicalism which will be dangerous to the well being of all. Please, therefore, help us by protesting to your representatives in Washington and doing whatever may lie within your power to cause these railroads to desist from further prosecution of such an un-American policy.

System Federation of Shop Crafts, A., T. & S. F. Ry. By Executive Board.

Mr. GOODING. I present resolutions from the Idaho Mining

Mr. GOODING. I present resolutions from the Idaho Mining Association, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD, and appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, and referred as follows:

To the Committee on Mines and Mining:

printed in the Record, and referred as follows:

To the Committee on Mines and Mining:

Resolution adopted by the tenth annual convention, Idaho Mining Association, Boise, Idaho, February 13-14, 1923, relating to the Nicholson resolution providing for a joint commission to be known as "The Joint Commission of Gold and Silver Inquiry."

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the Committee on Mines and Mining in the Senate, after consideration of the gold and silver situation, has recommended for passage a resolution by Senator Nicholson of Colorado, which provides for a joint commission to be known as "The Joint Commission of Gold and Silver Inquiry," which is to report to Congress on the methods and means of stimulating the production of gold and the stabilization and wider use of silver: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Idaho Mining Association, in its tenth annual convention, assembled at Boise, Idaho, on the 13th and 14th days of February, 1923, respectfully petitions that the Congress of the United States give sympathetic consideration to the purposes outlined in the aforesaid Nicholson resolution, and especially that it enact such legislation as may be necessary in the premises; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Members of Congress representing Idabo, and to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining.

I hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true copy of resolution adopted by the Idaho Mining Association at its tenth annual convention, Boise, Idaho, February 13-14, 1923.

RAYNUL MACBETH

Secretary Idaho Mining Association.

To the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Resolutions adopted by the tenth annual convention, Idaho Mining Association, Boise, Idaho, February 13-14, 1923, relating to the Denison blue-sky law.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the Committee on Banking and Currency in the Senate has under consideration the Denison blue-sky law; and
Whereas this legislation will be detrimental to the mining industry and all western development: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Idaho Mining Association, in its tenth annual convention assembled, at Boise, Idaho, on the 13th and 14th days of February, 1923, hereby protests against the enactment of the Denison blue-sky law, believing that it will be destructive of the initiative that built up the great mining industry of the West, and will be a restriction placed upon legitimate promotion, prevent interstate transactions, and forbid to the honest promotions the use of the United States mail; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Members of Congress representing Idaho and to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency.

I hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true copy of resolutions adopted by the Idaho Mining Association at its tenth annual convention, Boise, Idaho, February 13-14, 1923.

Recretary Idaho Mining Association.

Mr. BORAH presented resolutions adopted by the Tenth An-

Mr. BORAH presented resolutions adopted by the Tenth Annual Convention of the Idaho Mining Association at Boise, Idaho, protesting against the enactment of the Denison blue sky law, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Tenth Annual Convention of the Idaho Mining Association at Boise, Idaho, praying that Congress give sympathetic consideration to the resolution submitted by Senator Nicholson, of Colorado, providing for a joint commission to be known as the "joint com-mission of gold and silver inquiry," which were referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

[Note: These resolutions are identical with those previously presented by Mr. Gooding, which are printed.]

Mr. BORAH presented the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

United States of America,
State of Idaho,
Office of the Secretary of State.

Office of the Secretary of State.

I. F. A. Jeter, secretary of state of the State of Idaho and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of Senate Joint Memorial No. 3 with the original thereof adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Seventeenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Idaho and filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Idaho February 15, 1923, and that the same is a full, true, and complete transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof, together with all indoresements thereon. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Idaho. Done at the capitol at Boise, Idaho, this 17th day of February, A. D. 1923.

[SEAL.]

F. A. JETER. Secretary of State. Legislature of the State of Idaho, In the Senate, Seventeenth Session.

Senate Joint Memorial No. 3, by committee on mines and mining. To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Governor and Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the production of silver is an important industry of the United States and affords employment directly to many thousands of persons and indirectly to thousands of others; and

Whereas, on account of its association with other metals, especially lead and zinc, in ores, an inadequate price for silver increases the cost of production of lead and zinc, and thereby adds to the cost of materials essential to many construction activities; and

Whereas it is also desirable to maintain silver-mining operations in the United States so as to meet the coinage requirements of various countries in which commerce and industry are in process of rehabilitation and can not be fully reestablished without additional supplies of metallic money; and

Whereas the prospective early completion of silver repurchases under the provision of the Pittman Act is liable to disrupt the silver-mining industry of the United States and in part suspend silver production unless measures be taken to preserve the industry:

Now, therefore, the Governor and Legislature of the State of Idaho respectfully petition that the Congress of the United States give sympathetic consideration to the situation of the silver-mining industry, and especially that it enact such legislation as may be necessary in the premises; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America and send copies to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

This senate joint memorial passed the senate on the 2d day of February, 1923.

H. C. BALDRIDGS, President of the Senate.

H. C. BALDRIDGE, President of the Senate.

This senate joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 10th day of February, 1923.

M. A. Kigen, Speaker of the House of Representatives. I hereby certify that the within Senate Joint Memorial No. 3 originated in the senate during the seventeenth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

A. M. BOYLEN.

A. M. BOYLEN, Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. BORAH presented the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

United States of America, State of Idaho, Office of the Secretary of State.

I, F. A. Jeter, secretary of state of the State of Idaho and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify:

That I have carefully compared the annexed copy of House Joint Memorial No. 3 with the original thereof adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Seventeenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Idaho and filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Idaho February 10, 1923, and that the same is a full, true, and complete transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof, together with all indorsements thereon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Idaho. Done at the capitol at Boise, Idaho, this 17th day of February, A. D. 1923.

[SEAL.]

F. A. Jeter, Secretary of State.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

House Joint Memorial No. 3, by Hagan and Anderson.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully

States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represents that—Whereas the production of wheat in the United States is one of the greatest assets and necessities of the United States; and
Whereas the farmers of the country can not now produce wheat at a profit, and unless the price of wheat is advanced and made stable the production of wheat in the United States will be further greatly reduced, to the detriment, damage, and injury of the whole people; and Whereas this condition has existed for the past two years, and unless remedied will exist in the future; and
Whereas heretofore, by an act of the Congress of the United States, whenever an emergency existed requiring stimulation of the production of wheat, and it was essential that the producers of wheat in the United States have certain guaranteed prices, the President was authorized from time to time, seasonably, and as far in advance of seeding time as practicable, to determine and fix a reasonable profit; and
Whereas pursuant to said act of Congress the President of the United States id make proclamations fixing the guaranteed price for wheat, in order to assure producers a reasonable profit; and
Whereas by reason of said price being so fixed the producers were enabled to receive a reasonable profit on the wheat producer, which inured to the great benefit of all the people and to the prosperity of the whole United States; and
Whereas the great emergency existing to-day makes it imperative that some action be immediately taken to save from utter ruin the great wheat producers of the country: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Idaho carnestly recommend, urge upon, and request that the Congress of the United States immediately consider and enact proper laws giving the President of the United States of support said measure and work that some action be immediately taken to save from titer ruin the great imperative of the States of Idaho be requested to support s

This memorial passed the house on the 27th day of January, 1923.

M. A. Kiger,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This memorial passed the senate on the 1st day of February, 1923. H. C. BALDRIDGE, President of the Senate.

I hereby certify that the within House Joint Memorial No. 3 originated in the house of representatives during the seventeenth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

DAVE BURRELL, Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. WALSH of Montana presented the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

House joint memorial No. 4 to the Congress of the United States praying for an appropriation to provide for the construction of public roads leading into and through national forests, Indian reservations, and other public land areas.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States of America:

Your memorialists, the members of the Eighteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, the senate and house concurring, respectfully represent:

Whereas there are in the 13 public land States of the Northwest 382,032,487 acres of unappropriated and unreserved public lands, Indian reservations, and national forests, areas that are nontaxable and that do not contribute to the building of public roads, except the 25 per cent of the gross proceeds of the forests, and it only a negligible amount. The nontaxable areas of these States are as follows:

	Acres.
Arizona	48, 692, 722	Minnesota Montana Nevada New Mexico	1, 855, 518
California	38, 173, 917		30, 829, 638
Colorao	24, 562, 927		58, 453, 899
Idaho	27, 366, 215		30, 418, 359

	Acres.		Acres.
Oregon South Dakota Utah	27, 384, 757 4, 386, 100 39, 207, 579	Washington	15, 357, 519 34, 343, 307

Whereas Indian reservations, forest reserves, and other public lands stretch across county, State, and interstate highways, becoming insurmountable barriers to highway improvement, uommunity and State development; and

Whereas in many counties of the public land States from 50 to 75 per cent of their area is nonassessable public-land area, affording no taxes for schools and roads; and

Whereas the public-land States, owing to large area, small population, and small valuation, have not been able to participate in the 50-50 provision of the Federal highway act; and

Whereas under the provisions of Senate bill No. 1072 there was enacted a law, November, 1921, providing for an appropriation of $75,000,000, $15,000,000 of which was to be applied on roads in national forests and leading into national forests; and

Whereas highway projects in the public land States initiated under this appropriation must halt unless another appropriation is made to effect their completion: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be memorialized to make an appropriation of $20,000,000 for roads in and leading into national forests in and through Indian reservations; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be transmitted by the secretary of state to the President, the Secretary of the Interior, the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, the Bureau of Public Roads, the United States Senators and Members of Congress, the governors of the 13 public-land States.

Calvin Crumbaker, Speaker of the House.

CALVIN CRUMBAKER, Speaker of the House. NELSON STORY, JR., President of the Senate.

Approved February 13, 1923.

Jos. M. Dixon, Governor.

Filed February 13, 1923, at 11.10 o'clock a. m.
C. T. Stewart, Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Montana, 88:

I, C. T. Stewart, secretary of state of the State of Montana, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of House joint memorial No. 4, "A memorial to the Congress of the United States praying for an appropriation to provide for the construction of public roads leading into and through national forests, Indian reservations, and other public-land areas," enacted by the eighteenth session of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, in regular session assembled, and approved by Jos. M. Dixon, governor of said State, on the 13th day of February, A. D. 1923.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Montana, at Helena, the capital, this 13th day of February, A. D. 1923.

[SEAL.]

C. R. STEWART,

Secretary of State.

C. R. STEWART,

Secretary of State.

By CLIFFORD L. WALKER,

Mr. ODDIE presented the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Senate joint resolution memorializing Congress to adopt and submit to the several States of the Union an amendment to the Constitution of the United States authorizing Congress to regulate the employ-ment of child labor in the industries of the United States.

of the United States authorizing Congress to regulate the employment of child labor in the industries of the United States.

Whereas the United States Census Bureau in its occupational canvas of the people of the United States for the year 1920 reports the employment of 1,060,858 children between the age of 10 and 15, inclusive, 413,549 of whom are employed in occupations other than agriculture; and

Whereas Congress has attempted to regulate the employment of children in mines and factories under the commerce clause of the Constitution by prohibiting transportation of child-produced commodities (U. S. Stats., ch. 432, 64th Cong., 1st sess.), which statute the United States Supreme Court in Harmer v. Dagenhart (247 U. S. 251) has declared to be beyond the scope of the said commerce clause of the Constitution and therefore void; and

Whereas Congress hereupon included in the revenue act (U. S. Stat. L. 40, pp. 1057-1138; ch. 18 Comp. St., par. 6336, 6337, 6338a) of the Sixty-fifth Congress a provision authorizing the collection of a 10 per cent tax upon net income of industries, producing commodities into the production of which entered the labor of a child, which statute when reviewed by the United States Supreme Court in Baily v. Drexel Furniture Co. (66 U. S. —) found in advance opinions of the court for June 15, 1922, page 523, was declared unconstitutional, thereby denying the right of Congress to regulate the employment of children under the right of Congress is without constitutional authority to universally regulate the employment of children under the right of Congress is without constitutional authority to universally regulate the employment of child labor in the industries of the United States, although Congress has after careful study of the beneficial results of such regulation attempted so to do; and

Whereas the people of the State of Nevada, through their legislastudy of the beneficial results of such regulation attempted so to do; and

Whereas the people of the State of Nevada, through their legislature have adopted laws similar to those proposed by Congress for the protection of child life and have in addition approved the policy of compelling children to attend school for the first 12 grades, and do not approve of the employment of children in mines under the age of 16 years; and

Whereas there is now pending before Congress a resolution to submit to the several States an amendment to the Constitution of the United States authorizing Congress to regulate and prohibit child labor: Therefore be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States be hereby requested to immediately pass such resolution to submit to the States for their approval the amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting child labor; and be it further

Resolved, That the Senators and Representative from Nevada be requested to present this resolution and to energetically and actively support the resolution submitting such amendment.

MAURICE J. SULLIVAN,

Proposition of the Control of the Contro

MAURICE J. SULLIVAN,
President of the Senate.
George B. Russell,
Secretary of the Senate.
JAMES M. LOCKHABT,
Speaker of the Assembly.
J. H. CANSTUNG,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

CARSON CITY, NEV., February 20, 1923.

I hereby certify that the above senate joint resolution was adopted by the Legislature of the State of Nevada in senate and assembly convened.

GRORGE B RUSSELL Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry;

Joint resolution memorializing Congress to enact legislation relating to forest products.

to forest products.

Whereas it is recognized that the timber supplies of this State and of the Nation are rapidly being depleted; and

Whereas it is further recognized that wood and forest products are needed on every farm and in every home and in every industry every hour of the day; and

Whereas it is a fact that thousands of men find their means of livelihood in the woods or in wood-using establishments and millions of dollars are invested in the forest industry; and

Whereas the practices of the past have resulted in millions of acres of cut-over lands in this State and in the Nation that should be producing forest products to supply the above-mentioned needs, but which, because of lack of organized effort, are not producing such supplies; and ducing forest products to supply the above-mentioned needs, but which, because of lack of organized effort, are not producing such supplies; and

Whereas it is recognized that this problem can only be solved by concerted effort of the Nation, State, and their citizens and that the essence of the problem is to cut merchantable timber in a way that will leave the lands cut over in a productive condition, so far as forest supplies are concerned; and

Whereas it is further recognized that, because of the interstate nature of the shipments of forest products and the far-flung operations of the forest industry, its activities being in every timbered State of the Union and the operators of one State being in competition with the operators of the other timbered States, that the problem is primarily a national problem and that any burdens placed on the forest industry should not be limited to the confines of any specific State but should be of national character; and

Whereas it is of great public importance that sufficient supplies of forest products for the needs and comforts of the population be insured for the future and that such supplies can only be insured by the establishment of a comprehensive forestry program: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this legislature memorialize Congress to enact such legislation as may be necessary to provide a vigorous and complete for the regulation, in a fair and uniform manner, of timber cutting on privately owned lands and also provide for the rigid protection or forest-producing lands from fire so that all nonfarming land wherever located in this or any other State in the Union may be in a productive condition for forest growth.

Resolved further, That copies of this resolution, properly engrossed and authenticated, be transmitted to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from Wisconsin, and to the presiding officers of both Houses of Congress.

GEO. C. FORNINGS,
President of the Senate.
L. W. SCHOENFELD,
Chief Clerk of the Senate. J. L. DAHL,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. LODGE presented resolutions of the city council of Boston, Mass., favoring the prompt passage of the so-called ship subsidy bill, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SHEPPARD presented the petition of Jane Douglas Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of Dallas, Tex., and Texas State regent and State secretary, Daughters of the American Revolution, praying for the erection of a national archives building, which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. PEPPER presented a memorial of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Board of Trade, protesting against the passage of legislation to limit the immigration of aliens to the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania presented a resolution adopted by the Synod of Pennsylvania of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, at Greensburgh, Pa., praying an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting polygamy, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. KENDRICK presented a petition of sundry railway postal clerks of Cheyenne, Wyo., praying for the passage of the bill (H. R. 13136) to amend an act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes," approved May 22, 1920, which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

He also presented a petition of sundry railway postal clerks of Cheyenne, Wyo., praying for the passage of the bill (H. R. 13609) to amend an act entitled "An act to reclassify postmasters and employees of the Postal Service and adjust their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis," approved June 5, 1920, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. CUMMINS, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14309) to amend section 206 of the transportation act, 1920, reported it without amendment

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 4528) for the relief of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad of Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1170) thereon.

Mr. DILLINGHAM, from the Committee on Immigration, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 82) providing for immigration to relieve the emergency caused by an acute shortage of labor in the Territory of Hawaii, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. NORRIS, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 10819) relating to the Department of Agriculture, reported it without amendment submitted a report (No. 1171) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 10677) for the relief of Quincy R. Craft, reported it without amendment.

Mr. BALL, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (S. 3487) to provide for the widening of Nichols Avenue between Good Hope Road and S Street SE., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1172) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 4413) to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, ported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1173)

Mr. GOODING, from the Committe on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (S. 3222) for the extension of Rittenhouse Street in the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment.

Mr. REED of Pennsyvania, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 4500) authorizing the appointment of William Schuyler Woodruff as an Infantry officer, United States Army, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1174) thereon.

Mr. LENROOT, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (S. 3855) to ascertain and settle land claims of persons not Indian within Pueblo Indian land, land grants, and reservations in the State of New Mexico, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1175) thereon.

Mr. HARRELD, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8533) for the relief of Joe T. White, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1176) thereon.

Mr. ROBINSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 4608) for the payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section No. 151 of the Judicial Code, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. PAGE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 4307. An act for the relief of John I. Conroy (Rept. No. 1177); and

H. R. 7921. An act granting six months' pay to Alice P. Dewey (Rept. No. 1178).

Mr. JONES of New Mexico, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 280) for the relief of the city of Astoria, Oreg., reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1179) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 422) permitting the entry free of duty of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign countries, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1180) thereon.

Mr. SHIELDS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14324) to amend section 107 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, as heretofore amended, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1181) thereon.

Mr. BAYARD, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 4255) for the relief of George T. Tobin & Son, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1182) thereon.

Mr. BURSUM, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2295) for the relief of James Allen, alias George Moran, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1183) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 1482) for the relief of James T. Farrill, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 278) providing for continuation of register and receiver of the land office at Guthrie, Okla., at salaries in effect prior to act of January 24, 1923, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. SPENCER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 4607) for the allowance of certain claims for indemnity for spoliations by the French prior to July 31, 1801, as reported by the Court of Claims, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1184) thereon.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14087) for the creation of an American battle monuments commission to erect suitable memorials commemorating the services of the American soldier in Europe, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 4537) for the relief of George Turner, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1186) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14317) granting permission to Capt. Norman Randolph, United States Army, to accept the decoration of the Spanish Order of Military Merit of Alfonso XIII, reported it without amendment.

Mr. JONES of Washington, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 13032) to authorize the sale of the Montreal River Lighthouse Reservation, Mich., to the Gogebic County board of the American Legion, Bessemer, Mich., reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 4420) to amend section 2 of the act approved February 15, 1893, entitled "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Servreported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1187) thereon.

Mr. WATSON, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (S. 1176) for the relief of Canadian Car & Foundry Co. (Ltd.), reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1188) thereon.

Mr. WALSH of Montana, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 4437) to amend section 284 of the Judicial Code of the United States, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1189) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 4438) to amend section 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1190) thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11637) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to approve indemnity selections in exchange for described granted school lands, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1211) thereon.

Mr. WADSWORTH, from the Committee on Military Affairs to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14082) to authorize the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct and operate a line of railway in and upon the Fort Snelling Military Reservation, in the State of Minnesota, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14077) to extend the benefits of section 14 of the pay readjustment act of June 10, 1922, to validate certain payments made to National Guard and reserve officers and warrant officers, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1191) thereon.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which were referred the following bills and joint resolution, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 13998. An act making section 1535c of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia applicable to the municipal court District of Columbia, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1192);

H. R. 14135. An act to amend an act approved September 8, 1916, providing for holding sessions of the United States district court in the district of Maine, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1193); and

H. J. Res. 256. Joint resolution proposing payment to certain employees of the United States (Rept. No. 1194).

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14144) to limit and fix the time within which suits may be brought or rights asserted in court arising out of the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 302 of the soldiers and sailors' civil relief act, approved March 18, 1918, being chapter 20, volume 40, General Statutes of the United States, moved that that committee be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, which was agreed to.

Mr. NELSON subsequently, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14144) to limit and fix the time within which suits may be brought or rights asserted in court arising out of the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 302 of the soldiers and sailors' civil relief act, approved March 18, 1918, being chapter 20, volume 40, General Statutes of the United States, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1195) thereon.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 13430) to amend section 370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1196) thereon.

Mr. CAPPER, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 297. An act for the relief of Mrs. Vincenza Diminico (Rept. No. 1197);

H. R. 7027. An act for the relief of Herbert E. Shenton (Rept. No. 1198)

H. R. 8871. An act for the relief of Richard Andrews (Rept. No. 1204)

H. R. 9631. An act for the relief of Edward F. Dunne, jr.

(Rept. No. 1203);
H. R. 10022. An act for the relief of Eldredge & Mason, of Malone, N. Y. (Rept. No. 1199);
H. R. 10847. An act for the relief of Jacob Dietch (Rept.

No. 1200)

H. R. 10848. An act for the relief of Estella W. Dougherty (Rept. No. 1201); and H. R. 13205. An act for the relief of the American Trust Co.

(Rept. No. 1202).

Mr. CAPPER, also from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11528) to allow credits in the accounts of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1205) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11397) to authorize appropriations for the relief of certain officers of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1206) thereon,

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 4153) granting an honorable discharge to Ustacio B. Davison, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1207) thereon.

Mr. NORBECK, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6577) authorizing the conveyance of certain land in the State of South Dakota to the Robert E. Kelley Post, No. 79, American Legion, South Dakota, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1209) thereon.

Mr. CALDER, from the Committee on Commerce, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment:

S. 4580. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Misrouri River between Hughes County and Stanley County, S. Dak.;

S. 4581. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Brule County and Lyman County,

S. Dak.; and S. 4582. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Walworth County and Corson County.

ROSE CITY COTTON OIL MILL.

Mr. ROBINSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 4479) for the relief of Rose City Cotton Oil Mill and others, reported the following resolution (S. Res. 448):

Resolved, That the bill S. 4479, entitled "A bill for the relief of Rose City Cotton Oil Mill and others," now pending in the Senate, together with all accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; and the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

PURCHASE OF EMBASSY BUILDING AT PARIS, FRANCE.

Mr. LODGE. From the Committee on Foreign Relations, I report back favorably without amendment the bill (S. 4594) to authorize the Secretary of State to acquire in Paris a site, with an erected building thereon, at a cost not to exceed $300,-000, for the use of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States.

I wish to say a word of explanation with reference to the bill, and then I shall ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. The facts are explained in the report of the House committee. The Senate is aware that there is a general law authorizing the expenditure annually of not to exceed $2500.000 for the purphase or execution of emphasisy legicians. $500,000 for the purchase or erection of embassy, legation, or consular buildings in foreign countries. Two years ago we passed a law appropriating $150,000 for the purchase of an embassy in Paris. That money is still in the Treasury unexpended, it having been found impossible to acquire any suitable building capable of providing accommodations for the embassy and its offices and also the consular offices at that price. For $300,000, however, a suitable building can be purchased, which will provide quarters for the embassy and the consular officers also. We are paying rent for all the buildings occupied by our diplomatic and consular officers. Of course, an embassy building occupied by the ambassador of the United States is exempt from taxation. It is very important, if this purchase is to be made at all, that the Secretary should have authority to make it now.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for question?

Mr. LODGE. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON. Has the building or have the buildings

Mr. ROBINSON. Has the building or have the buildings which it is contemplated shall be purchased been selected?

The building has been selected. Mr. ROBINSON. Is it the building that is now occupied by the ambassador and his staff? Mr. LODGE. No; I do not so understand; it is a different building, and I think is known as the Condé House. Mr. ROBINSON. I happen to know of that property, and have no objection to the consideration of the bill. Mr. LODGE, It will take care of all the offices of our diplomatic and consular service in Paris, and it is very important to have it done. Half the money is already in the

Mr. ROBINSON. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, can the Senator advise us as to the amount we are paying for present accommodations in France?

Mr. LODGE. It is set forth in the House report, which I send to the desk to accompany the bill, that for the embassy building the Department of State now pays an annual rental of 86,500 francs. The franc has fallen off since the figures were prepared. That does not include the rent paid by the military attaché, who has offices in the same building, but separate from the embassy, for which a rental of about 1,500 francs is paid. For the passport office a rental of 56,000 francs, or $4,480, is paid, and for the office of the consul general there is paid a rental of 18,000 francs.

Mr. POMERENE. Can the Senator state the total amount in American money?

Mr. LODGE. I am afraid that is a very difficult question to answer, because the rate of exchange of the franc has been constantly fluctuating.

Mr. POMERENE. Approximately, what would be the amount in American money?

Mr. KING. Say with the franc at par?

Mr. LODGE. The estimate in dollars that I have stated as to one item was made according to the rate of exchange when the hearings were held, which was February 12.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, if this debate is going to continue indefinitely, I shall have to object, because it was understood that we would take up the calendar this morning.

Mr. LODGE. I understand that. I made the request for the consideration of the bill, because it is very important that it be acted upon as quickly as possible. The matter has been thoroughly considered by the committee.

Mr. POMERENE. I shall not object, but I want to make just one observation. When the late William G. Sharp was ambassador he urged upon the Congress the necessity of buying an embassy at Paris. At that time it could have been bought for a very reasonable rate, but the Congress did not see fit to make the purchase. I am not finding any fault with them; but we could have saved a large amount of money if it had been bought then, and I am satisfied that we ought now to make the purchase on one condition only, namely, that the price is a reasonable one under all the circumstances, and I am quite willing to trust those who have the matter in charge.

Mr. LODGE. It is reported by the Secretary of State to be a reasonable price and the lowest at which we could get a suitable embassy

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, empowered, at a cost not to exceed $300,000 for both site and building or buildings, to acquire in Paris a site, together with the building or buildings thereon, for the use of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States, and the appropriation of the sum of $150,000 is hereby authorized in addition to a like sum heretofore appropriated for this purpose.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the House report accompanying a similar House bill may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The report referred to is as follows: [House Report No. 1587. Sixty-seventh Congress, fourth session.]

AUTHORIZING PURCHASE OF PROPERTY IN PARIS FOR DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR ESTABLISHMENTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

FEBRUARY 12, 1923.

Mr. Fairchild, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, submitted the following report to accompany H. R. 14287:

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, having had under consideration H. R. 14287, to authorize the Secretary of State to acquire in Paris a site, with an erected building thereon, at a cost not to exceed $300,000 for the use of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States, reports the same back, and recommends that the bill do pass.

The present bill is a reintroduction of H. P. 12000.

bill do pass.

The present bill is a reintroduction of H. R. 13999 in the final form as adopted by the committee.

The purpose of this bill is to empower the Secretary of State to purchase in Paris, at a sum not to exceed $300,000, a specially destrable property which has been offered to the United States ambassador to be used as the American Embassy. It is an advantageous offer, to secure which speedy authorization is essential. Such authorization is urgently recommended by the Secretary of State in a communication to the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, as follows:

LETTER FROM SECRETARY HUGHES TO MR. PORTER

FEBRUARY 10, 1923.

LETTER FROM SECRETARY HUGHES TO MR. PORTER.

FEBRUARY 10, 1923.

MY DEAR MR. PORTER: In conformity with the desire you have expressed to know my views regarding the desirability of purchasing in Paris a property which has been offered to the United States ambassador to be used as the American Embassy, it gives me pleasure to inform you that from reports received from Ambassador Herrick an unusual opportunity is offered to acquire a very desirable property at a comparatively small price. It is my understanding that the members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs have been shown photographs and ground plans of this property, which is very conveniently located in the seventh arrondissement, or ward, of the city of Paris. In this same ward are situated 10 out of 15 ministries of the French Government, among which is the ministry for foreign affairs, only a few minutes' walk from the property. There are in the same ward four embassies and three legations of other countries, as well as the Chamber of Deputies, the war college, and the offices of the military governor of Paris and of Marshal Foch. Within a short distance and in a neighboring ward are the senate and school of fine arts. It will therefore be seen that for the purpose of the embassy the property is particularly well located.

As to its accessibility for Americans and others who have occasion to call at the embassy, it can be easily reached by means of the various rapid-transit systems of Paris, as a subway station is shortly to be opened within 100 yards of the property, while a street-car and bus line run down the Boulevard des Invalides, on which the property faces, and another bus line on a cross street three doors away. The property is about an acre and a third in area, and extends through from one street to the large Boulevard des Invalides.

It is important to emphasize that the property is particularly well suited for the ambassador's residence and for offices of the foreign service, as the type of the house is of the style of a large private dwel square on which is situated a large church. The southern half of the block adjacent to this property is occupied by the buildings and garden of a convent, and there are three private houses with gardens on the northern half. The Chinese Legation is diagonally across the street from the property.

Experience has shown that in order to obtain property suitable for embassy purposes in the large capitals of Europe the sum of $150,000, heretofore authorized by Congress, is insufficient. I carnestly hope that with the present possibility of acquiring exceptionally valuable land on which are erected buildings well adapted to embassy purposes and conveniently located Congress will authorize the sum stated in the bill which Mr. Fairchild has introduced for this purpose,

I am, my dear Mr. Porter, very sincerely yours,

Charles E. Hughes.

Charles E. Hughes.

Congress has heretofore, by act approved February 17, 1911 (36)

Stat. L. p. 017), authorized the Secretary of State to acquire in foreign countries sites and buildings for use of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States, but limited to a cost not to exceed $150,000 at any one place. This general authorization makes no distinction as between important capitals with their larger populations and property values and smaller capitals with their larger populations and property values and smaller capitals with their smaller populations and values. In none of the larger capitals has it been possible to purchase suitable properties within the present statutory limitations. A previous appropriation by Congress in 1921 of $150,000 for the purchase of property in Paris has proven wholly inadequate. Real estate in Paris is of a value corresponding to that in New York.

The property, to purchase which the additional authorization by Congress is required, is known as the Hotel Condé. Photographs and ground plans have been submitted to the committee. There has been also submitted at the hearings before the committee a statement from the American ambassador at Paris descriptive of the building, its history, value, and desirable location, and containing a comparative statement of the value of the embassies in Paris of other countries, as follows:

DESCRIPTIVE STATEMENT OF PROPERTY.

DESCRIPTIVE STATEMENT OF PROPERTY.

"The Hotel de Condé, in the rue Monsieur, near the tomb of Napoleon, was built shortly before the French Revolution for Mademoiselle de Condé, aunt of the Duke d'Enghien, and was designed by Brogniart, one of the famous architects of the time. Major l'Enfant, who planned the city of Washington, was one of Brogniart's poleon, was built shortly before the French Revolution for Mademoiscile de Condé, aunt of the Duke d' Enghien, and was designed by Brogniart, one of the famous architects of the time. Major l'Enfant, who planned the city of Washington, was one of Brogniart's pupils.

"The Hotel de Condé runs between two streets and contains a fine garden. The residence is situated at the back of a large court, on both sides of which as well as on the side of the street entrance are spacious annexes, serving in former days as a chapel, coach houses, and quarters for the retinue of the princess, all of which would be most suitable for offices of the embassy staff, as well as for those of the military and naval attachés.

"The house itself contains art trensures of the epoch of great value, among which are bas-reliefs by Clodion and panels by Boucher. An added sentimental interest for Americans is the fact that this house was for many years during the last century the residence of the distinguished French statesman, the Comte de Chambrun, a descendant of Lafayette, and uncle of the recent chargé d'affaires at Washington.

"Nearly all large countries, as well as small ones, own their chancery and embassy here, the cost in each case exceeding the appropriation made by our Government. Real estate here is of a value corresponding to that in New York and the value of the embassies of other countries installed here is about as follows:

"The British Embassy and its chancery, furnished, is worth two and a half to three million dollars at least; probably more. This mansion was the residence of Pauline Bonaparte, Princess Borghese, sister of Napoleon. The property passed by purchase from her possession in 1814, with its costly furniture and ornaments, to the British Government for the use of the embassy, the Duke of Wellington negotiating the sale. The price agreed upon was £22,000, but two months after the Battle of Waterloo he sent in a bill to his Government for $2,500, for repairs to the house, made by my directions when I was ambassad committee and testified as follows:

EXTRACTS FROM THE TESTIMONY OF MR. BLISS.

I have been all over the property. Some years ago, in 1913, at the time I was in the embassy, I visited it when it was offered for sale. Whenever there was a good property that came into the market I always examined it to see if it was a possible embassy and made a report to the Department of State. At that time I do not recall what the price of it was, but I think, roughly speaking, it was six or seven million francs, and at that time the franc was at par, which would mean over a million dollars.

Q. What is your opinion as to this price of $300.000?

Mr. Bliss. It is a great bargain; there is no doubt of that.

Mr. Herrick has been in definite negotiations with the owner of the house, who is an elderly woman and who wants to have it preserved, as the chairman just stated, because of its architectural and historical interest.

Mr. BLISS. After the meeting of the committee to consider the bill of Mr. FARCHILD, in which a subcommittee was appointed, consisting of the chairman of the committee and Mr. FARRCHILD, a telegram was sent to Mr. Herrick, embodying the views of the committee regarding the matter, directing him to obtain an option on the property. That was covered very fully in the text of the message which was drawn up by the subcommittee. Mr. Herrick replied to that in a day or two.

Q. Is it your understanding from the communications between the State Department and Ambassador Herrick that he is confident that if this bill passes he will be able to secure this property?

Mr. Bliss. I understand from the statement in his telegram that it is very definite that he will have no difficulty in obtaining an option on the purchase of the property by the end of this month.

Q. He feels sure that he will, now that he has acquainted the owner or the owner's attorney with the fact that the United States is the purchaser?

of the one of the order of the order of the order of the owner.

Mr. Bliss. From what Mr. Herrick says in his telegram, I think he has some unwritten understanding with the lawyer of the owner.

Mr. Bliss. From what Mr. Herries says in mis telegram, I think he has some unwritten understanding with the lawyer of the owner.

Q. Can you tell the committee what is the amount of money that is being paid by the United States at the present time in the form of rental for the embassy?

Mr. Bliss, For the embassy the Department of State now pays an annual rental of 86,500 francs. That amounted when I was before the committee the other day—I have not computed that at the rate of exchange at the present time—the other day the rate was 6.920; the franc has gone off a little since then. That does not include the rent paid by the military attaché, I think, for his office. He has offices in the same building, but they are separate and I should say the rent was about 1,500 francs, roughly estimated.

Q. Does that include the amount paid for the accommodation of the passport office?

Mr. Bliss. The passport offices are 56,000 francs, or $4,480, and the consulate general, since you are asking that question, I will add, pays a rental of 18,000 francs. That is the rental made some time before the war for a period of years, so that it is a very advantageous rate.

Q. It would be very much greater at the present time?

Mr. Bliss. It would be greater now, and he would have to pay a much higher rate than ever to renew the lease of the present consulgeneral's office.

Q. The building area of the Condé property would be sufficient to house all of these offices?

Mr. Bliss. It might be necessary to have separate offices for accessibility more to commercial interests that appeal to the consul general; but part of the consulate general could undoubtedly be housed there.

Q. The question was directed to the area of the building.

Mr. Bliss. There is ample space to increase the building.

Mr. Bliss. Property owned by foreign governments for embassy pur-

Mr. BLISS. Property owned by foreign governments for embassy purposes is free from taxation in France, exempted from tax.

Q. The rental figures you gave—do they include rental for the ambassadors' homes?

Mr. BLISS. No. The ambassador's home is paid by him personally.

This bill will provide a home for the ambassador?

Q. My understanding of the telegrams that have passed officially between the State Department and Ambassador Herrick is that Ambassador Herrick feels assured and the State Department feels assured that if this bill passes Mr. Herrick will be able to secure this property within the $300,000 to be assigned?

Mr. Bliss. That is our understanding.

GEORGE T. TOBIN & SON.

Mr. BAYARD. From the Committee on Claims I report favorably without amendment the bill (S. 4255) for the relief of George T. Tobin & Son, and I submit a report (No. 1182) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I object.
The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection, and the bill will go to the calendar.

REGULATION OF IMMIGRATION.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. Mr. President, from the Committee on Immigration I report favorably with an amendment the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 82) providing for immigration to relieve an emergency caused by the shortage of labor in the Territory of Hawaii. I ask permission to file a written report at a subsequent time on the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Vermont for permission to file a report on the joint resolution later will be granted.

BEAR CREEK, MISS.

Mr. FLETCHER. From the Committee on Commerce I re-port back favorably with an amendment the bill (S. 4548) declaring Bear Creek in Humphreys, Leflore, and Sunflower Counties, Miss., to be a nonnavigable stream, and I submit a report (No. 1212) thereon. I call the attention of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison] to the report.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. For the information of the Senate the Secretary will read the bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Bear Creek in Humphreys, Leftore, and Sunflower Counties, in the State of Mississippi, be, and the same is hereby, declared to be a nonnavigable stream within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and jurisdiction over said creek is hereby declared to be vested in the State of Mississippl. SEC. 2. That the right of Congress to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, at the end of line 6, after the words "United States," to strike out the remainder of the section, as follows:

and jurisdiction over said creek is hereby declared to be vested in the State of Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DRAIN AT MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

Mr. FLETCHER. From the Committee on Commerce report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 13272) granting a license to the city of Miami Beach, Fla., to construct a drain for sewage across certain Government lands, and I submit a report (No. 1208) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present

consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of Miami Beach, Fla., a municipal corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, be, and it is hereby, granted a license and permit to lay, construct, and maintain a drain for sewage from its sewage disposal plant across the lands of the United States Government known as the Government Reservation and situated on the north side of the Government cut from Biscayne Bay to the Atlantic Ocean immediately south of the city of Miami Beach, at such location and in accordance with such plans as may be approved by the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, and by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTRACOASTAL CANAL, LOUISIANA AND TEXAS

Mr. RANSDELL. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably, with amendments, Senate bill 4211, to authorize a preliminary survey of the intracoastal canal in Louisiana and Texas, and ask for its immediate consideration. I will state that this bill passed the Senate in the river and harbor bill last September. It will not require any debate. It failed in conference.

Mr. KING. Let it go to the calendar.

Mr. RANSDELL. I hope the Senator will not insist on that. It is a very important measure. The project has been surveyed several times, and some additional work is needed, and we are very anxious to get it passed at this session. It will save the Government a great deal of expense and delay.

Mr. KING. Is it a project that the Government has entered upon?

Mr. RANSDELL. Yes, sir; the Government has already entered upon it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. KING. Let it be read, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Assistant Secretary read the bill (S. 4211) for the examination and survey of the intracoastal canal from the Mississippi River at or near New Orleans, La., to Corpus Christi. Tex., and, there being no objection, the Senate proceeded to its consideration. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, before the word "from," to strike out "canal" and insert "waterway," so as to make the bill read: Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause an examination and survey to be made of the intracoastal waterway from the Mississippi River at or near New Orleans, La., to Corpus Christi, Tex.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill authorizing preliminary examination and survey to be made of the intracoastal waterway in Louisiana and Texas."

RIO GRANDE RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably with amendments Senate bill 3874, granting the consent of Congress for a temporary toll bridge and a permanent bridge across the Rio Grande River, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present

consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after the words "to the," to strike out "San Felipe Bridge Co., of Del Rio, Tex.," and insert "Citizens Bridge Co., a corporation, its successors and assigns"; on line 5, before the word "bridge," to strike out "temporary toll"; and on line 6, after the word "thereto," to strike out "and a permanent bridge and approaches thereto," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Citizens Bridge Co., a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Rio Grande River, at or near the city of Del Rio, State of Texas, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting the consent of Congress for a bridge across the Rio Grande River."

NORTH AMERICAN DREDGING CO. AND OTHERS.

Mr. BAYARD. From the Committee on Claims I report back favorably a Senate resolution and ask to have it read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read. The Assistant Secretary. From the Committee on Claims the Senator from Delaware reports an original Senate resolution (S. Res. 447), in the following words:

Resolved, That the claims of the North American Dredging Co. (S. 3931) and the Wales Island Packing Co. (S. 2888), now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; and the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

Mr. BAYARD. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I shall object to that. There is one claim included in the resolution that ought not to be there. It has been rejected by the Government a dozen times, and I shall object.

Mr. BAYARD. I will answer the Senator by saying that those two claims have been before the Committee on Claims at this session, and we have not found the facts. This resolution merely refers them to the Court of Claims.

Mr. OVERMAN. But the Wales Island Packing Co. claim has been before the Court of Claims a dozen times, to my certain knowledge, and has been turned down every time, and there is a document here showing that the matter has been Therefore it ought not to go to the Court of Claims.

Mr. McNARY. I call for the regular order.
Mr. BAYARD. I will state to the Senator that as far as the record is concerned in the Committee on Claims, there is no evidence that it has been reported upon by the court.

Mr. OVERMAN. It has been reported upon by the Court of Claims a number of times.

Mr. McNARY. I call for the regular order. The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order has been called r. The resolution will go to the calendar.

WILLIAM SCHUYLER WOODRUFF.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. From the Committee on Military Affairs I report back favorably Senate bill 4500, authorizing the appointment of William Schuyler Woodruff as an Infantry officer, United States Army.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the nature of the bill which has just been reported is such as to justify me in asking unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. It is a measure of justice to an Army officer, and will give rise, I think, to no debate. I beg to ask for its immediate consideration by unanimous consent.

Mr. SMOOT. Let the bill be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the bill.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I do not want to object, but we shall not get to the calendar at all if these permissions are to be granted; and this morning was set aside for the calendar. I must insist that we have some chance to get at the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. LENROOT. I object.
The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

VALLEY TRANSFER BAILWAY CO.

Mr. WADSWORTH. From the Committee on Military Affairs I report back favorably a bill to which I invite the attention of the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Kelloga].

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the title

The Assistant Secretary. From the Committee on Military Affairs the Senator from New York reports back favorably the bill (H. R. 14082) to authorize the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct and operate a line of railway in and upon the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the State of Minnesota.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President, that is a local bill. It simply authorizes the Secretary of War to consent to the laying of a track, about 300 yards long, parallel with a track which is already on the reservation. I ask to have it considered by unanimous consent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I made the announcement that I should object to the consideration of the bill of the Senater from Pennsylvania. It would not be fair for me to act differently in this case. I shall have no objection to its being called up by unanimous consent later on, but we ought to get at the calendar, as we agreed to do.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that there is objection. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

PEEDEE RIVER BRIDGE, SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I should like to call the attention of the Senator to the fact that we were to have a morning hour for reports, not simply a call of the calendar. I have a report that I want to get in as soon as I can get recognition.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DIAL. On behalf of the Senator from New York [Mr. CALDER] I report back favorably from the Committee on Commerce a bridge bill in which my colleague and I are interested, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the title of the bill.

The Assistant Secretary. A bill (S. 4536) to authorize the building of a bridge across the Peedee River in South Carolina. The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I understand that these bridge bills go through as a matter of unanimous consent, but I shall have to insist that we get to the calendar. I shall not object later.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. DIAL There was an agreement that we were to have a morning hour to make regular reports. I want to say that Senators will not expedite business by not letting us pass a bridge bill when there is no objection to it. It will take only a moment, and I ask the Senator from Wisconsin to withdraw his objection. If we do not get it passed to-day, possibly we can not get it passed by the House, and it will delay the construction of the bridge for 12 months. It is a very important matter. It will take only a moment, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, objection was made. If I may direct the attention of the Chair to the language of the unanimous-consent agreement, the calendar was to be taken up for unobjected measures after morning business; but while morning business includes the presentation of reports, and so forth, it does not include their consideration, except by unanimous consent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It does not.

MAJ. RUSSELL B. PUTNAM.

Mr. PAGE. From the Committee on Naval Affairs I report back favorably House bill 11738, for the relief of Maj. Russell B. Putnam.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, a companion bill to that has been introduced in the Senate and is now on the calendar as Order of Business 1139, and is about to be reached. This is a House bill. It has already passed the House. The two bills are identical. The bill was introduced in the House by Representative BUTLER, of Pennsylvania. There has been a favorable report upon the bill which I introduced, and I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of this bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, we will reach that bill very shortly, and the Senator can then make his request. I object.

CONFIRMATION OF MRS. ALEXANDER S. CLA

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, as in open executive session, I ask unanimous consent, which I know every Senator will be glad to grant, to have laid before the Senate and confirmed the nomination of the widow of the late Senator Clay as postmaster at Marietta, Ga. He was one of the most useful Members who ever served from Georgia in this body, and had the respect and confidence of Members on both sides of the Cham-His devotion to duty and his hard work shortened his The first few years of his service in the Senate I was his private secretary and in a position to know of his splendid, unselfish work. After Senator Clay's death his widow was appointed postmaster, and President Harding, on the recommendation of the Postmaster General, has most generously just reappointed her. She made an excellent record, and recently stood at the head of the civil-service examinations. I ask unanimous consent that her nomination be confirmed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the nomination?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I am entirely in favor of that nomination, and think it should be confirmed, but I do not think we ought to undertake to do executive business at this time, in view of the unanimous-consent agreement,

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection.

TO LIMIT OR PROHIBIT CHILD LABOR,

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. From the Committee on the Judiciary report on Senate Joint Resolutions 200, 224, 232, 256, and 262, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States conferring or delegating power to the Congress to legislate in respect of child labor. The committee reports a joint resolution in favor of submitting such an amendment to the legislatures of the several States.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his inquiry. What is the regular order of business? Mr. ROBINSON.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Reports of committees, which are now being made.

Mr. ROBINSON. I call for the regular order.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is proceeding.

Mr. ROBINSON. I make the point of order that the regular order is not in progress. The Senator from California seems to be making some sort of a confidential speech.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Oh, no; the Senator from California is not making any confidential speech.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order has been called for. The joint resolution reported by the Senator from California will be read twice by its title and placed on the calendar.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 285) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States was read twice by its title and placed on the calendar.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. While I am on my feet I will ask unanimous consent that the report be printed in the RECORD in 8-point type.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I have no objection to the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The report is as follows:

(S. Rept. No. 1185.)

Mr. Shortenge, from the Committee on the Judiclary, submitted the following report to accompany S. J. Res. —:

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred Senate Joint Resolutions 200, 224, 232, 256, and 262, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States conferring on the Congress power to legislate in respect of child labor, reports in favor of submitting to the legislatures of the several States such an amendment.

Your committee considered these several joint resolutions, which, in the order of their introduction, are as follows:

[S. J. Res. 200, introduced by Senator Johnson, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session.]

Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States is hereby proposed, under and by virtue of which Article X shall read as hereinafter set forth, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid as part of the Constitution, to wit:

"ARTICLE X.

" STATE RIGHTS.

"Section 1. The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people: Provided, however, That the Congress shall have power to regulate or prohibit throughout the United States the employment of children under 18 years of age."

[S. J. Res. 224, introduced by Senator Townsend, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session.]

Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States:

"ARTICLE -

"The Congress shall have power to regulate the employment and the hours of labor and conditions of employment of persons under 18 years of age."

[S. J. Res. 232, introduced by Senator McCormick, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session.]

Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to child labor.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution:

"ARTICLE -

"The Congress shall have power to limit or prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age, and power is also reserved to the several States to limit or prohibit such labor in any way which does not lessen any limitation of such labor or the extent of any prohibition thereof by Congress, The power vested in the Congress by this article shall be additional to and not a limitation on the powers elsewhere vested in the Congress by the Constitution with respect to such labor."

[S. J. Res. 256, introduced by Senator Lodge, Sixty-seventh Congress, fourth session.]

Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein). That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States:

"ARTICLE -

"The Congress shall have power to prohibit or to regulate the hours of labor in mines, quarries, mills, canneries, workshops, factories, or manufacturing establishments of persons under 18 years of age and of women."

[S. J. Res. 262, introduced by Senator Walsh of Montana, Sixty-seventh Congress, fourth session.]

Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved by the Schate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution:

"ARTICLE -.

"The power of the Congress to regulate commerce among the several States shall be held to embrace the power to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of commodities being the products of any employer of child labor."

The committee thinks it will be helpful to all parties interested if we here carry into the record the first so-called child labor act of Congress, approved September 1, 1916.

[Public-No. 249-64th Congress.]

[H. R. 8234.]

An act to prevent interstate commerce in the products of child labor, and for other purposes.

"Be it enacted, etc., That no producer, manufacturer, or dealer shall ship or deliver for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce any article or commodity the product of any mine or quarry, situated in the United States, in which within 30 days prior to the time of the removal of such product therefrom children under the age of 16 years have been employed or permitted to work, or any article or commodity the product of any mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment, situated in the United States, in which within 30 days prior to the removal of such product therefrom children under the age of 14 years have been employed or permitted to work, or children between the ages of 14 years and 16 years have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day, or more than six days in any week, or after the hour of 7 o'clock p. m., or before the hour of 6 o'clock a. m.: Provided, That a prosecution and conviction of a defendant for the shipment or delivery for shipment of any article or commodity under the conditions herein prohibited shall be a bar to any further prosecution against the same defendant for shipments or deliveries for shipment of any such article or commodity before the beginning of said prosecution.

"Sec. 2. That the Attorney General, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Secretary of Labor shall constitute a board to make and publish from time to time uniform rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of this act.

"Sec. 3. That for the purpose of securing proper enforcement of this act the Secretary of Labor, or any person duly authorized by him, shall have authority to enter and inspect at any time mines, quarries, mills, canneries, workshops, factories, manufacturing establishments, and other places in which goods are produced or held for interstate commerce; and the Secretary of Labor shall have authority to employ such assistance for the purposes of this act as may from time to time be authorized by appropriation or other law.

"Sec. 4. That it shall be the duty of each district attorney to whom the Secretary of Laber shall report any violation of this act, or to whom any State factory or mining or quarry inspector, commissioner of labor, State medical inspector, or school-attendance officer, or any other person shall present satisfactory evidence of any such violation to cause appropriate proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted in the proper courts of the United States without delay for the enforcement of the penalties in such cases herein provided: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to bona fide boys' and girls' canning clubs recognized by the Agricultural Department of the several States and of the United States.

"Sec. 5. That any person who violates any of the provisions of section 1 of this act, or who refuses or obstructs entry or inspection authorized by section 3 of this act, shall for each offense prior to the first conviction of such person under the provisions of this act be punished by a fine of not more than $200, and shall for each offense subsequent to such conviction be punished by a fine of not more than $1.000, nor less than $100, or by imprisonment for not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That no dealer shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this act for a shipment, delivery for shipment, or transportation who establishes a guaranty issued by the person by whom the goods shipped or delivered for shipment or transportation were manufactured or produced, resident in the United States, to the effect that such goods were produced or manufactured in a mine or quarry in which within 30 days prior to their removal therefrom no children under the age of 16 years were employed or permitted to work, or in a mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment, in which within 30 days prior to the removal of such goods therefrom no children under the age of 14 years were employed or permitted to work, nor children between the ages of 14 years and 16 years employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day or more than six days in any week or after the hour of 7 o'clock postmeridian or before the hour of 6 o'clock antemeridian; and in such event, if the guaranty contains any false statement of a material fact, the guarantor shall be amenable to prosecution and to the fine or imprisonment provided by this section for violation of the provisions of this act. Said guaranty, to afford the protection above provided, shall contain the name and address of the person giving the same: And provided further, That no producer, manufacturer, or dealer shall be prosecuted under this act for the shipment, delivery for shipment, or transportation of a product of any mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment, if the only employment therein, within 30 days prior to the removal of such product therefrom, of a child under the age of 16 years has been that of a child as to whom the producer or manufacturer has in good faith procured, at the time of employing such child, and has since in good faith relied upon and kept on file a certificate, issued in such form, under such conditions, and by such persons as may be prescribed by the board, showing the child to be of such an age that the shipment, delivery for shipment, or transportation was not prohibited by this act. Any person who knowingly makes a false statement or presents false evidence in or in relation to any such certificate or application therefor shall be amenable to prosecution and to the fine or imprisonment provided by this section for violations of this act. In any State designated by the board, an employment certificate or other similar paper as to the age of the child, issued under the laws of that State and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, shall have the same force and effect as a certificate herein provided for.

SEC. 6. That the word 'person' as used in this act shall be construed to include any individual or corporation or the members of any partnership or other unincorporated association. The term 'ship or deliver for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce' as used in this act means to transport or to ship or deliver for shipment from any State or Territory or the District of Columbia to or through any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia or to any foreign country; and in the case of a dealer means only to transport or to ship or deliver for shipment from the State, Territory, or district of manufacture or production.

SEC. 7. That this act shall take effect from and after one year from the date of its passage.
"Approved, September 1, 1916."

The foregoing act was held to be unconstitutional in the case of Hammer v. Dagenhart.

Hammer, United States Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina, v. Dagenhart et al. Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Western District of North Carolina. No. 704. Argued April 15, 16, 1918. Decided June 3, 1918.

"The act of September 1, 1916 (ch. 432, 39 Stat. 675), prohibits transportation in interstate commerce of goods made at a factory in which, within 30 days prior to their removal therefrom, children under the age of 14 years have been employed or permitted to work, or children between the ages of 14 and 16 years have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day or more than six days in any week, or after the hour of 7 p. m. or before the hourt of 6 a. m. Held, unconstitutional as exceeding the commerce power of Congress and invading the powers reserved to the States.

The power to regulate interstate commerce is the power to prescribe the rule by which the commerce is to be governed; in other words, to control the means by which it is carried on.

"The court has never sustained a right to exclude save in cases where the character of the particular thing excluded was such as to bring them peculiarly within the governmental authority of the State or Nation and render their exclusion, in effect, but a regulation of interstate transportation necessary to prevent the accomplishment through that means of the evils inherent in them.

The manufacture of goods is not commerce, nor do the facts that they are intended for and are afterwards shipped in interstate commerce make their production a part of that commerce subject to the control of Congress.

"The power to regulate interstate commerce was not in-tended as a means of enabling Congress to equalize the eco-nomic conditions in the States for the prevention of unfair competition among them by forbidding the interstate transportation of goods made under conditions which Congress deems productive of unfairness.

"It was not intended as an authority to Congress to control the States in the exercise of their police power over local trade and manufacture always existing and expressly reserved to them by the tenth amendment.

"Affirmed."

"Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court.

"A bill was filed in the United States District Court for the Western District of North Carolina by a father in his own behalf and as next friend of his two minor sons, one under the age of 14 years and the other between the ages of 14 and 16 years, employees in a cotton mill at Charlotte, N. C., to enjoin the enforcement of the act of Congress intended to prevent interstate commerce in the products of child labor.

of September 1, 1916, ch. 432, 39 Stat. 675.)

"The district court held the act unconstitutional and entered a decree enjoining its enforcement. This appeal brings the case here. The first section of the act is in the margin. no producer, manufacturer, or dealer shall ship or deliver for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce any article or commodity the product of any mine or quarry, situated in the United States, in which within 30 days prior to the time of the removal of such product therefrom children under the age of 16 years have been employed or permitted to work, or any article or commodity the product of any mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment, situated in the United States, in which within 30 days prior to the removal of such product therefrom children under the age of 14 years have been employed or permitted to work, or children between the ages of 14 years and 16 years have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day, or more than six days in any week, or after the hour of 7 o'clock postmeridian, or before the hour of 6 o'clock antemeridian.)

"Other sections of the act contain provisions for its enforcement and prescribe penalties for its violation.

"The attack upon the act rests upon three propositions: First. It is not a regulation of interstate and foreign commerce. Second. It contravenes the tenth amendment to the Constitution. Third. It conflicts with the fifth amendment to the Constitution.

"The controlling question for decision is: Is it within the authority of Congress in regulating commerce among the States to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of manufactured goods the product of a factory in which, within 30 days prior to their removal therefrom, children under the age of 14 years have been employed or permitted to work, or children between the ages of 14 and 16 years have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day, or more than six days in any week, or after the hour of 7 o'clock p. m. or before the hour of 6 o'clock a. m.?

"The power essential to the passage of this act, the Government contends, is found in the commerce clause of the Constitution, which authorizes Congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States.

"In Gibbons v. Ogden (9 Wheat. 1) Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for this court and defining the extent and nature of the commerce power, said: 'It is the power to regulate—that is, to prescribe the rule by which commerce is to be governed.' In other words, the power is one to control the means by which commerce is carried on, which is directly the contrary of the commerce is carried on, which is directly the contrary of the assumed right to forbid commerce from moving and thus destroy it as to particular commodities. But it is insisted that adjudged cases in this court establish the doctrine that the power to regulate given to Congress incidentally includes the authority to prohibit the movement of ordinary commodities, and therefore that the subject is not open for discussion. The cases demonstrate the contrary. They rest upon the character of the particular subjects dealt with, and the fact that the scope of governmental authority, State or National, possessed over them is such that the authority to prohibit is as to them but the exertion of power to regulate.

"The first of these cases is Champion v. Ames (188 U. S. 321), the so-called Lottery case, in which it was held that Congress might pass a law having the effect to keep the channels of commerce free from use in the transportation of tickets used in the promotion of lottery schemes. In Hipolite Egg Co. v. United States (220 U.S. 45) this court sustained the power of Congress to pass the pure food and drug act, which prohibited the introduction into the States by means of interstate commerce of impure foods and drugs. In Hoke v. United States (227 U. S. 308) this court sustained the constitutionality of the so-called white slave traffic act, whereby the transportation of a woman in interstate commerce for the purpose of prostitution was for-bidden. In that case we said, having reference to the authority of Congress, under the regulatory power, to protect the channels of interstate commerce;

"'If the facility of interstate transportation can be taken away from the demoralization of lotteries, the debasement of obscene literature, the contagion of diseased cattle or persons. the impurity of food and drugs, the like facility can be taken away from the systematic enticement to and the enslavement in prostitution and debauchery of women and, more insistently, of

"In Caminetti v. United States (242 U. S. 470) we held that Congress might prohibit the transportation of women in interstate commerce for the purposes of debauchery and kindred pur-In Clark Distilling Co. v. Western Maryland Railway Co. (242 U. S. 311) the power of Congress over the transportation of intoxicating liquors was sustained. In the course of the opinion it was said:

"'The power conferred is to regulate, and the very terms of the grant would seem to repel the contention that only prohibition of movement in interstate commerce was embraced. And the cogency of this is manifest, since if the doctrine were applied to those manifold and important subjects of interstate commerce as to which Congress from the beginning has regulated, not prohibited, the existence of government under the Constitution would be no longer possible.'

"And, concluding the discussion which sustained the authority of the Government to prohibit the transportation of liquor in interstate commerce, the court said:

the exceptional nature of the subject here regulated is the basis upon which the exceptional power exerted must rest and affords no ground for any fear that such power may be constitutionally extended to things which it may not, consistently with the guaranties of the Constitution, embrace.

"In each of these instances, the use of interstate transportation was necessary to the accomplishment of harmful results. In other words, although the power over interstate transportation was to regulate, that could only be accomplished by prohibiting the use of the facilities of interstate commerce to effect the evil intended.

"This element is wanting in the present case. The thing intended to be accomplished by this statute is the denial of the facilities of interstate commerce to those manufacturers in the States who employ children within the prohibited ages. The act in its effect does not regulate transportation among the States, but aims to standardize the ages at which children may be employed in mining and manufacturing within the States. The goods shipped are of themselves harmless. The act permits them to be freely shipped after 30 days from the time of their removal from the factory. When offered for shipment, and before transportation begins, the labor of their production is over, and the mere fact that they were intended for interstate commerce transportation does not make their products subject to Federal control under the commerce power.

Commerce 'consists of intercourse and traffic includes the transportation of persons and property, as well as the purchase, sale, and exchange of commodities.' The making of goods and the mining of coal are not commerce, nor does the fact that these things are to be afterwards shipped or used in interstate commerce make their production a part thereof. (Delaware, Lackawanna & Western R. R. Co. v. Yukonis, 238

U. S. 439.)

"Over interstate transportation, or its incidents, the regulatory power of Congress is ample, but the production of articles intended for interstate commerce is a matter of local

'When the commerce begins is determined, not by the character of the commodity, nor by the intention of the owner to transfer it to another State for sale, nor by his preparation of it for transportation, but by its actual delivery to a common carrier for transportation, or the actual commencement of its transfer to another State.' (Mr. Justice Jackson in In re Green, 52 Fed. Rep. 113.) This principle has been recognized often in this court. (Coe v. Errol. 116 U. S. 517; Bacon v. Illinois, 227 U. S. 504, and cases cited.) If it were otherwise, all manufacture intended for interstate shipment would be brought under Federal control to the practical exclusion of the authority of the States, a result certainly not contemplated by the framers of the Constitution when they vested in Congre the authority to regulate commerce among the States. (Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 21.)

"It is further contended that the authority of Congress may be exerted to control interstate commerce in the shipment of child-made goods because of the effect of the circulation of such goods in other States where the evil of this class of labor has been recognized by local legislation and the right to thus employ child labor has been more rigorously restrained than in the State of production. In other words, that the unfair competition, thus engendered, may be controlled by closing the channels of interstate commerce to manufacturers in those States where the local laws do not meet what Congress deems to be the more just standard of other States.

"There is no power vested in Congress to require the States to exercise their police power so as to prevent possible unfair competition. Many causes may cooperate to give one State, by reason of local laws or conditions, an economic advantage over others. The commerce clause was not intended to give to Congress a general authority to equalize such conditions. In some of the States laws have been passed fixing minimum wages for women, in others the local law regulates the hours of labor of women in various employments. Business done in such States may be at an economic disadvantage when compared with States which have no such regulations; surely, this fact does not give Congress the power to deny transportation in interstate commerce to those who carry on business where the hours of labor and the rate of compensation for women have not been fixed by a standard in use in other States and approved by Con-

"The grant of power to Congress over the subject of interstate commerce was to enable it to regulate such commerce, and not to give it authority to control the States in their exercise of the police power over local trade and manufacture.

"The grant of authority over a purely Federal matter was not intended to destroy the local power always existing and carefully reserved to the States in the tenth amendment to the Constitution.

"Police regulations relating to the internal trade and affairs of the States have been uniformly recognized as within such control. 'This,' said this court in United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 45, 'has been so frequently declared by this court, results so obviously from the terms of the Constitution, and has been so fully explained and supported on former occasions, that we think it unnecessary to enter again upon the discussion. See Keller v. United States, 213 U. S. 138, 144, 145, 146. Cooley's Constitutional Limitations, 7th ed., p. 11.

"In the judgment which established the broad power of Congress over interstate commerce, Chief Justice Marshall said (9 Wheat. 203): 'They (inspection laws) act upon the subject before it becomes an article of foreign commerce, or of commerce among the States, and prepare it for that purpose. They form a portion of that immense mass of legislation, which embraces everything within the territory of a State, not sur-rendered to the General Government; all which can be most advantageously exercised by the States themselves. Inspection laws, quarantine laws, health laws of every description, as well as laws for regulating the internal commerce of a State, and those which respect turnpike roads, ferries, etc., are component parts of this mass.

"And in Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 629, the same great judge said:

"'That the framers of the Constitution did not intend to restrain the States in the regulation of their civil institutions, adopted for internal government, and that the instrument they have given us is not to be so construed may be admitted.'

"That there should be limitations upon the right to employ children in mines and factories in the interest of their own and the public welfare all will admit. That such employment is generally deemed to require regulation is shown by the fact that the brief of counsel states that every State in the Union has a law upon the subject limiting the right to thus employ children. In North Carolina, the State wherein is located the factory in which the employment was had in the present case, no child under 12 years of age is permitted to work.

"It may be desirable that such laws be uniform, but our Federal Government is one of enumerated powers. 'This principle,' declared Chief Justice Marshall, in McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 'is universally admitted.'

"A statute must be judged by its natural and reasonable effect. Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 33, 34. The control by Congress over interstate commerce can not authorize the exercise of authority not entrusted to it by the Constitution. Pipe Line cases, 234 U.S. 548, 560. The maintenance of the authority of the States over matters purely local is as essential to the preservation of our institutions as is the conservation of the supremacy of the Federal power in all matters entrusted to the Nation by the Federal Constitution.

"In interpreting the Constitution it must never be forgotten that the Nation is made up of States to which are entrusted the powers of local government. And to them and to the people the powers not expressly delegated to the National Government (Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. 71, 76.) are reserved. power of the States to regulate their purely internal affairs by such laws as seem wise to the local authority is inherent and has never been surrendered to the General Government. York v. Miln, 11 Pet. 102, 139; Slaughter House cases, 16 Wall. 36, 63; Kidd v. Pearson, supra.) To sustain this statute would not be in our judgment a recognition of the lawful exertion of congressional authority over interstate commerce, but would sanction an invasion by the Federal power of the control of a matter purely local in its character and over which no authority has been delegated to Congress in conferring the power to regulate commerce among the States.

We have neither authority nor disposition to question the motives of Congress in enacting this legislation. The purposes intended must be attained consistently with constitutional limitations and not by an invasion of the powers of the States. This court has no more important function than that which devolves upon it the obligation to preserve inviolate the constitutional limitations upon the exercise of authority, Federal and State, to the end that each may continue to discharge harmoniously with the other the duties entrusted to it by the Con-

"In our view the necessary effect of this act is, by means of a prohibition against the movement in interstate commerce of ordinary commercial commodities, to regulate the hours of labor of children in factories and mines within the States, a purely State authority. Thus the act in a twofold sense is repugnant to the Constitution. It not only transcends the authority delegated to Congress over commerce, but also exerts a power as to a purely local matter to which the Federal authority does not The far-reaching result of upholding the act can not be more plainly indicated than by pointing out that if Congress can thus regulate matters intrusted to local authority by prohibition of the movement of commodities in interstate commerce, all freedom of commerce will be at an end and the power of the States over local matters may be eliminated, and thus our system of government be practically destroyed.

"For these reasons we hold that this law exceeds the constitutional authority of Congress. It follows that the decree of the district court must be "Affirmed."

"Mr. Justice Holmes, dissenting.

"The single question in this case is whether Congress has power to prohibit the shipment in interstate or foreign commerce of any product of a cotton-mill situation in the United States in which within 30 days before the removal of the product children under 14 have been employed, or children between 14 and 16 have been employed more than eight hours in a day or more than six days in any week, or between 7 in the evening and 6 in the morning. The objection urged against the power is that the States have exclusive control over their methods of production and that Congress can not meddle with them, and taking the proposition in the sense of direct intermeddling I agree to it and suppose that no one denies it. But if an act is within the powers specifically conferred upon Congress it seems to me that it is not made any less constitutional because of the indirect effects that it may have, however obvious it may be that it will have those effects, and that we are not at liberty upon such grounds to hold it void.

"The first step in my argument is to make plain what no one is likely to dispute—that the statute in question is within the power expressly given to Congress if considered only as to its immediate effects and that if invalid it is so only upon some collateral ground. The statute confines itself to prohibiting the carriage of certain goods in interstate or foreign commerce. Congress is given power to regulate such commerce in unqualified terms. It would not be argued to-day that the power to regulate does not include the power to prohibit. Regulation means the prohibition of something, and when interstate commerce is the matter to be regulated I can not doubt that the regulation may prohibit any part of such commerce that Congress sees fit to forbid. At all events it is established by the Lottery case and others that have followed it that a law is not beyond the regulative power of Congress merely because it prohibits certain transportation out and out. Champion v. Ames (188 U. S. 321, 355, 359, et seq.) So I repeat that this statute in its immediate operation is clearly within the Congress's constitutional power.

"The question, then, is narrowed to whether the exercise of its otherwise constitutional power by Congress can be pronounced unconstitutional because of its possible reaction upon the conduct of the States in a matter upon which I have admitted that they are free from direct control. I should have thought that that matter had been disposed of so fully as to leave no room for doubt. I should have thought that the most conspicuous decisions of this court had made it clear that the power to regulate commerce and other constitutional powers could not be cut down or qualified by the fact that it might interfere with the carrying out of the domestic policy of any

"The manufacture of oleomargarine is as much a matter of State regulation as the manufacture of cotton cloth. Congress levied a tax upon the compound when colored so as to resemble butter that was so great as obviously to prohibit the manufacture and sale. In a very elaborate discussion the present Chief Justice excluded any inquiry into the purpose of an act which apart from that purpose was within the power of Congress, McCray v. United States (195 U. S. 27). As to foreign commerce see Weber v. Freed (239 U. S. 325, 329); Brolan v. United States (236 U. S. 216, 217); Buttfield v. Stranahan (192 U. S. 470). Fifty years ago a tax on State banks, the obvious purpose and actual effect of which was to drive them, or at least their circulation, out of existence, was sustained, although the result was one that Congress had no constitutional power to require. The court made short work of the argument as to the purpose of the act. 'The judicial can not prescribe to the legislative department of the Government limitations upon the exercise of its acknowledged powers.' (Venzie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533.) So it well might have been argued that the corporation tax was intended under the guise of a revenue measure to secure a control not otherwise belonging to Congress, but the tax was sustained, and the objection so far as noticed was disposed of by citing McCray v. United States. (Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U. S. 107.) And to come to cases upon interstate commerce, notwithstanding United States r. E. C. Knight Co. (156 U. S. 1), the Sherman Act has been made an instrument for breaking up of combinations in restraint of trade and monopolies, using the power to regulate commerce as a foothold, but not preceding because that commerce was the end actually in mind. The objection that the control of the States over production was interfered with was urged again and again but always in vain. Standard Oil Co. v. United States (221 U. S. 1, 68, 69). United States v. American Tobacco Co. (221 U. S. 106, 184). Hoke v. United States (227 U. S. 308, 321, 322). See finally and especially Seven Cases of Eckman's Alterative v. United States (239 U. S. 510, 514, 515).
"The pure food and drug act which was sustained in Hipolite

Egg Co. v. United States (220 U. S. 45), with the intimation that 'no trade can be carried on between the States to which it-the power of Congress to regulate commerce-does not extend,' 57, applies not merely to articles that the changing opinions of the time condemn as intrinsically harmful but to others innocent in themselves, simply on the ground that the order for them was induced by a preliminary fraud. Weeks v. United States (245 U. S. 618). It does not matter whether the supposed evil precedes or follows the transportation. It is enough that in the opinion of Congress the transportation encourages the evil. I may add that in the cases on the so-called white slave act it was established that the means adopted by Congress as convenient to the exercise of its power might have the character of police regulations. Hoke v. United States (227 U. S. 308, 323), Caminetti v. United States (242 U. S. 470, 492). In Clark Distilling Co. v. Western Maryland Railway Co. (242 U. S. 322, 328), Leisy v. Hardin (135 U. S. 100, 108) is quoted with seeming approval to the effect that 'a subject matter which has been confided exclusively to Congress by the Constitution is not within the jurisdiction of the police power of the State, unless placed there by congressional action.' reason for that proposition not applying here.

"The notion that prohibition is any less prohibition when applied to things now thought evil I do not understand. But if there is any matter upon which civilized countries have agreed—far more unanimously than they have with regard to intoxicants and some other matters over which this country is now emotionally aroused-it is the evil of premature and excessive child labor. I should have thought that if we were to introduce our own moral conceptions where, in my opinion, they do not belong, this was preeminently a case for upholding the exercise of all its powers by the United States.

"But I had thought that the propriety of the exercise of a power admitted to exist in some cases was for the consideration of Congress alone and that this court always had disavowed the right to intrude its judgment upon questions of policy and morals. It is not for this court to pronounce when prohibition is necessary to regulation, if it ever may be necessary; to say that it is permissible as against strong drink, but not as against the product of ruined lives.

"The act does not meddle with anything belonging to the States. They may regulate their internal affairs and their domestic commerce as they like. But when they seek to send their products across the State line they are no longer within their rights. If there were no Constitution and no Congress. their power to cross the line would depend upon their neighbors. Under the Constitution such commerce belongs not to the States but to Congress to regulate. It may carry out its views of public policy, whatever indirect effect they may have upon the activities of the States. Instead of being encountered by a prohibitive tariff at her boundaries, the State encounters the public policy of the United States which it is for Congress to express. The public policy of the United States is shaped with a view to the benefit of the Nation as a whole. If, as has been the case within the memory of men still living, a State should take a different view of the propriety of sustaining a lottery from that which generally prevails, I can not believe that the fact would require a different decision from that reached in Champion v. Ames. Yet in that case it would be said with quite as much force as in this that Congress was attempting to in-termeddle with the State's domestic affairs. The national welfare as understood by Congress may require a different attitude within its sphere from that of some self-seeking State. It seems to me entirely constitutional for Congress to enforce its understanding by all the means at its command.

"Mr. Justice McKenna, Mr. Justice Brandeis, and Mr. Justice Clarke concur in this opinion."

The act of September 1, 1916, having been declared unconstitutional, the Congress passed another so-called child labor law, approved February 24, 1919, which act reads as follows:

[Public-No. 254-65th Cong.]

[H. R. 12863.]

An act to provide revenue, and for other purposes.

"Be it enacted, etc .--

TITLE XII .- TAX ON EMPLOYMENT OF CHILD LABOR.

"Sec. 1200. That every person (other than a bona fide boys or girls' canning club recognized by the Agricultural Department of a State and of the United States) operating (a) any mine or quarry situated in the United States in which children under the age of 16 years have been employed or permitted to work during any portion of the taxable year; or (b) any mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment situated in the United States in which children under the age of 14 years have been employed or permitted to work, or children between the ages of 14 and 16 have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day or more than six days in any week, or after the hour of 7 o'clock p. m., or before the hour of 6 o'clock a. m., during any portion of the taxable year, shall pay for each taxable year, in addition to all other taxes imposed by law, an excise tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the entire net profits received or accrued for such year from the sale or disposition of the product of such mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment.

"Sec. 1201. That in computing net profits under the provisions of this title, for the purpose of the tax there shall be allowed as deductions from the gross amount received or accrued for the taxable year from the sale or disposition of such products manufactured within the United States the fol-

"(a) The cost of raw materials entering into the production; "(b) Running expenses, including rentals, cost of repairs, and maintenance, heat, power, insurance, management, and a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensations for personal services actually rendered, and for depreciation;

(c) Interest paid within the taxable year on debts or loans contracted to meet the needs of the business, and the proceeds of which have been actually used to meet such needs;

"(d) Taxes of all kinds paid during the taxable year with respect to the business or property relating to the production;

"(e) Losses actually sustained within the taxable year in connection with the business of producing such products, including losses from fire, flood, storm, or other casualties, and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

"Sec. 1202. That if any such person during any taxable year or part thereof, whether under any agreement, arrangement, or understanding, or otherwise, sells or disposes of any product of such mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment at less than the fair market price obtainable therefor either (a) in such manner as directly or indirectly to benefit such person or any person directly or indirectly interested in the business of such person; or (b) with intent to cause such benefit; the gross amount received or accrued for such year or part thereof from the sale or disposition of such product shall be taken to be the amount which would have been received or accrued from the sale or disposition of such product if sold at the fair market price.

"SEC. 1203. (a) That no person subject to the provisions of this title shall be liable for the tax herein imposed if the only employment or permission to work which but for this section would subject him to the tax, has been of a child as to whom such person has in good faith procured at the time of employing such child or permitting him to work, and has since in good faith relied upon and kept on file a certificate, issued in such form, under such conditions and by such persons as may be prescribed by a board consisting of the Secretary, the commissioner, and the Secretary of Labor, showing the child to be of such age as not to subject such person to the tax imposed by this title. Any person who knowingly makes a false statement or presents false evidence in or in relation to any such certificate or application therefor shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000. or by imprisonment for not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court

"In any State designated by such board an employment certificate or other similar paper as to the age of the child, issued under the laws of that State, and not inconsistent with the provisions of this title, shall have the same force and effect as a certificate herein provided for.

"(b) The tax imposed by this title shall not be imposed in the case of any person who proves to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the only employment or permission to work, which but for this section would subject him to the tax, has been of a child employed or permitted to work under a mistake of fact as to the age of such child, and without intention to evade the law.

SEC. 1204. That on or before the first day of the third month following the close of each taxable year, a true and accurate return under oath shall be made by each person subject to the provisions of this title to the collector for the district in which such person has his principal office or place of business, in such form as the commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe, setting forth specifically the gross amount of income received or accrued during such year from the sale or disposition of the product of any mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment in which children have been employed subjecting him to the tax imposed by this title, and from the total thereof deducting the aggregate items of allowance authorized by this title, and such other particulars as to the gross receipts and items of allowance as the commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may require.

"SEC. 1205. That all such returns shall be transmitted forthwith by the collector to the commissioner, who shall, as soon as practicable, assess the tax found due and notify the person making such return of the amount of tax for which such person is liable, and such person shall pay the tax to the collector on or before 30 days from the date of such notice.

"SEC. 1206. That for the purposes of this act the commissioner, or any other person duly authorized by him, shall have authority to enter and inspect at any time any mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment. The Secretary of Labor, or any person duly authorized by him, shall, for the purpose of complying with a request of the commissioner to make such an inspection, have like authority, and shall make report to the commissioner of inspections made under such authority in such form as may be prescribed by the commissioner with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

"Any person who refuses or obstructs entry or inspection authorized by this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment.

"SEC. 1207. That as used in this title the term 'taxable year' shall have the same meaning as provided for the purposes of income tax in section 200. The first taxable year for the purposes of this title shall be the period between 60 days after the passage of this act and December 31, 1919, both inclusive, or as defined in section 200) of the taxpayer.

"Approved 6.55 p. m., February 24, 1919."

This latter act met the same fate as its predecessor—it was declared unconstitutional in the case of Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co.

J. W. Bailey and J. W. Bailey, collector of internal revenue for the district of North Carolina, plaintiff in error, v. Drexel Furniture Co. Internal revenue—Power of Congress—Child labor law-Reserved rights of States.

"The child labor tax law of February 24, 1919, imposing a tax of 10 per cent of the net profits of the year upon an employer who knowingly has employed, during any portion of the taxable year, a child within the age limits therein prescribed, is not a valid exercise by Congress of its powers of taxation under United States Constitution, article 1, section 8, but is an unconstitutional regulation by the use of the so-called tax as a penalty of the employment of child labor in the States, which, under United States Constitution, tenth amendment, is exclusively a State function. (For other cases, see Internal Revenue, I. b; States, IV in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.)

(No. 657.)

Argued March 7 and 8, 1922. Decided May 15, 1922.

"In error to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of North Carolina to review a judgment against a collector of internal revenue for the recovery back of a tax imposed under the child labor tax act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 276 Fed. 452. "The facts are stated in the opinion.

"Solicitor General Beck and special assistant to the Attorney General Reeder for plaintiff in error.

"Messrs. William P. Bynum, Junius Parker, William M. Hendren, Clement Manly, and John N. Wilson for defendant in

"Mr. Chief Justice Taft delivered the opinion of the court "This case presents the question of the constitutional validity of the child labor tax law. The plaintiff below, the Drexel Furniture Co., is engaged in the manufacture of furniture in the western district of North Carolina. On September 20, 1921, it received a notice from Bailey, United States collector of internal revenue for the district, that it had been assessed $6,312.79 for having, during the taxable year 1919, employed and permitted to work in its factory a boy under 14 years of age, thus incurring the tax of 10 per cent on its net profits for that year. The company paid the tax under protest, and after rejection of its claim for a refund brought this suit. murrer to an amended complaint, judgment was entered for the company against the collector for the full amount with interest. The writ of error is prosecuted by the collector direct from the district court under section 238 of the Judicial Code,

"The child labor tax law is Title No. 12 of an act entitled "An act to provide revenue, and for other purposes," approved February 24, 1919 (40 Stat. L. 1057, 11138, ch. 18, Comp. Stat. sec. 63364a). The heading of the title is "Tax on employment of It begins with section 1200 and includes eight sections. Section 1200 is as follows:

""SEC. 1200. That every person (other than a bona fide boys or girls' canning club recognized by the Agricultural Department of a State and of the United States) operating (a) any mine or quarry situated in the United States in which children under the age of 16 years have been employed or permitted to work during any portion of the taxable year; or (b) any mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment situated in the United States in which children under the age of 14 years have been employed or permitted to work, or children between the ages of 14 and 16 have been employed or permitted to work more than eight hours in any day or more than six days in any week, or after the hour of 7 o'clock postmeridian, or before the hour of 6 o'clock antemeridian, during any portion of the taxable year, shall pay for each taxable year, in addition to all other taxes imposed by law, an excise tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the entire net profits received or accrued for such year from the sale or disposition of the product of such mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment.'

Section 1203 relieves from liability to the tax anyone who employs a child, believing him to be of proper age, relying on a certificate to this effect issued by persons prescribed by a board consisting of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and the Secretary of Labor, or issued by State authorities. The section also provides in paragraph (b) that 'the tax imposed by this title shall not be imposed in the case of any person who proves to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the only employment or permission to work, which but for this section would subject him to the tax, has been of a child employed or permitted to work under a mistake of fact as to the age of such child and without intention to evade the

"Section 1206 gives authority to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or any other person authorized by him 'to enter and inspect at any time any mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment. The Secretary of Labor or any person whom he authorizes is given like authority in order to comply with a request of the commissioner to make such inspection and report the same. Any person who refuses entry or obstructs inspection is made subject to fine or imprisonment, or both.

"The law is attacked on the ground that it is a regulation of the employment of child labor in the States-an exclusive State function under the Federal Constitution and within the reservations of the tenth amendment. It is defended on the ground that it is a mere excise tax levied by the Congress of the United States under its broad power of taxation conferred by section 8, Article I, of the Federal Constitution. We must construe the law and interpret the intent and meaning of Congress from the language of the act. The words are to be given their ordinary meaning unless the context shows that they are differently used. Does this law impose a tax with only that incidental restraint and regulation which a tax must inevitably involve? Or does it regulate by the use of the so-called tax as a penalty? If a tax, it is clearly an excise. If it were an excise on a commodity or other thing of value, we might not be permitted, under previous decisions of this court, to infer, solely from its heavy burden, that the act intends a prohibition instead of a tax. But this act is more. It provides a heavy exaction for a departure from a detailed and specified course of conduct in business.

"That course of business is that employers shall employ in mines and quarries children of an age greater than 16 years; in mills and factories, children of an age greater than 14 years; and shall prevent children of less than 16 years; in mills and factories, children of an age greater than 14 years; and shall prevent children of less than 16 years in mills and factories from working more than eight hours a day or six days in a week. If an employer departs from this prescribed course of business, he is to pay to the Government one-tenth of his entire net income in the business for a full year. The amount is not to be proportioned in any degree to the extent or frequency of the departures, but is to be paid by the employer in full measure whether he employs 500 children for a year or employs only one for a day. Moreover, if he does not know the child is within the named age limit, he is to pay; that is to say, it is only where he knowingly departs from the prescribed course that payment is to be exacted. Scienters are associated with penal-ties, not with taxes. The employer's factory is to be subject to inspection at any time, not only by the taxing officers of the Treasury, the department normally charged with the collection of taxes, but also by the Secretary of Labor and his subordinates, whose normal function is the advancement and protection of the welfare of the workers. In the light of these features of the act, a court must be blind not to see that the so-called tax is imposed to stop the employment of children within the age limits prescribed. Its prohibitory and regulatory effect and purpose are palpable. All others can see and understand this. limits prescribed. How can we properly shut our minds to it?

"It is the high duty and function of this court in cases regularly brought to its bar to decline to recognize or enforce seeming laws of Congress dealing with subjects not intrusted to Congress, but left or committed by the supreme law of the land to the control of the States. We can not avoid the duty, even though it requires us to refuse to give effect to legislation designed to promote the highest good. The good sought in unconstitutional legislation is an insidious feature, because it leads citizens and legislators of good purpose to promote it without thought of the serious breach it will make in the ark of our covenant or the harm which will come from breaking down recognized standards. In the maintenance of local self-government, on the one hand, and the national power, on the other, our country has been able to endure and prosper for near a century and a half.

Out of a proper respect for the acts of a coordinate branch of the Government, this court has gone far to sustain taxing acts as such, even though there has been ground for suspecting, from the weight of the tax, it was intended to destroy ject. But in the act before us the presumption of validity can not prevail, because the proof of the contrary is found on the very face of its provisions. Grant the validity of this law and all that Congress would need to do hereafter in seeking to take over to its control any one of the great number of subjects of public interest, jurisdiction of which the States have never parted with, and which are reserved to them by the nineteenth amendment, would be to enact a detailed measure of complete regulation of the subject and enforce it by a so-called tax upon departures from it. To give such magic to the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the States.

"The difference between a tax and a penalty is sometimes difficult to define, and yet the consequences of the distinction in the required method of their collection often are important.

Where the sovereign enacting the law has power to impose both tax and penalty, the difference between revenue production and mere regulation may be immaterial; but not so when one sovereign can impose a tax only and the power of regulation rests Taxes are occasionally imposed in the discretion of the legislature on proper subjects with the primary motive of obtaining revenue from them and with the incidental motive of discouraging them by making their continuance onerous. do not lose their character as taxes because of the incidental motive. But there comes a time in the extension of the penalizing features of the so-called tax when it loses its character as such and becomes a mere penalty, with the characteristics of regulation and punishment. Such is the case in the law before us. Although Congress does not invalidate the contract of employment or expressly declare that the employment within the mentioned ages is illegal, it does exhibit its intent practically to achieve the latter result by adopting the criteria of wrongdoing and imposing its principal consequence on those who transgress its standard.

"The case before us can not be distinguished from that of Hammer v. Dagenhart (247 U. S. 251, 62 L. ed. 1101, 3 A. L. R. 649, 38 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 624). Congress there enacted a law to prohibit transportation in interstate commerce of goods made at a factory in which there was employment of children within the same ages and for the same number of hours a day and days in a week as are penalized by the act in this case. This court held the law in that case to be void. It said:

case. This court held the law in that case to be void. It said.

"'In our view, the necessary effect of this act is, by means of a prohibition against the movement in interstate commerce of ordinary commercial commodities, to regulate the hours of labor of children in factories and mines within the States—purely State authority."

"In the case at the bar Congress, in the name of a tax which on the face of the act is a penalty, seeks to do the same thing, and the effort must be equally futile.

The analogy of the Dagenhart case is clear. The congressional power over interstate commerce is, within its proper scope, just as complete and unlimited as the congressional power to tax, and the legislative motive in its exercise is just as free from judicial suspicion and inquiry. Yet when Congress threat-ened to stop interstate commerce in ordinary and necessary commodities, unobjectionable as subjects of transportation, and to deny the same to the people of a State, in order to coerce them into compliance with Congress's regulation of State concerns, the court said this was not, in fact, regulation of intercommerce but rather that of State concerns and was invalid. So here the so-called tax is a penalty to coerce people of a State to act as Congress wishes them to act in respect of a matter completely the business of the State government under the Federal Constitution. This case requires, as did the Dagenhart case, the application of the principle announced by Chief Justice Marshall in McCulloch v. Maryland (4 Wheat, 316, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605) in a much-quoted passage:

"Should Congress in the execution of its powers adopt measures which are prohibited by the Constitution, or should Congress under the pretext of executing its powers pass laws for the accomplishment of objects not intrusted to the Government, it would become the painful duty of this tribunal, should a case requiring such a decision leme before it, to say that such an act was not the law of the land.

"But it is pressed upon us that this court has gone so far in sustaining taxing measures the effect and tendency of which was to accomplish purposes not directly within congressional power that we are bound by authority to maintain this law.

that we are bound by authority to maintain this law.

"The first of these is Veazle Bank v. Fenno (8 Wall. 533, 19 L. ed. 482). In that case the validity of a law which increased a tax on the circulating notes of persons and State banks from 1 per cent to 10 per cent was in question. The main question was whether this was a direct tax, to be apportioned among the several States 'according to their respective numbers.' This was answered in the negative. The second objection was stated by the court:

"'It is insisted, however, that the tax in the case before us is excessive, and so excessive as to indicate a purpose on the part of Congress to destroy the franchise of the bank, and is, therefore, beyond the constitutional power of Congress.'

"To this the court answered:

"'The first answer to this is that the judicial can not prescribe to the legislative departments of the Government limitations upon the exercise of its acknowledged powers. The power to tax may be exercised oppressively upon persons, but the responsibility of the legislature is not to the courts but to the people by whom its members are elected. So if a particular tax bears heavily upon a corporation or a class of corporations, it can not for that reason only be pronounced contrary to the Constitution.'

"It will be observed that the sole objection to the tax here was its excessive character. Nothing else appeared on the face of the act. It was an increase of a tax admittedly legal to a higher rate, and that was all. There were no elaborate specifications on the face of the act, as here, indicating the purpose to regulate matters of State concern and jurisdiction through an exaction so applied as to give it the qualities of a penalty for violation of law rather than a tax.

"It should be noted, too, that the court, speaking of the extent of the taxing power, used these cautionary words (p. 541):

"'There are, indeed, certain virtual limitations arising from the principles of the Constitution itself. It would undoubtedly be an abuse of the power if so exercised as to impair the separate existence and independent self-government of the States, or if exercised for ends inconsistent with the limited grants of power in the Constitution.'

"But more than this, what was charged to be the object of the excessive tax was within the congressional authority, as appears from the second answer which the court gave to the objection. After having pointed out the legitimate means taken by Congress to secure a national medium or currency, the court said (p. 549);

"'Having thus, in the exercise of undisputed constitutional powers, undertaken to provide a currency for the whole country, it can not be questioned that Congress may, constitutionally, secure the benefit of it to the people by appropriate legislation. To this end Congress has denied the quality of legal tender to foreign coins, and has provided by law against the imposition of counterfeit and base coin on the community. To the same end Congress may restrain, by sultable enactments, the circulation as money of any notes not issued under its own authority. Without this power, indeed, its attempts to secure a sound and uniform currency for the country must be futile.'

The next case is that of McCray v. United States (195 U.S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561). like the Veazie bank case, was the increase of an excise tax upon a subject properly taxable, in which the taxpayers claimed that the tax had become invalid because the increase was excessive. It was a tax on oleomargarine, a substitute for butter. The tax on the white oleomargarine was one-quarter of a cent a pound and on the yellow oleomargarine was first 2 cents, and was then by the act in question increased to 10 cents per pound. This court held that the discretion of Congress in the exercise of its constitutional powers to levy excise taxes could not be controlled or limited by the courts because the latter might deem the incidence of the tax oppressive or even destructive. It was the same principle as that applied in the Veazle bank This was that Congress, in selecting its subjects for taxation, might impose the burden where and as it would, and that a motive disclosed in its selection to discourage sale or manufacture of an article by a higher tax than on some other did not invalidate the tax. In neither of these cases did the law objected to show on its face, as does the law before us, the detailed specifications of a regulation of a State concern and business with a heavy exaction to promote the efficacy of such regulation.

"The third case is that of Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. (220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1312). It involves the validity of an excise tax levied on the doing of business by all corporations, joint-stock companies, associations organized for profit having a capital stock represented by shares, and insurance companies, and measured the excise by the net income of the corporations. There was not in that case the slightest doubt that the tax was a tax and a tax for revenue; but it was attacked on the ground that such a tax could be made excessive and thus used by Congress to destroy the existence of State corporations. To this this court gave the same answer as in the Veazie bank and McCray cases. It is not so strong as authority for the Government's contention as they are.

"The fourth case is United States v. Doremus (249 U. S. 86, 63, L. ed. 493, 39 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214). That involved the validity of the narcotic drug act (December 17, 1914, 38 Stat. L. 785, chap. 1, Comp. Stat. Sec. 6287g, 4 Fed. Stat. Anno. 2d ed. p. 177), which imposed a special tax on the manufacture, importation, and sale or gift of oplum or coco leaves or their compounds or derivatives. It required every person subject to the special tax to register with the collector of internal revenue his name and place of business and forbade him to sell except upon the written order of the person to whom the sale was made, on a form prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. The vendor was required to keep the order for two years, and the purchaser to keep a duplicate for the same time, and all were to be subject to official inspection. Similar requirements were made as to sales upon prescriptions of a physician and as to the dispensing of such drugs directly to a patient by a physician. The validity of a special tax in the nature of an excise tax on the manufacture, importation, and sale of such drugs was, of course, unquestioned. The provisions for subjecting the sale and distribution of the drugs to official supervision and inspection were held to have a reasonable relation to the enforcement of the tax and were therefore held valid.

"The court said that the act could not be declared invalid fust because another motive than taxation not shown on the face of the act might have contributed to its passage. case does not militate against the conclusion we have reached in respect to the law now before us. The court there made manifest its view that the provisions of the so-called taxing act must be naturally and reasonably adapted to the collection of the tax and not solely to the achievement of some other purpose plainly within State power.

"For the reasons given we must hold the child labor tax law invalid, and the judgment of the district court is affirmed.

"Mr. Justice Clarke dissents."

Inasmuch as the Congress has twice considered it necessary and wise to enact a law for the protection of the child life of our Nation it would seem to be the mature and deliberate judgment of the people that such a law would be beneficial. We must assume that the Congress considered that it had the power to enact such laws and thought it for the welfare of the Nation to exercise that power. But inasmuch as the Supreme Court of the United States, in Hammer v. Dagenhart (supra) and Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co. (supra), decided that the Congress under the existing Constitution did not have that power, it is proposed to confer or delegate that power by way of a proposed amendment.

First. It can not be questioned but that it is a paramount duty of Government to guard and protect the welfare of its children to the end that they may have the utmost opportunity possible to attain the maximum development of their moral, intellectual, and physical beings. This is manifestly the due of all children since they are brought into the world without their volition, entirely helpless and dependent. But this is not alone simple justice to childhood. It is also of the greatest importance to every State that its citizens should attain the highest development above indicated. And it may be observed that while under our dual system of government the power and duty to make adequate provision by law for the accomplishment of those most desirable ends now vested in the several States, nevertheless it is as important to the National Government as it is to the government of every State that its citizenry be afforded every opportunity for legitimate development, and that such development should neither be stunted nor destroyed by a neglect to pass adequate laws for the protection of childhood.

Herein there lies the justification for the Government of the United States in asking of the States that upon it be conferred power concurrent with their own to legislate upon this matter so vital to both. If the States shall have passed appropriate laws, it is safe to say that any legislation of Congress will march side by side with such laws. If a State has been unmindful of its duty, then such congressional legislation will work no injury but rather a positive benefit to the State itself as well as to the National Government.

Hence your committee reports in favor of the submission to the legislatures of the several States of some form of constitutional amendment conferring power upon the Congress to legislate upon the subject.

Second. What form shall that proposed amendment bear? Unquestionably it should take the form of a grant of power, and unquestionably the limitations of that power should be precisely defined. Beyond peradventure it should contemplate the future as well as the present. Indisputably it should be a power concurrent with that of the States, since its purpose is not to deprive the States of any of their powers but only to confer like powers on the National Government.

Still further, it will not be questioned but that that power should be given to control, regulate, or even to prohibit the use of such labor in all cases where the character of the labor is dangerous in itself or may become dangerous through the inexperience or heedlessness of childhood; where in itself or in its surroundings it is detrimental to the physical or moral welfare of childhood, or where it is in character too onerous for the growing bodies of youth. Equally manifest is it that in all occupations where child labor is permitted, legislative authority should have a determinative voice as to the terms, times, conditions, and environment of its use—such as day and night work, reasonable hours, dangerous machinery, hygienic conditions, and the like.

These are the fundamental considerations which have controlled the action of this committee. It has given painstaking consideration to the varying phraseology of the five concurrent resolutions set forth herein above and to be found in part 1 of hearings; it has made extended research into the legal and popular meanings of words whose use has been recommended, and it has decided to submit the following as the form of the proposed constitutional amendment, which it approves:

"The Congress shall have power concurrent with that of the several States to limit or prohibit labor of persons under the age of 18 years."

A few words may be pertinent here to explain the reasons which influenced the committee in the adoption of the particular form of verbiage in which the resolution is cast.

The use of the words "power," "concurrent," speak speaks for itself. The amendment is not designed to deprive the States their police powers but only to have them confer on the National Government the right to exercise similar That in so doing they will not deprive themselves of any of their own powers may be taken as conclusively ad-judicated by the Supreme Court of the United States in the rase of United States v. Lansa, decided December 11, 1922.

It seemed wise to adopt the word "labor" in lieu of the word "employment." The former word expresses precisely the matter of the proposed amendment. It is the use of the labor rather than the matter of its employment which is of direct concern, and to state it thus avoids all possibility of the shufflings and evasions which might follow the adoption of the latter word.

An age limit is declared. It unquestionably would have been simpler to have provided for the regulation and prohibition of the labor of children and to have stopped there. But your committee became convinced that in asking for this it might fail utterly. A marked difference of opinion was developed at the hearings before the subcommittee, it being argued on the one hand that after 18 years of age, girls and boys had passed the period of dependency and were physically and mentally capable of fending for themselves, so that the power to protect them which was sought by the amendment could safely be limited to the indicated age; while, on the other hand, it was argued that many cases and classes merited protection after the age fixed, and that as the State's police power embraced the protection of its children during the period of their nonage and up to the instant of their majorities it was reasonable to ask that identical police power be conferred on the National Government.

Reason is found in both points of view. But your committee finally concluded to insert the 18-year limitation; because such limitation would certainly embrace the vast majority of cases calling for protection and remedial legislation, while the exceptional cases calling for legislation after that age might arise in one State and not in another, and therefore might safely be left to the wisdom of each State. And, finally, in contemplation of the opposition which almost certainly would arise should the word "child" be used, and having in mind the common-law definition of the word "child" and the many decisions of courts as to the legal meaning of that word, it was thought expedient to ask for that which would accomplish the greatest good while being subject to the least opposition. In order to remove all doubt as to the power to be delegated, it was thought wise to use the word "persons."

The several Senate joint resolutions were referred to a subcommittee consisting of Senators Shortridge, Colt, and Walsh of, Montana, who accompanied their conclusions and recommendations by printed copies of the hearings held by them, which "Hearings before a subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, United States Senate, parts 1, 2, and 3," are hereby referred to and made a part of this report.

Wherefore your committee reports in favor of submitting to the legislatures of the several States the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

JOINT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein). That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution:

"ARTICLE -.

"The Congress shall have power, concurrent with that of the several States, to limit or prohibit the labor of persons under the age of 18 years."

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, House bill 14144, to limit and fix the time within which suits may be brought or rights asserted in court arising out of the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 302 of the soldiers and sailors' civil relief act, was referred to the Public Lands Committee. I ask that the Public Lands Committee be discharged from the further consideration of the bill and that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, where it belongs.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Utah.

The motion was agreed to.

MICHIGAN BOULEVARD BUILDING CO .- CONFERENCE REPORT,

Mr. CAPPER. I submit the conference report on House bill 5918, and move its adoption.

The report will be read. The VICE PRESIDENT

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5918) for the relief of the Michigan Boulevard Building Co., having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows: That the Senate recede from its amendments.

ARTHUR CAPPER, F. R. GOODING, PARK TRAMMELL, Managers on the part of the Senate. G. W. EDMONDS, JAMES P. GLYNN, H. B. STEAGALL, Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the report.

The report was agreed to.

MONTREAL RIVER LIGHTHOUSE RESERVATION, MICH.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, from the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably House bill 13032, to authorize the sale of the Montreal River Lighthouse Reservation, Mich., to the Gogebic County board of the American Legion, Bessemer, Mich.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I realize that the Senator from Wisconsin must be consistent. I am sorry that he interposed his objection after so many unanimous-consent requests had been granted. This bill is one that I am sure will have no opposition from anybody in the Senate, and I should like to ask unanimous consent for its consideration, but I realize that it can not be done.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that after we once get upon the calendar he may renew his request, so far as I am concerned.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. LODGE:

A bill (S. 4609) to authorize the President, in certain cases, to reduce fees for the visé of passports; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. BROOKHART: A bill (S. 4610) to amend the interstate commerce act and the transportation act, 1920, as amended; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce

By Mr. STERLING:

A bill (S. 4611) granting an increase of pension to Charles Halls; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McNARY:

A bill (S. 4612) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to construct highways in the Klamath Indian Reservation in Oregon: to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. CALDER:

A bill (S. 4613) for the relief of the Polish American Navigation Corporation; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. CUMMINS:

A bill (S. 4614) to amend section 81 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciapproved March 3, 1911; to the Committee on the

Judiciary. By Mr. SHORTRIDGE:

A bill (S. 4615) making eligible for retirement under certain conditions officers of the United States Army, other than officers of the Regular Army, who incurred physical disability In line of duty while in the service of the United States during the war; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PITTMAN:

A bill (S. 4616) to establish a fish-hatching and fish-cultural station on the Humboldt River, in the State of Nevada; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. PEPPER: A bill (S. 4617) for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Allentown, Pa.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. KENDRICK:
A bill (S. 4618) granting a pension to Thomas Fife; to the Committee on Pensions.
By Mr. NELSON:

A bill (S. 4619) granting the consent of Congress to the reconstruction, maintenance, and operation of an existing bridge across the Red River between Grand Forks, N. Dak., and East Grand Forks, Minn.; and

A bill (S. 4620) granting the consent of Congress to the re-construction, maintenance, and operation of an existing bridge across the Red River between Moorhead, Minn., and Fargo, N. Dak.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. MOSES:

A bill (S. 4621) granting a pension to Nicholas Suosso (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HALE:

A bill (S. 4622) to remit the duty on a carillon of bells to be imported for St. Ann's Church, Kennebunkport, Me. (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. PAGE: A bill (S. 4623) to reimburse certain persons for loss of private funds in the form of Liberty bonds of the fourth issue and Victory notes while they were general court-martial prisoners, confined in the naval prison, Portsmouth, N. H.; to the Committee on Claims:

A bill (S. 4624) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to make reimbursement to the Naval Academy dairy for losses sustained by fire; and

A bill (S. 4625) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to permit the sale of exterior articles of the uniform to honorably discharged enlisted men; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 4627) fixing the rank of the officer of the United States Army in charge of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENT OF CIVIL-SERVICE EMPLOYEES RETIREMENT ACT.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I have been requested to introduce a bill amending the civil-service employees retirement act, I have not had an opportunity to examine the bill carefully, but those who have asked for its introduction represent very responsible organizations. So I am introducing the bill by request in order that they may have an opportunity to have hearings on it or to have it considered.

The bill (S. 4626) for the retirement of employees in the civil service was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

AMENDMENTS TO DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FERNALD submitted an amendment proposing to pay $2,500 to Elizabeth McKeller as full compensation for injuries sustained while traveling within the Navajo Indian Reservation, State of New Mexico, September 7, 1921, intended to be proposed by him to House bill 14408, the third deficiency appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and order to be printed.

Mr. PHIPPS submitted two amendments proposing to pay

$1,000 each to Thomas A. Hodgson and C. Brooks Fry for expert personal services in connection with the investigation of the fiscal relations between the District of Columbia and the United States, etc., intended to be proposed by him to House bill 14408, the third deficiency appropriation bill, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania submitted an amendment proposing to pay $13,511.13 to the Government of the Republic of France as full indemnity for loss and damage to property suffered by Madame Crignler, a citizen of France, by reason of the search for the body of Admiral John Paul Jones, undertaken in 1899 by Gen. Horace Porter, at that time American ambassador to France, and completed by the finding of the body in 1905, etc., intended to be proposed by him to House bill 14408, the third deficiency appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS-CLARK G. RUSSELL.

On motion of Mr. Townsend, it was-Ordered, That permission be granted to withdraw from the files of the Senate all the papers in the case of Clark G. Russell, Senate bill 386. Sixty-fourth Congress, first session, no adverse report having been made thereon.

MEMBERSHIP OF STATE BANKS, ETC., IN FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM.

Mr. HARRIS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 449), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Hesolved, That a committee of five Members of the Senate be appointed by the President of the Senate, one member from each of the following committees of the Senate; Banking and Currency, Agriculture and Forestry, and Commerce. That said committee be, and hereby is, authorized during sessions and recesses of the Sixty-seventh or Sixty-eighth Congress to inquire into the effect of the present limited membership of State banks and trust companies in the Federal reserve system upon financial conditions in the agricultural sections of the United States the reasons which actuate such banks and trust companies in falling to become members of the Federal reserve system; what administrative measures have been taken and are being taken to increase such membership; and whether or not any change should be made in existing law, or in the rules and regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, or in its methods of administration, to bring about in the agricultural sections a larger membership of such banks or trust companies in the Federal reserve system.

In pursuance of this inquiry said committee or subcommittee thereof is further authorized to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ experts deemed necessary by such committee, a clerk, and a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject pending before said committee at a cost not to exceed 25 cents per folio; all expenses incurred in furtherance of the purposes of this resolution to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, not to exceed the sum of $500.

The committee shall from time to time report to the Senate the results of its inquires, together with its recommendations, and may prepare and submit bills or resolutions embodying such recommendations, and its final report shall be submitted not later than January 31, 1924.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, announced that the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 79) authorizing the President to require the United States Sugar Equalization Board (Inc.) to take over and dispose of 5,000 tons of sugar imported from the Argentine Republic, having been presented to the President for his approval, and not having been returned by him to the House of Congress in which it originated within the time prescribed by the Constitution of the United States, had become a law without his approval, (Joint resolution received by the President January 31, 1923. Ten days expired February 12, 1923.)
The message also announced that the President had approved and signed the following bills and joint resolution:

On February 23, 1923;

S. 3103. An act to amend section 2294, United States Revised Statutes, relating to homesteads; and 8, 3220. An act to amend sections 2, 5, 11, 12, 15, 19, 29, and 30 of the United States warehouse act, approved August 11, 1916. On February 24, 1923;

S. 3332. An act to provide for a grant to the city of Boise, in the State of Idaho, of the use of a certain part of the Bolse Barracks Military Reservation under certain conditions;

S. 4036. An act to prohibit the unauthorized wearing, manufacture, or sale of medals and badges awarded by the War Department: and

S. J. Res. 279. A joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to loan 3,000 wooden folding chairs for the use of the United Confederate Veterans at their reunion to be held in New Orleans, La., on April 11, 12, and 18, 1923.

FOREIGN RELATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES FOR 1915.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed: To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State, submitting documents pertaining to the Foreign Relations of the United States for 1915, and "Foreign Relations of the United States, the History of the World War as Shown by the Records of the Department of State," with a view to their publication under the existing appropriations for printing and binding in the Department of State. Subsequent volumes of these documents will be sent to the Government Printing Office from time to time. WARREN G. HARDING.

(Inclosures: Report from the Secretary of State, transmitting Foreign Relations of the United States for 1915, and "Foreign Relations of the United States, the History of the World War as Shown by the Records of the Department of State.")

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 24, 1923.

WILLIAM COLLIE NABORS.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1405) for the relief of William Collie Nabors, which was, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$3,000, in full settlement against the Government.

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

PROPOSED UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I would like to submit a further unanimous-consent agreement, so that we may know just what we are to do to-day and possibly enable us to conclude the calendar. It gives more time for the calendar to-day and I think the Senate will agree to it:

It is further agreed that the Senate shall continue the considera-tion of unobjected bills on the calendar until the hour of 4 o'clock p. m. to-day, unless sooner disposed of, and that at the conclusion of the calling of the calendar for unobjected bills the Senate shall proceed to the consideration of executive business, and at the con-clusion of executive business the Senate shall adjourn as previously agreed.

It is further agreed that upon Monday, February 26, at 1 o'clock p. m., the Senate shall vote on the motion of the Senator from Washington [Mr, JONES] to proceed to the consideration of the bill H. R. 12817, and if that motion prevails, a motion to recommit the bill to the Committee on Commerce shall be in order, to the exclusion of any other business.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I express the hope that the unanimous-consent order suggested by the Senator from Kansas may be agreed to. Its effect will be to permit the Senate to dispose of a large number of legislative matters which require attention. At the same time it enables those who are opposed to the shipping bill to secure at an early date a vote upon the motion to recommit, if they so desire. I hope the request will be granted.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I listened to the reading of the proposed agreement, but I do not know that I followed it entirely. I understand that the object of it is that the Senate shall have a test vote on Monday.

Mr. CURTIS. That is right.
Mr. PITTMAN. And that those who are opposed to the shipping bill will have an opportunity to vote to send it back to the committee, but if the bill may be up—

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. Senators will have the opportunity first to vote against proceeding to the consideration of the shipping bill. In the event that motion prevails, which is the pending motion of the Senator from Washington, and the Senate decides to take up the shipping bill, a motion to recommit will be immediately in order to the exclusion of all other business.

Mr. PITTMAN. It is intended to secure a test vote on the bill at this time?

Mr. CURTIS. That is what it is.
Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Kansas and the Senator from Arkansas whether it is their understanding, in their interpretation of the unanimous-consent agreement, that upon the motion to recommit debate is to be Mr. CURTIS. But we hope there will be a vote on Monday.

However, of course, we can not guarantee that.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Kansas whether it is the purpose of any of the proponents of the legislation to seek to table the motion to recommit so as to cut off debate?

Mr. CURTIS. Not on my part. I drew the agreement. I have not consulted other Senators. The Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] has charge of the bill and he can speak for himself

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I wish it would be put in the agreement that the motion to recommit should be voted upon without debate, because I am ready to vote now. I am ready to vote now on the motion to take it up, as far as that is concerned. I want to say frankly that if the motion to take up the shipping bill should prevail, I myself would then be perfectly willing to vote upon the motion of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Ladd] to take up the filled milk bill, because I recognize when a matter is ended. would dislike to see the motion to recommit discussed for hours after everybody knows what the result is going to be.

I am not going to object to the proposed unanimous-consent agreement, but I express the hope the Senator from Kansus expressed, that whatever motion is made with reference to the shipping bill after the first motion is disposed of, assuming that the motion to take it up is agreed to, may be disposed of quite promptly on Monday.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator Mr. from Washington a question? Is it the purpose now of those who have been standing behind the ship subsidy bill to still vote to take up the bill, or are they going to change front on Monday and all join in voting for a motion to recommit the

Mr. JONES of Washington. I do not want to see the bill recommitted. The Committee on Commerce have acted on the bill, and I do not see any use in sending it back to the commit-I hope those who favor the bill will vote to take it up, and in that way make a record vote on it; and then immediately that another bill may be taken up to displace it. I myself will vote to do that.

I am going to vote to take up the shipping bill because I am in favor of the shipping bill. If I were against it, I would vote against that motion. Then if it is taken up, I would be glad to vote to take up any of the other measures that are pressing. I do not want to have it recommitted, because I think that would be useless and nothing could be accomplished by it. The bill can be killed by taking up another bill.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas has the

Mr. CURTIS. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.
Mr. HARRISON. I had a question which I desired to put to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I thought I had answered it. Mr. HARRISON. The reason why I asked the question of the Senator from Washington was that throughout the debate he has worn a very loud red necktie, showing fight, and to-day notice that his tie is pure white, showing surrender. [Laughter.]

Mr. JONES of Washington. Certainly; I recognize when I am beaten!

Mr. FLETCHER. In reply to the suggestion that sending the bill back to the committee would not amount to anything, because, as the Senator from Washington said, the committee had considered the bill, and he considers it useless that the Commerce Committee should further consider it. I suggest to the Senator that there may be a possibility of some arrangement or conclusion reached by the committee, for instance, like incorporating discriminating duties

Mr. JONES of Washington, Oh, not at this session. The Senator knows that.

Mr. FLETCHER. Not at this session, but we could still have the matter go along

JONES of Washington. We shall have to introduce a new bill in the next Congress.

Mr. FLETCHER. It would dispose of it. Mr. POMERENE. I would like to ask the Senator from Washington a question, if I may?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield to the Senator from Ohio. Mr. POMERENE. The Senator has just stated t The Senator has just stated that he does not want to have the bill recommitted because the Committee on Commerce has already expressed itself on the subject.

Mr. JONES of Washington. And because of the nearness of the close of the session, of course.

Mr. POMERENE. I have heard the Senator say on several occasions during the last three or four weeks that he personally very much prefers a scheme of preferential customs rates as well as tonnage rates, to the subsidy plan. Under those circumstances, would not the Senator from Washington consent to have the bill recommitted with instructions to report it back with some scheme of the kind indicated, which would meet the approval of his own judgment?

Mr. JONES of Washington. That would be useless now because of the nearness of the end of the session. This ends the bill; there is no question about it. It is useless to send it back to the committee.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President— Mr. CURTIS. I believe I still have the floor, and I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. I was simply going to inquire, in view of the statement of the chairman of the committee who has charge of the bill, why it is necessary to delay the matter? We have some bills on the calendar which ought to be considered. There is no occasion to wait until Monday to consider some of the other bills, if this matter is now at an end, as the Senator from Washington has very well said. If somebody wants to make a record, let us make it now. The record is pretty well made, I think, but if it is not quite complete we can make it now. It is understood that the shipping bill can not pass at this session. There is no use to take up further time on it to-There are some very important measures on the calendar which ought to be passed, and there is no use to consume the time on the shipping bill. I do not understand why we can not dispose of it and have it at an end to-day.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I agree entirely with the Senator from Idaho. I think it ought to be ended and ended I see no reason in the world why we should delay. to-day.

Mr. ROBINSON. In view of the statement of Senators on this side of the Chamber and Senators on the other side of the Chamber on the subject, I respectfully ask that a motion to re-commit the bill be now in order and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of that motion and to vote upon the same without further debate.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I object to that, but I am perfectly willing to agree to vote now on the motion to take up the bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well. I suggest to the Senator from Kansas that he submit his request for unanimous consent, and if it is objected to, of course the Senate will take its own course

Mr. HEFLIN. Before I agree to the unanimous-consent request, I want to know if it will in any way bind any Senator not to make a motion to recommit, whether the bill is taken up or not. It provides that if the bill is taken up, a motion to recommit shall be in order, but if it is not taken up some Senator may then want to make a motion to recommit it and have a test vote upon it.

Mr. CURTIS. I am afraid the Senator did not hear the reading of the request. It provides that the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill shall be taken up at 1 o'clock and voted upon without further debate.

Mr. HEFLIN. But if that motion shall be defeated then some of us may want to move to recommit the bill anyhow, whether it is up or not.

Mr. CURTIS. If the motion to take it up is defeated, that settles the bill as far as that is concerned.

Mr. HEFLIN. Oh, no, it does not settle it. It leaves the measure in this Chamber and some of us may want to have it recommitted and may want to put all Senators on record upon the question. The Senator from Washington is so sick of it that he does not even want it to go back to his committee.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Oh, the Senator should not say

Mr. HEFLIN. If the Committee on Commerce will not take it, I suggest that it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

We would take it and put it to sleep.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator from Alabama that a motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill tests the sense of the Senate on the bill just as effectively as a motion to recommit. If the Senate refuses to proceed to the consideration of the bill, according to the effect usually given to parliamentary practice of that nature, it expresses the sense of the Senate upon the subject just as effectively, and even more so under some circumstances, than a motion to recommit it, for a motion to recommit carries with it the expression of thought that the bill requires modification in respect not therefore recognized by the committee. So I think the Senator from Alabama should make no objection to the proposed unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to get the construction of the Senator from Kansas of the agreement. Is it not true that under the agreement, if the bill is taken up, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Land] would not be permitted to make his motion to take up the filled milk bill until the motion to recommit the shipping bill has been disposed of?

Mr. CURTIS. Yes; until the motion to recommit has been disposed of.

Mr. LENROOT. I object to the request in that form.
Mr. ROBINSON. Then there will be no further unar

Then there will be no further unanimous consent given in the Senate to-day.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I wish to suggest to the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from Alabama that the motion to recommit, as I understand it, would not be in order until the bill was before the Senate. A Senator can not move to recommit a bill that is reposing in quiet upon the cal-endar. It must be before the Senate before a motion to recommit it can be made, which meets the point of the Senator from Alabama, I think.

Mr. ROBINSON. I presume everyone understood that.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator from Alabama stated that he wanted the agreement so that, whether the bill was before the Senate or not, a motion to recommit could be entered.

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly the Senate would have to vote on the motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill before a motion could be made to recommit it.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HEFLIN. The bill has been reported to the Senate. It is out of the committee. It is not up, however, for considera-tion, but it is still in the Senate and not in the committee. Suppose some Senator wants to get it out of the Senate and back before the committee?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. He would have to move to proceed to its consideration, get it before the Senate, and then move to recommit it.

Mr. HEFLIN. The Senator believes unless the Senate took it up we could not move to recommit it?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. No; we can not move to recommit a bill that is still on the calendar, that the Senate is not considering, because it is not before the Senate for consideration It has to be taken up first.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I demand the regular order. Mr. HEFLIN. Then it is lost somewhere between the col Then it is lost somewhere between the committee and the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. No; it is on the calendar. Many are lost there.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is the Chair to understand that there is objection to the unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. LENROOT. I object unless the last clause, "to the exclusion of any other business," is eliminated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded. The regular order is the introduction of bills and joint resolu-

AMENDMENT OF WAR RISK INSURANCE ACT-CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, yesterday I presented a conference report on House bill 10003. I notice it was not handed down this morning, and I ask that it may be disposed of.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The conference report is on the The Chair had no power to hand it down.

Mr. McCUMBER. I ask for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the following conference report.

The conference report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10003) to further amend and modify the war risk insurance act, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10003) to further amend and modify the war risk insurance act, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the amendment of the Senate insert the following:

"SEC. 23. (1) That, except as provided in subdivision (2) of this section, when by the terms of the war risk insurance act and any amendments thereto, any payment is to be made to a minor, other than a person in the military or naval forces of the United States, or to a person mentally incompetent or under other legal disability adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction, such payment shall be made to the person who is constituted guardian, curator, or conservator by the laws of the State or residence of claimant, or is otherwise legally vested with responsibility or care of the claimant or his estate: Provided, That prior to receipt of notice by the United States Veterans' Bureau that any such person is under such other legal disability adjudged by some court of competent jurisdic-tion, payment may be made to such person direct: Provided further. That for the purpose of payments of benefits under article 3 of the war risk insurance act, as amended, where no guardian, curator, or conservator of the person under a legal disability has been appointed under the laws of the State or residence of the claimant, the director shall determine the person who is otherwise legally vested with responsibility or care of the claimant or his estate.

"(2) If any person entitled to receive payments under this act shall be an inmate of any asylum or hospital for the insane maintained by the United States, or by any of the several States or Territories of the United States, or any political subdivision thereof, and no guardian, curator, or conservator of the property of such person shall have been appointed by competent legal authority, the director, if satisfied after due investigation that any such person is mentally incompetent, may order that all moneys payable to him or her under this act shall be held in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of such person. All funds so held shall be disbursed under the order of the director and subject to his discretion either to the chief executive officer of the asylum or hospital in which such person is an inmate, to be used by such officer for the maintenance and comfort of such inmate, subject to the duty to account to the United States Veterans' Bureau and to repay any surplus at any time remaining in his hands in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the director; or to the wife (or dependent husband if the inmate is a woman), minor children, and dependent parents of such inmate, in such amounts as the director shall find necessary for their support and maintenance in the order named; or, if at any time such inmate shall be found to be mentally competent, or shall die, or a guardian, curator, or conservator of his or her estate be appointed, any balance remaining to the credit of such inmate shall be paid to such inmate, if mentally competent, and otherwise to his or her guardian, curator, conservator, or personal representatives."

And the Senate agree to the same.

P. J. MCCUMBER, REED SMOOT, JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Managers on the part of the Senate. BURTON E. SWEET, W. J. GRAHAM, SAM RAYBURN, Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

STANDARDS FOR ANTHRACITE COAL.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the calendar under Rule VIII is now in order. The consideration of the calendar will begin at Order of Business 1057, being Senate bill 4447, the title of which will be stated.

A bill (S. 4447) to establish The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. standards for anthracite coal shipped in interstate or foreign commerce

Mr. KING. Let that bill go over.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let the bill go over, Mr. President, Mr. POINDEXTER, Mr. President, that bill ought to be referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining. It provides that the Department of Commerce shall carry on certain work which has already been provided for by an appropriation, and which is to be conducted by the Department of the Interior. Its enactment would lead to a duplication of work. It calls for a set of standards for coal which are already being considered and studied by the Bureau of Mines. The bill has never been considered by the Bureau of Mines. It provides for no method for its enforcement in case it should be passed. It provides for no inspection of the standards which it pro-poses to set up. The bill is loosely drawn and is contradictory in its terms. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

The question is on the motion of

The VICE PRESIDENT. The the Senator from Washington.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I have understood that the Bureau of Mines dealt only with questions of safety and with other correlated principles; that the question of fixing standards of quality of materials mined was not usually a function of that bureau. It seems to me that the Department of Commerce ought to consider the question of the standardization of coal. That department is the one which passes upon questions relating to the purity of food. It seems to me many of the same principles are involved in impure coal as in adulterated food.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President-

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Pardon me. I desire to say that there is now pending in the Legislatures of Pennsylvania, of Wisconsin, of Massachusetts, and of other State legislatures bills seeking to establish by regulations standards of quality and size and condition of anthracite coal. If the National Government does not undertake to standardize anthracite coal, we shall have a different law in nearly every State in the It seems to me, in view of the great agitation upon this subject at the present time, that we ought to get some action at this session of Congress. Otherwise we shall have different standards as to the quality of coal in every section of the country. The bill was deliberately drafted, without any method being provided for its enforcement or inspection of the standards that it requires the Government to establish, because it would be impossible to get such a measure through the Such provisions would raise the cry of expense and the opposition to the establishment of another bureau with another corps of Government employees. This simple form was chosen so as to lead the way for enforcement by the various The National Government can do much to end this abuse of selling fuelless coal for real coal by merely promulgating certain standards of quality. The enforcement will be taken care of by local authorities if the Government leads the way by first fixing an official and uniform standard.

Mr. President, some department of the National Government ought to lead the way and provide for the elimination of noncombustible materials in coal, so that our people may not be subjected to the impositions and frauds which have been practiced on them during the present winter. Ample evidence is at hand that the anthracite coal on the market to-day is full of slate, slag, and other substances that will not burn. I am not so much concerned about which bureau or department undertakes this work as I am desirous of obtaining action, so that we may not have a different standard in each State in the Union. After studying the matter and consulting with many officials, it seemed to me that the Department of Commerce is the department to determine the standards. Of course, the Department of Commerce can call upon the Bureau of Mines for such information as may be necessary in order to determine what quantity of noncombustible material shall be permitted in anthracite coal shipped in interstate commerce. I hope the Senator will not take the method he has indicated of preventing some action upon this bill at this time. If the bill is sent to the Committee on Mines and Mining, it will be impossible to get action this session.

POINDEXTER. Mr. President, the appropriation of $136,000, the ordinary annual appropriation, has already been made for the study of the very facts which this bill would call upon the Department of Commerce to study. It would simply provide for a duplication of work that is being carried on now, and no nearer approach would be made to the object the Senator has in mind than is being made now by the work which is being performed by the Bureau of Mines. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Of course, I know one Senator can object to the bill's passage at this time, but would the Senator be willing to substitute the Department of the Interior for the Department of Commerce in the bill, and allow it to be considered?

Mr. POINDEXTER. The bill would need considerable amendment. I call the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts to one absurdity in the bill. It proposes to set up certain standards for coal. Then it proceeds to prohibit the transportation of coal of those standards in interstate commerce.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The Senator refers to a mis-printed bill. He is speaking of a copy of the bill that contains a typographical error. There are two copies of the bill in circulation, one of which contains the word "not"—

Mr. McNARY. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. McNARY. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Which is the proper form of the text while the other print does not contain the word "not."
I have before me two of the prints, one having the word "not" and the other eliminating the word "not." Of course, it gives an entirely different sense to the bill. However, the official copy of the bill contains the word "not," and contains no ambiguity or absurdity.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary in-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his parliamentary inquiry. Mr. McNARY. Has this bill been recommitted by action of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has not. The question is on the motion to refer the bill to the Committee on Mines and Mining. Mr. McNARY. I was under the impression that action had been taken by the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT.

It has not.

Mr. McNARY. I ask for the regular order. The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is proceeding. Mr. POINDEXTER. I ask that the motion made by me may be submitted The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Washington that the bill be referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining. The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts subsequently said: I ask unanimous consent to annex to my remarks on Senate bill 4447 two editorials which have been recently printed in the newspapers upon the subject of the bill.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Editorial from the Boston Post, January 29, 1923.]

NONSENSE.

The statement of the chairman of the Pennsylvania fuel commission at anthracite adulterated with slate and stone is sold only by unrupulous, "fly-by-night" operators is, in our opinion, precious nonscrupulous, sense.

Every householder knows, and has known for several years, that practically all of the coal he has bought, from whatever dealer, has been, in considerable part, unburnable by reason of the outrageous amount of slate and stone it contained. To say that all local retailers have been supplied by "fly-by-nights" over in Pennsylvania is too foolish for consideration. So far as we have been able to discover, the operators all do it, the chief reason being that they will not stand the extra expense of having the coal picked over.

For a country that has rigid and well-enforced laws against food adulteration, we are singularly lax in the way of permitting the adulteration of coal.

teration of coal.

[Editorial from the Boston American, January 30, 1923.] WRETCHED COAL SITUATION-FUEL AT EXORBITANT RATES SAID TO CONTAIN MORE THAN 30 PER CENT BOCK.

WRETCHED COAL SITUATION—FUEL AT EXORBITANT RATES SAID TO CONTAIN MORE THAN 30 PER CENT BOCK.

Those responsible for our wretched coal situation are not content with their failure to give us coal when we need it, although nature has been so bountiful in supplying it to us. They are not even content with charging us exorbitant prices for the little they give us, but they insist upon adding insult to injury, and then more injury, by giving us, so it is alleged, more than 30 per cent of rock and iron and slag, blackened only by the powder of coal and charging for it the present extortionate prices charged for the best coal.

If it is true that more than 30 per cent of the "coal" we are now receiving is "fireproof," then our coal is costing us about $26 or $27 per ton. It is costing us even more than this price, for we have to watch it. It clogs up our furnace grates. It destroys our furnace grates, and it involves labor—great physical exertion—to keep the grate clean, not only to save the grates but to produce a draft.

It is apparent that the coal operators are putting upon the railroad cars the old dumps, which were not coal but which were blackened stone and iron ore. It is a deliberate, willful, inexcusable swindle. Every day our courts are sending poor men away from their families and sending them to hard labor in prison, disgracing their little children and their wives, their mothers and fathers, and yet we do nothing with these coal thieves who are stealing from us scores of millions of dollars. This is American justice for you!

But some day the gentlemen who own the good things in life and who are never satisfied until they have taken away even the little that others have will wake up to find that the patience of the American popplessors found themselves, and as the French oppressors in 1783 found themselves—helpless before the wrath of a people who have no time, no opportunity, and no disposition to discriminate.

The tragedy will be for the honest possessor as well as for the dishonest, and that is the p

NATIONAL PARK AT YORKTOWN, VA.

The bill (S. 4464) in reference to a national military park at Yorktown, Va., was announced as next in order, Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Utah to withhold his objection to that measure. If it should be enacted it would not involve any expense whatever to the Government of the United States; it is a perfectly harmless measure and merely provides for an inquiry into certain conditions in order that the historic site of Yorktown may be properly preserved.

Mr. SWANSON. A bill with the same object in view has passed the House and I suggest that the Senator move to substitute the House bill for the Senate bill.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, 'A similar bill has passed the House and I desire to substitute the House bill for the Senate bill.

Mr. SWANSON. There will be no expense attached to the measure. It merely directs the Army engineers to make a report.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. There is no appropriation called for by the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I was disposed to object to every bill until we reach some conclusion with respect to the ship subsidy bill. That is the most important thing before us. It is subsidy bill. That is the most important thing before us. It is like the sword of Damocles hanging over our heads. Let us get that out of the way and then we may dispose of these bills. Mr. SWANSON. I hope the Senator will not, for the reason indicated by him, interpose objection to the consideration of bills on the calendar. Under the unanimous-consent agreement made yesterday, at which time I think the Senator from Utah was present, and to which, as I remember, he agreed, the calendar was to be taken up and considered until 1 o'clock. We ought not now to fail to carry out that unanimous-consent agreement

Mr. LODGE. To object to every bill on the calendar is a breach of the unanimous consent.

Mr. SWANSON. I hope the Senator will permit the unanimous-consent agreement to be carried out.

Mr. LODGE. An objection to every bill is not in accordance with the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. SWANSON. Technically the Senator from Utah or any other Senator may have the right to object to every bill on the calendar, but such action is not carrying out the spirit and intent of the unanimous-consent agreement, which was that unobjected bills on the calendar should be considered until 1 o'clock.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President-

Mr. KING. I will be glad to hear the distinguished Senator from West Virginia further.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The entire purpose and scope of the bill are set forth in its provisions. It directs the Secretary of War to investigate the feasibility of establishing a national military park in and about Yorktown, in the State of Virginia, for the purpose of commemorating the campaign and siege of Yorktown, and to prepare plans for such park, the commission to be appointed to serve without expense to the Government. It is merely proposed to prepare plans and submit a report to Congress at a later day. If the bill is not objected to, I desire, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs, to ask that House bill 13326 be substituted for the Senate bill. The Committee on Military Affairs of both the House and the Senate have made a favorable report on the

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia asks that there be substituted for the Senate bill the House bill covering the same subject. The House bill will be stated by title,

The Assistant Secretary, A bill (H. R. 13326) in reference to a national military park at Yorktown, Va.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to substituting the House bill for the Senate bill? The Chair hears none, there objection to the present consideration of the House

Mr. KING. Reserving the right to object, I should like to hear the report read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Shall the report be read? The Chair hears no objection, and the Secretary will read the report

The Assistant Secretary read the report submitted by Mr.

SUTHERLAND on the 5th instant, as follows:

[Report to accompany S. 4464.]

The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 4464) in reference to a national military park at Yorktown, Va., having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass with amendments.

House Report No. 1499 on a similar bill in the House is attached hereto and made a part of this report.

[House Report No. 1499, Sixty-seventh Congress, fourth session.] [House Report No. 1499, Sixty-seventh Congress, fourth session.]
This bill directs the Secretary of War to investigate the feasibility of establishing a national military park in and about Yorktown, in the State of Virginia, for the purpose of commemorating the campaign and siege of Yorktown in the fall of 1781, etc.

He is authorized to appoint a commission of not to exceed three persons to assist him, who shall serve without compensation or expense to the Government.

The committee recommends that the bill be amended by striking out the direction to the Secretary of War to appoint members of certain designated societies to two places on this commission, as follows:

certain designated sected to the persons," strike out all following follows:

Page 1, line 14, after the word "persons," strike out all following on remainder of page and all on page 2, line 1. Page 2, line 2, strike out the first two words in the line and insert the word "who," so that the sentence as amended shall read:

"To aid and assist him in this undertaking, the Secretary of War is authorized to appoint a commission of not to exceed three persons, who shall serve without compensation or expense to the Government."

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I hope the Senator will not object to the bill

Mr. KING. In my own time I should like to ask the Senator if ultimately there will not evolve upon the Federal Government considerable expense for the maintenance of this park?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Of course, that will depend entirely upon the action of Congress. This bill merely directs the Secretary of War to inquire into the feasibility of the project and to prepare plans, which will be reported to Congress for whatever action it may see fit to take. Congress may or may not adopt those plans; it may or may not establish the park. Of course, if a military park should be established at York-town, there might possibly be some expense attached, or it might be arranged that that expense should be borne by various patriotic societies. Nobody knows what plans will be developed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it may be considered, but I want to hold the floor for a moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13326) in reference to a national military park at Yorktown, Va., which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to investigate the feasibility of establishing a national military park in and about Yorktown, in the State of Virginia, for the purpose of commemorating the campaign and siege of Yorktown in the fall of 1781 and the preservation of said battle field for historical purposes, and to prepare plans of such park and an estimate of the cost of establishing and acquiring the same and obtain such other information as may enable Congress to act upon the matter after being fully advised. To aid and assist him in this undertaking, the Secretary of War is authorized to appoint a commission of not to exceed three persons, who shall serve without compensation or expense to the Government.

SEC. 2. That the expense of the investigation herein directed to be made shall be paid from the appropriation "Contingencies of the Army."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, of course we are all familiar with the historic ground to which this bill refers. I have no doubt that the patriotic sentiments of the American people would incline them to favor the adoption of a project that would set this ground apart as a military reservation or as a military park. I call the Senator's attention, however, to the fact that we are creating a large number of military reservations and a large number of parks; the Federal Government is acquiring a large area of territory in various States, all of which, of course, will necessitate greater or lesser appropriations for their maintenance. I do not know the amount of money now appropriated annually by the Government for reservations and parks and various other grounds and territory title to which is in the Federal Government. It seems to me we ought to scrutinize with great care these proposals because of the ultimate expense which will be involved which will have to be met from the Treasury of the United States. I should like to ask the Senator the number of acres that are within this contemplated military

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The number of acres is not set forth. Of course the number of acres and all other details in regard to the measure would be matters which would come within the scope of the investigation which is authorized to be made under this bill. I will say to the Senator that I agree with him thoroughly that these matters ought to be scrutinized; but the fact that we are entering upon just such projects as this shows that we are beginning to take, as we should take, some care of these historic objects as a means of teaching patriotism to our children and of preserving for posterity these old historic battle fields and grounds.

Mr. KING. I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that the Kingdom of Heaven is within us, and not without; and patriotism is within, and not often developed by mere external objects. However, I shall have no objection to the consideration of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, Senate bill 4464, dealing with the same subject matter, will be indefinitely post-

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, DISTRICT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

The bill (H. R. 10816) to fix the annual salary of the collector of customs for the district of North Carolina was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President-

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, before the Senator proceeds to discuss this bill, let me say that the North Carolina customs collection district is now seventh in importance in the United There are only six that have a greater amount of business, and the salaries of the collectors in those six run from $7,000 up to $10,000. There are 14 districts next following in their order whose business is less than that in the North Carolina district, and in those the salaries run from $5,000 up to $6,000; while in this district, where the salary was fixed half a hundred years ago, it is still running on at $2,500, although it is the seventh in importance. This bill is to place the salary of the collector of customs on a par with the 15 districts having a less amount of business, and the lowest of the lot is $5,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. McCUMBER, Yes.

Mr. KING. Why did not the Senator and his committee, instead of trying to bring this salary up to the par-using the Senator's expression-introduce a measure to bring some of the others down, using this as a datum line? It seems to me that we are always concerned in bringing up, but we are very seldom concerned in bringing down.

Mr. McCUMBER. There were two very good reasons. The first, I will say, is that we consider that $5,000 is a very reasonable salary for the collector of customs of that district. Secondly, the purpose of the committee is to put through a bill, and not merely to have one introduced, or to report one that will not pass through. The highest salary, that in New York, which is $10,000, is undoubtedly not excessive; and this proposed salary of $5,000, which is the lowest of these nearly

Mr. KING. Reserving the right to object—
Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I gave the Senator from Utah a copy of the very able report of the Committee on Ways and Means stating the facts in regard to this case. After reading it I am satisfied that the Senator, who is a just man, will withdraw his objection. The only objection he has made at all is that we have not decreased some of the other salaries. That is not the question here. It is a question of doing justice to this man, an officer whose salary has not been changed in 50 years, whose salary was then the lowest of any collector in the His district is now seventh in importance in the United States, and yet he is receiving the sama salary that was paid 50 years ago, when men are getting salaries of $5,000 who do not do half the business or collect one-tenth the revenue that he does. That is the report of the committee.

The Secretary of the Treasury was before our Committee on Appropriations during this session, and I asked him about this particular officer. Because the Budget had not estimated for it, the increase was subject to a point of order, and we could not put it on the appropriation bill; but the Secretary of the Treasury, when he was before us, recommended that this office be given justice and his salary increased. The North Carolina district to-day is the seventh in the United States in the amount of revenue collected, and they have put on this man ten times as much business as heretofore.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, is it not true that the collector, Mr. McGaskill, is a very efficient man and conducts his office splendidly?

Mr. OVERMAN. He does, and $2,500 is no salary for him. He is a very prominent man, and a leading Republican in my State. That is not the question, however. It is a question of justice, a question of giving this officer a sufficient salary in comparison with other officers doing a corresponding amount of business, whereas he is doing twice as much business as officers who are getting twice as much money. That is not fair; that is not just; and I am satisfied that the Senator, being a just man, will withdraw his objection.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall not object to the consideration of the bill, but the arguments made by the able Senator from North Dakota and by my distinguished friend from North Carolina do not persuade me that this bill ought to pass at the present time. It has become a common practice—

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.
Mr. McNARY. Under the rule, can a Senator speak more than once upon a given proposition?

The VICE PRESIDENT. In accordance with the rule, a Senator can speak only once, and for five minutes only.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have not spoken. I reserved the right to object.

Mr. McNARY. I understood the Senator from Utah to speak

Mr. McNARI. I inderstood the Senator from Ctan to speak a while ago on this bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have not spoken. I asked the Senator from North Dakota a question.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator is correct. It was in my time that he was speaking.

That is the case. The VICE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KING. I hope the interruption of the able Senator from Oregon will not be taken out of my time.

Mr. McNARY. No, indeed.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I was about to observe that it has become quite the custom to deal with the salaries of officials of the Government in a piecemeal manner. Reference will be made to the fact that some other official doing similar work in some other part of the country is receiving a very large salary; it is claimed that it therefore follows that there must be an increase in the salary of the officer under consideration in a given bill; and in that way, in a sort of a step-ladder fashion, they fix the salaries and the compensation of officials of the It is manifest that that method will result in injustice. Some will get too much; others will receive an entirely inadequate compensation.

Mr. President, I venture the assertion that notwithstanding the apparently small salary which this officer is getting, there I has been no difficulty in filling the office. When the Democrats were in power I have not any doubt in the world that there were a large number of applicants for the position; and I feel confident that when the Republicans came into power the Republican national committeeman and the Republican distributor of patronage in North Carolina received applications from a large number of distinguished Republicans who wanted the job.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. KING. I yield. Mr. OVERMAN. During the Democratic administration this bill was passed by a Democratic Senate, but it lost out somehow in the House.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, that does not lend any sanctity to it. Democratic Congresses oftentimes pass just as bad legislation as Republican Congresses; and I would have opposed the bill in the way that I am doing now by calling attention to this measure if it had come to my attention from a Democratic administration.

Mr. President, we do not have any difficulty in filling Federal positions, no matter what the salary is. There will be scores of applicants for nearly every position; and I ask my learned friend now if it is not a fact that in North Carolina there were a large number of Republicans who sought this office when the Harding administration came into power?

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I know that the Democrats appointed a man who had other business. If it had not been for that, he could not have served for a salary like this. He had a score of clerks to transact his private business and was induced to take this position.

Mr. KING. Oh, Mr. President, of course they always say reluctantly I was induced" or "at the request of numerous friends I have consented to become a candidate for the office."

Mr. OVERMAN. Unless this salary is raised, I do not know whether Mr. McGaskill will hold on or not. The salary ought to be increased, whether the office is held by a Democrat or by a Republican.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Utah has expired.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the salary of the collector of customs for the district of North Carolina is hereby fixed at $5,000 per annum.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARION B. PATTERSON.

The bill (S. 1104) for the relief of Marion B. Patterson was announced as next in order, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to Marion B. Patterson, of Shelby County, Tenn., the sum of $20.963, in full compensation for claims on account of the losses or reduction on salary and allowances sustained by her late husband, Brig. Gen. R. F. Patterson, from January 1, 1898, to May 28, 1906, during which time he was United States consul general at Calcutta. India, through the method of settlement adopted by the United States Government in connection with the fluctuation in the value of the Indian rupee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President reserving the right to chiest I am

Mr. KING. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I am not able to perceive the justice of that measure.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not object to the passage of this bill. The Senator is a very just man, and I know that he wants to see justice done.

Mr. KING. I want the Senator, then, to make an explanation of the bill, since he is appealing to my sense of justice

Mr. McKELLAR. I think, after what the Senator has said, the Senator from Utah ought to withdraw his objection.

Mr. KING. No, Mr. President; not at this time. Mr. HALE. Mr. President, this bill has been introduced several times in Congress. It has received favorable reports from the committees in both branches of Congress at various times, but it has never come to its final passage.

The bill is for the relief of the widow of Gen. Robert F. Patterson, who served as consul general at Calcutta, India, from May, 1897, to July, 1906. The salary of the office was paid out of the fees that were collected by the office. At that time the commercial fluctuating value of the rupee in India amounted to 32 cents on an average, whereas the bullion value of the coin in the United States amounted to only 20 cents.

When General Patterson first took office the custom was to collect the fees on the basis of bullion value-that is, 20 cents value for the rupee—and to deduct his salary in the same way from the fees collected by the office. After he had been in office a matter of six months an order was put out by the department requiring him to collect the fees on the basis of the commercial fluctuating value of 32 cents, and to take his salary on the same basis. He did so, and protested to the State Department every year. He was in office eight years, and during that time the loss to him through this method of paying his salary amounted to something over $20,000. As I say, this matter has been acted on and favorably reported on by both branches of Congress.

Mr. KING. By the State Department, too? Mr. HALE. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] made an exhaustive report on the matter. The junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. BAYARD] has made this report, and has gone into the matter very thoroughly; and I am sure he can give the Senator the information he desires.

Mr. KING. May I ask one question of the Senator? Will this be a precedent that will be invoked to compel payment to various other officers of the Government who have taken their salaries in the same way, perhaps?

Mr. HALE. I do not know that there have been any such

Mr. McKELLAR. It could not be invoked, if the Senator will permit me, because there is no other condition exactly like it.

Mr. HALE. I do not know of any other. Mr. KING. I withdraw the objection for the purpose of permitting the consideration of the bill.

Mr. BAYARD. Mr. President, this was a special order made by the Treasury Department after General Patterson took his office, and was made retroactive, and he had no choice about it. When he took office no such order had been entered, and he took the current rate of exchange.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, this bill has been before the Congress time and time again, and it does seem to me that the just thing to do is to pass it. I hope no Senator will object to it, but that it may be passed.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I just want to say that this bill, I think, has been before the Foreign Relations Committee. I know I have gone into it very thoroughly, and I believe it is an entirely just claim.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am glad to hear the Senator say so, and agree with him very fully. I think it is an entirely just claim and ought to be passed.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DE KIMPKE CONSTRUCTION CO.

The bill (S. 3894) for the relief of the De Kimpke Construction Co., of West Hoboken, N. J., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the De Kimpke Construction Co., of West Hoboken, N. J., the sum of $5.655.69 in full settlement of damages suffered by reason of the withdrawal by the Navy Department in November, 1918, of the award of contract to said company for the construction of an oxidation absorption building at the naval proving ground, Indianhead, Md.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I desire the attention of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BAYARD]. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Delaware why this claim was not disposed of as other claims of the same character for cancellation of contracts made by the War or Navy Department?

Mr. BAYARD. Mr. President, I will state to the Senator that in that case the Dent bill, I think, made provision so that Army contracts could be taken care of. This was a Navy contract, and therefore they could not take advantage of that bill. In the De Kimpke case the contract was made with the Navy Department and was canceled on November 6, 1918. In the meantime the De Kimpke Co. had arranged for the subletting of certain parts of the contract, including, I think, some steel construction. Upon the cancellation of the contract they were sued by one of their subcontractors, and a verdict of some eleven hundred dollars, I think, returned at their expense. This claim merely represents actual disbursements made by them and costs suffered by them because of the suit growing out of this contract. The payment has been recommended by the Secretary of the Navy

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Did not the general bill provide for the adjudication of claims arising from contracts canceled by the Navy Department?

Mr. BAYARD. No, sir; only by the War Department.
Mr. KING. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator if there was not a bill passed giving the Navy Department authority to pass upon claims and setting up a naval board for that pur-

Mr. BAYARD. I will say to the Senator that the report on this bill includes a letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Navy setting forth why it was that they could not pay the war.

claim because of lack of authorization under the law; and therefore they recommend favorable action upon it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It is a surprise to me that the Navy Department, considering the vast number of claims which canceled, have not been authorized to adjudicate those claims.

Mr. BAYARD. Nevertheless, that seems to be the case.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NEAH BAY DOCK CO.

The bill (S. 2787) for the relief of the Neah Bay Dock Co., a corporation, was announced as next in order.

Mr. CURTIS. I ask that that bill be indefinitely postponed.

A similar bill has already passed.

The motion was agreed to.

OWNERS OF STEAMSHIP "KIN-DAVE."

The bill (S. 3843) for the relief of the owners of the steamship Kin-Dave was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, anthorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3,500 to the owners of the steamship Kin-Dave, as compensation for and in full satisfaction of all claims of such owners for any damages to said steamship Kin-Dave sustained as a result of a collision between said steamship and the United States steamship Colonel Clayton on November 3, 1920, in the Milwaukee River, Wis.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I would like to inquire whether the bill carries a direct appropriation or whether it is the reference of a claim to the Court of Claims?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is a direct appropriation.

Mr. KING. I would like to inquire, before the bill is voted on, whether the claim has been to the Court of Claims and the facts found?

Mr. LENROOT. It has not been before the Court of Claims. It involves a collision where the facts were all admitted and $10,000 in damages claimed. The case was considered by the Secretary of War and by the Judge Advocate's office, and a compromise reached at $3,500, but by reason of the $500 prohibition the amount could not be paid. Without any question, and the department so states, a larger amount would be allowed if it went to the Court of Claims.

Mr. KING. Will not the Senator consent to lay it aside in order that I may have an opportunity to look it up?

Mr. LENROOT. Very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived-

CONFIRMATION OF MRS. ALEXANDER S. CLAY.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, in open executive session I ask unanimous consent that the Vice President lay before the Senate the nomination of Mrs. Alexander S. Clay to be postmaster at Marietta, Ga., and that the nomination be confirmed. I do not believe there will be any objection to it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Chair, as in open executive session, lays before the Senate a message from the President, which will be read.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

I nominate Mrs. Alexander S. Clay to be postmaster at Marletta, Ga., in place of Mrs. A. S. Clay, commission expired November 21, 1922.

WARREN G. HARDING.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 23, 1923.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent that the nomination

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senate advises and consents to the nomination. The nomination is confirmed, and the President will be notified. The Senate resumes its legislative session.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE,

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhue, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 14200. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 14222. An act to amend the trading with the enemy act;

H. R. 14288. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived, the question now is on the motion of the Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12817) to amend and supplement the merchant marine act, 1920, and for other purposes.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I move to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Washington, and on that motion

I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Assistant Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EDGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen]. I am unable at this time to obtain a transfer. If permitted to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. CURTIS (when Mr. Elkins's name was called), to announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Elkins] is paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS].

Mr. CURTIS (when Mr. France's name was called). I wish to announce that the Senator from Maryland [Mr. France] is paired on this measure with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED].

Mr. KENDRICK (when his name was called). general pair with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCormick]. who is unavoidably absent attending the funeral of the late Mrs. John A. Logan. In his absence I transfer my pair to the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] and vote. I vote yea.

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood]. The junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] has a pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Colf]. I suggest to the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] to allow the Senator from Alabama to stand paired with the Senator from Rhode Island, which would permit the Senator from Florida and myself to vote.

Mr. TRAMMELL. That is satisfactory to me.
Mr. LODGE. Announcing that pair, I vote "nay."
Mr. PHIPPS (when Mr. Nicholson's name was called). desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. Nicholson] is absent on account of illness. I ask that this notice may stand for the day.

Mr. OVERMAN (when Mr. SIMMONS's name was called). I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. Simmons] is absent on account of sickness. He has a pair on this question with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Elkins]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ROBINSON. I wish to announce the following pairs: The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY], who, if present, on this question would vote "yea," is paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCormick].

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen], who, if present, on this question would vote "yea," is paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Edge].

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], who, if present, on this question would vote "yea," is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. FRANCE].

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood], who, if present, on this question would vote "yea," is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Colt].

The result was announced-yeas 38, nays 46, as follows:

۰		I.E.	AD 00.	Name and Address of the Party o
	Ashurst Bayard Berah Brookhart Capper Caraway Couzens Culberson Dial Fletcher	George Glass Harris Harrison Heffin Hitchcock Jones, N. Mex, Kendrick King Ladd	La Follette McKellar McNary Myers Norris Overman Pittman Robinson Sheppard Shields	Smith Stanfield Stanley Swanson Trammell Walsh, Mass. Walsh, Mont. Williams and the same and	NA'	YS-46.
	Ball Brandegee Broussard Bursum Calder Cameron Cummins Curtis Dillingham Ernst Fernald Frelinghuysen	Gooding Hale Harreld Johnson Jones, Wash. Kellogg Keyes Lenroot Lodge McCumber McKinley McLean	Moses Nelson New Oddie Page Pepper Phipps Poindexter Pomerene Ransdell Reed, Pa, Shortridge	Smoot Spencer Sterling Sutherland Townsend Wadsworth Warren Watson Weller Willis
	Colt Edge Elkins	France Gerry McCormick	Nicholson Norbeck Owen	Reed, Mo. Simmons Underwood

So the Senate refused to lay on the table the motion of Mr. Jones of Washington to proceed to the consideration of the Jones of Washington to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12817) to amend and supplement the merchant marine act, 1920, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Washington to proceed to the consideration of House bill 12817, the shipping bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. On the motion of the Senator from Washington to proceed to the consideration of House bill 12817, the shipping bill.

ington I demand the year and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll,

Mr. EDGE (when his name was called). As announced on the previous vote, I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen]. I am unable to obtain a transfer, which I regret very much. Under the circumstances I am compelled to withhold my vote. If I could vote, I would vote "yea.

Mr. CURTIS (when Mr. Elkins's name was called). I wish to announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Elkins] is paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr.

SIMMONS

Mr. CURTIS (when Mr. France's name was called). to announce that the Senator from Maryland [Mr. France] is paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED].

Mr. KENDRICK (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before regarding the transfer of my pair, I vote "nay."

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as to the transfer of my pair, which leaves the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood] paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Coll], I vote "yea."

Mr. OVERMAN (when Mr. SIMMONS'S name was called). I have already announced the occasion of my colleague's absence and his pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS]. If my colleague were present and voting, he would vote "nay."

Mr. TRAMMELL (when his name was called). Under the announcement made by the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge], transferring his pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood] to my pair, the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Colt], I am at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ROBINSON. I wish to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Gerby], who, if present, on this question would vote "nay," is paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCormick].

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen], who, if present, on this question would vote "nay," is paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE]

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. Reed], who, if present, on this question would vote "nay," is paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. FRANCE].

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood], who, if present, on this question would vote "nay," is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT].

Mr. CURTIS. I wish to announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Norbeck] is absent on official business. If he were present, on this question he would vote "nay."

The result was announced-yeas 46, nays 38, as follows:

Gooding

Ball

YEAS-46.

Moses

Smoot

Brandegee Broussard Bursum Calder Cameron Cummins Curtis Dillingham Ernst Fernald Frelinghuysen	Hale Harreld Johnson Jones, Wash. Kellogg Keyes Lenroot Lodge McCumber McKinley McLean	Nelson New Oddle Page Pepper Phipps Poindexter Pomerene Ransdell Reed, Pa. Shortridge	Spencer Sterling Sutherland Townsend Wadsworth Warren Watson Weller Willis.
	NA.	YS-38.
Ashurst Bayard Borah Brookhart Capper Caraway Couzens Culberson Dial Fletcher	George Glass Harris Harrison Heffin Hitchcock Jones, N. Mex. Kendrick King Ladd	La Follette McKellar McNary Myers Norris Overman Pittman Robinson Sheppard Shields	Smith Stanfield Stanley Swanson Trammell Walsh, Mass. Walsh, Mont. Williams
or other hands	NOT V	OTING-12.	Mark Market
Colt Edge Elkins	France Gerry McCormick	Nicholson Norbeck Owen	Reed, Mo. Simmons Underwood

So the motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12817) to amend and supplement the merchant marine act. 1920, and for other purposes

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I move to recommit the pending bill, known as the ship subsidy bill, to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. CURTIS. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside, that the Senate proceed with the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar until 4 o'clock, if such bills shall not sooner be disposed of: at the expiration of the call of the calendar the Senate then go into executive session, and at the conclusion of executive business the Senate adjourn, in accordance with the previous agreement, until 11 o'clock on Monday next.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask that the Chair first state the motion I have made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas moves that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Commerce, pending which the Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the unanimous-consent agreement for which he has asked be entered into. Is there objection?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, there is one provision in the unanimous-consent agreement which ought to be made plain. The request of the Senator from Kansas does not make it plain. As I understood the Senator, it is proposed that we are to proceed with the calendar-

Mr. CURTIS. Where it was left off. Mr. NORRIS. Where it was left off, and at the conclusion of the consideration of the calendar, but not later than 4 o'clock, the Senate shall go into executive session and then adjourn

Mr. CURTIS. Yes. Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent agreement asked for by the Senator from Kansas? The Chair hears none, and it is entered into.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Record, as bearing on the ship subsidy bill, two short editorials appearing in the New York Globe of February 13 and February 17, 1923.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Globe, February 13, 1923.] MR. HARDING'S SINGLE-TRACK MIND.

MR. HARDING'S SINGLE-TRACK MIND.

It is President Harding, after all, who may go down in history as the possessor of the only authentic single-track mind. Waking or sleeping, his sole thought is ship subsidy. In his insistence upon it he has gravely endangered the British debt settlement, the farm credit legislation, and other important measures. With only three more weeks of the session, the opponents of the subsidy are already on the eve of a serious filibuster, while the party wheelhorses implore the President to be reasonable. However, the least stubborn of men displays continued inexplicable stubbornness, and the professional taker of advice refuses to take anybody's except Mr. Lasker's, which everyone but himself agrees ought not to be taken.

Every word which has been said in opposition to the ship subsidy in the past remains true to-day. The measure, for which Mr. Lasker is chiefly responsible, is dangerous, complicated, and capable of being used in the exercise of unjust discrimination. It gives the Shipping Board powers such as are exercised by no other department of the Government. It makes it possible for that body at its own pleasure to crush one American shipowner and endow another with enormous wealth. These shipowners, its sole beneficiaries, are themselves only lukewarm in their support of a bill which will suspend the sword of Damocles over their heads. They are also sensible enough to know that no subsidy which can be passed will create an American merchant marine or sell the Government's white elephant fleet when the carrying trade of the world is virtually paralyzed for lack of freight.

The deeper argument against the subsidy was forcefully explained by Senator Caldera, himself a "lame duck" yesterday. The present Congress does not represent the views of the country. There are scores of men in House and Senate who were defeated last November. In some cases the ship subsidy was an issue, and they were dismissed from office partly because of their support of it. If democracy has any meaning

[From the New York Globe, February 17, 1923.] WITHOUT A REDEEMING FEATURE.

WITHOUT A REDEEMING FEATURE.

President Harding has himself sounded what ought to be the knell of the ship subsidy bill. He has indicated that if it is passed with a proviso that funds must be voted by Congress from session to session he will veto it. He asks a 10-year experiment or nothing. Faced with those alternatives, Congress should find its choice not difficult. It should give the President nothing.

Regardless of the merits of subsidization of a merchant marine in general, the bill instigated by Chairman Lasker and now pending in the Senate ought not to be passed. It is a badly drawn, dangerous measure, which might or might not achieve its purpose of developing a merchant marine, while, regardless of success or failure, its direct burden on the Treasury could hardly be less than half a billion dollars during the 10 years the President asks. It places in the hands of the Shipping Board the most extraordinary and the broadest powers ever possessed in peace times by any branch of the Government. It opens undreamed-of possibilities of favoritism, since the smile or frown of the board would mean success or extinction for any American ship or line of ships. The bill is feared for this reason even by its beneficiaries, the American shipping men, who are plainly only lukewarm in its support, registering their approval of the principle rather than the instrument.

These shipping men are intelligent enough to realize that the chief argument used by Mr. Lasker and reechoed by the President in favor of the bill is fallacious. The subsidy will not enable the Government to sell off its huge fleet, which now costs us $50,000,000 a year for maintenance. Only a third of that fleet will ever be salable under any circumstances, and none of it will be bought by private operators as long as the world's freight-carrying trade is paralyzed for lack of business. Mr. Lasker's theory that in private hands a deficit of $50,000,000 can be turned into a deficit of only $10,000,000 is either a confession of most appailing wastefulness among his own subordinates or evidence of a delusion about the capacities of private shipping men.

In either case there is no justification for having a bad bill jammed through by a Congress of "lame ducks," some of whom were repudiated on the polis on this very issue. It is bad business, bad government, and bad democracy; and if the President refuses to realize these truths now, they will be driven home to him and the Republican Party in November, 1924.

STEAMSHIP "KIN-DAVE."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the next bill on the calendar.

The bill (S. 3843) for the relief of the owners of the steamship Kin-Dave was announced as next in order.

The Secretary read the bill, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration, as follows:

of the whole, proceeded to its consideration, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3.500 to the owners of the steamship Kin-Dave, as compensation for and in full satisfaction of all claims of such owners for any damages to said steamship Kin-Dave sustained as a result of a collision between said steamship and the U. S. S. Colonel Clayton on November 3, 1920, in the Milwaukee River, Wis.

Mr. KING. Let the report be read, Mr. President. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the report. The reading clerk read the report, submitted by Mr. CAPPER on February 7, as follows:

[Report to accompany S. 3843.]

[Report to accompany S. 3843.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3843) for the relief of the owners of the steamship Kin-Dave, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass without amendment.

The bill provides for the payment of $3,500 to the owners of the steamship Kin-Dave as compensation for and in full satisfaction of all claims of such owners for any damages to said steamship Kin-Dave sustained as a result of a collision between said steamship and the U. S. S. Colonel Clayton on November 3, 1920, in the Milwaukee River, Wis.

The following correspondence from the War Department is appended hereto and made a part of this report:

WAR DEPARTMENT,

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, August 11, 1922.

Washington, August 11, 1822.

The Chairman Committed on Claims.

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Sin: In further reply to yours of the 22d of July, inclosing copy of Senate bill 3843, for the relief of the owners of the steamship Kin-Dave, now pending before your committee, I have the honor to inform you that on May 13, 1922, I approved payment of the claims of the owners of the Kin-Dave in the sum of $3,500 after a review of the facts by the Acting Judge Advocate General embodied in an indorsement to The Adjutant General under date of May 10, 1922, a copy of which is hereto attached, and which fully sets forth the facts surrounding this occurrence. occurrence.

As there were no funds available from the appropriation provided for under the act of June 30, 1921, the owners of the Kin-Dave were advised by the Chief of Finance on the 21st ultimo that payment of the claim could only be made when an appropriation for that purpose was made by Congress. As above set forth, it is the opinion of the War Department that this claim is meritorious and should be paid.

This proposed legislation has been submitted to the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, as required by paragraph 3-a of Circular No. 49 of that bureau, and the director advises that this requested legislation is not in conflict with the financial program of the President,

Respectfully,

JOHN W. WEEKS.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S OFFICE,
May 10, 1922.

To The Adjutant General of the Army:

1. Reference your A. G. 569.14, Colonel Clayton (2-15-21) (Misc. Div.), May 2, 1922.

By thirteenth indorsement of this office to The Adjutant General, under date of November 4, 1921, this report of a board of officers which investigated an alleged damage to steamer Kin-Dave by Army steamer Colonel Clayton at Milwaukee, was returned recommending that before passing on the merits of the claim of the owners of the Kin-Dave the record should contain such evidence as would establish the following:

Dave the record should contain such evidence as would establish the following:

(a) That the property damaged (steamship Kin-Dave) was private property, and that at the time of the damage there was no contractual relation between the owners of the damaged property and the War Department;

(b) That the damage to the private property in question was incident to the training, practice, operation, or maintenance of the Army:

Army;
(c) That the amount of damage has been ascertained by the War Department; and

(d) That the owners will accept payment of the amount ascertained by the War Department in full satisfaction of such claim.

The board reconvened in accordance with this indorsement, and its supplemental proceedings are before this office for review, recommendation, and opinion. The supplemental proceedings are before this office for review, recommendation, and opinion. The supplemental proceedings are before this office for review, recommendation, and opinion. The supplemental proceeding in the Menominee River, Milwaukee; and that the steamer Colonel Clayton, owned and operated by the Way Department, was on that date proceeding under her own power from the Kin-Dave and the Sixth Street Bridge, during the course of which operation it is alleged she collided with the Kin-Dave, inflicting damage estimated by survey at from Strigge, during the course of which operation it is alleged she collided with the Kin-Dave, inflicting damage estimated by survey at from St.000 to Si.07.37 to repair. In its supplemental proceedings the board heard the testimony of the United St. Min-Dave immediately after the collision, in line of duty, and who stated that as a result thereof the had concluded that the Colonel Clayton was manurered in the first that the Kin-Dave (Clayton was manurered at due to the fact that the Kin-Dave (Clayton was manurered at due to the fact that the Kin-Dave (Clayton and the Colonel Clayton was manurered at due to the fact that the Kin-Dave (Clayton and the Colonel Clayton and the colonel Clayton, which would facilitate handling of the ship in close quarters, there being no undue currents, and the fact that the master, englished, are the principal causes of our arriving at our conclusions.

As further bearing on the occurrence, there is embodded in the supplemental report as an exhibit a marine protest signed by the

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LANDS DEVISED TO THE UNITED STATES BY JOSEPH BATTELL.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, some time ago the Senate passed Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 30. The object of that resolution was to decline a bequest made by Joseph Battell of 3,900 acres of land in Vermont for a national park. The concurrent resolution went to the House of Representatives, and the House resolution went to the House of Representatives, and the House changed it into a joint resolution. In order to conform with the action of the House I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys to report back favorably without amendment the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 270) concerning lands devised to the United States Government by the late Joseph Battell, of Middlebury, Vt. Under the joint resolution the Government declines the bequest and the lands revert to the estate of the decedent, and I submit a report (No. 1210).

thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LENBOOT in the chair). The Senator from Utah asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution just reported by him. Is there objection?

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Utah if there is any change in the language of the resolution?

Mr. SMOOT. There is not a word of change. The concurrent resolution is merely changed to a joint resolution.

Mr. FLETCHER. I understand that the proposed bequest is declined by Congress.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes. The will contains certain provisions that the Government does not wish to carry out.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which was read, as follows:

whereas Joseph Battell, deceased, late of Middlebury, county of Addison, State of Vermont, in and by his last will and testament devised to the Government of the United States of America about 3,900 acres of land situated in the towns of Lincoln and Warren, in the State of Vermont, for a national park; and Whereas said lands were devised to the United States of America upon certain conditions, among which were the following: That the Government should construct and maintain suitable roads and buildings upon the land constituting such national park for the use and accommodation of visitors to such park, and should employ suitable caretakers to the end and purpose that the woodland should be properly cared for and preserved so far as possible in its primitive beauty; and Whereas it is deemed inexpedient to accept said devise and to establish a national park in accordance with the terms thereof: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the acceptance of said devise so made by Joseph Battell in his last will and testament be declined by the Government of the United States, and that the estate of the said Joseph Battell be forever discharged from any obligation to the United States growing out of the devise before mentioned,

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

THE BARGE "HAVANA."

The bill (S. 4322) for the relief of the owners of the barge Havana was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill be read, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I think I can explain this measure to the satisfaction of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. President, a bill has already been passed providing for the relief of the owners of the barge Havana and is now a law. This bill merely seeks to correct an error in that act by substituting the words the "State of Maine" for the words "Commonwealth of Massachusetts." That is all for which the legislation provides. It is merely to amend a law which has been previously enacted and proposes to strike out the words "Commonwealth of Massachusetts" and to insert the words "State of Maine," so that the court may have jurisdiction.

Mr. KING. The Senator refers to the language of line 11, page 1, of the bill, does he?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. KING. It provides that the matter may be submitted to the United States district court for the district of Massachu-

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The purpose of the bill, as stated in the report, is to correct an error in the act by substituting the words "State of Maine" for the words "Commonwealth of Massachusetts." It was found that that change is necessary in order that the United States district court in Massachusetts.

sachusetts may take jurisdiction of the matter.

Mr. KING. But there is no controversy as to the locus of the corporation; it is a Maine corporation?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. That is the situation.

Mr. KING. And the purpose is to permit it to sue in the district court of Massachusetts?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the passage of the bill. The Senate, as in the Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the Staples Transportation Co., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Maine, owner of the barge Havana, arising out of a collision between the United States steamship Quincy and said barge Havana, at Hampton Roads, Va., on February 4, 1920, for and on account of the losses alleged to have been suffered in said collision by the owners of said barge by reason of damages to said barge, may be submitted to the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, under and in compliance with the rules of said court sitting as a court of admiralty; and that the said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the whole controversy and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of the legal damages sustained by reason of said collision, if any shall be found to be due, either for or against the United States of America, upon the same principle and measure of liability, with costs as in like cases of admiralty between private parties with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

SEC. 2. That the act entitled "An act for the relief of the owners of the barge Havana," approved September 18, 1922, is hereby repealed.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PEEDEE RIVER BRIDGE, SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mr. DIAL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4536) authorizing the building of a bridge across the Peedee River, S. C.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in the Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after the word "That" to insert "all or any of"; in line 4, after the word "or," to strike out the word "such" and insert "any"; in line 6, before the word "bridge," to strike out "highway"; in line 7, after the words "Peedee River," insert "at a point suitable to the interest of navigation, and," and in line 8, after the words "Cashua Ferry," to insert "at or near a point known as Hunts Bluff, or at or near a point known as Society Hill," so as to make the bill read:

Rhown as Society Hill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all or any of the counties of Darlington, Marlboro, and Dillon, in the State of South Carolina, or any townships in said counties as may desire to do so, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, operate, and maintain a bridge and approaches thereto across the Peedee River at a point suitable to the interest of navigation, and at or near a point known as Cashua Ferry, at or near a point known as Hunts Bluff, or at or near a point known as Society Hill, in said State, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. KING. Lebould like to inquire of the ach. Secretary.

Mr. KING. I should like to inquire of the able Senator from South Carolina whether the stream involved in this bill is a creek which he claims is navigable or whether as a matter of fact it is a navigable stream, for the Government is assuming jurisdiction over all of the little rivulets and creeks and streams, whether they are navigable or not, and is denominating them navigable. I wish to know whether or not this is a navigable stream over which the Federal Government actually under the Constitution does have jurisdiction.

Mr. DIAL. It is a navigable stream.
Mr. SMOOT. For what part of the year?

Mr. DIAL. It is navigable for all of the year. It is a large river-the Peedee River.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the passage of the bill. The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McNARY. A parliamentary inquiry.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McNARY. I was called out of the Chamber at the time the unanimous-consent agreement was entered into, and I desire to know if the agreement contemplates that the Senate shall return to the first part of the calendar or end the consideration of the calendar with the last bill on it?

Mr. KING. If I may be pardoned, I understand the unanimous-consent agreement to contemplate that the Senate shall finish the calendar and then, if the hour of 4 o'clock has not arrived, we return to the beginning of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. McNARY. I thank the Chair.

ELDREDGE & MASON, OF MALONE, N. Y.

The bill (S. 4396) for the relief of Eldredge & Mason, of Malone, N. Y., was announced as next in order, and the bill was

I should like to ask some Senator who is familiar with this claim whether the fund appropriated to enforce the Volstead Act is to be charged with this appropriation? would seem to me that if some officials who had charge of a given fund or were executing a policy under a certain act com-mitted a tort, that fund should be charged with the appropriation which is to be made, in order to rectify their mistake.

Mr. CAPPER. I will ask that that bill be passed over until its author returns to the Chamber. I have not the information desired by the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Very well. I am not objecting to the bill; it may be a very just claim, but I should like a little information on the subject, and I shall be glad to have it.

Mr. CAPPER. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be temporarily passed over.

HEIRS OF ROBERT LADD M'CORMICK, DECEASED.

The bill (H. R. 962) for the relief of the heirs of Robert Laird McCormick, deceased, was announced as next in order.

The bill was read, as follows:

He offi was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the heirs of Robert Laird McCormick, deceased, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $51.50 in full settlement of the claim of the said Robert Laird McCormick for cashing en insufficient indorsement Post Office Department warrant No. 11415, drawn April 28, 1887, to the order of Charles Perry for $51.50.

Mr. KING. This seems a very insignificant amount, and I am reluctant even to ask an explanation, but the bill itself indicates that there was some negligence somewhere, and I should like some explanation as to why the Government should pay when there was an insufficient indorsement, and evidently some employee of the Government failed to exercise due diligence.

Mr. CAPPER. The report of the Post Office Department

I inclose herewith a copy of a letter from the Auditor for the Post Office Department, dated December 19, 1916, from which it appears that the Sawyer County Bank of Hayward, Wis., cashed a Post Office Department warrant for $51.50, issued to Charles Perry, a subcontractor, for carrying the mails; that the warrant was cashed by the bank on an imperfect indorsement and was subsequently returned by the Treasury Department for a proper indorsement or power of attorney to indorse the said warrant, as required by section 3477 of the Revised Statutes; that the said Perry disappeared and neither the proper Indorsement nor the power of attorney could therefore be obtained; that the bank, which was a private bank, has been discontinued and that Robert Laird McCormick was the sole owner of that bank. It also appears that the warrant above referred to is now in the possession of the heirs of the said McCormick.

As the amount of this warrant, $51.50, is still carried on the books of the department as an outstanding liability of the Postal Service, and the circumstances above recited strongly presume that the heirs of Robert Laird McCormick are entitled to the payment of this obligation, I can see no objection to the favorable consideration of the bill by your committee.

Very truly yours,

WM. H. HAYS,

Postmaster General.

WM. H. HAYS, Postmaster General.

That is all the information we had on the subject. It seems to me that under the circumstances the bill should pass.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. W. GLIDDEN AND E. F. HOBBS.

The bill (H. R. 2702) for the relief of J. W. Glidden and E. F. Hobbs was announced as next in order.

The bill was read, as follows:

The olli was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be paid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $267.32 to J. W. Glidden and E. F. Hobbs, of Lawrence, Kans., to reimburse them for money necessarily expended in connection with their contract with the Government for the improvement of Huron Cemetery, an Indian reservation in Kansas City, Kans., in defending their interests in sults brought by the Connelley sisters, Indian wards of the Government, to prevent them from carrying out their contract with the United States Government in improving the Huron Cemetery, in Kansas City, Kans.

Mr. KING. I should like some explanation of the bill. Mr. CURTIS. The junior Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the committee, is present and can explain the bill.

Mr. CAPPER. This bill involves the reimbursement of two men who were awarded a contract for making certain improvements and repairs on a national cemetery which at one time was on Indian land.

Mr. CURTIS. It is so yet.

Mr. CAPPER, And it is so yet. The Connelley sisters claimed title to the land and occupied it forcibly, as they had a but there and called it their home. In the meantime the Government undertook to make necessary repairs.

The contractor was obstructed in his work and sued by these Connelley sisters, and obliged to make trips to Leavenworth to attend the Federal court. The amount allowed him here is simply the amount of money he actually paid out by reason of this controversy between the Government and these two Indian women, who claimed they had some title to the land. I do not think there can be really any question at all but that he was harassed and troubled for months there, and lost money on his contract, through no fault whatever of his

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN ALBRECHT.

The bill (H. R. 4421) for the relief of John Albrecht was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to John Albrecht the sum of $50 as compensation for damages sustained by him when an airplane of the Air Mail Service descended on his property in March, 1921.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed,

RUPERTO VILCHE.

The bill (H. R. 5251) for the relief of Ruperto Vilche was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3,000 to Ruperto Vilche, of Guantanamo City, Cuba, in full compensation for the loss of his daughter, Idelisa Vilche, and for injury to his daughter, Ofelia Vilche, the former having been killed and the latter injured by a bullet fired from his rifle by Pvt. Ralph F. Carter, United States Marine Corps, who became suddenly insane while on sentry duty at the marine camp near Guantanamo City, and for all expense incurred by the sald Ruperto Vilche in connection with the said death and injury.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN F. HOMEN.

The bill (H. R. 7322) for the relief of John F. Homen was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as fol-

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to John F. Homen, of San Antonio, Tex., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,000, in full settlement of his claim against the Government of the United States for the serious injury caused by being struck by a Government truck operated by a soldier of the United States Army on July 4, 1919, in San Antonio, Tex.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I do not know whether there is any use in objecting to these bills or not; but, as I have often stated heretofore, these cases ought to be allowed to go to a court. I must protest against this method of legislating. This bill has been reported upon favorably, but it is a loose way of legislating. The next bill, I believe, appropriates about $5,000. We often hear one side of a case, and we think the claimant makes out a case, but when we hear the other side we often see that the claimant was to blame, and brought about his own injury; and I do hope we shall have some way of settling these matters in a businesslike way.

I shall not object to the consideration of this bill, but I want to say that I do believe we ought to have some regular method whereby tort cases can be referred to some court and be thoroughly investigated. Otherwise we shall have our calendar crowded all the time with claims about which we know but lit-It is a bad precedent.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH ZITEK.

The bill (H. R. 8448) for the relief of Joseph Zitek was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay to Joseph Zitek, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $75 as compensation for damage done to the wheat field of said Joseph Zitek, near Ulysses, Nebr., May 29, 1921, by airplanes of the United States Air Mail Service.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VINCENT L. KEATING.

The bill (H. R. 9944) for the relief of Vincent L. Keating was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Vincent L. Keating the sum of $385.32, representing public funds for which he was accountable, which were stolen while in his custody on or about June 7, 1918, and which he refunded to the United States to make good the loss of these public

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let the report be read, or at least sufficient of it to advise us as to the facts of the matter.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I think I can explain the bill very briefly. The report is rather long, and the Senator perhaps will be satisfied with my explanation.

When the Twenty-sixth Infantry was sent up to the front near the town of Broyes, France, the captain of one of the companies of that regiment had the money with which to pay his troops. He intrusted it-

Mr. KING. That is the case to which the Senator directed my attention the other day, as I recall. When this man was called to the colors he placed the money in his tent and it was stolen?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. He put the money under the floor of the dugout, and was summoned with all his troops to the front-line trenches to resist an attack. When he got back to the dugout the money was gone. He could have claimed it, under Army Regulations, with proof from his captain of the loss; but the captain was killed in the attack, so there was nobody to prove the loss except the claimant himself, and he has been forced to come to Congress.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRED E. JONES DREDGING CO.

The bill (H. R. 9862) for the relief of the Fred E. Jones Dredging Co. was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

was read, as follows;

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the Fred E. Jones Dredging Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, and doing business in the city of Norfolk, Va., against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by a collision between its coal scow No. 3 and the steamship Minnesota, which occurred about 6 o'clock p. m. on February 20, 1919, while said scow, loaded with coal and equipment, was moored near the Norfolk & Western Railroad Co.'s merchandise Pier No. 2 at Lamberts Point, Va., may be sued for by the said owners in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree therein for the amount of such damages sustained by reason of said collision as shall be found to be due either for or against the United States upon the same principles and measures of liability and damages as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act. the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCES MARTIN.

The bill (H. R. 10047) for the relief of Frances Martin was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to Frances Martin, widow of Peter Leslie Martin, of Logan, Hocking County, Ohio, out of any moneys in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000 as compensation and relief for the loss by death on March 31, 1919, in Grant Hospital, Columbus, State of Ohio, of her husband, Peter Leslie Martin, who on October 5, 1918, volunteered his services as an undertaker to the Government during the epidemic of influenza, at which time he went to Camp Sherman, in the State of Ohio, to assist in taking care of the bodies of the soldiers who died in great numbers by reason of said epidemic, and that during the discharge of his duties he became infected with blood poisoning, from which he died.

Mr. KINC. Mr. President, I rise to make inquiry of the

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I rise to make inquiry of the committee as to whether they considered the wisdom, in making this appropriation, of making it directly to the estate of the deceased or to the heirs? I observe that the appropriation goes only to the widow, and the report indicates that there are minor children. Of course, if there were a legal obliga-tion upon the part of the Government the payment to the wife would not extinguish the liability of the Government to the children. It seems to me that it would be very wise in these cases to pay to the administratrix or to the executrix of the estate of the decedent, or to the heirs.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, I shall be glad to explain this case. I will not discuss the attitude of the committee, because I am not familiar with their proceedings, but I do know quite thoroughly about this case. There is one child. The quite thoroughly about this case. The circumstances of the case are as follows

Mr. KING. I shall not ask the Senator to explain it, because it is a very pathetic and very tragic case.

Mr. WILLIS. It is a very, very pathetic case-exceed-

Mr. KING. While I think there is no liability upon the part of the Government, I think this is such a case as calls for an appropriation from the Government. If I did think there was any legal liability that might be enforced in any court where the case might be submitted, I should ask to amend by making the appropriation run to the widow and to the minor children, or to an administrator of the estate, if an administrator has been appointed, and, if not, when an administrator competent to speak for the estate has been appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Mr. WILLIS. I understand the Senator's position.

Mr. KING. But I shall make no objection.

Mr. WILLIS. I thank the Senator.
Mr. KING. It does seem to me, however, that the Committee on Claims ought to consider these matters and make the appropriation run to the estate or to all the heirs.

Mr. WILLIS. So that the record may be straight, Mr. President, and in answer to the Senator, I ask unanimous consent that the first part of the report, which is very brief, may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered

The portion of the report indicated (No. 1104), submitted by Mr. Capper on February 7, 1923, is as follows:

[Report to accompany H. R. 10047.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10047) for the relief of Frances Martin, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass without amendment.

The facts in the case are fully set forth in House Report No. 988, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session, which is appended hereto and made a part of this report.

[House Report No. 988, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session.]

[House Report No. 988, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session.]

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10047) for the relief of Frances Martin, having considered the same, report thereon with a recommendation that it do pass with the following amendment:

In line 7, strike out "$25,000" and insert "$5,000."

This same bill was reported favorably by the Committee on War Claims in the Sixty-sixth Congress (Rept. No. 1099, 66th Cong., 2d sess.), but was not reached on the calendar.

The present chairman of the committee opposed the reporting of the bill at that time, as he did not believe the Federal Government should go so far or be so liberal in granting relief for accidents arising out of activities connected with the war and where there was no direct liability on the part of the Federal Government. However, finding by the many bills of a similar character passed by both branches of Congress we have evidently adopted a very liberal policy in dealing with these claims, I therefore have voted to report out this bill and request its careful consideration by the committee.

Peter Leslie Martin was an undertaker following his profession at Columbus, Ohio. He was 32 years old and earning about $4,000 per year. He left a widow and one son, 11 years old. He had no property of any account, and they have no means of support.

Time, October, 1918. It was during the influenza epidemic at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio.

There were between 500 and 600 bodies of dead soldiers piled in barns and outhouses and no one to take care of them.

Army officers went to Columbus, Ohio, and practically pressed into service three undertakers. No mention of compensation was made at the time, but it is understood they were paid a nominal sum for their work.

Martin contracted blood poisoning while performing this work and work.

Martin contracted blood poisoning while performing this work and died a few months afterwards.

He performed work that was absolutely necessary, work that the Government was unable to do at that time with its regular enlisted personnel.

In view of the above facts, which are all substantiated by attached affidavits, we respectfully submit the same for your consideration and recommend its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICUS ENFIELD.

The bill (H. R. 10179) for the relief of Americus Enfield was announced as next in order and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit the account of Americus Enfield, postmaster at Bedford, Pa., in the sum of $41,148.94, due to the United States on account of war savings stamps and postage stamps which were lost as the result of burglary of said post office on November 7, 1918.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall have to object to the consideration of that bill unless there is some explanation of it. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Reed] has just risen, I presume for the purpose of furnishing information. I invite his attention to the fact that appropriations are frequently sought by postmasters or custodians of public funds because through their negligence or through their lack of due care, as I have thought, in many instances, property has been lost. I do not know the facts about this case. I shall be glad to hear from the Senator in regard to them.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, this is a very large claim, and it deserves the sort of scrutiny that the Senator from Utah has very properly given, and I think it has re-ceived a similar scrutiny in the Committee on Claims.

The burglary here was committed on November 7, 1918, during the height of one of the war savings stamp campaigns, when and passed.

the various postmasters were charged with the possession of a large amount of war savings stamps. In this particular case there is evidence not only by the clerk who was charged with the duty of locking the safe but by the watchman and the janitor, who were there with him at the time he closed it, that all the doors were properly closed. The burglars blew open the rear doors of the post office or forced them open with a jimmy; they then forced their way through the outer door of the vault, and after muffling the inner doors in blankets which they had stolen from some near-by farmers they blasted open the inner door of the vault with nitroglycerin and took from the vault about $2,000 worth of postage stamps and $39,000 worth of war savings stamps.

No suggestion of negligence, so far as I know, has been made by anybody in the department. The case was very carefully inspected, naturally, because of the large amount involved; and the Postmaster General in office at that time and the present Postmaster General have successively recommended that the claim be allowed. Both as to the amount and as to the circumstances of the burglary the proof is abundant, and I think the claim is a just one.

Mr. KING. I would like to inquire of the Senator whether any inference of negligence might arise from the retention of such a large sum in the safe? Why did he not transmit it to Washington instead of accumulating so large an amount?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am glad the Senator asked the question. The stamps had been sent to him for sale in connection with the campaign. They had not yet been sold. They had just been issued by the Treasury Department at Washington and had been remitted to him for delivery as they were sold. There was no negligence, so far as I can see, in remitting money, because there was no substantial amount of money stolen. It was all in stamps which he could not send back, and which he had no other place to keep except in his vault.

Mr. KING. Was there any difficulty in ascertaining the amount that was stolen from the safe?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No; the report of the committee is rather long. The manner of ascertainment, which is stated in the report, was such that they calculated to the last penny, and the war savings stamps were calculated at the minimum value as if sold at the date of issue.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRANT ROAD, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (S. 4117), authorizing the closing of certain portions of Grant Road in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. May I ask the Senator reporting the bill or any Senator who is familiar with it whether the passage of the bill is recommended by the District Commissioners?

Mr. CAPPER. I will state to the Senator that, while I did not report the bill, I am a member of the committee which reported it and the Senator will find in the last paragraph of the report from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia the statement that they do recommend favorable action on the bill. The chairman of the District Committee is very anxious that the bill shall be passed.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have no objection to its consideration. There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole and it was read, as follows;

Committee of the Whole and it was read, as follows;

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized to close, vacate, and abandon so much of Grant Road as lies between Reno Road and Connecticut Avenue northwest, upon the acquisition by the District of Columbia by dedication, purchase, or condemnation of the land lying within the lines of Davenport Street between Reno Road and Connecticut Avenue, and within the lines of Thirty-sixth Street between Davenport Street and Connecticut Avenue, as laid down upon the permanent system of highways for the District of Columbia, the title to the portion of said Grant Road so closed and abandoned to revert to the abutting property owners.

SEC. 2. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized to sell a tract or parcel of land owned by the District of Columbia, numbered for purposes of assessment and taxation as parcel 46 over 20: Provided, That said tract or parcel of land shall not be sold by said commissioners at a price less than the assessed value thereof: Provided further, That the money so realized shall be expended in the purchase of a playground or school site.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time,

WIDENING OF FIRST STREET NE.

The bill (H. R. 5018) to authorize the widening of First Street NE., and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill be reported. The reading clerk read the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. Let the bill go over.
Mr. McKELLAR. There is a proposition of adjustment in such matters which I think we will know about absolutely by Monday. I am going to object to the consideration of any District bills this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CORNELIUS DUGAN.

The bill (H. R. 1290) for the relief of Cornelius Dugan was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is hereby authorized to advance on the retired list of the Navy, to the rank of lieutenant commander, Cornelius Dugau, who served with credit in the United States Navy during the Civil War and the war with the German Government; Provided, That the said Cornelius Dugan shall not in consequence of such advancement be entitled to any increase in the pay which he is now receiving as a retired officer of the Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LIEUT, COMMANDER GREY SKIPWITH.

The bill (H. R. 6538) for the relief of Grey Skipwith was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Lieut. Commander Grey Skipwith. Supply Corps, United States Navy, who was eligible for promotion to the grade of pay inspector with rank of commander prior to the 1st day of July, 1918, and who was subsequently found physically not qualified for promotion and then retired in the rank of lieutenant commander, shall be deemed to have been retired in the rank he would have attained if the act of the 1st of July, 1918, extending promotion by selection to the staff corps of the Navy had not been enacted.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MAJ. RALPH S. KEYSER.

The bill (H. R. 11340) to advance Maj. Ralph S. Keyser on the lineal list of officers of the United States Marine Corps so that he will take rank next after Maj. John R. Henley was next in order and was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he hereby is, authorized to advance Maj. Ralph S. Keyser on the lineal list of officers of the United States Marine Corps, so that he will take rank next after Maj. John R. Henley: Provided, That no back pay, bounty, or emoluments shall be allowed by reason of the passage of this act.

Mr. JONES of Washington. May I ask whether the bill would advance Major Keyser over other officers'

SWANSON. There is no objection in the department. The bill simply puts this officer where he would have been if he had passed the examination in 1908.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Without interfering with any of the other officers?

Mr. SWANSON. It does not. He was in five battles, including the battle of Belleau Wood, where he was wounded. is no man in the entire Marine Corps who had a more creditable record.

Mr. ROBINSON. Why did he not take a new examination? Mr. SWANSON. He was in the service, and when the time came for taking the examination to go from one grade to another he could not pass it. When he finally took the examina-tion he was found physically fit. The bill will permit him to be promoted in the regular order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Why could he not stand the examination in the first place?

Mr. SWANSON. I think he was not in physical condition at the time of the first examination, but, as very frequently happens, he got better. Officers under like conditions are continued in the service and the reexamination postponed a month or two months, sometimes even a year, to enable them, if they can, to become physically fit. Afterwards he passed the physical examination and the bill merely puts him where he would have been if he had passed the physical examination originally

Mr. ROBINSON. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN DISRURSING OFFICERS.

The bill (S. 4448) for the relief of certain disbursing officers was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the General Accounting Office is authorized and directed to credit in the respective accounts of the following-named disbursing officers and agents of the United States the sums hereinafter indicated, for payments made by them pursuant to pay rolls certified by J. H. Cameron, custodian of the post-office building at Evanston, Wyo., such payments having been disallowed by the General Accounting Office:

J. L. Summers, disbursing clerk, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., for salary payments to Arthur Foley, October 16, 1918, to February 28, 1919, $270;

Thomas F. Thomas, special disbursing agent, Sait Lake City, Utah, for salary payments to Arthur Foley, March 1, 1919, to August 15, 1919, $340; and for salary payments to Walter V. Foley, August 16, 1919, to January 31, 1920, $385;

John F. Rasmussen, acting special disbursing agent, Sait Lake City, Utah, for salary payments to Walter V. Foley, February 1, 1920, to May 31, 1920, $280; and Estelle V. Collier, special disbursing agent, Salt Lake City, Utah, for salary payments to Walter V. Foley, June 1, 1920, to December 31, 1920, $1,330.

Mr. ROBINSON, May I ask the Sepator from Michigan

Mr. ROBINSON. May I ask the Senator from Michigan whether the Post Office Department has recommended the various items in the bill?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have not any recollection definitely what the proceedings were, but the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Kendrick], who introduced the bill, can undoubtedly answer the Senator's question.

Mr. KENDRICK. My understanding is that the comptroller stated that they had no authority to furnish this relief under the law. It was suggested that it should be done by legislation. The concluding paragraph in the letter of the comptroller reads as follows:

It does not appear that the disbursing agent had actual notice of the true facts of this case, or that there was anything upon the face of the vouchers to put her on guard, or that she is chargeable with fault or negligence in not detecting the concealment of facts. However, no lawful credit can be based upon a fraudulent transaction, and the General Accounting Office is not authorized to relieve a disbursing officer who is the victim of fraud, although innocent of participation in or knowledge of the fraud.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have no objection to the passage of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LAWS RELATING TO THE JUDICIARY.

Mr. CUMMINS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 4614) to amend section $1 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the Judiciary," approved March $, 1911, reported it without amendment.

AMENDMENT OF THE REVENUE ACT OF 1921.

The bill (H. R. 13774) to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to exchanges of property was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I have an amendment to which I think the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCumber] will not object. It is not exactly in form as it ought to be, but the bill will have to go to conference, anyway. So I ask the Senator if he will not let me offer the amendment, as I have suggested to him, and when it goes to conference he and the other conferees can fix it all right.

Mr. McCUMBER. There can be no objection to that, but I wish to explain the bill. I think it is best explained in the report, but, as the bill itself is somewhat complex, I will have to make a little more clear the statement of the condition.

Paragraph 202 of the revenue law, 1921, basis for determining gain or loss, in subdivision (c), reads:

For the purpose of this title, on an exchange of property, real, per sonal, or mixed, or any other such property, no gain or loss shall be recognized unless the property received in exchange has a readily realizable market value; but if the property received in exchange has a readily realizable market value, no gain or loss shall be recognized—

Now, under what circumstances?

(1) When such property held for investment or for productive use in trade or business-

Then the exceptions-

(not including stock in trade or other property held primarily for sale) is exchanged for property of a like kind or use.

So as the law now stands when property held for investment or for productive use in trade or business is exchanged for other property of a like kind or like use, no gain, even though measured in a large cash difference, is taxable. The Secretary of the Treasury, who has asked for the amendment of the law,

Said:

Under this section a taxpayer who purchases a bond of $1,000 which appreciates in value may exchange that bond for another bend of the value of $1,000, together with $100 in cash, and the $100 in cash representing the interest in the value of the bond while held by the taxpayer without the realization of taxable income. This provision in the act is being widely abused. Many brokers, investment houses, and bond houses have established exchange departments advertising that they will exchange securities for their customers in such manuer as to result in no taxable gain.

The relief from this taxable gain under the law as it now stands does not include stock in trade or other property held primarily for sale. The proposed law broadens this exception by adding thereto:

"And in the case of property held for investment, not including stocks, bonds, notes, choses in action, certificates of trust or beneficial interest, or other securities or evidence of indebtedness, or interest," so that the law is made to include property held for investment or productive use in trade where an actual gain has been made.

That explains, as hearly as I can explain, the reason for the

That explains, as nearly as I can explain, the reason for the change in the law.

Mr. LODGE. I would like to ask the Senator from North Dakota a question. I do not think the bill ought to be made retroactive

Mr. McCUMBER. It begins with 1923, as the bill now reads. It provides-

That paragraph (1) of subdivision (c) of section 202 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended, to take effect January 1, 1923, to read as follows:

So it is not retroactive except as between February and January.

Mr. LODGE. It seems to me that there have been a great many of the exchanges made in perfectly good faith without any profit on the exchange. I think it ought not to take effect any profit of the exchange. I think it ought not to take effect until it becomes a law. It is made retroactive for at least the months of January and February.

Mr. McCUMBER. I suppose that all the arrangements which have been made for the purpose of settling the accounts of gains and losses were made prior to January 1, 1923, and therefore there would be no objection, it seems to me, to making the period begin with the taxable year commencing January 1, 1923.

Mr. LODGE. I think a great many of the exchanges which have been made would perhaps show no profit. However, I do not know about that.

Mr. McCUMBER. If there is an equality in value in the exchange, of course, there would be no tax anywhere. It is only when there is a gain, and then the gain is taxed. I can not see that any injustice, at least, would be done.

Mr. LODGE. I think it would be fairer to make it effective when the bill becomes a law.

Mr. McCUMBER. I have no objection, if the Senator desires, to amending it so as to read that it shall take effect on and after the approval of this act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Reading Clerk. On page 1, lines 4 and 5, strike out "January 1, 1923," and insert in lieu thereof "on and after the approval of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. OVERMAN. I now offer my amendments.

Mr. OVERMAN. I now ofter my amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

Mr. OVERMAN's amendments were, on page 1, line 3, after the word "That," to strike out "paragraph" and insert "paragraphs"; in the same line, before the word "of" where it occurs the first time, to insert "and (2)"; in line 4, before the word "amended," to strike out "is" and to insert "are"; and after line 13 insert: "When a person exchanges stock in a corportion for other stock in the same corporation or when in the poration for other stock in the same corporation or when in the reorganization of one or more corporations a person receives in place of any stock or securities owned by him stock or securities in a corporation a party to or resulting from such reorganiza-tion," so as to make the bill read:

tion," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraphs (1) and (2) of subdivision (c) of section 202 of the revenue act of 1921 are amended, to take effect on and after the approval of this act, to read as follows:

"(1) When any such property held for investment, or for productive use in trade or business (not including stock in trade or other property held primarily for sale, and in the case of property held for investment not including stock, bonds, notes, choses in action, certificates of trust or beneficial interest, or other securities or evidences of indebtedness or interest), is exchanged for property of a like kind or use.

"When a person exchanges stock in a corporation for other stock in the same corporation or when in the reorganization of one or more corporations a person receives in place of any stock or securities owned by him stock or securities in a corporation a party to or resulting from such reorganization."

Sec. 2. Subdivision (e) of section 202 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended, to take effect January 1, 1923, to read as follows:

"(e) Where property is exchanged for other property which has no readily realizable market value, together with money or other property which has a readily realizable market value, then the money or the fair market value of the property having such readily realizable market value together with money or ealizable market value of in exchange shall be applied against and reduce the basis, provided in this section, of the property exchanged, and if in excess of such basis shall be taxable to the extent of the excess; but when property is exchanged for property specified in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subdivision (c) as received in exchange, together with money or other property of a readily realizable market value other than that specified in such paragraphs, the amount of the gain resulting from such exchange shall be computed in accordance with subdivisions (a) and (b) of this section, but in no such case shall the taxable gain exceed the amount of the money and the fair market value of such other property received in exchange."

The amendments were agreed to

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

SOIL SURVEY OF LAUDERDALE COUNTY, ALA.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. House Concurrent Resolution 83 is lying on the table. Without objection, it will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

The House concurrent resolution was referred to the Committee on Printing, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 2,000 additional copies of the soil survey of Lauderdale County, Ala., for the use of the House document room.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state the

Mr. McNARY. Under the rule under which we are proceeding is it permissible to move to take up a bill after objection has been made?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair's recollection of the unanimous consent agreement is that only unobjected bills are to be considered to-day. The next bill on the calendar will SINKING FUND FOR BONDS AND NOTES OF THE UNITED STATES.

The bill (H. R. 13827) relating to the sinking fund for bonds and notes of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subdivision (a) of section 6 of the Victory Liberty loan act is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence a comma and the following words: "and of bonds and notes thereafter issued, under any of such acts or under any of such acts as amended, for refunding purposes."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEAMBOAT INSPECTION SERVICE.

The bill (H. R. 12368) to abolish the inspection districts of Apalachicola, Fla., and Burlington, Vt., and the office of one supervising inspector, Steamboat Inspection Service, was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I ask that the bill may go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

LIEUT. COL. JAMES M. PALMER,

The bill (H. R. 11603) to validate for certain purposes the revocation of discharge orders of Lieut, Col. James M. Palmer and the orders restoring such officer to his former rank and command was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Lieut. Col. James M. Palmer, of the National Guard of the State of Maine, who was in the Federal service during the World War, and who was discharged from such service during said war, and who subsequent to such discharge was notified by the War Department of the revocation of the orders discharging him from the Federal service and of his restoration to his former rank and command, and to whom orders were thereafter issued by the War Department and by the departments thereof, and by his superior officers of the Army, which orders were thereafter acted upon by said James M. Palmer, shall be deemed to have been lawfully reinstated in the Federal service by such orders of revocation of discharge and of restoration to rank and command, for the purposes of the succeeding clause, and shall be entitled, from date of notification of such revocation orders, to pay, travel, and other allowances to the date of his final discharge in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had not been previously discharged. same mann discharged.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONFERENCE OF FEDERAL RESERVE OFFICIALS (S. DOC. NO. 310).

Mr. GLASS. I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a Senate document a transcript of the meeting of the advisory council and governors of the Federal Reserve Board in the city of Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by title and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 13724. An act for the relief of Hugh Marshall Montgomery; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

H. R. 14222. An act to amend the trading with the enemy act:

to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 14200. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 14288. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war; to the Committee on Pensions.

PROCEEDS OF SALES OF PROPERTY.

The bill (S. 4318) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to make collections and refunds of taxes out of the proceeds of sales of property held in the Treasury was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCUMBER. This bill, being a Senate bill which was reported favorably from the Committee on Finance, ought to be passed over, for the reason that the same provisions were reported as an amendment to House bill 13775.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator desire that the bill go over or be indefinitely postponed?

Mr. McCUMBER. I ask that it be passed over at the present

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

MARGARET NOLAN.

The bill (S. 1513) for the relief of Margaret Nolan was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert :

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Veterans' Bureau, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sums required to carry out the provisions of this act, to be disbursed by it as hereinafter directed, in full settlement for personal injuries sustained by Thomas Nolan on the 28th day of April, 1919, when run down by an ambulance belonging to the United States Army at Third Street and Third Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Veterans' Bureau is hereby authorized and directed to pay to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the sum of $150, in full settlement of its claim for the treatment of Thomas Nolan for the injuries above mentioned; to Elliott, Jones & Fanning, of 215 Montague Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., the sum of $150, in full settlement of all charges and claims for services in connection with the claim for the above-mentioned injuries; to Margaret Nolan, of 369 Hoyt Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., the sum of $350, in full settlement of all claims for disbursements and loss in connection with the injuries to her son above mentioned; and to Margaret Nolan, the mother of Thomas Nolan, the sum of $25 per month for a period of 96 months, to be used in aiding the said Thomas Nolan to secure a practical education.

If for any reason it should become impossible or impractical to make such payments to the mother before the last amount above provided shall have been paid for the benefit of the said Thomas Nolan, then the Veterans' Bureau shall make the payments to the legal guardian of the said Thomas Nolan.

The Veterans' Bureau may require such reports as it may deem proper to show the money paid is being properly used for the education of the boy as intended and may suspend payment for want of such reports.

Mr. CALDER Mr. President this bill is for the relief of Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, this bill is for the relief of Margaret Nolan, the mother of Thomas Nolan. The record in the case shows that Thomas Nolan, a boy 9 years old, while crossing a street in Brooklyn was run down by an Army ambulance going at a very fast rate of speed. As I originally introduced the bill it proposed to give his mother, who is his guardian, $5,000. The committee have struck out all of the bill which was introduced by me and in lieu thereof have inserted language which provides that his mother shall be paid the sum of only $350; that the hospital where he was treated shall be paid $150; and a firm of attorneys for services ren-dered shall be paid to the extent of $150, and that for 96 months the mother shall be paid $25 a month to take care of the boy.

Mr. McKELLAR. In the aggregate, how much will that be? Mr. CALDER. It will aggregate $3,050. I know the case and I have seen the boy.

Mr. McKELLAR. Was the boy killed?

Mr. CALDER. No; but the boy was run over and will be a cripple for life.

Mr. McKELLAR. How was he injured?

Mr. CALDER. His ankle was run over. I have seen the boy; in fact, I have examined his foot. He limps very badly, and will limp forever. I think the sum of $3,050, distributed in the manner proposed, will help to educate him, at any rate. Mr. LODGE. By what kind of a wagon was he injured?

Mr. CALDER. By an Army ambulance, going at a very rapid rate of speed.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to the bill, Mr. Presi-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MAILING PRIVILEGES FOR PUBLICATIONS FOR THE BLIND.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I inquire if there would be objection to returning to Order of Business No. 1004. was absent from the Chamber when that number was called. I do not think there will be any objection to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is proceeding under a unanimous-consent agreement to consider bills on the calendar

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Very well, I withhold my request at the present time until the calendar may be concluded.

HASTINGS BROS.

The bill (S. 1490) for the relief of G. T. and W. B. Hastings, trading as Hastings Bros., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill was read, as follows:

the Whole. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of G. T. and W. B. Hastings, partners trading as Hastings Bros. and doing business in the city of Norfolk, Va., owners of the steam water boat Iola, against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by collision between the said steam water boat and the United States tug Hercules in Elizabeth River on the 3d day of April, 1919, may be sued for by the said Hastings Bros. In the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of said Hastings Bros., or against the said Hastings Bros. in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided. That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

Mr. McKELLAR. As I understand, the bill merely provides

Mr. McKELLAR. As I understand, the bill merely provides that suit may be brought, and I shall not object to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOUIS F. MEISSNER.

The bill (S. 1538) for the relief of Louis F. Meissner was announced as next in order. The bill was read, as follows:

announced as next in order. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to redeem, in favor of Louis F. Meissner, a resident of Elmira, N. Y., formerly of Germania, Pa., United States 4 per cent coupon bonds, funded loan of 1907, Nos. 76978, 76979, 76980, 76981, for $100 each, with interest from October 1. 1906, to the date of the maturity of the bonds on July 2, 1907, the said bonds with coupons attached having been stolen from the said Louis F. Meissner in February, 1907: Provided, That the said Louis F. Meissner shall first file in the Treasury Department a bond in the penal sum of double the amount of the principal of said bonds and the interest due thereon, with good and sufficient surety, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, to indemnify and save harmless the United States from any loss on account of said bonds and interest.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CURTIS. I should like to know whether the bonds which it is alleged were stolen, or any of the coupons attached thereto, have ever been presented to the department for pay-

Mr. CALDER. There is a report on the bill which sets forth the facts.

Mr. CURTIS. I ask the question for the reason that if this bill is to be passed, then every man who has lost Government bonds or had them stolen from him should be similarly treated and his bonds should be made good by the Government. are going to pass this bill we ought to pass other similar bills.

Mr. McKELLAR. I imagine there will be a great many of them.

Mr. CALDER. It is stated in the report that-

The bonds in question have not been presented since their alleged theft in 1907, that no coupons have been received at the Treasury Department dated later than October 1, 1906, and that there has been no claim made on account of the said bonds so far as the department is aware other than by Louis F. Meissner.

Mr. ROBINSON. When were the bonds lost or stolen?

Mr. CALDER. In 1906.

Mr. DIAL. What is the amount involved?

Mr. CALDER. Four hundred dollars. Under the bill before the owner from whom the bonds were stolen can obtain any benefit he is required to give bond to the Treasury Department in an amount double the face value of the bonds; so that the Government is protected in every way.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Secretary of the Treasury recommend the passage of this bill?

Mr. CALDER. As shown by the report, a letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury says that if the committee so desires "a bill will be prepared in this office."

I understand that the department has no objection. The committee examined the matter very carefully and there was no objection to it. The Government, I repeat, is amply protected.

Mr. McKELLAR. How much does the bill propose to appropriate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that there were four bonds of $100 each

Mr. CALDER. The amount is $400. Mr. CAPPER. The Secretary of the Treasury approved the bill provided the interests of the Government were amply protected by the filing of the necessary bond.

Mr. McKELLAR. In case they should turn up in other

Mr. CALDER. Yes. Mr. BROUSSARD. The claimant is required to furnish a bond of $800 in order to collect $400.

Mr. KING. I should like to ask the Senator from New York, in my time if his time has expired, if he thinks it wise for the Government of the United States to establish the precedent of paying for every bond that may be stolen or lost?

Mr. CALDER. I do, provided the Government is amply protected. In this case the owner of the bonds is required to give surety satisfactory to the Treasury Department for twice the face value of the bonds. Suppose fire should consume bonds in large amounts, or suppose they should be stolen, or suppose they should be lost at sea, will it be contended that the Treasury Department should have the advantage of that and refuse payment for the bonds, notwithstanding the Government is amply

Mr. KING. If I may say a word in reply to the Senator, where there is satisfactory evidence—and it must be almost conclusive—that bonds have been lost by fire or, as the Senator indicated, at sea, a different principle applies, but where bonds have been stolen and it is known that they will be put in circulation and there is no means of identification, in view of the fact that they pass current the same as greenbacks pass current, I think it is a very bad precedent to establish to say that the Government of the United States shall reimburse the original owner, because we will have a multitude of such claims here, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. CALDER. I repeat that in this case the Government is entirely protected.

Mr. KING. It is a temporary protection. The Government takes a bond. Suppose it is a bond given by individuals. Those individuals are solvent to-day, but they may be insolvent to-morrow, and their estates may be insolvent. If it is a surety company, the surety company may be solvent to-day; it may be a going concern, and to-morrow it may fail, as many surety companies have; so that in 10, 15, or 20 years the sureties given to-day would not be able to respond in damages to the Govern-

Mr. CALDER. Of course, the world may come to an end tomorrow.

Mr. KING. The Senator will appreciate the difference between the solvency of a surety and the perpetuity of this little

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, were the bonds payable to bearer or were they registered bonds?

Mr. CALDER. They were registered bonds.
Mr. ROBINSON. If they were registered bonds, there should be no question about the justice of the bill.

Mr. KING. If they were registered bonds; yes.
Mr. CALDER. I understand they were,
Mr. KING. If the Senator can assure me they were registered a different proposition is presented.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, the only way relief can come in a case like this is through Congress. The United States Government does not want to make money because peo-ple lose Government bonds. That is not done in the case of individual corporations. A great many measures of this kind have been passed. I remember a case of this kind in which I was interested and which went through the Congress last year. In that instance a man had lost a bond, and the bill passed the Senate after proper discussion. Nobody wants the Government to try to get money to which it is not entitled.

Under the law if a bond of a corporation is lost, if the owner can prove that the bond was lost or destroyed, he may recover in court, but the United States Government can not be sued, and the only way that relief may be afforded in a case like this is to get the consent of Congress. The bill provides that surety shall be given to double the amount of the bonds in order to satisfy the Secretary of the Treasury and protect the Government.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, I understand that the very purpose of registering bonds is for the protection of the owner of such bonds. If Mr. Meissner is recorded as the owner of these bonds, and nobody contests his ownership, and furnishes bond in twice the amount of the principal, there is no other course for the Senate to pursue than to pass this measure.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, there is no risk about it, is there?

Mr. BROUSSARD. None at all.
Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the bonds are payable to him, nobody else could present them and get the money; so that really there is no necessity for a surety bond at all.

Mr. CALDER. And 16 years have elapsed since the loss. Mr. DIAL. Does the Senator say they were registered bonds?

Mr. CALDER. That is my information.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, the Government ought not want to profit by the misfortune of the holder of its bonds. On the other hand people ought to be very careful with their papers. Perhaps it would be better to reject the claim than to establish the precedent of encouraging people to be careless and lose their bonds. Perhaps bonds might be burned up; but in this day and time they should be put away in a safe place and taken care of in a proper manner. To establish this precedent I think will result in having a great many more such cases come here, and we ought to be very careful as to what

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the Senate, as in the Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RATES OF POSTAGE ON PRINTED MATTER.

The bill (H. R. 6954) fixing rates of postage on certain kinds of printed matter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That single sheets or portions thereof from any publication entered as second-class matter, sent by a publisher to an advertiser or the latter's agent on account of and in proof of the insertion of an advertisement, shall, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Postmaster General, be received and transmitted through the mails at the zone rates of postage applicable under the law to the advertising portions of such second-class matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan explain the bill?

Mr. TOWNSEND. At present when a person advertises in a magazine or newspaper a copy of the entire magazine or newspaper is sent to the advertiser in order to enable him to correct the advertisement, to look over the proof. This bill will enable the publisher to send to the advertiser merely the sheet or the page upon which the advertisement is printed. There are reasons why this should be done. It is convenient that it should be done; it will save paper to have it done; it will be cheaper for the Government to have it done, because under existing conditions second-class mail matter costs us more than we get out of it. Under present practice an entire magazine is sent to the advertiser who inserted an advertisement, whereas under the provisions of the bill there will be sent out for correction at the same rate the page or sheet upon which the advertisement occurs.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, if I understand the Senator correctly, it will affect the revenues for second-class mail bencficially rather than diminish them?

Mr. TOWNSEND. We can not lose on it even under the speculation as to what we are getting out of second-class mail matter. Nobody assumes that we are getting more than we ought to get.

Mr. McKELLAR. Did the Postmaster General recommend the bill?

Mr. TOWNSEND. He does recommend and approve it. The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MONTREAL RIVER LIGHTHOUSE RESERVATION, MICH.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I am required to leave the Chamber in a little while. There was a bill reported this morning which I am sure will meet the approval of every Senator, but owing to the fact that a Senator objected to unanimous consent at the time, it had to go over. I refer to House bill 13032, which passed the House unanimously and which provides that the Government may deed a portion of an unused lighthouse site in Lake Superior to the American Legion there for the purpose of maintaining a park and a hospital for their disabled members. The Government has already leased it to them for five years, which is the longest term for which such a lease can be made. The bill provides that the property shall be deeded to the Gogebic County board of the American Legion for the continuance of the hospital and park. The bill carries a provision that if at any time the land is not used for the benefit of the American Legion for the purpose of maintaining a park it shall again revert to the Government. The Commissioner of the Lighthouse Service, under the Secretary of Commerce, recommends that this be done, and he says the property is of practically no value now, and that if it can be used for hospital and for park purposes it ought to be so used.

Mr. ROBINSON. Has the bill been favorably reported by the committee?

Mr. TOWNSEND. It has been favorably reported. It was put on the calendar this morning.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President-

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield.

Mr. McCUMBER. I wish to suggest to the Senator that, if I understand the situation correctly, a unanimous-consent agreement has been made since the objection was made to the consideration of the bill referred to by the Senator from Michigan. The unanimous-consent agreement was to take up the calendar at a certain point and proceed with it until 4 o'clock. Therefore we can not consent to another unanimous consent to go back of the point where we were to begin without a violation of the agreement.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It would not be going back, for the bill was only reported this morning. The only reason that I ask consent at this time is because I am obliged to leave the Chamber. If there is any objection to this bill, if any Senator can find any reason why it should not be passed I will not ask for its consideration.

Mr. McCUMBER. Let me ask the Senator, is the bill on the calendar now?

Mr. TOWNSEND. It is on the calendar, having been put on the calendar this morning.

Mr. McCUMBER. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill

Mr. ROBINSON. It is not on the printed calendar because it was only reported this morning, but I think there will be no objection to the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. I know of no objection unless it may be that in the event of changing currents or channels the lighthouse property might be needed by the Government. In that what would happen?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I doubt if it could go back to the Government unless it were abandoned by the American Legion. The lighthouse service contends that there is no need for this particular site for a lighthouse; it has been abandoned for years and is a worthless property at present.

Mr. McKELLAR. How much land is involved? Mr. TOWNSEND. About 40 acres.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13032) to authorize the sale of the Montreal River Lighthouse Reservation, Mich., to the Gogebic County board of the American Legion, Bessemer, Mich., which was read, as follows:

Bessemer, Mich., which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Commerce, for and on behalf of the United States, is hereby authorized and directed, in his discretion, to sell and convey to the Gogebic County board of the American Legion, Bessemer, Mich., for the sum of $1, that certain piece or parcel of land known as the Montreal River Lighthouse Reservation, Mich., with all the rights, easements, and appurtenances thereto belonging, which is all that parcel of land situate at the mouth of the Montreal River in the county of Gogebic, State of Michigan, comprising lot 2, section 10, township 48 north, range 49 west, and containing 40.85 acres, more or less, the same being no longer required for lighthouse purposes: Provided, That said Gogebic County board of the American Legion shall use this site for park purposes and as a home for invalid members of the American Legion: Provided further, That the deed of conveyance shall be upon the express condition that if at any time the Secretary of Commerce shall determine that the site hereby authorized to be conveyed is not being maintained by the said Gogebic County board of the American Legion as a site for park purposes and as a home for invalid members of the American Legion, and shall file and cause to be recorded a certificate to that effect in the office of the official custodian of the records pertaining to real estate in the county of Michigan in which said lands are located, then the estate thereby conveyed shall immediately terminate and revert to the United States, which may thereupon reenter into and upon said premises as of its first and former estate.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDEMNITY LAND SELECTIONS IN WYOMING.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I am compelled to leave the Chamber to attend a very important committee meeting. There is a little House bill on the calendar which is designed to save a man's homestead. The bill embraces only a few lines, and was reported to the Senate this morning. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11637) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to approve indemnity selections in exchange for described granted school lands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. KING. What is the calendar number of the bill?

Mr. WARREN. It is not on the printed calendar, having been reported only this morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised that the bill will be at the desk in a moment.

Mr. KING. Pending the receipt of the bill referred to by the Senator from Wyoming, I suggest that he make a brief expla-nation of the measure. Time is very valuable.

nation of the measure. Time is very valuable.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, this farmer settled on a home stead, on what was known as section 35, under the surveys of the United States. It seems that years afterwards a resurvey was made, and it was found that he was on section 36. department, therefore, has asked that this bill be passed, so that the State can have other lands in place of section 36. man has built a house costing a matter of fourteen or fifteen hundred dollars, and he will lose it unless he is relieved by the passage of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as fol-

Bv it enacted, etc., That upon the selection by the State of Wyoming under the provisions of sections 2275 and 2276, United States Revised Statutes, as amended by the act of February 28, 1891 (26 Stat. p. 796), and in accordance with the regulations of the Department of the Interior governing such selections of other lands approximately equal in area in exchange for tract numbered 60, township 56 north, of range 69 west, of the sixth principal meridian in that State, which is a segregation by resurvey of granted school section 36 in said township, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to convey title to the State for the land so selected if found regular.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NORTHROP BANKS.

The bill (S. 1194) for the relief of Northrop Banks was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 11, after the word "duty," to insert a colon and the words "Provided, That no back pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall accrue prior to the passage of this act," so as to make the bill read:

passage of this act, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon soldiers who have been honorably discharged by reason of disability incurred in line of duty, Northrop Banks, private, Company C, Second Regiment Missouri National Guard Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a member of said company and regiment by reason of disability incurred in the line of duty: Provided, That no back pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall accrue prior to the passage of this act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, without an explanation of the bill I shall object

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. KING. I will object, then, Mr. President.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. KING. I withhold the objection.

Mr. ROBINSON. The bill is in the usual form that such measures take. This young man, as shown by the evidence submitted to the committee, was physically disabled while in the military service. He was in a very serious condition from sun-stroke or heat prostration while in the Federal service, and was discharged without evidence in the record of his disability. record of the War Department does not show that he suffered such disability, but the facts unquestionably are that he was in a very serious condition as a result of what is commonly known as sunstroke. The bill is in the form recommended by the Assistant Secretary of War. I hope there will be no objection to its consideration.

Mr. KING. As I understand, the purpose is to place this man's name upon the rolls so that he may be entitled to a pension. Is that the object of it?

Mr. ROBINSON. So that he may have the benefits of a pension, or similar relief.

Mr. KING. Does it appear now as if he were a deserter, according to the record?

Mr. ROBINSON. No. The bill also provides that no back pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall accrue, as is the usual form in such bills.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator if he was in the service and was discharged as suffering from disability or subsequently became ill, and his disability was traceable to the service, whether he would be entitled to a pension under existing law?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; but the record, as I have already stated, shows that while he was discharged, his discharge does not disclose his disability; but the disability in fact existed. beyond doubt, according to the proof submitted to the com-

Mr. KING. Let me say to the Senator, as I understand the law, that even if the discharge showed no disability it would not be conclusive, and proof to the satisfaction of the medical officers that he was suffering from the disability at the time of his discharge would entitle him to compensation.

s discharge would entitle him to compensation.

Mr. ROBINSON. I think not, under the existing law. A disability must be proved to have arisen in the service. soldier must have more than 10 per cent of disability upon his discharge in order to recover any emoluments as the result of his service

Mr. KING. Would my friend, to whose wishes I desire to subscribe, consent to let it go over?

Mr. ROBINSON. The bill was presented by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Reed]. I think it is a much better bill than many similar bills that have passed the Senate, for the reason that the evidence is absolutely conclusive, in my judgment, that the disability did, in fact, arise during the soldier's service, and the failure of it to appear in his record in the War Department is due to no fault of his. Of course, if the Senator desires to object, he is entirely at liberty to do so.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall ask that the bill be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection, and the Secretary will state the next bill on the calendar.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 4282) for the purchase of the statue "The Pilgrim Mother and Child of the Mayflower" and presentation of same to the Government of Great Britian was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Let that go over. Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, do I understand that there is objection to the consideration of that bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understood.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I object. Mr. McCUMBER. Very well, Mr. President.

W. H. POWER.

The bill (S. 4156) authorizing the accounting officers of the General Accounting Office to settle the accounts of W. H. Power, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I reserve the right to object. Let the bill be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read,

The bill was read, as follows:

The bill was read, as follows;

Be it enocted, etc., That the accounting officers of the General Accounting Office are hereby authorized and directed to allow, in the settlement of the accounts of W. H. Power, disbursing officer of the United States Fuel Administration, credit for payments not ordinarily allowable under the statutes made during the period April 1, 1918. to June 30, 1919, on properly certified and approved pay rolls and vouchers without fraud or negligence on his part.

Mr. KING. That is a very extraordinary measure, and unless there is some explanation I shall feel constrained to object to its consideration.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, the purpose of the bill is simply to permit Power, who was disbursing officer for the United States Fuel Administration, to draw his salary at this time as an officer of the Veterans' Bureau. In the meantime his accounts are still awaiting final settlement, and can not be disposed of finally for probably a year or two; but under a provision of the law the auditor or comptroller can not issue warrants for his salary.

This matter comes up here from the Comptroller General, and it has the approval of all the departments of the Gov-ernment that are concerned in it. The Senator will find at the bottom of page 3 of the report a statement from Mr. Garfield, the United States Fuel Administrator, certifying to the justice of the legislation asked for. It is simply to correct a bookkeeping difficulty, and permit this man to draw his salary. No one questions that he rendered faithful service, and that his accounts were correct, and that in the final set-tlement nothing should be charged against him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall not object, but I shall vote against the bill. I want to call attention to the fact that the language goes further than the intimation of the Senator. It authorizes the disbursing officer to receive "credit for payments not ordinarily allowable under the statutes made during the period April 1, 1918, to June 30, 1919." We do not know what those payments are. Of course, if there were some tangible evidence indicating what the payments are, it would be different; but we do not know. We are utterly at a loss to know what is comprised within this suggestion.

Mr. CAPPER. Let me call the Senator's attention to the statement of the Fuel Administrator, Mr. Garfield, in which he says:

I believe you to be above reproach in the handling of the funds intrusted to you, and, as I understand the matter, the disallowances which stand against you to-day are on account of salaries paid to various persons employed by the Fuel Administration upon properly certified and approved pay rolls and vouchers.

I suggest that you call to the attention of the Committee on Claims the organization of the business management of the Fuel Administration and the powers of his several officials found on pages 6 and 7 of the final report of the business manager. Authority and responsibility were distributed with careful attention to the requirements of the law. Pay-roll vouchers originated in the accounting section. I am sure that our records will show that you paid no pay-roll voucher that had not been approved by Mr. Garnsey or me, and our approval was invariably conditioned upon the approval and signature of the officials responsible for examination and approval, as set forth in the report above referred to. It was your duty to pay vouchers transmitted to you by the proper administrative officers after the same had been received, examined, and approved by them. All of this is, as I understand it, in accordance with the law and rules concerning the duty of disbursing clerks, which limit your responsibility to an examination of pay rolls and vouchers to determine that there is no apparent error on the face of the papers before you. I do not understand that it was your duty to inquire into the validity of the appointment of employees of the Fuel Administration.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator accept an amend-

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator accept an amendment? I understand that $2,775.12 is the amount due as salary.

Mr. CAPPER. That is it.

Mr. KING. I move to amend by adding, after the word "payments," in line 6, the words "not exceeding $2,775.12."
Mr. CAPPER. The amendment is satisfactory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Utah will be stated, The Assistant Secretary. It is proposed to add, after the word "payments," in line 6, the words "not exceeding $2,775.12."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER,

The bill (S. 3023) for the relief of Robert F. Hamilton was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DIAL] has just been called from the Chamber, and he asked me, if this bill came up, to ask that it go over until he

Mr. HARRELD. Mr. President, the Senator simply asks that it go over until the Senator from South Carolina comes back?

Mr. KING. Until his return; yes.
Mr. HARRELD. That will be all right.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be temporarily passed over

ESTABLISHMENT OF STANDARD GRADES OF NAVAL STORES, ETC.

The bill (S. 1076) establishing standard grades of naval stores, preventing deceptions in transactions in naval stores, regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Let that bill go over.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Washington that this is a bill that has been pending for two years. I introduced it. This bill applies purely to turpentine and rosin. There was some difference of opinion among the Senators representing the turpentine section of the country. We have all gotten together now. The Department of Agriculture recommends this action; the varnish and paint people recommend it; every turpentine and rosin concern indorses it; everybody is together on the matter. It merely prevents cheating and defrauding in the sale of turpentine and rosin.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, my recollection is that when this bill was up for consideration once before—

Mr. HARRISON. This bill never has been up before. This bill carries a substitute that is indorsed by everybody who is interested in the matter.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I know that a bill of this kind was reached on the calendar some little time ago, and I think

Mr. JONES of Washington. No; it was relating to naval stores.

Mr. HARRISON, Well, it came up in that matter. It said "naval stores," and I amended it to make it read "producers of turpentine and rosin,"

Mr. JONES of Washington. So this is satisfactory to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. HARRISON. Oh, I am sure he has no objection. No one could have any objection to this bill.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I have not any objection if he has not.

Mr. HARRISON. I am very anxious to get the bill passed. I may say, too, that it was unanimously reported out of the committees of the Senate and of the House, and is now on the calendar in the House. I am very anxious to have it passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

insert:

That, for convenience of reference, this act may be designated and cited as "The naval stores act."

SEC. 2. That, when used in this act—

(a) "Naval stores." means spirits of turpentine and rosin.

(b) "Spirits of turpentine "includes gum spirits of turpentine and wood turpentine.

(c) "Gum spirits of turpentine" means spirits of turpentine and from gum (oleoresin) from a living tree.

(d) "Wood turpentine" includes steam distilled wood turpentine and destructively distilled wood turpentine.

(e) "Steam distilled wood turpentine" means wood turpentine and destructively distilled wood turpentine "means wood turpentine distilled with steam from the oleoresin within or extracted from the wood.

(f) "Destructively distilled wood turpentine" means wood turpentine obtained in the destructive distillation of the wood.

(g) "Rosin" includes gum rosin and wood rosin.

(h) "Gum rosin" means rosin remaining after the distillation of gum spirits of turpentine.

(i) "Wood rosin" means rosin remaining after the distillation of steam distilled wood turpentine.

(j) "Package" means any container of naval stores, and includes barrel, tank, tank car, or other receptacle.

(k) "Person" includes partnerships, associations, and corporations, as well as individuals.

(j) The term "commerce" means commerce between any State, Ter-

(k) "Person" includes partnerships, associations, and corporations, as well as individuals.

(j) The term "commerce" means commerce between any State, Territory, or possession, or the District of Columbia, and any place outside thereof; or between points within the same State. Territory, or possession, or the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof; or within any Territory or possession or the District of Columbia.

sion, or the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof; or within any Territory or possession or the District of Columbia.

Sec. 3. That for the purposes of this act the kinds of spirits of turpentine defined in subdivisions (c), (e), and (f) of section 2 hereof and the rosin types heretofore prepared and recommended under existing laws, by or under authority of the Secretary of Agriculture, are hereby made the standards for naval stores until otherwise prescribed as hereinafter provided. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to establish and promulgate standards for naval stores for which no standards are herein provided, after at least three months' notice of the proposed standard shall have been given to the trade, so far as practicable, and due hearings or reasonable opportunities to be heard shall have been afforded those favoring or opposing the same. No such standard chall become effective until after three months from the date of the promulgation thereof. Any standard made by this act or established and promulgated by the Secretary of Agriculture in accordance therewith may be modified by said Secretary whenever, for reasons and causes deemed by him sufficient, the interests of the trade shall so require, after at least six months' notice of the proposed modification shall have been given to the trade, so far as practicable, and due hearings or reasonable opportunities to be heard shall have been afforded those favoring or opposing the same; and no such modification so made shall become effective until after six months from the date when made. The various grades of rosin, from highest to lowest, shall be designated, unless and until changed, as hereinbefore provided, by the following letters, respectively; X, WW, WG, N, M, K, I, H, G, F, E, D, and B, together with the designation "gum rosin" or "wood rosin," as the case may be.

The standards herein made and authorized to be made shall be known as the "Official naval stores standards of the United States," and may be referred to by the abbreviated expression "United States standards," and shall be the standards by which all naval stores in commerce shall be graded and described.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of Agriculture shall provide, if practicable, any interested person with duplicates of the official naval stores standards of the United States upon request accompanied by tender of satisfactory security for the return thereof, under such regulations as he may prescribe. The Secretary of Agriculture shall examine, if practicable, upon request of any interested person, any naval stores and shall analyze, classify, or grade the same on tender of the cost thereof as required by him, under such regulations as he may prescribe. He shall furnish a certificate showing the analysis, classification, or grade of such naval stores, which certificate shall be prima facie evidence of the analysis, classification, or grade of such naval stores and of the contents of any package from which the same may have been taken, as well as of the correctness of such analysis, classification, or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification, or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification, or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification, or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification, or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as such analysis, classification or grade and shall be admissible as

(a) The sale in commerce of any naval stores, or of anything offered as such, except under or by reference to United States standards.

(b) The sale of any naval stores under or by reference to United States standards which is other than what it is represented to be.

(c) The use in commerce of the word "turpentine" or the word "rosin," singly or with any other word or words, or of any compound, derivative, or imitation of either such word, or of any misleading word, or of any word, combination of words, letter or combination of letters, provided herein or by the Secretary of Agriculture to be used to designate naval stores of any kind or grade, in selling, offering for sale, advertising, or shipping anything other than naval stores of the United States standards.

(d) The use in commerce of any false, misleading, or deceitful means or practice in the sale of naval stores or of anything offered as such.

Sec. 6. That any person willfully violating any provision of section 5 of this act shall on conviction, be punished for each offense by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or both.

Sec. 7. That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to purchase from time to time in open market samples of spirits of turpentine and of anything offered for sale as such for the purpose of analysis, classification, or grading and of detecting any violation of this act. He shall report to the Department of Justice for appropriate action any violation of this act coming to his knowledge. He is also authorized to publish from time to time results of any analysis, classification, or grading of spirits of turpentine and of anything offered for sale as such made by him under any provision of this act.

Sec. 8. That there are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for the administration and enforcement of this act, and within the limits of such sums the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to emplo

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WESTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF TEXAS.

The bill (H. R. 6423) to detach Pecos County, in the State of Texas, from the Del Rio division of the western judicial district of Texas and attach same to the El Paso division of the western judicial district of said State, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

In Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Pecos County, in the State of Texas, be, and the same is hereby, detached from the Del Rio division of the western judicial district of the State of Texas and attached to and made a part of the El Paso division of the western judicial district of said State.

SEC. 2. That all process against persons residents in said county of Pecos and cognizable before the United States district court shall be issued out of and made returnable to said court at Pecos City, and that all prosecutions against persons for offenses committed in said county of Pecos shall be tried in said court at El Paso or Pecos City: Provided, That no civil or criminal cause begun and pending prior to the passage of this act shall be in any way affected by it.

The bill was reported to the Senate without awardment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF REVENUE ACT OF 1921.

The bill (H. R. 13775) to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to credits and refunds was announced as next in order.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I think there will need to be some explanation of this bill, and I can make it very briefly.

There are two provisions in the bill. The first provision is to meet this situation: The Treasury Department has been unable to keep up with the correction of tax returns for more than five years, in some instances. Therefore they are seeking, through their agents, to have those who are interested in the tax returns for 1917 to waive the five-year limitation, and that is being generally done by firms and corporations and individuals to enable the office to check up those returns; but, while they have so waived the limitation for the benefit of the Government and given it an additional year, the Government under the law can not grant the individual or the corporation an additional year. This bill has been framed to meet that situation, to give the Government an extra year in which to revise the tax of 1917; and by the provisions of the bill the taxpayer is given the right for another year to file an application for refund, so that it will agree with the law as it now stands, each party being granted an additional year.

Mr. ROBINSON and Mr. POMERENE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Sterling in the chair).
Does the Senator from North Dakota yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield first to the Senator from Arkansas. Mr. ROBINSON. If the law is not amended it will work a hardship upon many taxpayers who, having waived the statute of limitations, will themselves be caused to suffer loss by reason of their own waivers.

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes; that is correct.
Mr. POMERENE. I desire to ask the Senator whether it limits the extension to the taxes for the year 1917?

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes; it is limited only for that one year. The taxes were paid, of course, in 1918, but it was the 1917 tax. The five-year limitation which began in 1918 can not begin until they have filed their claims and will be for the five years beginning in 1918. It is the same as giving an extra year to the Government.

Mr. POMERENE. Is it not likely that the same embarrass-ments will present themselves when it comes to the consideration of the taxes for the year 1918?

Mr. McCUMBER. No; I understand from the office of Secretary of the Treasury that before another year passes they will have been able to check up all of 1918 and will be caught up with their work, but at present they are not.

That is the first proposition in the bill. The second proposition is one relating to the payment of taxes out of the fund in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian. Under the law since 1913 when the stockholders of a corporation were foreigners, whether alien enemies or not, or not in the jurisdiction of the United States, as well as in other instances, the corporation was required to withhold the dividend due to the stockholder and that dividend is then to be paid by the corporation to the Government; in other words, the corporation becomes surety for the individual stockholder. Now, there are a great many of these corporations.

I say a great many; I suppose perhaps there are less than 100, but there are quite a number in which the stockholders were exclusively alien enemies after 1917. Under the law of 1917 we took possession of all those corporations the majority of whose stock was held by alien enemies and their property was placed in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian. It was ascertained that in many of those instances, instead of paying the taxes which became due to the Government prior to the time of our entry into the war and prior to the time in which we had taken possession of the property, the corpora-tions had paid over the entire dividends to the foreign stock-holders, notwithstanding the law which provided that they should retain the amount to settle with the Government where the stockholder was an alien or not in the United States.

After obtaining the property in many instances, the custodian sold all the stock of the foreign corporations either to an American corporation or to American individuals, and in selling the property in many cases nothing was stated in the prospectus concerning any taxes that should have been withheld. In some instances but a very small percentage was spoken of as having been withheld.

Now, as a matter of fact, the purpose of the law was simply that the Government might be sure to collect the taxes from the individual stockholders to whom the dividend was payable. When the

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President-

Mr. McCUMBER. Just a moment. Allow me to complete the When the property was sold to American corporasentence. tions or individuals the Government in some instances then ascertained that the foreign owner of the stock had received the full dividend; that it had not been paid by the corporation and assessed the entire amount against the corporation. The bill provides in the amendment that in those instances in which all the stock was held by alien enemies and the property was sold to Americans or to an American corporation and the money is in the hands of the Government at the present time. the Government shall reimburse itself out of the funds that are in its hands.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a point of order.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am under the five-minute rule, and I want to make my statement before my time is up.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon will state the point of order.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator has far exceeded the time allotted to him. There is no objection to his bill, and I do not understand why he does not allow it to pass.

Mr. McCUMBER. I thought I ought to explain it.

Mr. McNARY. Everyone is in favor of the measure. Why not let it pass?

Mr. McCUMBER. If everyone is favorable I am very glad. It ought to go through. I will accept the Senator's suggestion. There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The amendments of the Committee on Finance were, on page 1, line 5, after the numerals "252," to insert "(a)"; on page 2, in line 13, after the word "taxpayer," to insert: "except in those cases where the taxpayer has, prior to the expiration of five years from the date when the return was due, filed a waiver of his right to have the amount of income, excess-profits or war-profits taxes due for the taxable year 1917 determined and assessed within five years after the return was filed. In case of such waiver, credit, or refund of the tax paid for the taxable year 1917 in excess of that properly due shall be allowed or made if within six years from the date when the return was due a claim therefor is filed by the taxpayer." On line 23, page 2, to strike out "one year" and insert "two years"; on page 3, after line 16, to insert: "(b) That in all cases where income has at any time been received by any person who was or subsequently became an alien enemy, or by any corporation the majority of whose shares of outstanding stock was owned by persons who were or subsequently became enemy aliens and such persons or corporations has failed to pay any taxes payable under any revenue act of the United States, or such taxes have at any time been paid by citizens of the United States or by such corporation after the majority of its outstanding shares of stock has been purchased from the United States or from some officer or official of the United States by citizens of the United States or by a domestic corporation all of whose outstanding shares of stock were owned by citizens of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed, any statute of limitations and section 3228 of the Revised Statutes to the contrary notwithstanding, to collect such taxes out of the proceeds of any sales of such shares of stock or other property of such person or corporation, or either of them, which have become deposited in the Treasury of the United States pursuant to law and to refund to such citizens of the United States or to such corporation all taxes so paid by them, or any of them, and charge the amounts so refunded against the proceeds of the sales of such shares of stock or such other property so deposited in the Treasury of the United States: Provided, however, That the amounts of such refunds shall not exceed the amounts of such proceeds of the sales of such shares of stock or other property so deposited in the Treasury of the United States pursuant to law: And provided further, That if the amounts of such proceeds of the sales of such shares of stock or other property so deposited in the Treasury of the United States pursuant to law are less than the amount of taxes payable under any revenue act of the United States, nothing herein contained, after such proceeds are exhausted, shall be construed to prevent the collection from sources other than such proceeds of any deficiency in such taxes so payable" and on page 5, in line 5, before the word "where," insert "(c)"; and after line 9, to insert: "(d) that section 3226 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 1318 of the revenue act of 1921, is amended by striking out the period at the end of the first paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof the following: unless such suit or proceedings is begun within two years after the disallowance in whole or in part of such claim for refund or credit. The commissioner shall within 90 days after any such disallowance notify the taxpayer thereof by mail'"; so as to make the bill read:

so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 252 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 252. (a) That if, upon examination of any return of income made pursuant to this act, the act of August 5, 1909, entitled 'An act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes,' the act of October 3, 1913, entitled 'An act to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes,' the revenue act of 1916, as amended, the revenue act of 1917, or the revenue act of 1918, it appears that an amount of income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax has been paid in excess of that properly due, then, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3228 of the Revised Statutes, the amount of the excess shall be credited against any income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes, or installment thereof, then due from the taxpayer under any other return, and any balance of such excess shall be immediately refunded to the taxpayer: Provided, That no such credit or refund shall be allowed or made after five years from the date when the return was due, unless before the expiration of such dive years a claim therefor is filed by the taxpayor, except in those cases where the taxpayer has, prior to the expiration of five years from the date wheat the return was due, filed a waiver of his right to have the amount of income, excess-profits, or war-profits taxes due for the taxable year 1917 determined and assessed within they years after the return was filed. In case of such waiver, credit, or refund of the tax paid for the taxable year 1917 in excess of that properly due shall be allowed or made if within six years from the date when the return was due a claim therefor is filed by the taxapyer concess to the properly due to the fact in the return of income made pursuant to the revenue act of 1918, or this act, the invested capital of a taxpayer is decreased by the commissioner, and such decrease is due to the fact that the taxpayer filed to take adequate deductions in previous years, with the result that an amount of such excess shall, without the filing of any charged the amount of such excess shall, without the filing of any charged the provision of law and regardless of the expiration of such five-year period, the amount of such excess shall, without the filing of any charged the provision for the passage of this act under section 252 of the revenue act of 1918 under subdivision (a) of section shall be construed to bar from allowance claims for refund filed prior to the passage of the revenue act of 1916, or filed prior to the passage of this act under section 252 of the revenue act of 1918 under subdivision (a) of section 14 of the revenue act of 1916, or filed prior to the passage of this act under section 252 of the revenue act of 1918.

"(b) That in all cases where income has at any time been reserved by any persons who were or subsequently became enemy aliens and auch persons or corporation has failed to pay any taxes payable under any partition of the contrary not the transury of whose shares of stock has been purchased from the linited States or from some offi

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

JAMES MORAN.

The bill (S. 3761) for the relief of James Moran was considered as in the Committee of the Whole. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 6, to strike out the words "Regiment, Rhode Island," and insert "Company, United States," and, in line 7, after the word "Artillery," to insert the word "Corps," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the pension laws and the laws conferring rights and privileges upon honorably discharged soldiers James Moran, late corporal in the One hundred and ninth Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a member of Company A, Ninth Regiment United States Infantry: Provided, That no back pay, bounty, or other emoluments shall accrue prior to the passage of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading,

read the third time, and passed.

MONUMENT AT FORT PIERRE, S. DAK.

The bill (S. 4350) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to erect a monument at Fort Pierre, S. Dak., to commemorate the explorations and discoveries of the Verendrye brothers, and to expend not to exceed $25,000 therefor, was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I observe that the bill carries an appropriation of $25,000, or at least it seems to carry an appropriation of that amount. I have not had an opportunity to investigate the record to ascertain the facts.

Mr. STERLING. I think the Senator from Arkansas is The bill does authorize an appropriation of not exceeding $25,000 for the purpose,

Mr. ROBINSON. I believe the bill had better go over. ask that it may go over for the present. Probably on Monday it can be taken up if upon examination I find there is no objec-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

HENRY B. F. MACFARLAND MEMORIAL.

The bill (S. 4463) to authorize the erection of a memorial monument or fountain as a gift to the people of the United States by the Henry B. F. Macfarland memorial committee was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the bill go over. Mr. KING. Will the Senator withhold his objection just a

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly. Mr. KING. I am sure the Senator would not object if he understood the character of the measure. Mr. Macfarland, as we all know, was a very distinguished resident of this city and served as District Commissioner for many years. His services were of such a character as to commend themselves to the public and command the admiration of all. The measure merely provides that the ground for a memorial tablet may be used in conformity with the rules which obtain in the selection of such sites. There is no cost to the Government involved.

Mr. McCUMBER. It involves no expense whatever to the Government?

Mr. KING. None whatsoever, and it is desired by the leading citizens of the community.

Mr. McKELLAR. Under the arrangement that I had with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. Ball], all District bills and all bills relating to District matters were to go over until Monday. That is my purpose. I have no objection to the bill myself, but I may desire to offer an amendment to it.

Mr. McCUMBER. I do not think the Senator could properly designate this as a District bill. It is not a bill reported from the District of Columbia Committee.

Mr. KING. It is rather national in character instead of local, because it treats of the Capital rather than the District. If the Senator's agreement extends so far as to include this bill, I shall not ask him to violate it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Under the statement made by the Senators who have just spoken, I shall not offer any objection.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to select a suitable site and to grant permission to the Henry B. F. Macfarland memorial committee for the erection, as a gift to the people of the United States, on public grounds of the United States in the city of Washington, D. C., other than those of the Capitol, the Library of Congress, Potomac Park, and the White House, of a monument or memorial fountain to the memory of Henry B. F. Macfarland, one-time president of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia: Provided, That the site chosen and the design of the monument or memorial fountain shall be approved by the Joint Library Committee of Congress, with the advice of the Commission of Fine Arts, and shall be erected under the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, and that he United States shall be put to no expense in or by the erection of said monument or memorial fountain.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOINT RESOLUTIONS PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 91) authorizing the President to require the United States Sugar Equalization Board (Inc.) to adjust a transaction relating to 3,500 tons of sugar imported from the Argentine Republic was announced as next in order.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Let the joint resolution go over.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Is objection made to the present consideration of the joint resolution?
Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 172) authorizing the President to require the United States Sugar Equalization Board (Inc.) to take over and dispose of 2,000 tons of sugar imported from the Argentine Republic and adjust the loss sustained thereby was announced as next in order.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Let the joint resolution go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 277) granting permission for the erection of a monument to symbolize the national game of baseball was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the joint resolution go over.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be passed

ANNIVERSARY OF MONROE DOCTRINE AND DEATH OF JAMES MONROE.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 274) to provide for the participation of the United States in the observance of the one hundredth anniversary of the enunciation of the Monroe doctrine and of the ninety-second anniversary of the death of James Monroe, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution had been reported from the Committee on the Library, with an amendment, on page 2, line 3, after the word "hereby," to insert "authorized to be," so as to make the joint resolution read:

the Library, with an amendment, on page 2, line 3, after the word "hereby," to insert "authorized to be," so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a commission to be known as the Monroe Doctrine Centennial Commission (hereinafter referred to as the congressional commission) and to be composed of nine commissioners as follows: Three persons to be appointed by the President, three Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and three Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The congressional commission shall serve without compensation and shall elect a chairman from among their number.

Sec. 2. (a) That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $122,500, to be expended by the congressional commission in accordance with the provisions of this resolution.

(b) Sixty-seven thousand five hundred dollars of such appropriation may be expended under the direction of the congressional commission and in cooperation with the James Monroe Memorial Association and Foundation, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, and with such other agencies, public or private, as the congressional commission may determine, for the purposes of contributing to (1) the purchase and restoration of the former home of James Monroe in the city of New York, N. Y., as a permanent memorial, and (2) the creation of a memorial foundation the income from which shall be used for purposes of furthering progress, amity, and good will among the peoples of the Pan American Republics.

(c) Fifty-five thousand dollars of such appropriation may be expended under the direction of the congressional commission may determine, for the purpose of furthering progress, amity, and good will among the peoples of the Pan American Republics.

(c) Fifty-five thousand dollars of such a

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 4478) to promote agriculture by stabilizing the price of wheat was announced as next in order.

Mr. WADSWORTH and Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.
The bill (H. R. 13880) for the reorganization and improvement of the foreign service of the United States, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let the bill go over.

VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over. The bill (S. 3701) for the relief of Blattmann & Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. This is an important bill, and I suggest that it go over. It can be considered on Monday in all prob-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over, The bill (S. 4472) to make an investigation of the needs of the Nation for public works to be carried on by Federal, State, and municipal agencies in periods of business depression and unemployment was announced as next in order. Mr. STERLING. Let the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1847) to amend an act approved February 12, 1901, entitled "An act to provide for eliminating certain grade crossings on the line of the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Co. in the city of Washington, D. C., and requiring said company to depress and elevate its tracks, and to enable it to relocate part of its railroad therein, and for other purposes," was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 4414) to amend the act of Congress approved September 6, 1922, relating to the discentinuance of the use as dwellings of buildings situated in alleys in the District of Columbia, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the bill be passed over. The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will go over.

The bill (H. R. 6650) providing additional terminal facilities in square east of 710 and square 712 in the District of Columbia for freight traffic was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR, Let the bill be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

CHARLES B. STRECKER.

The bill (S. 4192) to permit the correction of the general account of Charles B. Strecker, former Assistant Treasurer, United States, was announced as next in order and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department are authorized and directed to examine and state an account of the items of unavailable funds as set forth in Senate Document No. 400, Sixty-sixth Congress, third session, and letter from the Secretary of the Treasury addressed to the President of the Senate, dated February 15, 1921, and to credit the general account of Charles B. Strecker, former Assistant Treasurer of the United States at Boston, Mass, with the amount thereof: Provided, That the credit herein authorized shall be made in such manner as to debit the individual or depositary chargeable therewith upon the books of the Treasury Department: Provided further, That upon the recovery or payment of any part of said unavailable funds, the same shall be deposited in the Treasury in such manner as to debit the Treasurer of the United States in his general account and to credit the individual or depositary charged therewith upon the books of the Treasury Department.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of the hill.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of the bill. Mr. LODGE. Mr. Strecker was the treasurer of the subtreasury in Boston at the time it was discontinued. When the office was closed there was found to be a shortage, owing to the shipment of currency to Washington, of $2,546, and a shortage in the same class of currency which was held and not shipped to Washington under instructions from Washington.

Mr. Strecker, the treasurer at Boston, had nothing to do with the money. It was in the time of the war. The office was in confusion. The shipments of currency were either not received or were not properly acknowledged. The Treasury recommends that Mr. Strecker be reimbursed for the shortage. It is a very clear case. He was in nowise responsible and had nothing to do with it. The matter has been before the Treasury Department and before the committee, and they have all agreed that he ought to be relieved.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator know from the evidence where the fault was, because obviously there was a loss to the Government to the amount carried in the bill. Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will spare the time, I will give all the details.

Mr. KING. Oh, no; I do not ask that.

Mr. LODGE. As I said, Mr. Strecker did everything he could. They were very short as to the matter of employees. In his letter to the Secretary of the Treasury Mr. Strecker said: Personally I gave every attention possible to the work of the office, although I had no physical contact with the moneys, depending entirely upon the force of employees as I found them when I took the office, or as I was able to maintain it under the existing regulations and long-established custom, to do the work in an efficient and honest manner.

Then he details the shortness. The passage of the bill is recommended, in the first place, by Mr. Gilbert, Acting Secretary. It is then recommended by Secretary Mellon. The last recommendation is addressed to a Member of the House of Representatives and is dated February 9, 1923. Mr. White, the treasurer, states:

treasurer, states:

In response to your request of this date for a report covering the shortage in the subtreasury at Boston, discovered in October, 1920, and for which a bill is pending before your committee for the relief of the assistant treasurer for this shortage, beg to say that I have gone over this case with Mr. Moran, Chief of the Secret Service of the Treasury Department, and have read and studied the files of his office covering the investigation of the case.

I am satisfied that the loss was not due to the dishonesty or negligence of the assistant treasurer. The investigation of the Secret Service seems to me to have been quite thorough, and every person connected with the subtreasury at that time who could possibly have been guilty was carefully investigated. All evidence secured was submitted to the United States attorney of that district and by him submitted to the United States attorney of that district and by him submitted to the Gederal grand jury. This grand jury, after going into the case, did not find evidence sufficient to warrant an indictment. The Secret Service has since that time continued its investigation, but the probability of ever running down the guilty parties is quite remote.

This loss was discovered when the money in the subtreasury was checked up preparatory to its being turned over to the Federal reserve bank. Two packages of gold certificates, each supposed to contain 100 $100 bills, were found to each contain 25 $100 bills and 75 $10 bills, making the shortage $13,500. The straps on the money show that these packages were last counted January, 1918, at which time they were placed in the reserve vault. This vault was in custody of two trusted men, neither one of whom could get into the vault alone. It is, however, probable that this substitution was made by some one while these two men were temporarily out of the vault, after having opened it. Neglect on the part of the assistant treasurer would seem to be indicated by the fact that this money was not properly checked and counted for a period of two years and nine months. This is perhaps excused by the fact that there was a large increase in the work and that it was almost impossible to obtain a sufficient number of capable and trustworthy employees during the war.

Mr. Mellon in his letter states:

Mr. Mellon in his letter states:

Therefore there is inclosed herewith a draft of legislation deemed appropriate to the case, proposing an appropriation of $15,956, which, if granted, will accomplish the object of the bill and enable the accounting officers to properly allow the necessary credits.

Mr. Strecker was entirely innocent in the matter, but he had to bear the whole burden.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SOUTHERN TRANSPORTATION CO.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7010) for the relief of Southern Transportation Co., which was read as follows:

sider the bill (H. A. 1010) for the releter of Southern Transportation Co., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and doing business in the State of Virginia, owners of the barge Moccasin, against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by collision between the said barge Moccasin and the United States Navy lighter No. 462 in tow of Navy tug Kevaydin in Hampton Roads, Va., on the 5th day of October, 1920, may be sued for by the said Southern Transportation Co. in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the said Southern Transportation Co. or against the said Southern Transportation Co. in favor of the United States upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That suit shall be brought and commenced within four months from the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES W. MUGLER.

The bill (S. 4179) for the relief of Charles W. Mugler was announced as next in order.

Mr. SWANSON. The House of Representatives has passed a bill, which is now on the desk, which is similar in nature. ask that the House bill may be substituted for the Senate

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 370) for the relief of Charles W. Mugler, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit the accounts of Charles W. Mugler, postmaster at Newport News, Va., in the sum of $3,496.85, and to certify the said credit to the Auditor for the Post Office Department, being the amount of shortages in money-order accounts, postal account, war-savings accounts, war-revenue accounts, collect-on-delivery accounts, money orders improperly paid, and registry losses, all arising from the embezzlement by, and negligence of, James W. Cheshire, employee in Hill Branch of said office.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator from Virginia make an explanation of the bill?

Mr. SWANSON. Charles W. Mugler was postmaster at Newport News during the World War. The patrons of that office increased from 20,000 to 200,000 during that time, and the receipts from $80,000 to $400,000 per annum. There was a great expansion of postal activities at that place. On account of its being the embarkation point for all our troops, the post-office business was very greatly increased. A great many clerks were transferred from other sections of the country in order to carry on the postal work there. The postmaster at that place could not name them, because they were under civil service. A clerk was transferred from Martinsville, Va., down to one of the extra substations which were created. That clerk abthe extra substations which were created. That clerk absconded. He had given bond at Martinsville, Va., to cover a loss of $3,000, but on examination it was found that that bond dld not cover his postal activities at the substation to which he had been transferred.

Mr. KING. So he was not bonded for those specific duties? Mr. SWANSON. That is correct.

Mr. KING. That explanation is satisfactory to me.

Mr. SWANSON. The Post Office Department stated that this bill ought to pass because the loss occurred on account of the increased activities incident to the World War, and the postmaster at Newport News could not give the personal inspection to the business which he might have given had he been less pressed with business.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, Senate bilt 4179 will be indefinitely postponed.

AMERICAN SCHOONER "MOUNT HOPE."

The bill (S. 4493) for the relief of the owners of the American schooner Mount Hope was announced as next in order.

Mr. CALDER, Mr. President, a bill of almost similar character passed the House of Representatives on yesterday. The change made in the House bill from the Senate bill is to provide that in the suit in the eastern district court the plaintiff shall not be allowed to collect demurrage. I ask unanimous consent to substitute the House bill for the Senate bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The House bill to which the Senator from New York refers has not yet been reported from the committee.

Mr. CALDER. I understand that the House bill was sent over from that body to the Senate on yesterday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. But the Chair is informed that the bill has been referred to the Committee on Claims?

Mr. CALDER. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Claims be discharged from further consideration of the bill, and that it be substituted for the pending Senate bill.

Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. President, before consent is granted for the Senator's request, I should like to understand the difference between the two bills.

Mr. CALDER. The bill which is on the Senate Calendar and the bill passed by the other House give permission to the owners of the American schooner Mount Hope to sue the Government in the eastern district of New York. The House bill, however, contains a provision prohibiting the owners of the vessel from claiming demurrage. Of course, that will re-duce their claim by more than one-half. Under the terms of the bill, as I introduced it in the Senate, and as it was reported from the Committee on Claims, if the owners of the vessel could have maintained their claim they could have collected demurrage. In the form in which the bill passed the other House they can not do so. I propose that the Senate shall agree to the House provision.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Committee on Claims is discharged from the further consideration of the bill; and without objection, the House bill will be substituted for the Senate bill.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 14249) for the relief of the owners of the American schooner Mount Hope, which was read, as follows:

American schooner Mount Hope, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the owners of the American schooner Mount Hope against the United States for damages and loss alleged to have been caused by the collision of said vessel with the United States steamship Navesink, off Pollocks Rip Lightship, on November 21, 1916, may be sued for by the said owners of the American schooner Mount Hope in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court; and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit to the extent only of such damages suffered other than claims for demurrage to said vessel and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the Owners of the American schooner Mount Hope or against said owners in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admirally between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States attorney in such of the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, or-

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, Senate bill 4493 will be postponed indefinitely.

RELIEF OF UNEMPLOYMENT.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I would like to ask unanimous consent to return to Order of Business 1116, being the bill (S. 4472) to make an investigation of the needs of the Nation for public works to be carried on by Federal, State, and municipal agencies in periods of business depression and unemployment, which was passed over while my attention was called elsewhere.

Mr. ROBINSON: I suggest to the Senator from New Jersey in view of the fact that an objection was made when this bill was called, that he let the matter go over until the next call of the calendar, which will occur on Monday, or, at least, until the end of the calendar shall have been reached.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. If the Senator will reserve his objection until I can make a statement, I desire to say that that bill is of very great interest to a group of men in my section who have studied the question of unemployment.

I have a resolution from the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce which I ask unanimous consent to file. With this statement I reserve the consideration of the motion to consider the bill until Monday, and I hope the Senate at that time will take it up. It is a very important question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the communication from the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce will be received

STANDARD FOR BUTTER.

The bill (H. R. 12053) to define butter and to provide a standard therefor was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, there are a number of Senators who wish to be here when that bill is considered who are now absent. I ask that the bill go over until Monday.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, this bill is practically the same as is Order of Business 847, being the bill (S. 3858) to define butter and to provide a standard therefor.

Mr. ROBINSON. Objection having been made to consideration of the bill, I suggest to the Senator from South Dakota to let the matter go over.

Mr. STERLING. I should like to make a brief statement as to the status of the bill, and I do not see why there should be any objection to my doing so.

Mr. ROBINSON. The same reason applies to a discussion of the bill that applies to its consideration, I will say to the Senator. I do not wish to object to a brief statement, but the Senator from South Dakota realizes that there are a number of other bills on the calendar which have never yet been called.

Mr. STERLING. I know that.
Mr. ROBINSON. And the present arrangement contemplates, if possible, the consideration of all unobjected bills on the calendar.

Mr. McKELLAR. I desire to say that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood] has an objection to this bill, and I know he desires to be present when it is considered.

Mr. STERLING. Very well; I do not wish to shut off any Senator from being present when the bill is considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Being objected to, the bill will go

KAW INDIAN LANDS IN OKLAHOMA.

The bill (S. 4544) to authorize the extension of the period of restriction against alienation on surplus lands allotted to minor members of the Kansas or Kaw Tribe of Indians in Oklahoma was announced as next in order.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the period of restriction against alienation on surplus lands allotted to minor members of the Kansas or Kaw Tribe of Indians in Oklahoma, under the provisions of the agreement with said tribe of Indians as ratified and confirmed by the act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. L. p. 636), be, and is hereby, extended for a period of 25 years from the date of the approval of this act in all cases where the allottees have not reached the age of majority. majority.

Mr. KING. I should like to ask the Senator from Kansas whether that is the measure in which the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] is interested?

Mr. CURTIS. No; this is a bill of which he is in favor, and he voted to report it out of the committee.

Mr. KING. This is not the omnibus bill?

Mr. CURTIS. No.
Mr. KING. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THEMIS CHRIST.

The bill (H. R. 8046) for the relief of Themis Christ was announced as next in order.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of the act approved September 7, 1918, entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States receiving injuries in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," are hereby extended to Themis Christ for loss of his left leg while employed in the Naval Auxiliary Service, as a result of the wreck of the U. S. S. Hector in the year 1916, and that he be paid such sums to date from the passage of this act as would properly be due him within the provisions of section 4 of the said act of September 7, 1916. The United States Employees' Compensation Commission is hereby authorized and directed to make payments in compliance with the terms of the said act of September 7, 1916, and in accordance with the rules and regulations of said commission. Any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated is hereby appropriated for the purpose of this act.

Mr, KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Vermont why under the present law, without supplementary legislation, this injured person may not be compensated? Did the accident occur before the compensation act was passed?

Mr. PAGE. I think it was reported to us that some legislation was necessary. I have the facts before me as contained in the report.

Mr. KING. I have read the report to the effect that he was injured and suffered the amputation of his leg as a result of the injury, but there is nothing to indicate that the accident occurred prior to the passage of the compensation act.

Mr. PAGE. I read from the letter of the Secretary of the

The purpose of this bill is to extend the provisions of the act approved September 7, 1916, entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States receiving injuries in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," which includes employees of the Naval Auxiliary Service, to this case.

After careful consideration of all the facts and circumstances of this case, the department recommends that the bill (H. R. 8046) be enacted.

It is apparently an extraordinarily meritorious case, and the facts are very strong.

Mr. KING. I am not questioning the propriety of granting the relief, but my understanding is that the man was injured after the passage of the compensation law, and I was wondering, if that were true, why it was necessary to pass this proposed act?

Mr. PAGE. I only know that the Secretary of the Treasury says that the purpose of the bill is to extend the provisions of the act so that it may include this case.

Mr. KING. I shall not object to the passage of the bill, but I shall move to reconsider the vote by which it shall be passed so as to give me an opportunity to look into it.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. KING. I now move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. PAGE. May I ask the Senator a question? Has he studied the enormities of this injury?

Mr. KING. I have said to the Senator that I think the man is entitled to the relief, but I wanted to know why he could not get it under existing law. I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, in order that I may investigate the matter; and on Monday, if I find the views of the Senator are correct and my surmise is correct, I shall withdraw my motion.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Let me suggest to the Senator that in the bill itself it is stated that this man was injured in the wreck of the United States ship Hector in the year 1916. The compensation act was not passed until September, 1916, so I think we are safe in assuming that this wreck occurred before that time.

Mr. KING. I understood the wreck occurred in 1917. Mr. JONES of Washington. No; it occurred in 1916.

Mr. KING. I withdraw my motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion to reconsider is withdrawn, and the bill stands passed.

A. E. ACKERMAN.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6358) authorizing the accounting officers of the Treasury to pay to A. E. Ackerman the pay and allowances of his rank for services performed prior to the approval of his bond by the Secretary of the Navy.

It proposes to pay to A. E. Ackerman, late lieutenant (junior grade), Supply Corps, United States Naval Reserve Force, the pay and allowances of his rank for the period he performed active duty in the third naval district prior to the approval of active duty in the third naval district prior to the approval of his bond by the Secretary of the Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOINT COMMISSION OF GOLD AND SILVER INQUIRY.

Mr. CALDER. I ask unanimous consent, out of order, to submit a report. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back favorably, with amendments, the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 37) creating a joint commission, to be known as the joint commission of gold and silver inquiry, which shall consist of five Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and five Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the concurrent resolution. It provides for the appointment of a joint commission to investigate, among other things, the causes of the decline in the production of gold and silver in the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?
Mr. WADSWORTH. I should like to hear the concurrent resolution read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read. The reading clerk read the concurrent resolution.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, in connection with the concurrent resolution I desire to offer for the RECORD a statement showing the extraordinary reduction in the production of gold and silver in the United States since the year 1915. give the aggregates only.

In 1915 our production of gold was $101,035,700; in 1922 but $49,096,000, a reduction of 51:41 per cent. In the case of silver our production in 1915 was $74,961,075; in 1921 it was but $53,052,441, a decrease of 29.23 per cent.

I offer these statements and ask unanimous consent that they be published in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that order will be made.

The matter referred to is as follows:

State.	1915	1921	1922.1	Decrease, 1922 from 1915.	Per cent of decrease, 1922 from 1915.	Increase (+) decrease (-), 1922 from 1921.	Per cent of increase (+), decrease (-), 1922 from 1921.
Alaska Arizona Lalifornia. California. Colorado. daho. Mortana. Nevada New Mexico Dregon. Oorth Dakota. Utah. Washington Other States and possessions	4,555,900 22,547,400 22,530,600 1,170,600 4,978,300 11,883,700 1,883,700 1,867,100 7,463,500 3,907,900 461,600	$7,998,506 3,317,809 15,061,309 7,347,800 542,200 1,723,600 3,220,500 203,100 6,523,000 1,894,300 151,100 1,266,500	$7, 871, 200 3, 304, 800 14, 829, 100, 6, 518, 100 482, 800 1, 511, 100 3, 222, 900 477, 400 6, 711, 100 2, 226, 800, 1, 414, 000	$8, 838, 800 1, 251, 108 1, 271, 108 17, 718, 200 16, 012, 200 687, 800 3, 467, 200 8, 664, 808 1, 127, 900 1, 389, 700 692, 408 1, 681, 100 273, 100 144, 800	Per cent. 52. 90. 27. 46. 34. 23; 71. 07. 58. 75. 69. 65. 72. 83. 77. 26. 74. 45. 9. 35. 43. 01. 59. 09. 9. 30	-$127,300 -13,609 -232,200 -829,700 -59,400 -214,500 +129,100 -338,200 +188,100 +332,509 +37,400 +147,500	Per cent1.59 -0.35 -1.54 -11.3 -11.8 -12.44 +0.2 +63.56 -41.42 +24.88 +17.55 +24.77
Total	101,035,700	50, 067, 300.	49,096,000	51, 939; 200	51.4L	-971,300	-1.9

¹ U. S. Mint Reports.
² Preliminary estimate of the Bureau of the Mint in cooperation with the Geological Survey.

Table compiled and computed by H. N. Lawrie, managing director American Gold and Silver Institute.

Silver production in the United States by States,1 1915, 1921, and 1922. PINE OUNG

State.	1915	1921	1922*	Increase (+) or decrease (-), 1921 from 1915.	Per cent of increase (+), decrease (-), 1921 from 1915.
Alaska Arizona Arizona Alifornia	581, 874 14, 423, 173	753, 999 2, 519, 200 3, 666, 708 6, 310, 694 7, 200, 319 316, 551 9, 677, 020 6, 988, 774 577, 374 53, 118 111, 670 548, 827 14, 028, 661 147, 584 199, 942	652; 251: 4, 198, 695 3, 119, 002 5, 951, 593 5, 965, 098, 361, 912 9, 601; 048- 8, 108, 027- 657; 231 193, 121: 121, 757 601, 765 161, 588, 734 210, 885 179, 740	-300, 685 -3, 146, 472 +1, 916, 784 -889, 051 -5, 842, 147 -265, 323 -4, 746, 158 -7, 454, 311 -1, 757, 690 -72, 381 -85, 899 -175, 763 -66, 293 -66, 293 +21, 500	Per cent. -28, 55 -55, 55 +113, 42 -12, 35 -44, 75 -45, 53 -32, 91 -51, 57 -75, 22 -57, 66 -43, 42 -44, 75 -30, 94 +12, 65
Total	74, 961, 075	53, 052, 441	+55, 510, 859	-21, 908, 634	-29.2

1 U. S. Mint Reports.

2 Preliminary estimate of the Bureau of the Mint in cooperation with the Geological Survey.

3 Increase from 1915 due to rich discovery.

4 Production from siliceous ores is estimated to be less in 1922 than in 1921. The increase in the total production for 1922 over 1921 is attributed to the increase in silver derived as a by-product of lead and copper, the production of both of which increased materially in 1922.

Table compiled and computed by H. N. Lawrie, managing director American Gold and Silver Institute.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, this seems to be a very important resolution, and I think it ought to go over.

Mr. ROBINSON. The resolution has already been passed, I will say to the Senator.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; unanimous consent for its consideration has not yet been given.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, this resolution was introduced: by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Nicholson], referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining, reported favorably, and then referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, because it involves some expenditure from the contingent fund. It was carefully examined by the committee

Mr. JONES of Washington. I think it ought to go over, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be passed over.

BIG ROCK STONE & CONSTRUCTION CO.

The bill (S. 4476) to convey to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co. a portion of the hospital reservation of United States Veterans' Hospital No. 78 (Fort Logan H. Roots), in the State of Arkansas, was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Vice President's table a House bill which is similar to, if not identical in terms with, the Senate bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The chair lays before the Senate bill from the House of Representatives.

The bill (H. R. 12751) to convey to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co. a portion of the hospital reservation of United States Veterans' Hospital No. 78 (Fort Logan H. Roots), in the State of Arkansas, was read twice by its title.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill,

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, Senate bill

Without objection, Senate bill 4476 will be indefinitely postponed. Mr. ROBINSON. I ask lea I ask leave to have printed in the RECORD the report of the House committee on the bill which has just

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The report is as follows:

The report is as follows:

Mr. Langley, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, submitted the following report (to accompany H. R. 12751):

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 12751) to convey to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co. a portion of the hospital reservation of United States Veterans' Hospital No. 78 (Fort Logan H. Roots), in the State of Arkansas, having duly considered the same, hereby make report of it to the House, with the unanimous recommendation that the bill do pass.

This bill has the approval of the United States Veterans' Bureau, as is evidenced by its report thereon, which is as follows:

United States Veterans' Bureau, Washington, February 8, 1923.

UNITED STATES VETERANS BUREAU,

Washington, February 8, 1923.

Hon. John W. Langley,

Chairman of Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Chairman: Since the receipt of your letter dated September 28, 1922, in which you request a statement of this bureau with regard to the bill (H. R. 12751) entitled "A bill to convey to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co. a portion of the hospital reservation of United States Veterans' Hospital No. 78 (Fort Logan H. Roots), in the State of Arkansas," introduced September 29, 1922, by Mr. Jacoway and referred to your committee, I have secured a report from the commanding officer of the Fort Logan H. Roots Hospital and a representative from the central office of this bureau which states that there are no objections to the release of this land, and that the sale of the property as contemplated by the bill would not interfere with the administration of the hospital or of the well-being of the patients.

In view of their report, the bureau sees no objection to the sale of the property described in the bill by the Government to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co.

Respectfully, George E. Ijams, Acting Director.

AMENDMENT OF ACT OF JANUARY 11, 1922.

The bill (H. R. 11579) to amend section 1 of an act approved January 11, 1922, entitled "An act to permit the city of Chicago to acquire real estate of the United States of America," was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act approved January 11, 1922, entitled "An act to permit the city of Chicago to acquire real estate of the United States of America," is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Secrion 1. That in consideration of the payment by the city of

as follows:
 "Section I. That in consideration of the payment by the city of Chicago to the United States of America of the just compensation and damages for real estate hereinafter described, as ascertained by a jury in proceedings to condemn real estate of the United States of America, the city of Chicago is hereby authorized to acquire for street purposes, by condemnation proceedings, all interest of the United States of America in and to the following described real estate. vis:

estate, viz:

"The west 17 feet, or any part thereof, of the east 50 feet (except the south 149 feet and except the north 33 feet) of the south quarter of the east half of the northeast quarter of section 30, township 38 north, range 14 east of the third principal meridian, situated in the city of Chicago, county of Cook, and State of Illinois."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RELIEF OF FLOOD SUFFERERS IN NEW MEXICO.

The bill (S. 2625) for the relief of sufferers in New Mexico from the flood due to the overflow of the Rio Grande and its tributaries, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of affording relief to Lucas Trujillo, Juan Bians, Mariano P. Padillo, Bruno Perea, Juan Jose Trujillo, Mignel Trujillo, Francisco Saiz, Antonio Provencio, B. R. Carreros, Santiago Serna, Roman M. Herrera, and others, citizens of the United States and property owners, residing at and in the vicinity of Hatch and Santa Teresa, N. Mex., who may have suffered loss by reason of the flood on August 17, 1921, caused by the overflow of the Rio Grande, there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $75,000.

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed, under such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary for the purposes of this act, to cause a survey to be made of the property loss sustained by reason of this flood and to disburse the sum herein provided pro rata among these sufferers for their losses to the extent that this appropriation will permit.

Mr. OVERMAN, Mr. President, let us have some explanations.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, let us have some explanation of this bill.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, the Government constructed the Elephant Butte irrigation project in the Rio Grande Valley of New Mexico. In the construction of that project and some of the lateral works they were so constructed that when an unusual flood came from one of the tributaries of the Rio Grande it flooded this section of country, including two villages there, and destroyed the town. The Secretary of the Interior has reported that the injury to the property was caused largely by reason of the manner in which the works were constructed, and he says there is no question but that these people are entitled to reimbursement.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question? Should not the appropriation be a charge upon the reclamation fund rather than upon the general funds in the

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I do not think so, for the reason that the people under the project there were in no wise responsible for the manner in which the work was constructed, and if the Senator's suggestion were adopted it would be a charge to be repaid by the farmers generally under the project. In other words, they would have to pay themselves back for their own injury, which was brought about by reason of this engineering, the work of Government officials, people in no wise under the control of the flood sufferers.

Mr. KING. May I invite the attention of the Senator to the fact that through the bad engineering of some of the engineers who had charge of local projects, one in particular that I have in mind, the cost to the settlers was increased very much over the reported cost? The engineers made no provision in the beginning for drainage. They had to drain, and that was an additional charge, and it is reflected in the advanced costs which the settlers on the project had to pay.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. In this case there was an unusual flood, and the damage was suffered, and it seems to me that the farmers there ought not to have to pay it. I sincerely trust that the bill may pass.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. BURSUM. I desire to call attention to the fact that the town which was destroyed by flood lies at the base of a large drainage area. This ditch or canal, constructed under the supervision of Government engineers, failed to provide any avenue of escape for those waters. There was clearly gross neglect on the part of the Government in the construction. absolutely no chance for escape.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RECLASSIFICATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

Mr. SMOOT. From the Committee on Appropriations I report back favorably the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field service, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert a substitute for the bill.

The Senate will remember that the bill came originally from the Committee on Civil Service and was reported to the Senate. Then it was referred to the Appropriations Committee to have hearings on the effect of the schedule proposed. The committee now reports the bill to the Senate and asks that it be referred to the Civil Service Committee, and also that it be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. . Without objection, it will be printed and referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I renew my request that the Senate take up the bill-

Mr. McKELLAR. Will not the Senator allow the next two bills to be acted upon? There are only two more—

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Not until I finish my statement; then I will yield the floor to the Senator. I renew my request for the Senate to take up a bill which relates to the distribution-

Mr. McKELLAR. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (H. R. 5020) to provide for the sale by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia of certain land in the District of Columbia acquired for a school site, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over. The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 5027) to amend an act approved February 28, 1899, entitled "An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings," was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR, Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

MONUMENT TO AMERICAN WOMEN FOR SERVICES IN THE WORLD WAR.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 168) in relation to a monument to commemorate the services and sacrifices of the women of the United States of America, its insular possessions, and the District of Columbia in the World War, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

Mr. CURTIS. I hope the Senator will not object to the joint resolution. It is to commemorate the services and sacrifices of women of the Red Cross, and has been unanimously reported by the Committee on the Library.

Mr. McKELLAR. I withdraw my objection to the consideration of the joint resolution.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which had been reported from the Committee on the Library with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after the word "hereby," to insert the words "authorized to be"; on page 2, line 10, after the word "hereby," to insert the words "authorized to be"; and on line 13, after the word "hereby," to insert the words "authorized to be," so as to make the joint resolution read:

to be," so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $150,000, as a part contribution to the erection of a memorial building, with equipment, in the District of Columbia to commemorate the services and sacrifices of the patrictic women of the United States of America, of its insular possessions, and of the District of Columbia during the World War. Said memorial to be erected on the land now occupied in part by the Memorial to the Women of the Civil War, the permanent headquarters of the American Red Cross.

SEC. 2. That said memorial shall be a building monumental in design and character and shall be used as a permanent model chapter house for the American Red Cross under the charge of the District of Columbia Red Cross Chapter, and shall cost not less than $300,000: Provided, That this expenditure shall include complete equipment.

SEC. 3. That the sum hereby authorized to be appropriated shall not be payable until there shall be raised by private subscription an additional sum of $150,000.

SEC. 4. That the money hereby authorized to be appropriated shall not be paid until the plan of the proposed building shall have been ap-be payable intil there shall be raised by private subscription an additional sum of $150,000.

SEC. 4. That the money hereby authorized to be appropriated shall not be paid until the plan of the proposed building shall have been approved by a commission consisting of the president of the American Red Cross, the Secretary of War, the chairman of the Senate Committee on the Library, the chairman of the House Committee on the Library, and a representative of the central committee of the American Red Cross. The plans of the said memorial shall likewise be approved by the Commission of Fine Arts.

The expenditures for said memorial building shall be made under the direction of a commission consisting of the chairman of the Senate Committee on the Library and the chairman of the House Committee on the Library. That said memorial building shall remain the property of the United States Government but under the supervision of the Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, and the American Red Cross shall at all times be charged with the responsibility, the care, keeping, and maintenance of the said memorial building without expense to the United States.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I ask unanimous consent that the report of the committee on the joint resolution be printed in the RECORD in 8-point type.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD in 8-point type, as follows:

MONUMENT TO WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE WORLD WAR. [Report to accompany S. J. Res. 168.]

The Committee on the Library, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 168) in relation to a monument to commemorate the services and sacrifices of the women of the United States of America, its insular possessions, and the District of Columbia in the World War, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with the recommendation that the joint resolution do pass with amendments.

On page 1, line 3, after the word "hereby" insert "authorized to be"

On page 2, line 7, after the word "hereby" insert "authorized to be"; and

On page 2, line 10, after the word "hereby" insert "authorized to be."

This is a joint resolution to authorize the appropriation of $150,000, provided the American Red Cross raise by private subscription an additional sum of $150,000, to erect a memorial building to commemorate the service and sacrifice of the women of the United States of America, its insular possessions, and the District of Columbia in the World War, the building to be erected on the land now occupied in part by the memorial to the women of the Civil War and to remain the property of the United States Government, but to be maintained by the American Red Cross without expense to the Government.

The precedent for this memorial, the sacrifices and services it will commemorate, and the purposes for which it will be used are briefly as follows:

PRECEDENT.

In 1913 Congress appropriated $400,000 toward the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a memorial building to the services and sacrifices of the women of the Civil War, to be used permanently by the American Red Cross on the condition that the Red Cross raise $300,000 additional and that it maintain the memorial without expense to the Government. The Red Cross secured from private contributions $400,000, the building and the site remaining the property of the Government.

Within five years after Congress appropriated this $400,000 the American Red Cross received for our sick and wounded men and for other war relief purposes over $400,000,000 in money and value of supplies.

SACRIFICES AND SERVICES.

Hundreds of Red Cross nurses and women volunteers gave their lives because of war service.

Thousands of mothers gave their sons-sometimes only sons. Sometimes the mothers were widows and in this loss gave their all. No money can compensate them for such a loss, but their country's recognition of their sacrifices would show to them a grateful remembrance and its gratitude.

Over 8,000,000 worked as volunteers during the war in the Red Cross. They made 382,000,000 hospital, knitted, and other garments, surgical dressings, and other articles that were needed. Volunteer women canteen workers in the United States served 40,000,000 refreshments to traveling troops and the sick and wounded on hospital trains and over 15,000,000 in France. Thousands of women served in volunteer motor transportation for sick and wounded from camps, hospital ships, and trains to the military hospitals, and for many other Red Cross duties. Women volunteers carried on office work, assisted soldiers' families at home, entertained sick and wounded at the hospitals, and rendered countless other services to our Government and fighting forces. These volunteer services of American women seem worthy of a memorial as a testimony of the Government's appreciation of their labors and their loyalty for their country.

PURPOSE.

The National Red Cross depends upon its chapters for its funds and support. Through the headquarters, but mainly through the chapters, $9,000,000 was expended last year in aiding the disabled ex-service men and their families in service the Government can not render.

In the last year 68 disasters within the United States required Red Cross aid that was rendered promptly and efficiently; but without the support of the live and active chapters which provided $1,341,000 for this relief, there would have been neither funds nor organization to carry on this work,

By the erection of this memorial, which will provide a model chapter house in the National Capital, it will be possible to develop the system of chapter volunteer service that can be extended throughout the country whereby a large volunteer personnel can be obtained ready for duty in case of need and, at the same time, a live public interest maintained that will provide the funds for the sudden emergency calls for relief and service that so constantly come to the Red Cross.

MEMORIAL OF PAST AND SERVICE FOR FUTURE.

In commemorating by this memorial building the noble and self-sacrificing services of our women in the World War, the opportunity is given them and coming generations of American women to carry on the same loyal and devoted service in the future for the sake of the country and humanity.

JOSEPH F. BECKER.

The bill (S. 3615) for the relief of Joseph F. Becker was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the bill will go over.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not know who objected, but I will ask the Senator who objected to withhold his objection for a moment. Mr. KING. I objected to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. NORRIS. Will not the Senator permit an explanation to be made, and withdraw his objection until it is made?

Mr. KING. I will say to the Senator that I am familiar with the subject, and I do not think his explanation would change my views.

Mr. NORRIS. Perhaps I can get the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs to make the explanation, if that will suit the Senator any better.

Mr. KING. I would be delighted to hear the Senator from Nebraska, and his influence, if possible, would be even greater than the influence of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. NORRIS. If that be true, and the Senator can not be changed, of course it would be a useless consumption of time Mr. KING. I shall be very happy to explain my views

Mr. NORRIS. I do not see how anybody understanding the bill could possibly object to it.

Mr. KING. I shall confer with the Senator, and be glad to give him my views in extenso. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

GORDON G. M'DONALD.

The bill (S. 3826) for the relief of Gordon G. MacDonald was announced as next in order,

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I hope the Senator will withdraw his objection to this bill. It is a very meritorious and just measure, approved by the committee, and, as the Senator will see, is in-dorsed and recommended by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. It involves no appropriation. A sailor suffered in the service of his country and is permanently disabled. I hope the Senator will permit the bill to be passed.

Mr. KING. I shall have to adhere to my objection with my understanding of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

BENJAMIN H. RICHARDSON.

The bill (S. 3895) for the relief of Benjamin H. Richardson was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over,

FRELINGHUYSEN. Will not the Senator permit the consideration of the bill?

Mr. KING. I would like to ask the Senator one question: Was this a reserve officer? As I understand the bill, it is to give relief to a reserve officer.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Yes; he was a naval-reserve officer.

Mr. KING. I renew my objection. The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

FRANK A. JAHN.

The bill (S. 4152) for the relief of Frank A. Jahn was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

MAJ. BUSSELL B. PUTNAM.

The bill (S. 4276) for the relief of Maj. Russell B. Putnam was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, the House has passed a similar House bill, No. 11738. That bill was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs of the Senate, and the chairman of the committee made a unanimous report this morning. I ask unanimous consent that the House bill may be substituted for the bill on the calendar. They are identical in words.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of House bill 11738? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read the bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to Maj. Russell B. Putnam, assistant paymaster, United States Marine Corps, the sum of $2,173 to cover the loss sustained by him through the embezzlement of such amount of Government funds by Robert H. Rudolph, pay clerk, United States Marine Corps, in 1915, while serving as pay clerk to the said Major Putnam, at marine barracks, Philadelphia, Pa., and on expeditionary duty in the West Indies, and which amount Major Putnam was required to and did deposit with the Treasurer of the United States.

Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection to the consideration of the bill or to its passage, but I want to be recognized, when the bill

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill is now before the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. This is a worthy bill. It is for the relief of
Maj. Russell B. Putnam; but I can not understand why other bills for other soldiers or sailors injured in the line of duty must necessarily be objected to without an opportunity being afforded even to explain the measures. The bill for the relief of Joseph F. Becker, which was objected to a moment ago, is an instance where a man was injured in the line of duty. The injury occurred after the war was over. It is conceded that he was performing his duty at the time of the injury, and that if the same thing had happened before the war closed technically he would have been entitled to the relief sought through this bill. He was incapacitated for life, as far as further duty is concerned, and it is so reported. There is no dispute about that. As a matter of fact, Mr. Becker is in abject poverty now, as are his relatives. He was a lieutenant commander at the time of the injury.

I do not understand the manner of jurisprudence which would deny relief of any kind to a man engaged in the Army or the Navy who is injured while he is still performing his duties in the service after the war technically closed.

This man, unable to do any labor of any kind, completely incapacitated, as shown by the records, injured in the line of duty, is denied any succor or relief simply because one Senator objects to the consideration of the bill, while other men, perhaps just as meritorious, but not more so, are provided for. The letter of the official in Commander Becker's case shows that there was a measure pending which, if it had been enacted into law, would have given him relief. That measure failed, and this is the only way he can get any relief.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. NORRIS. I yield the floor.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I have no objection to the bill to which the Senator refers.

Mr. NORRIS. I am not criticizing the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I hope no one will object to the Senator's

The VICE PRESIDENT. House bill 11738 is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSE A. DE LA TORRIENTE.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 47) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Mr. Jose A. de la Torriente, a citizen of Cuba, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he hereby is, authorized to permit Mr. Jose A. de la Torriente, a citizen of Cuba, to receive instruction at the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis: Provided, That no expense shall be caused to the United States thereby, and that the said Jose A. de la Torriente shall agree to comply with all regulations for the police and disclipine of the academy, to be studious, and to give his utmost efforts to accomplish the course in the various departments of instruction, and the said Jose A. de la Torriente shall not be admitted to the academy until he shall have passed the mental and physical examinations prescribed for candidates from the United States, and that he shall be immediately withdrawn if deficient in studies or conduct and so recommended by the academic board.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELLEN M'NAMARA.

The bill (H. R. 8921) for the relief of Ellen McNamara was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and directed to cause to be paid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ellen McNamara, mother of Frank X. McNamara, ordinary seaman, U. S. S. Buffalo and Cleveland, United States Navy, an amount equal to six months' pay at the rate received by him at the date of his death.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLICATIONS FOR THE BLIND.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 3078, the so-called "blind Bible" bill, as it is very necessary that the bill should be passed now if anything is to be accomplished at this session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3078) to provide for the free transmission through the mails of certain publications for the blind, which was read, as follows:

Be it enected, etc., That volumes of the Holy Scriptures or any part thereof, in raised characters for the use of the blind, whether prepared by hand or printed, which do not contain advertisements, when furnished a blind person without cost or at a price less than 60 per cent of the retail price therefor, shall be transmitted in the United States mails free of postage under such regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I ask that an amendment be made to the bill.

I move, on line 7, before the word "therefor," to strike out the words "retail price," and to insert the word "cost."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the ameridment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The hour of 4 o'clock having arrived-

WILLIAM SCHUYLER WOODRUFF.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate bill 4500, authorizing the appointment of William Schuyler Woodruff as an Infantry officer, United States Army. It has been favorably reported.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?
Mr. McKELLAR. What is the bill?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is a bill for the reinstatement of an Army officer.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let it be reported.
Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. NORRIS. Would it not be a violation of the unanimous-consent agreement to take up the bill?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania has asked for unanimous consent, and if it is given the Chair supposes that it will extend the time fixed in the agreement.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I will ask that the bill be put over until Monday.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CURTIS. I ask that the unanimous-consent order be carried out and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President-

Mr. LODGE and Mr. WADSWORTH called for the regular

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order, under the unanimous-consent agreement, requires the Senate to go into executive session at this time.

Mr. BURSUM. I am asking unanimous consent-

That can not be given.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is called for, and under the unanimous-consent agreement the Senate will proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Thereupon the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 20 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

MINNESOTA RIVER BRIDGE, MINN.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably with amendments the bill (S. 4589) to authorize the county of Hennepin, in the State of Minnesota, to construct a bridge and approaches thereto across the Minnesota River at points suitable to the interests of navigation, and I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendments were, in line 6, after the word "at," to insert the article "a"; in the same line, before the word "suitable," to strike out "points" and insert "point"; and in line 7, after the word "navigation," to strike out "in or near the northwest quarter of section 27, township 28 north, range 23 west of the fourth principal meridian," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the county of Hennepin, in the State of Minnesota, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Minnesota River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation between the Fort Snelling military reservation and Dakota County, in the State of Minnesota, in abcordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to. The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the county of Hennepin, in the State of Minnesota, to construct a bridge and approaches thereto across the Minnesota River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation.'

HUDSON RIVER BRIDGES, NEW YORK.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 13978) granting the consent of Congress to the Hudson River Bridge Co. at Albany to maintain two bridges already constructed across the Hudson River, and I submit a report (No. 1214) thereon. unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill,

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, or-dered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGES, MINNESOTA.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 14081) granting the consent of Congress to the Valley Transfer Railway, Co.,

a corporation, to construct three bridges and approaches thereto across the junction of the Minnesota and Mississippi Rivers at points suitable to the interests of navigation, and I submit a report (No. 1215) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PERMANENT COURT OF INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE AT THE HAGUE

(S. DOC. NO. 309).

On motion of Mr. Lodge, the injunction of secrecy was removed from the following message of the President of the United States relative to the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague, which, with the accompanying papers and documents, was ordered to be printed as a Senate document and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> THE WHITE HOUSE, Washington, February 24, 1923.

Message of the President to the Senate, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of State to the President, and asking the Senate's consent to the United States' adhesion to the protocol under which the Permanent Court of International Justice has been erected at The Hague. To be held in confidence and no part, intimation, or synopsis released for publication until these documents have been delivered to the Senate:

To the Senate:

There has been established at The Hague a Permanent Court of International Justice for the trial and decision of international causes by judicial methods, now effective through the ratification by the signatory powers of a special protocol. It is organized and functioning. The United States is a competent suitor in the court, through provision of the statute creating it, but that relation is not sufficient for a nation long committed to the peaceful settlement of international controversies. Indeed, our Nation had a conspicuous place in the advocacy of such an agency of peace and international adjustment, and our deliberate public opinion of to-day is overwhelmingly in favor of our participation, and the attending obligations of maintenance and the furtherance of its prestige. It is for this reason that I am now asking for the consent of the Senate to our adhesion to the protocol.

With this request I am sending to the Senate a copy of the letter addressed to me by the Secretary of State, in which he presents in detail the history of the establishment of the court, takes note of the objection to our adherence because of the court's organization under the auspices of the League of Nations, and its relation thereto, and indicates how, with certain reservations, we may fully adhere and participate, and remain wholly free from any legal relations to the league or assumption of obligation under the covenant of the league.

I forbear repeating the presentation made by the Secretary of State, but there is one phase of the matter not covered in his letter with which I choose frankly to acquaint the Senate. For a long period, indeed, ever since the International Conference on the Limitation of Armament, the consideration of plans under which we might adhere to the protocol has been under way. We were unwilling to adhere unless we could participate in the selection of judges, we could not hope to participate with an American accord if adherence involved any legal relation to the league. These conditions, there is good reason to believe, will be acceptable to the signatory powers, though nothing definitely can be done until the United States tenders adhesion with these reservations. Manifestly the Executive can not make this tender until the Senate has spoken its approval. Therefore, I most earnestly urge your favorable advice and consent. I would rejoice if some action could be taken, even in the short period which remains of the present session.

It is not a new problem in international relationship. wholly a question of accepting an established institution of high character, and making effective all the fine things which have been said by us in favor of such an agency of advanced civilization. It would be well worth the while of the Senate to make such special effort as is becoming to record its approval. Such action would add to our own consciousness of participation in the fortunate advancement of international relationship, and remind the world anew that we are ready for our proper part in furthering peace and adding to stability in world

THE WHITE House, February 2, 1923.

(Inclosures: Letter of Secretary of State, copy of protocol.)

WARREN G. HARDING.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington, February 17, 1923.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Referring to our interviews with respect to the advisability of action by this Government in order to give its adhesion, upon appropriate conditions, to the protocol establishing the Permanent Court of International Justice, I beg leave to submit the following considerations:

From its foundation this Government has taken a leading part in promoting the judicial settlement of international dis-Prior to the first peace conference at The Hague in 1899 the United States has participated in 57 arbitrations, 20 of which were with Great Britain. The President of the United States had acted as arbitrator between other nations in five cases, and ministers of the United States or other persons designated by this Government had acted as arbitrator or umpire in seven cases. In 1890 the Congress adopted a concurrent resolution providing:

"That the President be, and is hereby, requested to invite, from time to time, as fit occasions may arise, negotiations with any government with which the United States has or may have diplomatic relations, to the end that any differences or disputes arising between the two Governments which can not be adjusted by diplomatic agency may be referred to arbitration and be peaceably adjusted by such means. (Cong. Rec. 51st Cong., 1st sess., part 3, vol. 21, p. 2986)."

In his instructions to the delegates of this Government to the first peace conference at The Hague Secretary Hay said:

"Nothing can secure for human government and for the authority of law which it represents so deep a respect and so firm a loyalty as the spectacle of sovereign and independent States, whose duty it is to prescribe the rules of justice and impose penalties upon the lawless, bowing with reverence before the august supremacy of those principles of right which give to law its eternal foundation.

A plan for a permanent international tribunal accompanied these instructions.

At that conference there was adopted a "convention for the pacific settlement of international disputes," which provided for a permanent court of arbitration. This organization, however, while called a permanent court, really consists of an eligible list of persons designated by the contracting parties, respectively, from whom tribunals may be constituted for the determination of such controversies as the parties concerned may agree to submit to them.

In 1908 and 1909 the United States concluded 19 general conventions of arbitration, which, in accordance with The Hague conventions, provided for arbitration by special agreement of differences which are of a legal nature or which relate to the interpretation of treaties and which it may not have been possible to settle by diplomacy, provided that the differences do not affect the vital interest, the independence, or the honor of the two contracting States and do not concern the interests of third parties. Moreover, since the first peace conference at The Hague a number of conventions have been concluded by this Government submitting to arbitration questions of great

It is believed that the preponderant opinion in this country has not only favored the policy of judicial settlement of justiciable international disputes through arbitral tribunals specially established, but it has also strongly desired that a Permanent Court of International Justice should be established and maintained. In his instructions to the delegates of the United States to the second peace conference held at The Hague in 1907 Secretary Root emphasized the importance of the establishment of such a tribunal in conformity with accepted judicial standards. He said:

"It should be your effort to bring about in the second conference a development of The Hague tribunal into a permanent tribunal composed of judges who are judicial officers and who are paid adequate salaries; who have no other occupation, and who will devote their entire time to the trial and decision of international causes by judicial methods and under a sense of judicial responsibility. These judges should be so selected from the different countries that the different systems of law and procedure and the principal languages shall be fairly represented. The court should be of such dignity, consideration, and rank that the best and ablest jurists will accept appointment to it, and that the whole world will have absolute confidence in its judgments."

The second peace conference discussed a plan looking to the attainment of this object, but the project failed because an agreement could not be reached with respect to the method of selecting judges. The conference adopted the following recommendation:

"The conference recommends to the signatory powers the adoption of the project hereto annexed, of a convention for the establishment of a court of arbitral justice, and its putting into effect as soon as an accord shall be reached upon the choice of the judges and the constitution of the court."

The covenant of the League of Nations provided, in article 14, that the council of the league should formulate and submit to the members of the league plans for the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice, which should be competent to hear and determine any dispute of an international character which the parties thereto should submit to it, and which also might give an advisory opinion upon any dispute or question referred to it by the council or by the assembly of the This provision of the covenant, it may be said, did not enter into the subsequent controversy with respect to participation by this Government in the League of Nations; on the contrary it is believed that this controversy reflected but little, if any, divergence of view in this country with respect to the advisability of establishing a permanent international court.

Pursuant to the direction contained in the article above quoted, the council of the league appointed an advisory committee of jurists which sat at The Hague in the summer of 1920 and formulated a plan for the establishment of such a court. Hon. Elihu Root was a member of that committee. It recommended a plan which was subsequently examined by the council and assembly of the league; and, after certain amendments, had been made, the statute constituting the Permanent Court of International Justice was adopted by the assembly of the league on December 13, 1920.

While these steps were taken under the auspices of the league, the statute constituting the Permanent Court of International Justice did not become effective upon its adoption by the assembly of the league. On the contrary, it became effective by virtue of the signature and ratification by the signatory powers of a special protocol. The reason for this procedure was that, although the plan of the court was prepared under article 14 of the covenant, the statute went beyond the terms of the covenant, especially in making the court available to States which were not members of the League of Nations. Accordingly a protocol of signature was prepared by which the signatory powers declared their acceptance of the adjoined statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice. The permanent court thus established by the signatory powers under the protocol with the statute annexed is now completely organized and at work.

The statute of the court provides for the selection of the judges; defines their qualifications; and prescribes the jurisdiction of the court and the procedure to be followed in litigation before it. The court consists of 15 members-11 judges, called "ordinary judges," and 4 deputy judges. The 11 judges constitute the full court. In case they can not all be present, deputies are to sit as judges in place of the absentees; but if 11 judges are not available 9 may constitute a quorum. It is provided that the judges shall be elected regardless of their nationality from amongst persons of high moral character, possessing the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointments to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law. judges are elected by the council and assembly of the league. each body proceeding independently. The successful candidate must obtain an absolute majority of votes in each body. The judges are elected for nine years and are eligible for reelection. The ordinary judges are forbidden to exercise any political or administrative function. This provision does not apply to the deputy judges except when performing their duties on the court.

The judisdiction of the court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in treaties and conventions in force.

Provision has also been made so that any signatory power, if it desires, may in signing the protocol accept as compulsory ipso facto and without special convention" the jurisdiction of the court in all or any of the classes of legal disputes concerning (a) the interpretation of a treaty; (b) any question of in-ternational law; (c) the existence of any fact which, if estab-lished, would constitute a breach of an international obligation; and (d) the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

This is an entirely optional clause and unless it is signed the jurisdiction of the court is not obligatory.

The first election of judges of the court took place in September, 1921. The eleven ordinary judges are the following:

"Viscount Robert Bannatyne Finlay, Great Britain; B. C. J.
Loder, Holland; Ruy Barbosa, Brazil; D. J. Nyholm, Denmark; Charles Andre Weiss, France; John Bassett Moore, United States : Antonio Sanchez de Bustamante, Cuba : Rafael Altamira, Spain; Yorozu Oda, Japan; Dionisio Anzilotti, Italy; and Max Huber, Switzerland.

The four deputies are: "Michailo Yovanovitch, Serb-Croat-Slovene State; F. V. N. Beichmann, Norway; Demetre Negulesco, Rumania; and Chung-Hui Wang, China." It will be noted that one of the most distinguished American jurists has been elected a member of the court, Hon, John

Bassett Moore

In considering the question of participation of the United States in the support of the permanent court, it may be observed that the United States is already a competent suitor in the court. The statute expressly provides that the court shall be open not only to members of the league but to States mentioned in the annex to the covenant.

But it is not enough that the United States should have the privileges of a suitor. In view of the vast importance of provision for the peaceful settlement of international controversies, of the time-honored policy of this Government in promoting such settlements, and of the fact that it has at last been found feasible to establish upon a sound basis a permanent international court of the highest distinction and to invest it with a jurisdiction which conforms to American principles and practice, I am profoundly convinced that this Government, under appropriate conditions, should become a party to the convention establishing the court and should contribute its fair share of the expense of maintenance.

I find no insuperable obstacle in the fact that the United States is not a member of the League of Nations. The statute of the court has various procedural provisions relating to the But none of these provisions save those for the election of judges, to which I shall presently refer, are of a character which would create any difficulty in the support of the court by the United States despite its nonmembership in the None of these provisions impair the independence of It is an establishment separate from the league, having a distinct legal status resting upon the protocol and It is organized and acts in accordance with judicial standards, and its decisions are not controlled or subject to the League of Nations.

In order to avoid any question that adhesion to the protocol and acceptance of the statute of the court would involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the League of Nations or the assumption of any obligations by the United States under the covenant of the League of Nations, it would be appropriate, if so desired, to have the point distinctly reserved as a part of the terms of the adhesion on the part of this Government.

Again, as already noted, the signature of the protocol and the consequent acceptance of the statute, in the absence of assent to the optional compulsory clause, does not require the acceptance by the signatory powers of the jurisdiction of the court except in such cases as may thereafter be voluntarily submitted to the court. Hence, in adhering to the protocol the United States would not be required to depart from the position, which it has thus far taken, that there should be a special agreement for the submission of a particular controversy to arbitral decision.

There is, however, one fundamental objection to adhesion on the part of the United States to the protocol and the acceptance of the statute of the court in its present form. That is, that under the provisions of the statute only members of the League of Nations are entitled to a voice in the election of judges. The objection is not met by the fact that this Government is represented by its own national group in The Hague Court of Arbitration and that this group may nominate candidates for election as judges of the Permanent Court of International Justice. This provision relates simply to the nomination of candidates; the election of judges rests with the council and assembly of the League of Nations. It is no disparagement of the distinguished abilities of the judges who have already been chosen to say that the United States could not be expected to give its formal support to a permanent international tribunal in the election of the members of which it had no right to take part.

I believe that the validity of this objection is recognized and that it will be feasible to provide for the suitable participation by the United States in the election of judges, both ordinary and deputy judges, and in the filling of vacancies. The practical advantage of the present system of electing judges by the majority votes of the council and assembly of the league acting separately is quite manifest. It was this arrangement which solved the difficulty, theretofore appearing almost insuperable, of providing an electoral system conserving the interests of the powers both great and small. It would be impracticable, in my judgment, to disturb the essential features of this system. also be observed that the members of the council and assembly of the league in electing the judges of the court do not act under the covenant of the League of Nations but under the statute of the court and in the capacity of electors performing duties defined by the statute. It would seem to be reasonable and praticable that in adhering to the protocol and accepting the statute this Government should prescribe as a condition that the United States, through representatives designated for the purpose, should be permitted to participate, upon an equality with other States members of the League of Nations, in all proceedings both of the council and of the assembly of the league for the election of judges or deputy judges of the court or for the filling of vacancies in these offices.

As the statute of the court prescribes its organization, competence, and procedure, it would also be appropriate to provide, as a condition of the adhesion of the United States, that the statute should not be amended without the consent of the United States.

The expenses of the court are not burdensome. statute of the court these expenses are borne by the League of Nations; the league determines the budget and apportions the amount among its members. I understand that the largest contribution by any State is but little more than $35,000 a year. In this matter also the members of the council and assembly of the league do not act under the covenant of the league but under the statute of the court. The United States, if it adhered to the protocol, would, of course, desire to pay its fair share of the expense of maintaining the court. The amount of this contribution would, however, be subject to determination by Congress and to the making of appropriations for the pur-pose. Reference to this matter also might properly be made in the instrument of adhesion.

Accordingly I beg leave to recommend that, if this course meets with your approval, you request the Senate to take suitable action advising and consenting to the adhesion on the part of the United States to the protocol of December 16, 1920, accepting the adjoined statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, but not the optional clause for compulsory jurisdiction; provided, however, that such adhesion shall be upon the following conditions and understandings to be made a part of the instrument of adhesion:

I. That such adhesion shall not be taken to involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the League of Nations or the assumption of any obligations by the United States under the covenant of the League of Nations constituting Part I of the treaty of Versailles.

II. That the United States shall be permitted to participate through representatives designated for the purpose and upon an equality with the other States members respectively of the council and assembly of the League of Nations in any and all proceedings of either the council or the assembly for the election of judges or deputy judges of the Permanent Court of International Justice or for the filling of vacancies.

III. That the United States will pay a fair share of the expenses of the court as determined and appropriated from time to time by the Congress of the United States.

IV. That the statute for the Permanent Court of Interna-tional Justice adjoined to the protocol shall not be amended without the consent of the United States.

If the Senate gives its assent upon this basis, steps can then be taken for the adhesion of the United States to the protocol in the manner authorized. The attitude of this Government will thus be defined and communicated to the other signatory powers whose acquiescence in the stated conditions will be necessary.

Copies of the resolution of the assembly of the League of Nations of December 13, 1920, the protocol of December 16, 1920, and the statute of the court are inclosed herewith. I am, my dear Mr. President, faithfully yours, CHARLES E. HUGHES.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

PERMANENT COURT OF INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE.

PERMANENT COURT OF INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE.

Resolution concerning its establishment passed by the assembly on December 13, 1920—Protocol of signature of the statute provided for by article 14 of the covenant with the text of this statute—Resolution concerning the salaries of the members passed by the assembly on December 18, 1920.

Resolution concerning the establishment of a Permanent Court of International Justice passed by the assembly of the League of Nations, Geneva, December 13, 1920.

1. The assembly unanimously declares its approval of the draft statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, as amended by the assembly, which was prepared by the council under article 14 of the covenant and submitted to the assembly for its approval.

2. In view of the special wording of article 14, the statute of the court shall be submitted within the shortest possible time to the members of the League of Nations for adoption in the form of a protocol duly ratified and declaring their recognition of this statute. It shall be the duty of the council to submit the statute to the members.

3. As soon as this protocol has been ratified by the majority of the members of the league, the statute of the court shall come into force and the court shall be called upon to sit in conformity with the said statute in all disputes between the members or States which have ratified, as well as between the other States to which the court is open under article 35, paragraph 2, of the said statute.

4. The said protocol shall likewise remain open for signature by the States mentioned in the annex to the covenant.

PROTOCOL OF SIGNATURE OF THE STATUTE FOR THE PERMANENT COURT OF INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE PROVIDED FOR BY ARTICLE 14 OF THE COVENANT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, WITH THE TEXT OF THIS STATUTE

PROTOCOL OF SIGNATURE.

The members of the League of Nations, through the undersigned, duly authorized, declare their acceptance of the adjoined statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, which was approved by a unanimous vote of the assembly of the league on the 13th December, 1920, at Geneva.

Consequently they hereby declare that they accept the jurisdiction of the court, in accordance with the terms and subject to the conditions of the above-mentioned statute.

The present protocol, which has been drawn up in accordance with the decision taken by the assembly of the League of Nations on the 13th December, 1920, is subject to ratification. Each power shall send its ratification to the secretary general of the League of Nations; the latter shall take the necessary steps to notify such ratification to the other signatory powers. The ratification shall be deposited in the archives of the secretariat of the League of Nations.

The said protocol shall remain open for signature by the members of the League of Nations and by the States mentioned in the annex to the covenant of the league.

The statute of the court shall come into force as provided in the above-mentioned decision.

Executed at Geneva, in a single copy, the French and English texts of which shall both be authentic.

16TH DECEMBER, 1920.

OPTIONAL CLAUSE.

The undersigned, being duly authorized thereto, further declare, on behalf of their Government, that from this date they accept as compulsory "ipso facto" and without special convention the jurisdiction of the court in conformity with article 36, paragraph 2, of the statute of the court, under the following

STATUTE FOR THE PERMANENT COURT OF INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE PROVIDED FOR BY ARTICLE 14 OF THE COVENANT OF THE LEAGUE OF NA-TIONS.

ARTICLE 1.

A Permanent Court of International Justice is hereby established, in accordance with article 14 of the covenant of the League of Nations. This court shall be in addition to the court of arbitration organized by the conventions of The Hague of 1899 and 1907, and to the special tribunals of arbitration to which States are always at liberty to submit their disputes for settlement.

CHAPTER I.

Organization of the Court.

ARTICLE 2.

The Permanent Court of International Justice shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from amongst persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

ARTICLE 3.

The court shall consist of 15 members-11 judges and 4 deputy judges. The number of judges and deputy judges may hereafter be increased by the assembly, upon the proposal of the council of the League of Nations, to a total of 15 judges and 6 deputy judges.

ARTICLE 4.

The members of the court shall be elected by the assembly and by the council from a list of persons nominated by the na-tional groups in the court of arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions:

In the case of members of the League of Nations not represented in the permanent court of arbitration, the lists of candidates shall be drawn up by national groups appointed for this purpose by their Governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the permanent court of arbi-tration by article 44 of the convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

ARTICLE 5.

At least three months before the date of the election the secretary general of the League of Nations shall address a written request to the members of the court of arbitration belonging to the States mentioned in the annex to the covenant or to the States which join the league subsequently and to the persons appointed under paragraph 2 of article 4, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the court.

No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case must the number of candidates nominated be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

ARTICLE 6.

Before making these nominations each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

ARTICLE 7.

The secretary general of the League of Nations shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible for appointment.

The secretary general shall submit this list to the assembly and to the council.

The assembly and the council shall proceed independently of one another to elect, firstly the judges, then the deputy judges.

ARTICLE 9

At every election the electors shall bear in mind that not only should all the persons appointed as members of the court possess the qualifications required, but the whole body also should represent the main forms of civilization and the principal legal systems of the world.

ARTICLE 10.

Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the assembly and in the council shall be considered as elected.

In the event of more than one national of the same member of the league being elected by the votes of both the assembly and the council the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

ARTICLE 11.

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

ARTICLE 12.

If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the assembly and three by the council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the assembly or the council for the purpose of choosing one name for each seat still vacant to submit to the assembly and the council for their respective acceptance.

If the conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfills the required conditions he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in articles 4 and 5.

If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the court who have already been appointed shall, within a period to be fixed by the council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from amongst those candidates who have obtained votes either in the assembly or in the council.

In the event of an equality of votes amongst the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

ARTICLE 13.

The members of the court shall be elected for nine years.

They may be reelected.

They shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun,

ARTICLE 14.

Vacancies which may occur shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election. A member of the court elected to replace a member whose period of appointment had not expired will hold the appointment for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

ARTICLE 15.

Deputy judges shall be called upon to sit in the order laid down in a list.

This list shall be prepared by the court and shall have regard, firstly, to priority of election and, secondly, to age.

ARTICLE 16.

The ordinary members of the court may not exercise any political or administrative function. This provision does not apply to the deputy judges except when performing their duties on the court.

Any doubt on this point is settled by the decision of the court. ARTICLE 17.

No member of the court can act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case of an international nature. This provision only applies to the deputy judges as regards cases in which they are called upon to exercise their functions on the court.

No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken an active part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the contesting parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of inquiry, or in any other capacity.

Any doubt on this point is settled by the decision of the court.

ARTICLE 18.

A member of the court can not be dismissed, unless in the unanimous opinion of the other members he has ceased to fulfill the required conditions.

Formal notification thereof shall be made to the secretary general of the League of Nations by the registrar.

This notification makes the place vacant.

ARTICLE 19.

The members of the court, when engaged on the business of the court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities. ARTICLE 20.

Every member of the court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

ARTICLE 21.

The court shall elect its president and vice president for three years; they may be reelected.

It shall appoint its registrar.

The duties of registrar of the court shall not be deemed incompatible with those of secretary general of the Permanent Court of Arbitration.

ARTICLE 22.

The seat of the court shall be established at The Hague. The president and registrar shall reside at the seat of the

ARTICLE 23.

A session of the court shall be held every year.

Unless otherwise provided by rules of court, this session shall begin on the 15th of June, and shall continue for so long as may be deemed necessary to finish the cases on the list.

The president may summon an extraordinary session of the court whenever necessary.

ARTICLE 24.

If, for some special reason, a member of the court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the president.

If the president considers that for some special reason one of the members of the court should not sit on a particular case he shall give him notice accordingly. If in any such case the member of the court and the president disagree the matter shall be settled by the decision of the court.

ARTICLE 25.

The full court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise.

If 11 judges can not be present, the number shall be made up by calling on deputy judges to sit.

If, however, 11 judges are not available, a quorum of 9 judges shall suffice to constitute the court.

ARTICLE 26.

Labor cases, particularly cases referred to in Part XIII (labor) of the treaty of Versailles and the corresponding portions of the other treaties of peace, shall be heard and determined by the court under the following conditions:

The court will appoint every three years a special chamber of five judges, selected so far as possible with due regard to the provisions of article 9. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing a judge who finds it impossible to sit. If the parties so demand, cases will be heard and determined by this chamber. In the absence of any such demand the court will sit with the number of judges provided for in article 25. On all occasions the judges will be assisted by four technical assessors sitting with them, but without the right to vote, and chosen with a view to insuring a just representation of the competing interests.

If there is a national of one only of the parties sitting as a judge in the chamber referred to in the preceding paragraph the president will invite one of the other judges to retire in favor of a judge chosen by the other party, in accordance with arti-

The technical assessors shall be chosen for each particular case in accordance with rules of procedure under article 30 from a list of assessors for labor cases, composed of two persons nominated by each member of the League of Nations and an equivalent number nominated by the governing body of the labor office. The governing body will nominate, as to one-half, representatives of the workers, and as to one-half, representatives of employers from the list referred to in article 412 of the treaty of Versailles and the corresponding articles of the other treaties of peace.

In labor cases the international labor office shall be at liberty to furnish the court with all relevant information, and for this purpose the director of that office shall receive copies of all the written proceedings.

ARTICLE 27.

Cases relating to transit and communications, particularly cases referred to in part 12 (ports, waterways, and railways) of the treaty of Versailles and the corresponding portions of the other treaties of peace shall be heard and determined by the court under the following conditions:

The court will appoint every three years a special chamber of five judges, selected so far as possible with due regard to the provisions of article 9. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing a judge who finds it impossible to sit. If the parties so demand, cases will be heard and determined by this chamber. In the absence of any such demand, the court will sit with the number of judges provided for in article 25. When desired by the parties or decided by the court, the judges will be assisted by four technical assessors sitting with them but without the right to vote.

If there is a national of one only of the parties sitting as a judge in the chamber referred to in the preceding paragraph, the president will invite one of the other judges to retire in favor of a judge chosen by the other party, in accordance with

article 31.

The technical assessors shall be chosen for each particular case, in accordance with rules of procedure under article 30, from a list of assessors for transit and communications cases composed of two persons nominated by each member of the League of Nations.

The special chambers provided for in articles 26 and 27 may, with the consent of the parties to the dispute, sit elsewhere than at The Hague.

ARTICLE 29.

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the court shall form annually a chamber composed of three judges who, at the request of the contesting parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure.

ARTICLE 30.

The court shall frame rules for regulating its procedure. In particular, it shall lay down rules for summary procedure.

ARTICLE 31.

Judges of the nationality of each contesting party shall retain their right to sit in the case before the court.

If the court includes upon the bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties only, the other party may select from among the deputy judges a judge of its nationality, if there beone. If there should not be one, the party may choose a judge, preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates, as provided in articles 4 and 5.

If the court includes upon the bench no judge of the nationality of the contesting parties, each of these may proceed to select or choose a judge as provided in the preceding paragraph.

Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point is settled by the decision of the court.

Judges selected or chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2 and 3 of this article shall fulfill the conditions required by articles 2, 16, 17, 20, and 24 of this statute. They shall take part in the decision on an equal footing with their colleagues.

ARTICLE 32.

The judges shall receive an annual indemnity to be determined by the assembly of the League of Nations upon the pro-posal of the council. This indemnity must not be decreased during the period of a judge's appointment.

1.11.

The president shall receive a special grant for his period of office, to be fixed in the same way.

The vice president, judges, and deputy judges shall receive a grant for the actual performance of their duties, to be fixed in the same way.

Traveling expenses incurred in the performance of their duties shall be refunded to judges and deputy judges who do not reside at the seat of the court.

Grants due to judges selected or chosen as provided in article 31 shall be determined in the same way.

The salary of the registrar shall be decided by the council upon the proposal of the court.

The assembly of the League of Nations shall lay down, on the proposal of the council, a special regulation fixing the conditions under which retiring pensions may be given to the personnel of the court.

ARTICLE 38.

The expenses of the court shall be borne by the League of Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the assembly upon the proposal of the council.

> CHAPTER II. Competence of the court. ARTICLE 34.

Only States or members of the League of Nations can be parties in cases before the court.

ARTICLE 35.

The court shall be open to the members of the league and also to States mentioned in the annex to the covenant.

The conditions under which the court shall be open to other States shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the council, but in no case shall such provisions place the parties in a position of inequality before the court.

When a State which is not a member of the League of Nations is a party to a dispute, the court will fix the amount which that party is to contribute toward the expenses of the court.

The jurisdiction of the court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in treaties and conventions in force.

The members of the League of Nations and the States mentioned in the annex to the covenant may, either when signing or ratifying the protocol to which the present statute is adjoined, or at a later moment, declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other member or State accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the court in all or any of the classes of legal disputes concerning:

(a) The interpretation of a treaty. (b) Any question of international law.

(c) The existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation.

(d) The nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

The declaration referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain members or States or for a certain time.

In the event of a dispute as to whether the court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the court.

ARTICLE 37.

When a treaty or convention in force provides for the reference of a matter to a tribunal to be instituted by the League of Nations, the court will be such tribunal.

ARTICLE 38.

The court shall apply:

1. International conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting States.

2. International custom, as evidence of a general practice

3. The general principles of law recognized by civilized

4. Subject to the provisions of article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations as subsidiary means for the determination of

This provision shall not prejudice the power of the court to decide a case ex æquo et bono if the parties agree thereto.

CHAPTER III. Procedure. ARTICLE 39.

The official languages of the court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment will be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment will be delivered in English.

In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers. The decision of the court will be given in French and English. In this case the court will at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

The court may, at the request of the parties, authorize a language other than French or English to be used.

Cases are brought before the court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the contesting parties must be indicated.

The registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

He shall also notify the members of the League of Nations through the secretary general.

ARTICLE 41.

The court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to reserve the respective rights of either

Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and the council.

The parties shall be represented by agents.

They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before

ARTICLE 43.

The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral, The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the judges and to the parties of cases, countercases, and if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

These communications shall be made through the registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the court.

A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

ARTICLE 44.

For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates the court shall apply direct to the Government of the State upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

ARTICLE 45.

The hearing shall be under the control of the president or, in his absence, of the vice president; if both are absent, the senior judge shall preside.

ARTICLE 46.

The hearing in court shall be public, unless the court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

ARTICLE 47.

Minutes shall be made at each hearing, and signed by the registrar and the president.

These minutes shall be the only authentic record.

ARTICLE 48.

The court shall make orders for the conduct of the case. shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

ARTICLE 49.

The court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

ARTICLE 50.

The court may, at any time, intrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an inquiry or giving an expert ARTICLE 51.

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the court in the rules of procedure referred to in article 30.

ARTICLE 52,

After the court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

ARTICLE 53.

Whenever one of the parties shall not appear before the court, or shall fail to defend his case, the other party may call upon the court to decide in favor of his claim.

The court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

ARTICLE 54.

When, subject to the control of the court, the agents, advocates, and counsel have completed their presentation of the case, the president shall declare the hearing closed.

The court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.

The deliberations of the court shall take place in private and remain secret.

ARTICLE 55.

All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present at the hearing.

In the event of an equality of votes, the president or his deputy shall have a casting vote.

ARTICLE 56.

The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

ARTICLE 57.

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, dissenting judges are entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

ARTICLE 58.

The judgment shall be signed by the president and by the registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

ARTICLE 59.

The decision of the court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

ARTICLE 60.

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

ARTICLE 61.

An application for revision of a judgment can be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

The proceedings for revision will be opened by a judgment of the court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision and declaring the application admissible on this

The court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

No application for revision may be made after the lapse of 10 years from the date of the sentence.

ARTICLE 62.

Should a State consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the court to be permitted to intervene as a third party.

It will be for the court to decide upon this request.

ARTICLE 63.

Whenever the construction of a convention to which States other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the registrar shall notify all such States forthwith.

Every State so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

ARTICLE 64.

Unless otherwise decided by the court each party shall bear its own costs.

Resolution concerning the salaries of the members of the Permanent Court of International Justice passed by the assembly of the League of Nations, Geneva, December 18, 1920.

The assembly of the League of Nations, in conformity with the provisions of article 32 of the statute, fixes the salaries and allowances of members of the	Permanent Court of Inter	national Justice as follows:	when personal strategies and the second	H HARTES

Donaldonka	Dut	In flowlers

Annual salary Special allowance
Total Total
Vice president: Annual salary	15, 000 30, 000
Total
Ordinary judges: Annual salary

Deputy judges:

Total_

Duty allowance (200×150)_____(maximum)_ 30,000

Duty allowance (200×100) _____ (maximum) _ 20,000

Duty allowances are payable from the day of departure until the return of the beneficiary.

An additional allowance of 50 florins per day is assigned for each day of actual presence at The Hague to the vice president and to the ordinary and deputy judges.

Allowances and salaries are free of all tax.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. CURTIS. I move that the Senate adjourn, in accordance with the unanimous-consent agreement.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the Senate, under the order previously entered, adjourned until Monday, February 26, 1923, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 24, 1923. UNITED STATES TARIFF COMMISSIONER.

Henry H. Glassie, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the United States Tariff Commission for the term expiring September 7, 1926, vice Thomas W. Page, resigned.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONER.

William C. Deming, of Wyoming, to be a member of the United States Civil Service Commission, vice John H. Bartlett, resigned.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Emery J. San Souci, of Providence, R. I., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 5, with headquarters at Providence, R. I., in place of Frank E. Fitzsimmons, whose term of office expired December 31, 1922.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Richard J. White, of Wisconsin, to be United States marshal, eastern district of Wisconsin, vice Samuel W. Randolph, resigned, effective April 1, 1923.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE.

Passed Asst. Surg. Charles J. McDevitt to be surgeon in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from January 9, 1923. This officer has served the required time in his present grade and has passed the necessary examination for promotion.

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD.

The following-named officers to be captains in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from January 12, 1923:

Commander Byron L. Reed.

Commander James M. Moore. Commander William V. Jacobs. Commander Preston H. Uberroth.

Lieut, Commander Richard O. Crisp.

Also, the following-named officers to be captains (engineering), to rank as such from January 12, 1923:

Lieut. Commander (Engineering) Harry L. Boyd. Lieut. Commander (Engineering) John B. Coyle. Lieut. Commander (Engineering) John E. Dorry. The following-named officers in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from January 12, 1923:

Lieut. Commander Frederick G. Dodge to be a commander in place of Commander Byron L. Reed, promoted.

Lieut. Commander George C. Carmine to be a commander in place of Commander James M. Moore, promoted.

Lieut. Commander Francis S. Van Boskerck to be a commander in place of Commander Preston H. Uberroth, promoted. Also to be commanders, to rank as such from January 12, 1923:

Lieut, Commander Claude S. Cochran.

Lieut. Commander John G. Berry.

Lieut. Commander Benjamin M. Chiswell.

Lieut, Commander Aaron L. Gamble. Lieut, Commander Frederick C. Billard.

Also to be commanders (engineering), to rank as such from January 12, 1923:

Lieut. Commander (Engineering) William E. Maccoun,

Lieut, Commander (Engineering) Carl M. Green. Lieut, Commander (Engineering) Horatio N. Wood.

Lieut. (Engineering) Hermann Kotzschmar. Lieut. (Engineering) Robert E. Wright.

Lieut. (Engineering) Urban Harvey.

Each of the above-named officers has passed the examination. required by law.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ABMY.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Col. Walter Trotter Bates, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

QUARTERMASTER CORPS.

Maj. John Doyle Carmody, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

CHEMICAL WARFARE SERVICE.

Capt. George Frederick Unmacht, Quartermaster Corps, with rank from July 1, 1920.

FIELD ARTILLERY.

First Lieut. Ranald Trevor Adams, Infantry.

INFANTRY.

LeGrande Albert Diller to be second lieutenant of Infantry in the Regular Army of the United States, with rank from January 5, 1923. Second Lieut. LeGrande Albert Diller was nominated January 25, 1923, and confirmed February 5, 1923, under the name of LaGrande Albert Diller. This message is submitted for the purpose of correcting an error in the name of nominee.

POSTMASTERS.

ALARAMA.

Joseph S. Chambers to be postmaster at Talladega, Ala., in place of R. M. Jemison. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

ARKANSAS.

Lee W. McKenney to be postmaster at Black Rock, Ark., in place of L. B. Sharp. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

CALIFORNIA.

Samuel R. Sonneland to be postmaster at Camp Kearney, Calif., in place of E. C. Lewis. Office became third class Octo-

Albert W. Mason to be postmaster at Bakersfield, Calif., in place of T. E. Klipstein, resigned.

Benn Lee to be postmaster at Cazadero, Calif., in place of O. P. Trine. Office became third class July 1, 1922.

Charles G. Brainerd to be postmaster at Loomis, Calif., in place of C. G. Brainerd. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

COLORADO.

John L. Nightingale to be postmaster at Fort Collins, Colo. in place of E. C. McAnelly. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

CONNECTICUT.

Lewis E. Clark to be postmaster at South Meriden, Conn., in place of L. J. Curran. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

DELAWARE.

Rhubert R. German to be postmaster at Delmar, Del., in place of R. R. German. Incumbent's commission expired December

FLORIDA.

Nathan B. Winslow to be postmaster at Bushnell, Fla., in place of A. J. Burnham, removed.

George E. Gay to be postmaster at Palatka, Fla., in place of A. Stumpe. Incumbent's commission expired October 14, Charles L. Adair to be postmaster at Comer, Ga., in place of J. L. McMurray. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

William C. McBride to be postmaster at Newnan, Ga., in place of S. M. Atkinson. Incumbent's commission expired September

Mrs. Alexander S. Clay to be postmaster at Marietta, Ga., in place of Mrs. A. S. Clay. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

IDAHO.

George F. McMartin to be postmaster at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, in place of J. V. Hawkins. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

TLUNOIS.

Albert O. Kettelkamp to be postmaster at Nokomis, Ill., inplace of A. J. Eekhoff. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1922.

George S. Faxon to be postmaster at Plano, Ill., in place of Henry Stahlle. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922

Justin P. Crawford to be postmaster at Tolono, Ill., in place of F. W. Hartbank. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, 1922.

Louis Lindenbauer to be postmaster at Camp Point, Ill., in place of E. T. Selby. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, 1922.

William D. Chambers to be postmaster at East Moline, Ill., in place of F. O. Lovins. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Richard W. Miller to be postmaster at Hamilton, Ill., in place of O. C. McCartney. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, 1922.

Walter V. Berry to be postmaster at Irving, Ill., in place of V. Berry. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, 1922

William R. Landwehr to be postmaster at Northbrook, Ill., in place of George Melzer: Office became third class January 1, 1922

Fred A. Sapp to be postmaster at Ottawa, Ill., in place of L. Dougherty. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922

Katherine C. Adams to be postmaster at Riverton, Ill., in place of Katherine Adams. Incumbent's commission expired December 13, 1922.

Minnie E. Bailey to be postmaster at Taylor Springs, Ill., in place of Eli Brooks. Office became third class October 1, 1920.

INDIANA.

Milo E. Garrett to be postmaster at Auburn, Ind., in place of Miles Baxter, removed.

Charles G. Covert to be postmaster at Evansville, Ind., in place of J. J. Nolan. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Amanda B. Gosnell to be postmaster at West Terre Haute, Ind., in place of Burton Cassady. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

John C. Chaille to be postmaster at Otwell, Ind., in place of Charles Harris. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

TOWA.

Oscar W. Larson to be postmaster at Odebolt, Iowa, in place of O. W. Larson. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Charles A. Clark to be postmaster at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, in place of M. D. Hazzard. Office became third class October 1, 1922

Ralph A. Rutledge to be postmaster at Sharpsburg, Iowa, in. place of J. E. Forsyth, Office became third class October 1, 1922

Joseph C. Allen to be postmaster at Zearing, Iowa, in place of M. H. Laycock, resigned.

Raymond R. Norris to be postmaster at Marquette, Kans., in place of R. R. Norris. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922

Jessie I. Dickson to be postmaster at Neosho Falls, Kans., in place of Lodema Bryant. Incumbent's commission expired Nevember 21, 1922.

Luella Tapley to be postmaster at Quenemo, Kans., in place of M. M. Parrish. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922

Lida H. Caughron to be postmaster at Fontana, Kans., in place of G. L. Caughron. Office became third class October 1, James G. Frazer to be postmaster at Halstead, Kans., in place of Eva Philbrick. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

KENTUCKY.

William G. Turpin to be postmaster at Henderson, Ky., in place of Spalding Trafton. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922, Charles H. Back to be postmaster at Whitesburg, Ky., in place of N. M. Webb, resigned.

LOUISIANA.

Roger F. Baudry to be postmaster at Garyville, La., in place of W. J. P. Prescott. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Charles E. Burch to be postmaster at Roseland, La., in place of C. E. Burch. Office became third class January 1, 1923.

MAINE,

Eddy A. Conant to be postmaster at Oldtown, Me., in place of J. W. Sewall, resigned.

Florence M. McKay to be postmaster at Wytopitlock, Me., in place of F. M. McKay. Office became third class January 1, MICHIGAN.

Gladys E. Gaskill to be postmaster at Delton, Mich., in place of R. B. Gaskill, deceased.

Fred W. Walker to be postmaster at Otsego, Mich., in place of A. C. Sprau. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922, MINNESOTA.

Mott M. Anderson to be postmaster at Hammond, Minn., in place of M. M. Anderson. Office became third class January 1, Winnifred L. Batson to be postmaster at Odessa, Minn., in place of W. L. Batson. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

MISSISSIPPI.

Ida E. Roberts to be postmaster at Cleveland, Miss., in place of L. A. Hill, removed.

MISSOURI.

Thomas J. Richardson to be postmaster at Koshkonong, Mo., in place of O. L. Meek. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Oscar H. Remmert to be postmaster at Leslie, Mo., in place of F. A. Rumbuhl, resigned.

Alpha DeBerry to be postmaster at Stoutland, Mo., in place of H. W. Singleton. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

J. Orrville Gochnauer to be postmaster at Belton, Mo., in place of W. A. Roberts, resigned.

Maria B. Cassity to be postmaster at Gentry, Mo., in place of M. B. Cassity. Office became third class January 1, 1923.

Owen S. Randolph to be postmaster at Gideon, Mo., in place of A. A. Attebery. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Melvin Lutes to be postmaster at Lutesville, Mo., in place of I. J. F. Sitzes, resigned.

MONTANA.

Andrew Kolnitchar to be postmaster at Geraldine, Mont., in place of H. S. Tressel, resigned.

Samuel P. Eagle to be postmaster at West Yellowstone, Mont. in place of S. P. Ragle. Office became third class January 1, NEBRASKA.

William A. Gibson to be postmaster at Cedar Rapids, Nebr., in place of W. C. Tredway. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922.

Gustav A. Koza to be postmaster at Clarkson, Nebr., in place of G. A. Koza. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922

Hiram B. Cameron to be postmaster at Herman, Nebr., place of H. B. Cameron. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922.

Frank E. Crawford to be postmaster at Wymore, Nebr., in place of G. W. Campbell. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

NEVADA.

Charles P. Squires to be postmaster at Las Vegas, Nev., in place of C. C. Corkhill, removed.

Hans R. Jepsen to be postmaster at Minden, Nev., in place of E. A. Smith, resigned.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Harry F. Smith to be postmaster at Peterboro, N. H., in place of E. M. Ware. Incumbent's commission expired September 19, 1922.

Edward M. Sutton to be postmaster at Ocean City, N. J., in place of B. F. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Jacob Feldman to be postmaster at Woodbine, N. J., in place of L. M. Danerhirsh. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Cooper L. MacMillan to be postmaster at Audubon. N. J., in place of M. V. Richer, resigned.

Timothy J. Nevill to be postmaster at Carteret, N. J., in place of T. A. Bishop, declined.

Elmer G. Houghton to be postmaster at Cranford, N. J., in place of J. F. Peniston. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Mary H. Jeffrey to be postmaster at Deal, N. J., in place of M. G. Burd, resigned.

Arthur J. Halladay to be postmaster at Kenilworth, N. J., in place of A. J. Halladay. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Harold Pittis to be postmaster at Lakehurst, N. J., in place of Harold Pittis. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, James A. Harris to be postmaster at Wildwood, N. J., in place of G. N. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired October 24.

NEW YORK.

Spencer K. Warnick to be postmaster at Amsterdam, N. Y., in place of R. E. L. Reynolds, resigned.

Earl J. Franklin to be postmaster at Belfast, N. Y., in place of Frank McMahon. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Roof D. Miller to be postmaster at Fort Plain, N. Y., in place W. W. O'Connor, deceased. Hilda C. Tuma to be postmaster at Montauk, N. Y., in place of P. J. Loftus. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

William E. Mills to be postmaster at Rose Hill, N. Y., in place of W. E. Mills. Incumbent's commission expired September 19, 1922.

Frank O. Persons to be postmaster at East Aurora, N. Y., in place of A. E. Hammond. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Dennis Lamarche to be postmaster at Plattsburg, N. Y., in place of A. G. Senecal. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Brainard W. Russell to be postmaster at Windsor, N. Y., in place of G. A. Manwarren, resigned.

· NORTH CAROLINA.

Jay Shoaf to be postmaster at Mooresville, N. C., in place of W. D. Templeton. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922

Mattie C. Lewellyn to be postmaster at Walnut Cove, N. C., in place of P. H. Linville. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Mina H. Aasved to be postmaster at Carson, N. Dak., in place of R. H. Leavitt. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922

Robert D. Hand to be postmaster at Ambrose, N. Dak., in place of A. H. Bredley, resigned.

Oliver R. Gulker to be postmaster at Glandorf, Ohio, in place of Joseph Roof. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Paul H. Clark to be postmaster at Junction City, Ohio, in place of J. M. Ridenour. Incumbent's commission expired September 19, 1922.

Henry G. Moellenbrock to be postmaster at Olmsted Falls, Ohio, in place of H. G. Moellenbrock. Office became third class January 1, 1923.

OKLAHOMA.

Ellen K. Marchaut to be postmaster at Aline, Okla., in place of A. J. Adcock. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Oscar C. Maxwell to be postmaster at Elgin, Oreg., in place of Robert Blumenstein, deceased.

Nellie G. Reed to be postmaster at Gold Hill, Oreg., in place of H. D. Reed. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Arlington B. Watt to be postmaster at Amity, Oreg., in place of L. R. Watt, resigned.

PENNSYLVANIA.

George R. Steiger to be postmaster at Albion, Pa., in place of W. V. Wirtz. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, Luther J. Lukehart to be postmaster at Dubois, Pa., in place of W. T. Evans, resigned.

Robert H. Harris to be postmaster at Tamaqua, Pa., in place of E. M. Hirsh. Incumbent's commission expired September 26, 1922.

Joseph P. Fry to be postmaster at Allentown, Pa., in place of Martin Klingler. Incumbent's commission expired September

Howard C. Emigh to be postmaster at Morrisdale, Pa., in place of E. P. Waring. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

RHODE ISLAND.

William H. Godfrey to be postmaster at Apponaug, R. I., in place of F. J. McCabe. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Samuel L. Myers to be postmaster at Chester, S. C., in place of T. M. Douglas. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Olof Nelson to be postmaster at Yankton, S. Dak., in place of M. M. Bennett. Incumbent's commission expired September 11, 1922.

Arnold Poulsen to be postmaster at Lennox, S. Dak., in place of Arnold Poulsen. Incumbent's commission expired December 23, 1922.

TENNESSEE.

Ira L. Presson to be postmaster at Camden, Tenn., in place of E. O. Thomas. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1923.

Fred L. Brown to be postmaster at Plainview, Tex., in place of W. P. Stockton, removed.

Edis T. Oliver to be postmaster at Caldwell, Tex., in place of E. T. Oliver. Incumbent's commission expired July 21, 1921.

Carlton A. Dickson to be postmaster at Cleburne, Tex., in place of J. R. Ransone, jr. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Earl R. Van Deren to be postmaster at Van Alstyne, Tex., in place of J. S. Spradley, resigned.

VIRGINIA.

George R. McCall to be postmaster at Raven, Va., in place of G. R. McCall. Office became third class January 1, 1922.

Archer H. Staples to be postmaster at Stuart, Va., in place of H. L. Hooker, resigned.

Virgie C. Goode to be postmaster at Bassetts, Va., in place J. Philpott. Office became third class October 1, 1920. Blodwyn R. Jones to be postmaster at Cambria, Va., in place of D. R. Jones, resigned. John D. Williamson to be postmaster at Fries, Va., in place of E. J. Baker, resigned.

Margaret I. Lacy to be postmaster at Halifax (late Houston), Va., in place of D. F. Hankins. Incumbent's commission ex-pired January 24, 1922.

Henry E. Bailey to be postmaster at Newsoms, Va., in place of R. W. Ferguson, resigned. George H. McFarland to be postmaster at Reedville, Va., in place of G. N. Reed. Incumbent's commission expired October 14, 1922.

Dandridge W. Marston to be postmaster at Toano, Va., in place of D. W. Marston. Office became third class April 1, 1921.

WASHINGTON.

Mary G. Wilkinson to be postmaster at Auburn, Wash., in place of J. F. Payne. Incumbent's commission expired October

John H. Gibson to be postmaster at Issaquah, Wash., in place of Andrew Hunter, resigned.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Henry E. Folluo to be postmaster at Glen Rogers, W. Va., in place of J. G. Spangler. Office became third class October Noah W. Russell to be postmaster at Lewisburg, W. Va., in place of H. L. Bowling. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Oliver A. Locke to be postmaster at Milton, W. Va., in place of O. A. Locke. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

J. Bascom McClure to be postmaster at Omar, W. Va., in place of W. A. Curry. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Robert E. L. Holt to be postmaster at Princeton, W. Va., in place of W. B. McNutt. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Alma Hawks to be postmaster at McDowell, W. Va., in place of Ernest Johnson, declined.

Ben Wakeman to be postmaster at Ward, W. Va., in place of M. I. Jackson, declined.

WISCONSIN.

Forrest T. Durner to be postmaster at Evansville, Wis., in place of P. G. Slauson. Incumbent's commission expired December 23, 1922.

Julian C. Colby to be postmaster at Union Grove, Wis., in place of F. W. Keuper. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1922.

WYOMING.

Reuben A. Faulk to be postmaster at Lusk, Wyo., in place of A. V. Wiggins, resigned.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 24, 1923.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Morris A. Soper to be district judge, district of Maryland.

COMPTROLLER OF CUSTOMS.

Harry W. Spaulding to be comptroller of customs in district No. 4, with headquarters at Boston.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Oscar P. Hovind to be receiver of public moneys at Glasgow, Mont.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

John Thornton Knight to be assistant to the Quartermaster General, with the rank of brigadier general, Quartermaster

Harvey Wolfarth Miller to be colonel, Adjutant General's Department.

John Southworth Upham to be major, Adjutant General's Department.

Clarence Hagbart Danielson to be major, Adjutant General's Department

Eugene Edmund Barton to be captain, Quartermaster Corps. William Franklin Campbell to be captain, Quartermaster

James Charles Longino to be captain, Quartermaster Corps. Christian Allen Schwargwaelder to be captain, Quartermaster Corps.

Edwin Sanders Van Deusen to be captain, Quartermaster Corps.

Harold William Keller to be captain, Quartermaster Corps. Joel Grant Holmes to be captain, Ordnance Department. Miles Whitney Gresge to be captain, Ordnance Department. Rosswell Eric Hardy to be captain, Ordnance Department. John Huling, jr., to be captain, Ordnance Department, Ward Edwin Becker to be first lieutenant, Ordnance Depart-

George Meredith Peek to be major, Field Artillery. William Foster Daugherty to be captain, Field Artiflery. Miron James Rockwell to be captain, Field Artillery.

Miron James Rockwell to be captain, Field Artillery.

Duncan Thomas Boisseau to be captain, Field Artillery.

Murray Charles Wilson to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery.

Nelson Hammond Duval to be captain, Coast Artillery Corps.

Erwin Adolph Manthey to be captain, Coast Artillery Corps.

Raymond Carl Zettel to be first lieutenant, Air Service. Walter Christian Thee to be first lieutenant, Quartermaster Corps Clyde Hobart Morgan to be first lieutenant, Ordnance Department. Harold Arthur Doherty to be second lieutenant, Field Artil-

Donald Armstrong to be major, Ordnance Department. Douglas Lee Crane to be captain, Field Artillery. Louis Meline Merrick to be second lieutenant, Air Service. Walter Augustus Bethel to be Judge Advocate General, with the rank of major general.

Edward Julius Timberlake to be colonel, Quartermaster

George Sampson Beurket to be captain, Field Artillery.
Clarence Dixon Lavell to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery.
Oscar Andrew Eastwold to be major, Chemical Warfare Service.

Nathan Horowitz to be major, Field Artillery.
George Williamson DeArmond to be major, Field Artillery.
Alexander Thomas McCone to be second lieutenant, Field

George Bryan Conrad to be second lieutenant, Field Artillery, Viking Torsten Ohrbom to be second lieutenant, Infantry, POSTMASTERS.

CALIFORNIA

Clare E. Murlin, Escalon, Alice E. Tate, Lone Pine.

COLORADO,

William A. Russom, Bristol. Nellie M. Connelly, Hartman. Merrill D. Harshman, Wiggins.

GEORGIA.

James M. Lewis, Sparta. E. Stelle Barrett, Union City. Mrs. Alexander S. Clay, Marietta.

HAWAII.

Kenichi Masunaga, Kealia.

IDAHO.

Herbert L. Spencer, Paris.

ILLINOIS.

Marion F. Watt, Atlanta.
Sheldon J. Portersfield, Chatsworth.
Arthur G. Arnin, Columbia.
Charles T. Wilson, Eldorado.
John F. Odell, Fairbury.
Thomas E. Richardson, Flanagan.
Seymour Van Deusen, Greenville.
Ross O. Bell, Heyworth.
George H. Bargh, Kinmundy.
Ray W. Birch, Neoga.
Wallace G. Harsh, Peotone.

INDIANA.

Allen J. Wilson, Danville, James C. Taylor, Mooreland.

IOWA

Susana F. O'Bryan, Lovilla. Jennie M. Berg, Royal. Albert L. Richards, West Liberty.

KANS

Adna E. Palmer, Kingman. Margaret M. Marks, Oberlin.

LOUISIANA.

Henry A. Forshag, Crowley. Theophile P. Talbot, Napoleonville, Dudley V. Wigner, Vidalia.

MAINE.

Frank O. Wellcome, Yarmouth.

MARYLAND.

Helen K. Longridge, Barton. Horace O. Makinson, Ellicott City.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Berton Williams, Ayer. Harry T. Downes, Hanover. M. Warren Wright, Rockland. Edward A. Hunt, South Sudbury. Harry S. Tripp, Spencer.

MICHIGAN.

Myrtle Cross, Au Gres. Albert H. Rhody, Capac.

MINNESOTA.

Alda P. Conger, Becker.
William B. Stewart, Bemidji.
Frank L. Lane, Bigelow.
Francis E. Iams, Cloverton.
Frank A. Lindbergh, Crosby.
Marie C. Bergeson, Lake Park.
Charles C. Jarvis, Mora.
Daniel Shaw, Thief River Falls.

MISSISSIPPL.

Prentice O'Rear, Columbus, Myra P. Varnado, Osyka, John M. Curlee, Rienzi, J. D. Hale, Scott, Walter L. Collins, Union, MISSOURI.

Leah Abernathy, Chaffee.

NEBRASKA.

Estella E. Murray, Belgrade, Vernon D. Hill, Diller. Harry C. Haverly, Hastings. Frederick Nielsen, Lexington, Frederick H. Davis, Madison, James W. Holmes, Plattsmouth, Charles T. Gammon, Rushville. Charles M. Stell, Scribner, Harry S. Prouty, Spencer, Percy A. Brundage, Tecumseh, Harvey A. Loerch, Tekamah, Annette C. Jones, Western.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Charles H. Bean, Franklin. Joseph H. Geisel, Manchester. Willard P. Wakefield, Profile House,

NEW JERSEY.

Alfred J. Perkins, Atlantic City, Forrest Green, Long Branch, Arthur Knowles, Phillipsburg,

NEW MEXICO.

Charles B. Thacker, Raton. Antonio Martinez, Taos, Chester G. Parsons, Wagon Mound.

NEW YORK

Harrison D. Todd, Arkville, Irving Barrett, Bedford Hills, Walter L. Bibbey, Fort Edward, Arthur C. Davis, Gilboa, William A. Baldwin, Norwich, Carroll F. Simpson, Phoenicia, Earl J. Conger, Waterville,

NORTH DAKOTA.

Luella F. Stewart, Bottineau. Chapin Hayford, Casselton. John M. Carignan, sr., Fort Yate, James R. Meagher, Velva. Clarence G. Mathys, Wilton.

OHIO

Wilbur C. Ledman, Zanesville.

OKLAHOMA.

Edward C. Baxter, Gage. George H. Blackwood, Hominy. Edith B. Foster, Wagoner.

PENNSYLVANIA.

H. H. McDowell, Denbo, Edythe T. Davies, Girardville.

TEXAS.

Thomas M. Welch, Palestine.

VIRGINIA.

William B. Murphy, Charlottesville, Blanche M. E. Harris, Crozet, Tivy E. Jenkins, Wilder.

WASHINGTON.

Joseph L. Milner, Almira.
Inez G. Spencer, Creston,
Charles C. King, Entiat.
Tolaver T. Richardson, Northport.
Frank Givens, Port Orchard.
Edward Hinkley, Snohomish.
Maud E. Hays, Starbuck.
Matthew W. Miller, Waterville.
Ira S. Fields, Woodland.

WYOMING.

Edward Bottomley, Kleenburn.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, February 24, 1923.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas,
The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered

the following prayer:

Almighty God, we thank Thee that Thou art a heavenly Father who abides with us to bring comfort out of discomfort and peace out of disquiet; to put the gleam in the shadow and to make us feel that it is worth while to live. We bless Thee for the calm, the rest, and the soul of the soul. Continue to fill us with encouragement and kindly cheer and make us a blessing to others. The Lord send His blessing upon this whole company like an impartial sunlight. Do Thou be the guide to every pathway, the visitor of every fireside, the physician of every family, and the divine comforter of all.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and

CORRECTION OF THE RECORD.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to correct the Record. On page 4409 is the following:

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the motion of the gentle-an from Minnesota that debate close in 20 minutes. The motion was agreed to.

On the next page is the following:

On the next page is the following:

The Chairman, The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. Raybern, I ask that the amendment be again reported.

The Chairman, The gentleman from Texas asks that the amendment be again reported. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

Mr. Blanton, Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota was that debate should close in 20 minutes; 10 minutes to a side.

The Chairman, The gentleman from Texas is in error. The gentleman from Minnesota moved that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. There was an effort made to arrive at 20 minutes, offered by the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. Blanton, I understood it was 20 minutes, and therefore I moved to make it 30 minutes.

I offer this to show that it was the Chairman and not the

I offer this to show that it was the Chairman and not the gentleman from Texas who was in error.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not a correction of the

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I do not think the Chair was in error.

The SPEAKER. The question raised by the gentleman from Texas is not a correction of the Record. Mr. BLANTON. There was an error, then, in the Record. Mr. MONDELL. The RECORD has not been changed.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ASWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD in 8-point type by publishing two letters, one from the Secretary of Agriculture and the other from myself, on the subject of agricultural extension.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

The letters referred to are as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, Washington, D. C., January 29, 1923.

DEAR MR. ASWELL: I have been deeply sensible and greatly appreciative of your very sympathetic attitude toward the work of this department since I have been here, and I am quite sure that you would not knowingly say anything concerning our work here which you do not believe to be fully justified by the facts. In your speech which I find in the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD of January 20 you make a number of statements concerning the reorganization of our extension work, and of Mr. Pugsley, the Assistant Secretary, which are very wide of the mark. Apparently you have been greatly misled by some one who did not take the trouble to assure himself of the correctness of the information he was passing on. Being unwilling that you should rest under a mistaken notion of what we are doing in this reorganization and feeling sure that you will thank me for setting you straight, I am inclosing herewith a statement based upon various remarks made in the course of your speech.

Let me add a word concerning Assistant Secretary Pugsley. I was not here very long until I became convinced that our publication work needed a thorough overhauling and that our ganizing. It was quite apparent that I could not myself give the time necessary to do justice to these two pieces of work, Consequently I looked about for some one who had had the sort of training needed to take over this responsibility, and on my own initiative selected Mr. Pugsley and asked the President to make him Assistant Secretary, which he very promptly I chose him because he had had several years practical experience in extension in connection with the Nebraska Agricultural College, and because he had had several years experience as an agricultural editor. In both of these capacities he had become quite familiar with the extension and publication work of the department. Also I knew him to be a man of common sense and level-headed judgment, to whom I could safely intrust any responsibilities which it might be necessary to pass on. His principal work since becoming Assistant Secretary has been in connection with publications and extension. I think he has rendered conspicuously valuable service in both fields. The suggestion that in either he has been influenced by political motives is entirely unwarranted, and this statement applied to myself as well. I do not think I could tell you the politics of as many as 15 employees in our entire staff of more than 19,000 people. May I say in this connection that my observation is that the Department of Agriculture, whether under a Republican or a Democratic Administration, has been singularly free from partisan politics. selected here with a view to their training for the particular task to which they are to be assigned. Even on my own personal staff there is not a single person who has been chosen from either a political or personal standpoint. I did not bring even a personal private secretary with me.

With high personal regards and with the hope that you will take time to read carefully the statement herewith inclosed, I am.

Sincerely yours.

(Signed) HENRY C. WALLACE.

Hon. JAMES B. ASWELL, House of Representatives.

STATEMENT COVERING SPEECH OF REPRESENTATIVE ASWELL, OF LOUISIANA, CONCERNING EXTENSION WORK IN AGRICULTURE AND HOME ECONOMICS AS REPORTED IN THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD OF JANUARY 20, 1928.

You say that Congress and the country is entitled to a frank statement of facts regarding the reorganization of extension work in the Department of Agriculture. Such statements have been made in detail before the Agricultural Appropriations Committee and published in the hearings of that committee. The plans have also been freely discussed in speeches and in the There is not a single move in the reorganization that has not been made public, and every important part of the plans has been discussed with and approved by the Association of Land Grant Colleges. These colleges are charged by law with the State administration of cooperative extension funds.

Under the Federal Government's agreement with the States they have complete charge of the organizations and plans of work within the States. The department scrutinizes those plans to see that they conform to law, and to see that they will accomplish the purposes intended by the law. Your statement in the Congressional Record of January 20 regarding the cooperative agricultural extension work proceeds on the assumption that the plans of work and the expenditures for different purposes are primarily determined by the Department of Agri-The fact is that the plans and expenditures are initiated by the State agricultural colleges and are approved by the department without change in the majority of cases if they conform with the law. Such changes as are made in them at the suggestion of the department do not affect the general policy of the use of the funds which the States have themselves determined, and are not incorporated unless the States agree.

When I became Secretary of Agriculture there were two extension divisions in the department administering Smith-Lever and other Federal extension money. One of these was known as the Office of Extension Work, North and West, and the other as the Office of Extension Work, South. The Office of Extension Work, North and West, administered the work in 37 States and the Office of Extension Work, South, administered the work in 15 States

This duplicate administration of the funds appropriated for the same purpose made effective Federal administration practically impossible and added greatly to the cost of administration. It also made the consideration of a national agricultural extension program very difficult. The State agencies, extension directors, from both North and South, requested that the two extension work could be very greatly strengthened by reor- | Federal offices be combined. This suggestion met with my approval and plans were started to put the suggestion into operation.

Any change which calls for the combination of separate administrative offices naturally calls for a readjustment of personnel. It is also certain that people in both offices will not regard the change in all of its details in a friendly way. was particularly true in the contemplated change, because there was a total of 13 heads of separate divisions administering the work under the two offices. Consolidation would mean fewer administrators. As a matter of fact, the consolidation which was finally put into effect called for one head of an extension office and a head of two divisions-3 heads instead of 13. All of the work formerly administered in 11 separate divisions was assigned to 2 divisions. The resulting change saved $28,000 in overhead expense in administering extension work during the past year.

In making the change no person employed in the Federal Government was left without important work to do, or given work to do for which he was not eminently qualified. No salaries were reduced. There is, as you know, a tremendous turnover in the personnel of the department. Many of our people leave every year to accept higher salaried positions in other institutions. Heretofore it has been necessary to replace these people with others. During the past year, however, because of the new plan of administration, it has been possible to perform all the work by reassignment without replacing those who have voluntarily left.

Apparently you are under the impression that the change in the Washington office contemplated forcing our cooperators, the States, to change their plan of administration, or to handle their work in a different way than that in which they have been handling it in the past.

You are entirely wrong in this assumption, as is clearly evidenced by many statements of Assistant Secretary Pugsley, who has been directly charged by me to bring about the reorganization in the Washington office. May I call your attention to some of the statements which he has made in connection with the reorganization?

In his address before the General Session of the Land Grant Colleges at New Orleans, November 9, 1921, Mr. Pugsley presented the plan which has been agreed to by their joint committees and closed his address with the following statement:

You are interested in knowing what the plan will demand in the way of changes in your organization. It demands no changes. You may continue just as you are now if you like, If you are convinced that you can better accomplish your extension work by changing your State organization, we will welcome new organization projects. * * The plan which we have outlined will gear into any sort of State organization plan so long as that plan is doing good work. are very anxious that no Federal extension work shall be undertaken in the States except under our cooperative agreement. If you know of any such you will do us a favor by calling it In closing let me repeat that the to our attention. department recognizes only the extension director or other authorized agent of the Land Grant College in carrying out its extension work. * * No specialist in either subject matter or extension methods is to come to your State except upon request of or agreement with the extension director. Upon his arrival in the State, he is to report first to the extension director, and only to do work agreed to by the extension director and to do it under his direction and in cooperation with his forces. No reports will be demanded by us except those which come through the extension director. We will impose which come through the extension director. no uniform plan of organization upon any State, for we recognize fully that conditions vary and that a plan is only a means to an end. * * * In short, we consider it our responsibility to see that the funds for the use of which we must render an account are lawfully spent and are accomplishing the purposes for which they were intended, rather than that we should dictate the details of the manner of their expenditure.

You are also apparently under the impression that we are trying to do away with home demonstration work and women's

The outline of our policy as indicated above should answer this query, but allow me to say emphatically that no such effort has been made and furthermore we are not in sympathy with any such plan. Both Mr. Pugsley and I are very keenly interested in the women's and girls' work. As a matter of fact, the reorganization has given that work more prominence. It has placed women in each of the administrative divisions, so no administration of Federal cooperative extension funds will be carried on in the Department of Agriculture without having been considered from the standpoint of the needs of the rural woman. Furthermore, you will note that I have asked for the establishment of a Bureau of Home Economics in the department, and I have announced my intention of placing a well-trained and well-qualified woman at the head of that bureau. At the present time the home economics work is carried on in the office of Home Economics headed by a man. I think it is safe to say that never before in the history of the department has the home economics work had the consideration it now has.

A third point upon which you are apparently misinformed is that concerning the revision of the reports we are asking from the States. Congress has charged the Department of Agriculture with the administration of several million dollars of extension funds and expects the department to report on how these funds are expended, as well as to see to it that they are expended for the purposes prescribed in the law. calls for either detailed reports or detailed inspection. of course, make some inspections in the field, but no system of inspection will furnish as much information as comprehensive reports signed by the county extension agents and the Directors of Extension. Assistant Secretary Pugsley, therefore, instructed the Extension Office within the department to go over the many forms and reports heretofore demanded by the department and to prepare from them a suggested form of report to be submitted to the various States for their suggestions and comments. The only form sent out to the States was a tentative one, and since that time we have been working on its revision in order that we may incorporate the desires of the extension directors as they come in from various States. The matter is being taken up with the Extension Committee of the Land Grant Colleges, as well as with a special committee appointed by them at their last meeting. When the report is finally approved for the following year it will have the approval of that committee, as well as the approval of the States.

In this connection it should be remembered that a report in no way requires any form of organization or administration within a State. It is merely a list of questions which will give a comprehensive idea of what is being done with the money which Congress has appropriated. A uniform list of questions to be used by every extension agent, or boys' or girls' club agent, seems desirable. Such a report covers the entire extension field and permits the home demonstration agent to list all the work

You charge that specialists are greatly increasing.

During the past year the number of county agricultural agents and the number of home demonstration agents have increased, while the number of specialists has remained about the same as last year. Relatively more specialists on food, nutrition, clothing and other home economics subjects have been employed to assist the home demonstration agents. All the specialists do a large part of their work in the counties and they reach many counties which do not as yet have county agricultural agents or home demonstration agents. Specialists are, in effect, agents who come in personal contact with farmers, and can not be regarded as administrators. This is also true of the State leaders and district leaders who are essentially field agents, supplementing the work of the county agents and assisting in the further development of the work among the farm men, women, and children.

The number of specialists and State and district leaders in the several States has been determined by the States, not by the Department of Agriculture. There has been no attempt by the department to limit the number of women leaders, specialists or agents, but on the contrary the States have been encouraged in their efforts to increase the number of women employees. Moreover there has been a distinct effort on the part of the department and the colleges to encourage the men agents to do more work for the benefit of the farm women and children in counties where there are no women agents, and undoubtedly there has been an increase in the amount of work in the interests of the farm home. This will result, we believe, in still more home demonstration agents.

When the Northern and Southern Offices were combined, C. B. Smith, the Chief of the Northern Office, was made chief of the combined office by virtue of his seniority. J. A. Evans, the Chief of the Southern Office, was given a very important position as consulting expert and adviser on southern agriculture, particularly cotton farming, and in this capacity is performing very valuable services in his relations with both the department bureaus and the State extension services, and his work is growing in importance and magnitude daily.

A number of the most experienced and successful workers in the old organization have been included in the Division of Programs in the new organization. These are Messrs. Mercier, Savely and Schaub from the Southern Office, and Messrs. Lloyd, and Farrell and Miss Ward from the Northern Office. Miller, of the Southern Office, was for a time in this division, but chose to leave the department for a position at a higher salary and is now Director of Extension at the Oklahoma Agricultural College. The division as thus constituted contains persons who have had experience in the general administration of extension work and in the supervision of the work of the county agricultural agents, home demonstration agents, and boys' and While the individual members of this divigirls' club agents. sion work, to a certain extent, in districts containing a number of States, they come together frequently to consider the general

The technical subject matter specialists of both former Extension Offices were put together in the Division of Methods, dealing with the methods of extension work in the different branches of agriculture and home economics much as they did before in the two offices. To a certain extent they have been assigned to large regional districts, but are not confined to these, going into the States, both North and South, on many special missions in response to the requests of the State Extension Di-

Miss Wessling has left the department to accept a technical position with a commercial concern at a much higher salary; Miss Ola Powell has spent the last two seasons in France at the request of the American Committee for Devastated France and the French Minister of Agriculture, to aid in the establishment, among the French farm women, of home canning and other forms of home demonstration work according to American methods.

It should not be necessary to say that all civil service rules have been complied with, and that no consideration has been given to the politics of any person in completing the reorganiza-Neither I nor Assistant Secretary Pugsley are acquainted with the party politics of any extension employee. In making assignments we considered the experience, ability and fitness of each and made an honest effort to assign each to that part of the organization where they, in their judgment and ours, could accomplish the best results.

Neither should it be necessary to say that your charge that extension employees do not have access to me is unfounded. Every employee has the freest access, and statements they make have my most careful and conscientious consideration.

Sincerely.

(Signed) HENRY C. WALLACK.

JANUARY 27, 1923.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S., February 24, 1923.

The Honorable Henry C. Wallace,
The Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I wish to express my appreciation of the courtesy of your letter of January 29 in regard to my speech of January 20. In order that you may understand my attitude and motive more fully, allow me to say that I have been a student of the demonstration work for 15 years or more, that I knew Dr. Seaman A. Knapp personally, and was familiar with the methods and principles which he used in establishing and developing this great system of education in this country. Furthermore, I have had information from various sources for the past year or more in regard to the reorganization in the department and the dissatisfaction in the field,

I acknowledge receipt also of the statement over your signature which professes to "cover" my address of January 20, 1923, copies of which I note you sent members of Congress. which causes me to print this correspondence in the Congres-SIGNAL RECORD. Your statement does not "cover" my address. It does not touch the main points. It sets up straw men, then knocks them down. The weakness of this mosscovered method of defense is apparent. My great respect for you personally and my high regard for your accomplishments in the accurate use of the English language cause me to wonder whether you read this "covering" statement before you signed it. The first sentence in the statement "covering" my speech raises the doubt. Read it. The doubt exists in my mind throughout the statement.

I am disappointed that you content yourself with making a general denial of the correctness of my statements instead of calling in the witnesses I named without their being accompanied to your office by either big or little chiefs, getting for yourself the facts, and saving the demonstration work in the counties. You evade by declaring that "frank statements" in detail have been made to the Appropriations Committee and to the public, but really, have you made a detailed "frank statement

I said that there are two schools of thought in the depart-Dr. S. A. Knapp is the author of one and the other is traditional and outworn pedagogy applied to new and changing conditions. Wherever Dr. Knapp started his work and demonstrated his philosophy the people received it gladly. Money for the support of county agents, men and women, was appropriated by county authorities, by State legislatures, and by Congress as fast as he was willing for it to come. Likewise support came from farmers, from business men, and from thoughtful men and women generally. There was no question as to too many specialists and too much overhead as long as the proper principles were adhered to and the methods indorsed by Congress were followed

Because of the fact that this great work developed in the South and because there were two offices of administration, the full force and power of the fundamental thinking of the founder have been largely kept out of the rest of the country.

I stated that in the reorganization not a single one of the men or women who were associated with Dr. Knapp was made the head of a division or even the chairman of a subcommit-tee, and that not one of them can write an important letter without having it vised by a person who has different beliefs and methods. Why not cut out generalities, Mr. Secretary, and be frankly specific? Is this a correct statement? Are you willing for this injustice to continue? Kindly cite me the page and paragraph where "frank statement" and explanation of this point have been made to the Appropriations Committee and the country. This is one ground upon which I charged maladministration and predicted disaster to the work unless you see that this thing is readjusted and that right prevails. Surely you do not ask me to believe that it was incidental to either fairness or efficiency that every member of the Southern Office should be reduced to a subordinate position and their influence restricted by any such methods as are being practiced. I cannot understand this situation upon any other ground than that already stated in my speech, viz., that you do not know the qualifications, the spirit and the devotion of these people. You say that you and the Assistant Secretary do not know the politics of a single one of them. Was it accidental also that an Ohio Democrat was demoted in position and an Ohio Republican promoted? It is easy for your chiefs to manipulate appointments because of prejudice. I am fully convinced that great injustice has been done and is still being done in this It is not simply an injustice to the few people I mentioned, but to a great cause which they happen to represent at

In the "Statement Covering the Speech of Representative Aswell of Louisiana," you say that the facts of the reorganization and the plans of the department have been frankly presented to the Agricultural Appropriations Committee and to the public. But you should note that some earnest Republican Members of Congress are not satisfied with the conduct of the Extension Work, for Chairman Anderson, in reply to Assistant Secretary Pugsley, in the committee hearings for 1923, said "Besides that he (the specialist) wastes an enormous amount of time and money in traveling around the country making contacts that are necessary for him to do any good. do not think it is simply a question of the Members of the House feeling that too much money is spent on administration. I think there is also a feeling that the thing is too much from the top down and too little from the ground up. You can not reach a whole lot of these people on the basis that you are talking to them from a university. You have got to get these problems on the ground, and from the standpoint of the farmer himself. I know that there are a great many farmers who feel that sort of uplift proposition, even though it may be educational in character, does not leave the influence that it would if it had closer contact with the farmer's problem from his point of view rather than from the scientist's point of view."

Mr. Anderson also said "The fact is, you have got about $7,000,000 worth of people telling $11,000,000 worth of people what to do." Chairman Haugen of the Agricultural Committee and numerous other gentlemen of both parties have repeatedly expressed similar opinions. Perhaps you will remember that Chairman Anderson told you in the committee that "there are a good many people up here on the hill who feel that the specialist end of this game is rather overemphasized." Congress expected at least three-fourths of all funds to go actually into the countles. If any State wants to have a large number of specialists there is nothing in the Federal law or policy which will prevent it from making special appropriations for that purpose, but it is not right to use Federal funds to multiply specialists at the expense of the counties. If Congress has to speak again on this subject there will likely be drastic restrictions imposed.

Your "covering statement" is shockingly contradictory. On page 7 you say "The number of specialists and State and district leaders in the several States has been determined by the States, not by the Department of Agriculture. There has been no attempt by the department to limit the number of women leaders, specialists, or agents" * * *. On page 5 you say "Congress has charged the Department of Agriculture with the administration of several million dollars of extension funds and expects the department to report on how these funds are expended, as well as to see to it that they are expended for the purposes prescribed by law." And yet you say there has been no attempt by your department to limit the number of specialists. That is exactly why I said the department is repealing acts of Congress and defying the intent of Members of Congress who enacted definite legislation for the national welfare.

Your statement ignores the vital points I made in regard to the Home Demonstration Work. I said that Congress made extension work in home economics coordinate with agriculture and that the reorganization made it subordinate. I said that in the "projects and programs" it is put on a parity with cattle, crops, hogs, and sheep, and that the highest positions given to women are five or six degrees removed from the Secretary. Furthermore, I asserted that the annual report form does not mention the word "woman" or provide properly for reporting many of her most valuable activities. I repeat that the women of this country are being shamefully ignored.

I called attention to the fact that three-fourths of all the women county agents are in the South and gave a table from the figures which you sent me. This table contrasted a number of different Northern and Southern States. I wish respectfully to invite your attention to another phase of this situation. When large sums of money are spent on salaries and traveling expenses of specialists it reduces the amount available for women county agents. You will notice that the Southern States have fewer specialists and more women agents.

This means that in many States the amount spent on overhead is far above 58½ per cent because some of the States pull down the average. I do not believe it is right to make the farm bureau and other farm organizations pay so much to get the county agents when Congress provided funds not so much for specialists but primarily and specifically for county agents. It does not relieve the situation when by top-heavy expenses you make it necessary for the county commissioners, the county courts, or other fiscal authorities to put up county tax money for such purposes.

You say that the number of specialists for this year is practically the same as last year. There was a net increase in the appropriation by Congress of $300,000. There are very few more county agents. The counties are putting up more money The percentage spent on specialists and overhead every year. is getting higher and higher. How much more money is being spent on specialists and overhead this year? Perhaps specialists are getting to be more of a luxury than a necessity. You ignore my statement that only 411 per cent of all Federal and State appropriations go into the salaries of county workers. and yet you say that I am entirely wrong in the assumption that "the change in the Washington office contemplated forcing our cooperators, the States, to change their plan of administration, or to handle their work in a different way than that in which they have been handling it in the past. did assume that you contemplated bringing about changes which would give the people in the counties the benefit of this money and work, as Congress intended, I did so in a spirit of confidence and I shall be greatly disappointed if you adhere to your announced policy that no attempt has been made by the department to limit the number of specialists.

The statement "covering" my speech says that the change saved $28,000 during the past year. It also says "No salaries were reduced". I said that many salaries of chiefs and clerks were increased. The clerk who can figure saving so well might be promoted to the budget committee.

You say "When the Northern and Southern Offices were combined C. B. Smith, the Chief of the Northern Office was made chief of the combined office by virtue of his seniority." You further state that J. A. Evans, the Chief of the Southern Office, was given the high position of consulting expert and adviser. That statement is absurd. Did Evans advise that all the people in the Southern Office be demoted? I said that Mr. Evans was the first man appointed by Secretary Wilson after Dr. Knapp began the work in 1903. He had been in the service a long time before the work in the North began. Mr. Smith may have been in the department in Washington as a specialist long enough to give him seniority over Mr. Evans if you count from the time when Mr. Evans was brought into headquarters. But if seniority was the consideration, why was Mr. Goddard, an Ohio Republican, who was not in the work at all, made a chief of a division, while Mr. Evans was made an adviser with no administrative responsibilities? What about Mr. Graham, another Ohio Republican who is the chief of another grand division? Was seniority the ground of his selection? Please cite me the "frank statement" you have published on these points, for, in my opinion, here is where the trouble began.

You say "Neither I nor Assistant Secretary Pugsley are acquainted with the party politics of any extension employee." Don't you think it is possible that these chiefs have some scheme whereby they can guess the politics of a man from South Carolina, Mississippi, or even Louisiana? No such discriminations were ever made in the Department of Agriculture against these people before. Their abilities, their services, and their successful work, have heretofore been recognized. I stated in my speech that heretofore the Department of Agriculture has been remarkably free from partisan politics. This fact makes the present situation in Extension Work the more regrettable.

Without raising the question of the age of the women, may I ask why the southern women, who helped to develop all that fine work down there, should be relegated to inferior positions, while the woman who was premoted to the headship of the women's work for the whole country was a junior in the work who did not have as many agents in her whole district of a dozen or more States as they have in a single State in the South? That does not seem to be based upon seniority, achievement, or justice.

Let us get down to the facts, Mr. Secretary, be definite, and frankly explicit:

I stated that in the reorganization of the extension work, not a single man or woman associated with Dr. Knapp in establishing and building extension in the counties was properly recognized or placed in a responsible administrative position. Cite me the "frank statement" explaining why these people were thus ignored.

I stated in substance that O. B. Martin, I. W. Hill, and C. L. Chambers, distinguished educators and agriculturalists, but Democrats, formerly in charge of all the club work in the South, were displaced by a Mormon of less experience and less success in club work. Is this true or not? Where is that "frank statement" to the public on this point?

I stated that the women who had successfully established home economics in the counties had been superceded in authority by a junior woman of less experience. Is this true or not?

I stated that the overhead expenses of the extension work are increasing and that the money you spend in the counties is relatively decreasing, and I proved my statement by the figures you submitted to me over your signature of January 16, 1923, revealing clearly that only 41½ per cent of the money is expended in the counties while 58½ goes into overhead. Why not admit this fact, proven by your own statement, and proceed to correct it?

But, in the committee hearings two years ago, Mr. Anderson said, "No, I say it is top heavy on specialists and leaders and setting more so every year."

and getting more so every year."

Mr. Pugsley replied, "I agree with you that overhead administration should be cut to the minimum, but I think that a weakness of the extension work is that we do not have enough specialists to assist the agents in the field."

The Congress and the country would like to know, Mr. Secretary, what your future policy is to be in this matter.

You defend the combining of the two extension divisions of the Department of Agriculture which formerly existed. In my speech I approved this union of forces, as these two divisions should never have been created, but where may I find a "frank statement" of explanation why you placed no one from the Southern Office in a responsible administrative position, and why only one or two field agents and clerks in the Southern Office have been promoted since the reorganization? It should be noted, Mr. Secretary, that many of these people are not natives of the South, nor was their great leader, Dr. S. A. Knapp, a native of the South.

You declare that you selected Mr. Pugsley partly because of his connection with extension work in Nebraska and that "Both Mr. Pugsley and I are very keenly interested in the women and girls' work." Will you cite me the "frank statement" made to the Appropriations Committee and the public explaining how it happens that in Mr. Pugsley's own State, Nebraska, (where he had the connection with extension work that got him his present job) there are now 20 specialists and only 4 women agents; why in Wisconsin there are 33 specialists and only 1 woman agent; also why in Pennsylvania there are 37 specialists and not one woman agent?

In the consideration of this point it should be clearly noted that the more money you expend for specialists, the less you have to expend for women agents. The salary and traveling expenses of one specialist will put on at least four women county agents.

You seem to hide behind the States as to the number of specialists, but under Federal statute, Mr. Secretary, you have full authority to approve or disapprove the budgets and all plans of work before they are put into operation in the States. You are also charged with the grave responsibility, as Mr. Pugsley stated in his New Orleans speech, "to see that the funds for the use of which we must render an account are lawfully spent and are accomplishing the purpose for which they were intended," namely, to get down to earth in the counties where the people live.

My excuse, Mr. Secretary, for writing you thus frankly, is my keen interest in agriculture and especially in the extension work." The cause is bigger than the individual, but the cause can not grow and serve properly and effectively without recognizing certain fundamental educational principles and without dealing justly and rightly with the individuals who hold the cause dear to their hearts. I shall anxiously await your proper action in the matters presented above, to save and perpetuate the great work established in America by a big and brave soul, Dr. Seaman A. Knapp.

With assurances of my personal esteem and respect,

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) J. B. ASWELL,

Mr. RAMSEYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the decisions of the Supreme Court.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on the decisions of the Supreme Court.

Mr. McARTHUR. What decisions? Mr. RAMSEYER. Decisions generally, and some remarks of my own. Last year, when the Supreme Court was under a storm of criticism, some papers seemed to indicate that the Supreme Court was engaged chiefly in holding acts of Congress unconstitutional. I have secured a list from the legislative bureau of the decisions that have held acts of Congress unconstitutional and there are only 48 in 133 years.

Mr. McARTHUR. I withdraw any objection. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, knowing the gentleman as I do, he certainly is not espousing the move on foot seeking to enlarge the required majority of the Supreme Court in holding an act unconstitutional?

Mr. RAMSEYER. I am not espousing anything special. The gentleman, I suppose, is familiar with the decision of Chief Justice Marshall in Marbury against Madison, which announced my views on the powers of the Supreme Court many years before I was born.

Mr. LONDON. Oh, no; he never heard of it. [Laughter.] Mr. BLANTON. If the Socialist gentleman from New York is working in double harness with the gentleman from Iowa, I shall have to object.

[Cries for "the regular order."] Mr. BLANTON. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas objects.

ILLUSTRATION OF FOREIGN POSTAGE STAMPS.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report for printing under the rule on the bill (S. 2703) to allow the printing and publishing of illustrations of foreign postage and revenue stamps from defaced plates.

MAE E. NOLAN-JOHN G. WOLFE.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Accounts, I submit a privileged resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 539 (Rept. No. 1698).

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House, to Mae E. Nolan, the sum of $186.66 and to John G. Wolfe $120, being the amount received by them per month as clerks to the late Hon. John I. Nolan at the time of his death, November 18, 1922.

Mr. IRELAND. This is the usual resolution for pay of the clerks of a deceased Member.

The resolution was agreed to.

CHLIDE NELMS-SHERBILL B. OSBORNE.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I present another resolution. The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 520 (Rept. No. 1699).

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House, to Childe Nelms the sum of $186.66, and to Sherrill B. Osborne the sum of $120, being the amount received by them per month as clerks to the late Hon. Henry Z. Osborne.

Mr. IRELAND. That is a similar resolution to the other. The resolution was agreed to.

HENRIETTA MUELLER.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I present the following privileged report from the Committee on Accounts.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 543 (Rept. No. 1700).

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House to Henrietta Mueller, mother of T. J. Mueller, late a clerk to the Hon. L. C. Dyer, a sum equal to six months of her compensation as such employee, and an additional amount, not exceeding $250, to defray the expenses of the funeral of said T. J. Mueller.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. IRELAND. Yes.
Mr. STAFFORD. I assume that since clerks to committees have been placed on the roll of the House they are considered House employees and entitled to the same beneficences that are granted to other employees.

Mr. IRELAND. We can not do otherwise. That is true not only of clerks to committees, but of clerks to Members as well. They are now employees of the House and come under the rule, Mr. BLANTON. This clerk was still a clerk at the time of his death?

Mr. IRELAND. Of course.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL CLERICAL SERVICES-ENROLLING ROOM.

Mr. IRELAND. Also the following resolution, Mr. Speaker. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 531 (Rept. No. 1701).

Resolved. That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House compensation, not exceeding $100, for additional clerical service in the enrolling room during the remainder of the present session.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, this is the usual resolution which is passed at the close of the Congress to enable the facilitation of this work.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

SALARY OF CHIEF JANITOR.

Mr. IRELAND. Also the following resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 507 (Rept. No. 1706).

Resolved, That there has been paid out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives to Charles A. Kaschub, chief janitor of the House of Representatives, additional compensation at the rate of $500 per annum until otherwise provided for by law.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 4, strike out the figures "$500" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$300."

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, this resolution is believed by the committee to be a meritorious one. The recipient of the additional salary occupies the position of chief janitor for the House. A similar position in the Senate pays $2,000 a year. The present incumbent of that office for the House is drawing $1,500, but his duties are quite a bit heavier than the corresponding duties in the other body.

Mr. STAFFORD. What is the total janitor force to take care of the House Chamber and the House wing of the Capitol? Mr. IRELAND. I can not tell the gentleman from memory.

I think that has no especial bearing upon this individual case.

Mr. STAFFORD. I notice every afternoon, and every evening when we have a night session, that shortly after adjournment the corridors are filled with smoke. I am told that the smoke is emitted by the burning of refuse paper in some of the fireplaces here. I do not think that is a very sanitary plan. I do not think the corridors of the House should be filled with smoke, because rarely is the air from outside allowed to come in here. I think that practice should be discontinued.

Mr. IRELAND. I think that situation has been cared for. I am so informed.

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, no. Only the night before last, when we ran until 11 o'clock, when I came over here from the House Office Building at half past 11 there was smoke in the corridors.

Mr. IRELAND. I am sure the gentleman is mistaken about I think that must have been because of the Members smoking as they were going out.

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, no; I know the difference between cigarette smoke and smoke from burning paper. It is an abuse that should be corrected.

Mr. IRELAND. The situation the gentleman mentions is an abuse and should be corrected, and I think it will be.

Mr. BLANTON. How many chief janitors have we? Mr. IRELAND. Just one, as I understand it.

Mr. BLANTON. They have one in the Senate, drawing $2,000 a year; and we are to have one for the House, drawing $1,800 a year. Is there one for the Supreme Court?

Mr. IRELAND. I was referring only to the House organiza-Is there one for the Supreme Court?

Mr. BLANTON. This is just one Capitol Building. Is there one for the Supreme Court?

Mr. IRELAND. Not a chief janitor.

Mr. BLANTON. But there is a separate janitor for the Supreme Court

Mr. IRELAND. There must be.
Mr. BLANTON. Then, in one building we have three separate janitor forces. Why could they not be all put under one head, so that we would have only one chief janitor?

Mr. IRELAND. I think the gentleman might make that recommendation.

Mr. BLANTON. It will cut out at least two positions as chief janitor.

Mr. TILSON. Does the gentleman think that the Senate would agree to do that? They want to control their own janitor force.

Mr. BLANTON. If we called attention to it, the people at home might persuade them to agree to it.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for recognition in opposition to the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachu-

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, this is one of the numerous requests which, have come to the Committee of Accounts in the closing days of the session for increase of salary. is no more entitled to this increase than at least 20 others who have made similar requests. He is supposed to be the chief of the janitors. Like the chairman of the committee, I can not tell you how many subjanitors there are, but he is receiving twice as much salary as any of the subjanitors. There is no reason why he should receive twice the salary, except that he is vested with a little brief authority; he is held to be somewhat responsible for the manner in which the others perform their work. I do not know that I would take the floor in opposition were it presented in the early days of the session, but it is absolutely wrong for the employees of the House to come here at the beginning of a recess and ask for an increase in

Mr. TILSON. Is it not a fact that while the rest of us have gone home, and the other subjanitors have gone home, this man has to stay in charge of the building?

Mr. UNDERHILL. He has a pretty soft place to loaf for the next nine months. I do not think he is entitled to any financial consideration because he happens to hold this job through the summer months.

Mr. McARTHUR. What is the salary of the chief janitor? Mr. UNDERHILL. The salary of the chief janitor at the present time, I believe, is $1,500, and he gets a bonus, and that brings it up to $1,740.

So, if the motion is in order, Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the resolving clause.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts moves to strike out the resolving clause.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois moves to lay the motion on the table.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. The question occurs to me whether, if the motion to lay on the table should carry, it would not take the whole resolution.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Massachusetts would not object.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts to strike out the resolving clause of the resolution.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced the "noes" appeared to have it.

Mr. BLACK. Let us have a division.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 23, noes 69.

So the motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendment.

Mr. BEGG. Can we have that amendment stated? A number of us do not know what it is.

The committee amendment was again reported.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a substitute for the committee amendment, to strike out the figures "$500" and insert the figures "$50," and I would like to have it reported by the Clerk so it will be in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Blanton moves to amend the committee amendment by striking out the figures "$500" and inserting in lieu thereof "$50."

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for recognition for a moment on my amendment. Mr. Speaker, this is almost too small a matter to take up the time of the House—

Cries of " Vote!"

Mr. BLANTON. But it is a bigger matter after all than you think it is. We have important employees of this House sitting at this desk and others who are here all the time and only receiving the pay of $1,800-

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that the gentleman from Texas asked that he might have a moment in which to discuss his amendment and that moment has expired. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANTON. Well, I did not ask for any ordinary

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas, as usual, is speaking in a Pickwickian sense.

Mr. BLANTON. And the Speaker pro tempore, as usual in the House, violates the rules and gets personal. Mr. Speaker, the question is whether you want by your vote to pay a janitor in the Capitol $2,040 a year. That is exactly what you are voting to do now. He already gets $1,500 a year. Your committee amendment pays him $300 more which makes $1,800 and the $240 bonus which he gets makes the chief janitor's salary $2,040 a year, he being one of three chief janitor's in this building, and you have important employees in this House who have been here for 15 and 20 years who are not getting that much, sitting at your desks here in the House. It is a question whether you want to do it. I do not believe you do, I do not believe you are going to stand for it. I believe your Committee on Accounts ought to give more consideration to these matters that come in the closing hours of the Congress. are fixing to adjourn. This House is presumed to be closed from adjournment for the next nine months, and now you are raising the chief janitor's salary to $2,040. You will have to answer to the people of the United States for such little votes as this, and I hope you will not do it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced the noes appeared to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. Blanton) there were-ayes 23, noes 85.

So the motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendment.

The question was taken, and the committee amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division. The House divided; and there were—ayes 88, noes 25.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to have a record vote and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present, and I object to the vote on that account.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order there is no quorum present. dently, there is none. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will bring in absent Members and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 205, nays 70, not voting 152, as follows:

YEAS-205.

Abernethy Ackerman Almon Anderson Andrew, Mass. Andrews, Nebr. Anthony Appleby Arentz Barbour Beedy

Begg Benham Bixler Blakeney Boies Buchanan

Byrns, Tenn. Campbell, Kans. Campbell, Pa. Cannon Carter Chalmers Chindblom Clarke, N. Y. Cole, Iowa Cole, Ohio Collins Colton Colton Cooper, Wis. Copley (Coughlin Cramton Cullen Curry Dallinger Darrow Dempsey Dickinson Dowell Evans Fairchild Faust Favrot Fenn Fess Fields Fish the m. Fitzgerald Fordney Foster Free Fuller Funk Gallivan Gernerd Gorman Gorman Graham, Ill. Green, Iowa Greene, Mass. Greene, Vt. Griest

Griffin Hadley Hardy, Colo, Hardy, Tex. Haugen Hawley Hayden Hays Hays Hersey
Hickey
Hill
Hoch
Hogan
Huddleston
Hukriede
Hull
Humphrey, Nebr.
Husted
Ireland
Jeffers, Ala.
Johnson, Wash.
Kearns

Luce Lyon McArthur McCormick McFadden

MacGregor MacLafferty

Doughton Drewry Driver Fisher

Gensman Gilbert Hammer

Herrick Hudspeth Jacoway Johnson, Ky.

Frothingham

Madden Magee Maloney Mansfield Mead Mead Merritt Michener Mondell Moore, Ohio Moores, Ind. Morgan Murphy Nelson, Me. Nelson, A. P. Nelson, J. M. Newton, Minn. Newton, Mo. Norton O'Connor Ogden Oldfield Johnson, Wash Kearns Kelley, Mich. Kelly, Pa. Kirkpatrick Kissel Kline, N. Y. Knutson Kopp Lanktord Larson, Minn. Lawrence Paige Parker, N. J. Parker, N. Y. Patterson, Mo. Perkins Porter Paige Porter
Pou Purnell
Rainey, Ala.
Ramseyer
Ransley
Reed, N. Y.
Reed, W. Va.
Rhodes Lawrence Lea, Calif. Leatherwood Lee, N. Y. Lineberger Little Ricketts Roach Robertson Robsion Rodenberg London Longworth

Sinclair Sinnott Smithwick Snyder Speaks Stedman Steeman Steenerson Stephens Strong, Kans. Strong, Pa, Summers, Wash, Swank Swank Sweet Swing Tague Taylor, N. J. Taylor, Tenn, Temple Ten Eyek Thompson Thorpe Tilson Tilson
Timberlake
Tilson
Timberlake
Tincher
Tinkham
Towner
Valle
Vestal
Voigt
Volstead Walters
Wason
Watson
Weaver
Webster
White, Kans.
Williams, Ill,
Wood, Ind.
Woods, Va.
Wurzbach
Wyant

Sears Shelton Shreve NAYS-70.

Aswell Bankhead Barkley Bell Black Bland, Va. Bowling Box Brand Briggs Burtness Byrnes, S. C. Christopherson Clark, Fla. -Collier Connally, Tex.

Kline, Pa. Langley Lauham Larsen, Ga. Lazaro Lee, Ga.
Lowrey
McDuffle
McSwain
Miller
Moore, Va.
Parks, Ark.
Ouin Fulmer Gahn Garrett, Tenu. Garrett, Tex. Quin Raker Rankin Rouse Sanders, Tex. Sandlin

Sabath Sanders, Ind. Scott, Tenn.

Sisson Stafford Steagall Stevenson Summers, Tex. Tillman Tilman Tucker Turner Tyson Underhill Upshaw Vinson Williamson Wilson

Wyant Young

Kincheloe NOT VOTING-152.

Kraus Kreider Ellis Reber Ansorge Fairfield Atkeson Bacharach Bird Reece Riddick Kunz Lampert Layton Lehlbach Linthicum Focht Frear Riordan Rogers Rose Rosenbloom Rossdale Rucker Ryan Bland, Ind. Freeman French Garner Gifford Glynn Goldsborough Bland, Ind.
Bond
Bowers.
Brennan
Britten
Brooks, Ill.
Brooks, Pa.
Brown, Tenn.
Browne, Wis.
Bulwinkle
Burke Lentoaten
Linthicum
Logan
Logan
Rosenbloom
Rossdale
Rosenbloom
Rossdale
Rucker
McClintle
McKenzie
McLaughlin, Mich. Schall
McLaughlin, Nebr. Scott, Mich.
McLaughlin, Nebr. Scott, Mich.
McLaughlin, Pa.
McLaughlin, Pa.
Slegel
Mapes
Mills
Moitague
Moore, Ill,
Moorin
Moore, Ill,
Morin
Moott
Molan
Mudd
Nolan
Mudd
Nolan
Taylor, Colo.
Thomas
Oliver
Olipp
Overstreet
Volk
Overstreet
Volk
Vard, N. Y.
Park Ga.
Ward, N. Y.
Ward, N. Y. Goodykoontz Sanders, N. Y. Gould Graham, Pa. Hawes Burke Cantrill Carew Chandler, N. Y. Chandler, Okla. Henry Hicks Slemp Smith, Idaho Smith, Mich. Snell Hicks
Himes
Hooker
Huck
Humphreys, Miss.
Hutchinson Clague Classon Cockran Codd James Jefferis, Nebr.
Johnson, Miss.
Johnson, S. Dak.
Jones, Pa.
Jones, Tex. Sullivan Taylor, Ark. Taylor, Colo. Connolly, Pa. Cooper, Ohio Crago Thomas Treadway Volk Ward, N. Y. Ward, N. C. Wheeler White, Me. Williams, Tex. Winslow Woodyard Wright Yates Crisp Crowther Dale Davis, Minn. Jones, Te.
Kahn
Keller
Kendall
Kennedy
Ketcham
Kiess Kindred King
Kitchin Overstreet Park, Ga. Patterson, Denison Dominick Drane Dunbar Dunn Paul Perlman Petersen Pringey Radcliffe Rainey, III. Rayburn Dyer Echols Edmonds Kleczka Knight, Yates Zihlman

So the resolution was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs: Mr. Kendall with Mr. Williams of Texas.

Mr. Davis of Minnesota with Mr. Crisp. Mr. Connolly of Pennsylvania with Mr. Hawes.

Mr. Frear with Mr. Garner.

Mr. French with Mr. Drane.

Mr. McLaughlin of Michigan with Mr. McClintic.

Mr. Freeman with Mr. Oliver. Mr. Morin with Mr. Riordan. Mr. Crowther with Mr. Thomas.

Mr. Kahn with Mr. Ward of North Carolina. Mr. Denison with Mr. Bulwinkle.

Mr. Kiess with Mr. Logan.

Mr. Johnson of South Dakota with Mr. Rainey of Illinois.

Mr. Johnson of South Dakota with Mr. Rah Mr. Saell with Mr. Hooker. Mr. Lampert with Mr. Wright. Mr. Stephens with Mr. Cantrill. Mr. Winslow with Mr. Jones of Texas. Mr. Michaelson with Mr. Park of Georgia. Mr. Treadway with Mr. Sullivan. Mr. Olpp with Mr. Rayburn. Mr. Stiness with Mr. Dominiek. Mr. Patterson of New Jersey with Mr. Care

Mr. Patterson of New Jersey with Mr. Carew. Mr. Graham of Pennsylvania with Mr. Humphreys of Mississippi.

Mr. Bacharach with Linthieum.

Mr. Edmonds with Mr. Goldsborough. Mr. King with Mr. Martin.

Mr. Moore of Illinois with Mr. Cockran.

Mr. Keller with Mr. Kindred.
Mr. Rogers with Mr. Montague.
Mr. Lehlbach with Mr. Rucker.
Mr. Brooks of Illinois with Mr. O'Brien.

Mr. McPherson with Mr. Kitchin.

Mr. Fairfield with Mr. Johnson of Mississippi.

Mr. Dunn with Mr. Kunz. Mr. Mapes with Mr. Stoll.

Mr. Browne of Wisconsin with Mr. Taylor of Colorado.

Mr. Crago with Mr. Taylor of Arkansas.

Mrs. Nolan with Mr. Overstreet.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A quorum is present. Doorkeeper will open the doors.

The doors were opened.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Madden] is recognized.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL, 1923.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 14408.

Mr. MADDEN. And, pending that, I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Byrns] if we can agree upon time for general debate

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will say to the gentleman that I have a number of requests on this side. We would like to have something like two hours.

Mr. MADDEN. Can you not get along with less than two hours?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. We might get along with a little

Mr. MADDEN. Say, two hours altogether.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon that. I would like to have two hours on this side.

I might split the difference with the gentleman if he is willing.

Mr. MADDEN. Then I ask unanimous consent that the general debate be limited to three hours, to be equally divided between the gentleman from Tennessee and myself.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the general debate on the bill be limited to three hours, to be divided equally between himself and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Byrns]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Illinois that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 14408.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. McArthur] will please take the chair.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year

June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, with Mr. McARTHUR-in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 14408, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Man-DEN] has one hour and a half and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Byrns] has one hour and a half.
Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MADDEN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee with reference to the yielding of time.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I would be glad to yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan], if the gentleman from Illinois is willing, at this time.

Mr. MADDEN. Very well. I will refrain from opening with the explanation of the bill in view of the fact that the I will refrain from opening gentleman from Tennessee wants to yield to one of his col-leagues. I will walt until he closes. Then I will explain

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Chairman, this is practically the last great appropriation bill which will come from a very busy com-We have but one bill left. That is the so-called bonus mittee. bill.

I want to take this opportunity to say to my colleagues that in my eight years of service on the Appropriations Committee, having served under some of the ablest men in this country as chairman of that committee, I have yet to meet the equal of the present chairman. [Applause.] And it is with pride and satisfaction that I am permitted to stand here on the floor and in his presence say that, in my judgment Martin B. Madden, of Illinois, as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, has been a nonpareil. [Applause.]

The increased cost of the Department of Justice and the increase of crime in this country are strikingly illustrated in the hearings on this bill. In 1916 the appropriations for the Department of Justice, including the Federal courts, amounted to something a little over $10,000,000; in this year of our Lord we have appropriated more than $18,000,000 for the same function of government, or an increase of 80 per cent, and yet the department is continually asking for appropriations to meet deficiencies.

We have been getting back toward normalcy in every other department of the Government, but in the particular one where justice is to be administered we have been continually on the increase since the close of the war, and from every indication demands will continue for more and more money for this department, and yet we see no diminution of crime throughout the country. It will appear to any man who interests himself that the more machinery we create to suppress crime the greater the increase of crime or what in recent years we have been taught to call crime. You all know that under some of our laws to-day the American citizen, honored, respected, industrious, and patriotic, is called a criminal at home, yet that same man may cross our international border or sail across the seas in any direction, where he will be greeted and welcomed as a most desirable citizen or visitor.

We were told that prohibition, for instance, would reduce crime to a minimum in this country; that the law would enforce itself and pay its way. Aye, we were told in this Chamber that it would put millions into the Treasury of the United States. And yet we have had to appropriate in the last few years more than $9,000,000 annually to support the prohibition enforcement unit. You know it, but I want you to know something else, and that is that our committee has learned in the hearings on this bill that one-third of all the money that you appropriate for the Department of Justice, which for the next fiscal year is approximately $18,500,000, nust be spent by that department in the prosecution of offenders against the alleged wholesome (?) Volstead Act.

You know that the Department of Justice has its hands full every day in every week, in every month, in every year; and yet our committee was advised that, taking the country as a whole, 44 per cent of the time of the United States district attorneys devoted to prohibition cases. This is not a mere estimate. It is the analysis of replies to a questionnaire addressed by the department to all district attorneys throughout the country.

One of the singular and worth while mentioning coincidences of this condition is that the district attorneys in prohibition States-you know I mean States where prohibition was in effect before the adoption of the eighteenth amendment-are required to devote a great deal more of their time and energy to enforce the Volstead law than is expected of them in the States that did not adopt prohibition voluntarily but had it forced upon

Take my own State of Massachusetts, for instance, which now and then the prohibitionists refer to as being composed of stubborn and lawless people. In the old Bay State only 30 per cent of the time of the United States district attorney was devoted to prohibition matters last year, while in the southern district of prohibition Alabama 90 per cent of the district attorney's time was used up in the same cause. North Carolina is one of the old prohibition States and it stood for the dry law long before the adoption of the eighteenth amendment, and yet last year 70 per cent of the time of Uncle Sam's attorneys in that State had to be given to cases brought under the Volstead Act. In prohibition West Virginia it was 70 per cent in the southern district and 60 per cent in the northern district. In Arizona, 60 per cent; in Arkansas, 50 per cent; in southern Florida, 60 per cent; yes, and in Kentucky, the home State of my friend Mr. Barkley, one of the most eminent "drys" in this House, it averages 75 per cent. In northern Mississippi it runs to 55 per cent, and in the southern part of that beautifully dry State it is over 50 per cent. Wyoming, which has always been a garden spot of the drys, requires their United States attorneys to spend 45 per cent of their time prosecuting violators of the sacrosanct Volstead law. And Georgia, the driest State in this whole House [laughter], needs them 60 per cent of the time.

And lo and behold even the State of our brother Volstead demanded 60 per cent of the time of the United States attorney to prosecute the bootleggers and the moonshiners and the experts who have developed the "white mule" industry. [Laugh-

Now, you will agree with me that this great increase in the work of the Federal officers in these old prohibition States is due to one of two things, either a decided increase in the violation of prohibition laws, or else--and I am willing to be charitable for the moment-those States are transferring a great percentage of their criminal prosecutions to the Federal authorities. In either case it is a serious development in the administration of justice in this country and, in my judgment, a decided tendency to bureaucratic government. Before the World War we Americans ridiculed the verbotens of Germany, and we used to like to attribute the war to the imperialistic and bureau-cratic rule of the kaiser. It is now asserted by high authority here in America that the developments of bureaucracy in this country have established more foolish verbotens than the German people ever tolerated.

You know we have an army of prohibition directors, and agents, and inspectors, and sleuths traveling about the country, some of them in disguise, nosing into every other man's business and every other woman's kitchen, laying traps to involve inno-cent people in the meshes of the Volstead law, and no law ever passed by Congress contains more meshes; and the Federal courts and the law officers of our Government have been compelled to devote their time and attention to this sort of business to the embarrassment of all other business before these courts, If this tendency continues, the Department of Justice will become the Pooh-Bah of America. To administer the law, some-times without trial by either juries or courts, the nearly $20,000,000 that we are forced now to appropriate, either to this department or that department for the enforcement of the Volstead Act, will swell to $40,000,000 a year.

Mark my words, we will be compelled to increase the burden of taxation now on the shoulders of our people or else we must practice greater economy in other departments of the Government to enable this one abnormal law to function; and, as I have said more than once in this Chamber, I can not be persuaded that it will ever function while the American people hold to their old principles which they learned from the fathers of this Republic and to which they have held for a century and a half.

I have not called attention to this development to oppose this appropriation. I shall vote for this bill because I realize that the Federal courts and the Department of Justice are not responsible for the conditions they face, and they must have the money to enable them to function and to carry out their duties under the law. I have called attention to these figures so that you men might know and the country might learn that the appropriations we make for the Prohibition Bureau are not the only moneys spent by Uncle Sam to try to achieve prohibition enforcement. I repeat that the $9,000,000 we approprlated for Mr. Commissioner Haynes is barely one-half the cost of the Volstead legislation to the taxpayers, and all indications point to an increase rather than to any decrease.

How long, oh, how long are we to be called upon for increased appropriations to enforce this act? I read an article the other night in a Washington newspaper by David Lawrence wherein he said he had asked the President of the United States how long it would be, in his opinion, before that law would be fully enforced, and he quoted President Harding as saying that, in his judgment, it would be a matter of 25 years. If this is a good guess and the demands for more money for enforcement increase at the rate that they have increased since the enactment of that law, the cost in 10 years would amount to $18,944,000,000; and if we continued it for 25 years-which is the period our own President has picked-we would be asked to appropriate $620,756,996,000,000-more money than the world has ever known-and then I do not believe you would enforce prohibition. Think it over! [Laughter.]

By the way, here is the unanimous report of a grand jury in Kings County, N. Y.—the city of Brooklyn, long known as the City of Churches:

Whatever may be our individual ideas on the subject of temperance and prohibition, we believe that there can be no doubt that this law tends to debauch and corrupt the police force. It interferes with the liberty and private life of moral, law-abiding citizens. It even goes so far as to brand good men as felons because, in their own conscience, they desire to indulge in personal habits in which they find no harm. It has not checked the misuse of intoxicating liquors, but it has seriously hampered their proper use. We feel that it can never be enforced, because it lays down rules of private conduct which are contrary to the intelligence and general morality of the community. It is an attempt by a body of our citizenship thinking one way to interfere with the private conduct of another body thinking another way."

That report of a Brooklyn grand jury was printed in the New York Globe December 22, 1922. It is not the expression of lawless men, but of men called upon to do certain duties of a public character and who were confronted with an impossible situation and so expressed their convictions unanimously.

And yet our prohibition friends refuse to see any failure in their enactment work and they continue to cry for more and more money to be spent in a vain effort to keep our people "sober," they say, by statute, and just as long as Congress stands for it they will continue until they have drained the Treasury and have brought about an uprising on the part of the people, who will demand that the wastage stop and that the Congress become normal on this question, as well as on all other questions where huge appropriations are demanded.

I noticed recently that the efforts of the Anti-Saloon League have not yet ended. According to the Washington Times of Monday, they are now being turned on the "dry" Members in this House. The league's officials announced that the prohibition officers propose to round up the "dry" Members of Congress who do not drink as they vote.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GALLIVAN. No.
Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield for a correction?
Mr. GALLIVAN. No. The gentleman is violating the rules of the House, and he knows it.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts declines to yield.

Mr. GALLIVAN. The league gladly accepted your votes to put across the Volstead Act and it permitted our "dry "legislators to drink as they pleased. But now it appears that program is to be changed. The Anti-Saloon League proposes to trail the "dry Congressmen, and it is going to make you drink as you voted, and if you do not do as they tell you now they propose to inform your constituents of your treachery to the law you helped to enact. For one, I am of the opinion that it is only fair to investigate "dry" Congressmen who last week passed a resolution to search, practically, the foreign embasies and legations in order that the country might know how much liquor these ambassadors and ministers drink. Why is it not the proper thing to do when "dry" Congressmen insist on looking into the cellars of the foreign ambassadors to have Mr. Haynes's army look into the cellars and the closets of the "dry" Congressman? If I here and now ask the "drys" in this House who religiously vote as the Anti-Saloon League tells them how to vote how many of them take a drink and like a drink, I wonder how many here would raise up their right hands in answer to my appeal. I pause for the moment and I await the raising of a single right arm.

Mr. CRAMTON. Does the gentleman desire to yield now? The gentleman asked some one to raise his hand and I am prepared to do it.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Then the gentleman admits that he likes a drink and takes a drink?

Mr. CRAMTON. I do not admit anything of the kind. I did not understand the gentleman's statement.

Mr. GALLIVAN. I asked every dry Congressman who voted dry and who takes a drink and likes a drink to raise his right hand. [Laughter.] Why, Mr. Chairman, all I can see around this Chamber at this moment is halos. [Laughter.]

I listened the other day to the patriotic and pathetic appeal of the distinguished floor leader [Mr. Mondell] against the bill to create public shooting grounds, and I sympathized with him. In that appeal the gentleman from Wyoming said:

"We have, thank God, up to this good hour in the main escaped the tyranny of petty officials of a centralized govern-ment interfering with the rights, the liberties, and the everyday life of the people locally-an interference which by its very character can not well avoid being tyrannical, a control whose source of authority is so far removed from the people locally that against it they feel hopeless, helpless, resentful.

The gentleman from Wyoming then pictured the barefoot boy with the old shotgun potting peewees and being haled before a Federal court a hundred miles away from his home to answer for his ignorance of the term "migratory birds" in the law enacted by Congress. As I listened to the impassioned appeal of the gentleman who is the leader of the majority I could not help thinking of some of the same hardships, hopelessness, helplessness, and resentfulness of the people under the administration of the Volstead law. Here may be a homesteader in the State of Wyoming who has settled on one of the reclaimed farms of that State and, with water from the mountains and sunshine from the good God himself, has grown an orchard, harvested a few bushels of apples, which could not be sent to Boston for sale because of the high freight rates, borrowed an old hand press, and turned those apples into cider, which was stored in the cellar with the bung carelessly left out, admitting the air to inspire the apple juice with a spirit of industry and give it a tang most agreeable as a nightcap. [Laugh-There was peace and happiness in that frontler home, if not prosperity, until one day the latest tin-horn prohibition officer, Mr. Asher, dropped in complaining of cramps and begged for something to warm his stomach. The housewife bustled about to make him some boneset tea, but he scorned that brew and appealed for whisky, something never known in the great prohibition State of Wyoming. The frontiersman is reminded of the warming influence of that cider in the cellar, and he draws off a quart as an offering to suffering humanity. gulps down a part of it, feels better, and pulls out his hydrometer, drops it into the cup, looks at its register, and immediately becomes an official, with the stern assertion: "Ten per cent; and you are a felon, under the Volstead Act. under arrest, and will accompany me to Cheyenne, where the nearest Federal court sits. You had better take all the money you have with you, for you will pay your own fare and expenses, as well as a heavy fine for your violation of the most sacred law ever enacted by Congress.'

No wonder it takes more than half the time of the United States district attorney of Wyoming to handle prohibition-cases, and I suspect that there is as much resentment against the tyranny of petty officials of a centralized government in Wyoming as there is in New York or Massachusetts, and as much resentment against the petty tyranny in the enforcement of the Volstead law as there will be against that of arresting barefoot boys with shotguns popping peewees in the garden to be haled to a Federal court 50 miles away.

Men of America, do not be fooled. The agitation for the repeal or modification of the Volstead law is not going to stop, but it is going to expand until it makes Congress realize that while honest men and honorable men will make sacrifices to give the law a fair trial and will obey such a law, they will follow the example of Abraham Lincoln in connection with the Dred Scott decision of the Supreme Court. You remember that Lincoln said he did not propose to set Dred Scott free by force, but he did propose to agitate for such political action as would make impossible the conditions that led the court as would make impossible the conditions that led the court to render such a decision, and history tells us that he did so continue to agitate until slavery was abolished. [Applause.]

And now, Mr. Chairman, addressing myself in closing my remarks to the gentleman who sits behind the clock in the gallery, the Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League, the man who says it is disloyal and lawless to agitate for the repeal of the Volstead law, or even of the eighteenth amendment, does not belong to the tribe of Abraham Lincoln, or that of Thomas Jefferson. He belongs to the tribe of the Pharaoh whose tomb has just been opened at Luxor after 3,000 years. [Loud applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I hope the committee will be kind enough to give attention to what I am about to say, because I am going to address the committee upon a serious subject. My speech involves the expenditure of $154,000,000 from the Public Treasury. It seems to me to be sufficiently important to engage the attention of the House, and I am sincerely in earnest when I suggest that I should be very happy if the House will be good enough to listen attentively.

The Budget estimates upon which the bill before the commit-the budget estimates upon which the bill before the committee is based called in the aggregate for $157,193,616.11. The amount recommended by the Committee on Appropriations is $3,388,772.43 less than that, or $153,804,843.68. This decrease was effected by the committee by the elimination or curtailment of amounts requested for the following purposes:

House of Representatives	$12, 493, 75
Botanic Garden	5, 000, 00
General Accounting Office	58, 350, 00
United States Coal Commission
District of Columbia	86, 269, 50
District of Columbia Department of Agriculture, Japanese beetle control	45, 000, 00
Department of the Interior:	40, 000.00
Mescalero Indians, support, etc	175, 000, 00
Zion National Park, roads
Department of Justice
Department of Labor	455. 65
Post Office Department:	1 000 450 00
Compensation of postmasters, 1923
Car fare and bicycle allowance, 1923	19, 900, 00
Reimbursement of fines	1, 000, 00
State Department, peace palace at The Hague	20, 000. 00
Treasury Department:
Public buildings
Fuel
Claims	1, 004, 95
War Department:	A THE VEGETOR
International shooting competition	25, 000. 00
Rio Grande fleed-centrol survey
Monument for tomb of unknown soldier
Panama Canal, civil government	76, 200. 00
Total	3, 388, 772, 43

The principal items comprised in the amount recommended to be appropriated in the bill are as follows:

Refunding internal-revenue taxes erroneously collected Military and naval insurance, United States Veterans'	$78, 675, 000.00
Bureau	13, 235, 000.00
Bureau Payment of pensions, Bureau of Pensions	16, 000, 000, 00
Scrapping of naval vesselsElevation of turret guns on naval vessels permitted to	20, 950, 000. 00
he retained	6, 500, 000, 00
Postal Service, payable from the postal revenues Judgments rendered against the United States by dis-	9, 736, 766, 99
trict courts and the Court of Claims	474, 648. 03
Audited claims allowed by the General Accounting	716, 380, 66
United States employees' compensation fund	475, 000. 00
Fighting forest fires	340, 000, 00
Investigation of rubber, etc	500, 000, 00
Collection and compilation of statistics of customs	150, 000.00
Transportation of Indian supplies, fiscal year 1922	201, 759, 69
Department of Justice and judiciary Mixed Claims Commission, United States and Ger-	1, 678, 947, 49 222, 300, 00
many Public Health Service, pay of commissioned officers	174, 273, 84
Boston (Mass.) post office and subtreasury building	150, 000, 00
Settlement with the American National Red Cross	848, 067, 29
Inland and coastwise waterways service	500, 000, 00
Roads, Fort Riley (Kans.) Military Reservation	100, 000. 00
National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers	382, 000. 00
All other items	1, 794, 699. 69
Total	153, 804, 843, 68

The amount recommended for the payment of refunds on internal-revenue taxes erroneously collected is $78,675,000. sum may be divided in amounts according to the years in which the Claims accided, as follows.

Piscal year 1920 and prior years	$53, 812, 500
Fiscal year 1921	17, 063, 300
Fiscal year 1922	4, 902, 300
Fiscal year 1923	2, 896, 900

Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MADDEN.

Mr. HUSTED. Has the chairman any data to show the amount of taxes recovered by the Government due to underassessment?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes; I shall explain all of that. The Bureau of Internal Revenue now has a balance of approximately $16,000,000 with which to pay refunds during the remainder of the current fiscal year and an appropriation of $12,-000,000 available July 1 next. The data which has been presented to the committee indicate that if the present rate of disposal of claims continues the amount recommended in the bill and the balances on hand will not be more than sufficient to provide for refunds to December 31 next. The amount refunded from July 1 last to January 31 was approximately The income-tax unit alone on December 31, 1922, had 76,500 claims on hand and unadjusted. Included in these claims are 602 claims where the amount claimed is in excess of $50,000, the total amount claimed in the 602 cases aggregating in excess of $150,000,000. Settlement of claims in the past has resulted in an average allowance of approximately third of the amount claimed. The settlement of these claims alone would approximate $50,000,000. In addition to the more than 75,000 claims in the income-tax unit, there were on De-cember 31, 1922, 34,000 claims pending in other classes of taxes, of which 31,000 are in the sales-tax unit.

The total amount claimed in the 34,000 cases is $22,250,000. It must be remembered that the years for which the bulk of these refunds are to be made were war years, new tax laws were enacted with high rates and complicated terms, and billions of dollars were collected. There were few precedents by which to proceed in computing the taxes. The test of the disputed provisions of the laws had not been initiated or settled in the courts. The committee has obtained from the Bureau of Internal Revenue a list of the important court decisions which have settled disputed points in the laws in favor of the taxpayer and have been or will be the cause for millions of the refunds that have been or are to be made. It is estimated that the total amount of refunds for which court decisions will be found responsible is approximately $105,000,000. Of this amount the stock-dividend decision involves refunds of $70,000,000. decision of the Attorney General in the question of community property involves refunds of approximately $15,000,000.

The audit of tax returns is decidedly in the favor of the Gov-While the amount required for refunding taxes seems extraordinarily large, the Government is recovering in back taxes as the result of the audit and as a result of the payment of tax where no return was made sums that are greatly in excess of the amounts required to be refunded. A consideration of the entire subject of tax receipts, tax refunds, collections of back taxes from the fiscal year 1917 to and including January 31 last will be informing and help in a measure to make clear the necessity for the appropriation carried in this bill. The table which I insert at this point shows the total internal-revenue receipts, total amount of additional assessments due to office audits and field investigations, and the total amount of refunds of taxes illegally collected for the fiscal years 1917 to 1922, inclusive, as well as for the first seven months of the current fiscal year (July 1, 1922, to January 31, 1923):

Year.	Total internal- revenue receipts.	Amount of additional assessments and collections resulting from office audits and field investigations.	Amounts of refunds of taxes illegally collected.
1917.	$800, 393, 640, 44	$16, 587, 255, 00	$887, 127. 94
1918.	8, 698, 955, 820, 93	29, 984, 655, 00	-2, 088, 565. 46
1919.	8, 850, 150, 078, 56	123, 275, 768, 90	-8, 654, 171. 24
1920.	5, 407, 580, 251, 81	466, 889, 359, 00	14, 127, 098. 00
1921.	4, 595, 000, 765, 74	416, 483, 708, 90	28, 656, 357. 95
1922.	3, 197, 451, 083, 06	266, 978, 873, 00	48, 134, 127. 83
Total (6 years)	21, 558, 531, 640. 48	1,320,209,618.00	102, 547, 448. 39
	1, 277, 757, 512. 94	286,695,625.00	76, 488, 412. 12
Grand total (6 years and 7 months)	22, 836, 289, 153. 42	1, 606, 905, 243. 00	179, 035, 860. 51

As will be seen by the table which I have inserted, there was an aggregate of tax receipts for the period named of $22,836,000,000, and in connection with this there has been collected as a result of audits on underpaid schedules $1,607,-000,000 since the audits began, while the payments made for refunds, as the result of overpayment on schedules audited, amount to only $179,000,000.

It has been frequently asked why it is that the audits are slow, why we are still at work upon the audits of 1917 taxes. I think a good answer to that question now might be made by showing the House these papers which I have on the table. This bundle of papers is a typical individual case of a consolidated tax return. All the papers here belong to one case. When we realize that this is only a typical case, and further, that in many of the cases it would take a wagon to haul all of the papers in the case, we can understand why a man can not audit many of these cases in a single year. The papers in this particular case the Secretary of the Treasury permitted to be sent down here under seal in charge of one of his assistants so that we might visualize the physical dimensions of it. It will be seen that with so many papers in a case like this, involving perhaps patent rights, depreciation in mining and in oll wells, in machinery, in everything that pertains to the conduct of a very large consolidated business, it is not an easy job to complete the audit of all the cases that are pending. must be understood that we are still auditing on the 1917, 1918, 1919, and 1920 cases, and that most of the refunds which are being authorized to be made through the appropriations we recommend here are for tax schedules filed for these years and not for 1922 or 1923, although there are some for each of those years. The difficulty has been to ascertain just how they could adjust all of these cases. The adjustment of cases of different types formed a basis upon which to adjust the cases of the succeeding years. As they settle the cases for 1917, that settlement lays down a line of decisions for the succeeding years, and will become much easier. As the law is clarified by the audits and decisions, and as the taxpayers understand more clearly, what is to be allowed and what is not to be allowed as clearly what is to be allowed and what is not to be allowed as credits, the schedules have come in much more correctly than they did during the war. As time goes by there will be less and less refunds to be made, because of the better understanding on the part of the taxpayers and the better knowledge of the law on the part of the administrative officers of the Government.

Mr. FESS. Would it interrupt the gentleman if I should ask him a question right there?

Mr. MADDEN. Not at all.

Mr. FESS. A good many citizens feel quite bitter over what they say is their inability to make out their tax returns because they do not know what the law is.

Mr. MADDEN. As I say, as these cases are adjusted, audited, finally concluded, they then have a principle upon which future settlements can be made, and it is becoming more clearly understood every day by the taxpayers just what credits they are allowed and what sort of return they must make.

Mr. FESS. So that the charge that we have a law on the statute books that nobody can understand and yet they are liable for punishment is not holding now like it was formerly?

Mr. MADDEN. Not at all, but still there are a good many cases. Let me call attention to the 1917 cases

The bureau has 45,915 of the 1917 cases on hand. The statute of limitations runs on them on March 1 next. Of these cases 16.165 have been audited and the taxpayer notified of the additional assessment and given 30 days in which to appeal or pro-test the assessment. Of the total 45,915, 5,989 are in the situation where the taxpayer has protested and the protest is being considered. These two sets of cases make 22,154 of the 45,915 that have been audited and in which the Government is protected. Of the remaining 23,761 cases, waivers have been secured in about 50 per cent of them. As the 1st of March approaches they have been obliged to cut out the 30-day privilege and are making assessments and getting waivers from the taxpayers so that the Government will lose none of its rights from the expiration of the period when the statute runs. In cases where the taxpayer refuses to sign the waiver they assess the tax and if the assessment is made before the statute runs it is equivalent to a waiver. If necessary the Government can sue for the tax if the suit is filed within 5 years from the date the return was filed. That will perhaps not be necessary in many cases because when the taxpayer finds the assessment is made he will probably sign the waiver.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentlemen yield for one more question?

Mr. MADDEN. I will.

Mr. FESS. A great many heavy taxpayers have made this statement to me, that they do not know how to plan for the future because they do not know how much back taxes they may be required to pay under a law that they can not understand. Now, I take it that these two decisions, the first the Supreme Court decision and the ruling of the Attorney General, have very largely clarified the situation.

Mr. MADDEN. The Supreme Court settled the question of the income tax on stock dividends, and the Attorney General decided the question on community property. They are making progress in catching up in the audit of back cases.

Mr. FESS. I would like to ask one other question: In the revenue bill we put an authorization for some sort of a commission to simplify tax methods.

Mr. MADDEN. The Tax Simplification Board has been at work and has made a report to Congress

Mr. SWING. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MADDEN. I will,

Mr. SWING. In reference to this refund, I see the bill carries an appropriation of over $78,000,000.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes. Mr. SWING. Has the gentleman received from the Internal Revenue Bureau a list of persons who are to receive this money?

Mr. MADDEN. They do not know themselves,
Mr. SWING. Is this for the future?
Mr. MADDEN. Yes.
Mr. SWING. Is it similar to giving the department a blanket

Mr. MADDEN. Not at all.

Mr. SWING. To hand out to whoever they want to? Mr. MADDEN. No; when they audit these claims they audit them in their order.

Mr. SWING. I would like to ask the chairman if he will point out the distinction between the claims filed by the Navy Department for money which citizens claim is due them and which Congress is unwilling for the Navy Department to do any more than investigate and report-

Mr. MADDEN. It is quite a different proposition.
Mr. SWING. And this proposition, where we give the Treasury Department $78,000,000 with which they can pay out to anybody they want to on records which are secret, which we may never know, and—

Mr. MADDEN. The law provides a secret audit. The gentleman is not making a correct statement. These payments are not secret. The Treasury reports them to Congress—

Mr. SWING. And all we know about it is that the money is gone, after the water has gone under the bridge.

Mr. MADDEN. That is a totally different case from the case the gentleman described. In the first place, these people have paid the money into the Treasury. They paid it in because they thought they owed it. It is their money. There should be no dispute or delay about the return of it once the justness of their claims has been determined. Would the gentleman stop taxpayers from getting what belongs to them?

Mr. SWING. No. I would do nothing which would delay the repayment. But I think in some cases the claims have been adjudicated and in some not.

Mr. MADDEN, No. The claims which this money will pay have not been adjudicated.

Mr. ROACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MADDEN, Yes.
Mr. ROACH. I wanted to ask the gentleman this question, whether or not this $78,000,000 carried in this bill is just to pay the claims that have now been audited?

Mr. MADDEN. No; to pay claims that may be audited between now and December 31.

Mr. ROACH. Will it pay the entire amount of refunds that have been filed up to date?

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, no. They are auditing claims amounting to $530,000 a day.

Mr. ROACH. How do we arrive at the amount $78,000,000? Mr. MADDEN. They estimate it on the average of daily

Mr. ROACH. Do they think it will cover all they need up to December 31, 1923?

Mr. MADDEN. Up to December 31. And it is not only $78,000,000; they have $16,000,000, and they have $12,000,000 on hand out of which they can pay.

Mr. ROACH. Then, another question: Do they contemplate that they will be able to audit a sufficient number of claims to use up this $78,000,000 within the fiscal year?

Mr. MADDEN. Up to December 31, 1923. Mr. SWING. Would not the gentleman think it would be a good policy to pursue where so much money is involved that where the refund exceeds $50,000 it ought to be reported in advance and the House have the opportunity to know who is getting this immense sum of money and on what basis he is getting it?

Mr. MADDEN. There is no secrecy about it. When the audit is made it discloses the facts, and they reach a conclusion based on the law and on the facts. If they find that they owe a man, they send him a notice that they owe him, and he comes in and gets his money. If he makes an application for the refund of his money, the same course will follow, and in every case where a claim is audited it must go through five different channels. Each channel checks the other. So far as I can find out, there is no chance for collusion or conspiracy; and wherever anyone has attempted in the Internal Revenue Bureau to enter into any collusion with a taxpayer the intelligence bureau of the department has been after him and watching him, and in most cases they have caught him and indicted him and sent him to the penitentiary. There is nothing being left undone to safeguard the interests of the Government in the settlement of these claims.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I might say also that statements of the refunds are filed subsequently.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr GREEN of Iowa. We have a complete report of them filed with the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes. I hope gentlemen will allow me now to proceed. I have only five minutes.

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.
Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. The gentleman says everything is being done to safeguard the Government. What is being done to safeguard the taxpayers?

Well, the taxpayers are the Government. Mr. MADDEN. When we mention one we involve the other. I think the interests of the taxpayers are being safeguarded by every action that is being taken by the Treasury Department. There is no disposition on the part of the Treasury Department to take a dollar away from a taxpayer that it ought not to take away.

Now I must not yield further. There are some things here that I ought to mention. The amount assessed and collected from back taxes during the first seven months of the current fiscal year is $287,000,000. That indicates that we are not only paying back overpaid schedules, but are collecting on underpaid schedules. The estimate of the bureau made last November was that the total of such collections during the year would be approximately $300,000,000. The rate of collection now indicates that the figure will reach $400,000,000. Where the Government has exacted money from a taxpayer erroneously there should be no delay in refunding it to him after the justness of his claim has been determined. If this appropriation is not made and the payment of all refunds stopped until an appropriation is made next December or January, thousands of taxpayers who have had their claims adjudicated will have to await a subsequent appropriation for their payments.

The gentleman has now consumed 30 The CHAIRMAN. minutes. He asked the Chair to notify him when he had consumed that much time. Mr. MADDEN. I thank the Chair. I will take 10 minutes

The committee recommends an appropriation of $20,950,000 for expenses in connection with the scrapping of the seven battleships and four battle cruisers whose construction was discontinued in accordance with the provisions of the treaty emanating from the Conference on the Limitation of Naval An initial appropriation of $5,000,000 for the expenses of scrapping was made in the deficiency act approved July 1, 1922. It was estimated at that time that the total expenses of scrapping would approximate $70,000,000. The settlements made by the Navy Department with contractors thus far have been so much better than was anticipated that it is now expected the total expense will be in the neighborhood of $55,000,000, leaving a balance hereafter to be appropriated on this account of about $30,000,000. Of the $20,950,000 recommended in the bill $8,450,000 is for the settlement of ordnance The outstanding contract obligations involved for ordnance amount to approximately $21,000,000. It is expected that the sum of $8,450,000 will be sufficient to make all the settlements of claims and contracts in connection with the ordnance for the ships to be scrapped.

When the conference completed its labors it was decided not to continue on the building program of the Navy. It was decided that certain ships should be retained in the service. On all ships outside of the program provided for in the conference treaty work was stopped; construction was stopped. The ordnance feature of construction on these ships involved an expenditure of $21,000,000, and a settlement has been made, a complete settlement, with the contractors at an aggregate sum not to exceed $8,450,000.

The remainder of the $21,000,000, namely $12,500,000, is for settlements in connection with hull and machinery. The contracts for the vessels themselves and for the propelling machinery have not been canceled pending final ratification of the $12,500,000 consist of carrying charges, care and preservation, handling charges, payment of bills for machinery supplied. settlement of contracts for material, and expenses of vessel contractors and propelling-machinery contractors. The final amount necessary to complete the payment of the expenses of scrapping in connection with hulls and machinery will not be accurately known until the cancellation of the contracts in force and is dependent upon the date of the final ratification of the treaty.

No action has been taken with respect to the cancellation of the contracts as to hulls and propelling machinery, and no action will be taken until France ratifies the treaty. If France does not ratify the treaty, we have stopped the expense that would be incident to carrying these contracts alive. Pending the time when France either ratifies or does not ratify, there will be no additional expense created as the result of our stopping the work, and in the settlement of these contracts we are paying for nothing but finished work and partially finished work under the contracts

It will be of interest to the House at this time to have some idea of what saving will accrue to the Government from the scrapping of these vessels. The estimated cost of constructing the 11 ships is $436,800,000. There had been expended on them up to June 30, 1922, the sum of $155,615,000. If the vessels had not been scrapped there would have been required to complete the same the sum of $281,185,000. Deducting from this sum the estimated cost of scrapping and adding to the result a fair approximation of the value of the salvage, there will be an ultimate saving of somewhere between $240,000,000 and $250,000,000 traceable to the scrapping of the 11 ships, which resulted from the treaty on the limitation of armament. We have a proposal here for an appropriation of $6,500,000 for the elevation of the guns on the ships that are to be retained in the naval service. We are told that this action of elevating the guns is necessary in order to bring them up to the same standard that now prevails in the English and Japanese navies, and that the work of elevating the guns is strictly within the treaty provision and the result will be a minimum fire range of any of the guns on the ships of 32,000 yards instead of 22,000 yards, which is the maximum range of the 12-inch guns.

We have an appropriation recommended of $13,235,000 for military and naval insurance of the United States Veterans' Bureau to supplement the premium receipts on the term insurance. The original appropriation of $23,000,000 was made in the war risk insurance act of 1917. The accumulated premium receipts have been sufficient up to the present date to pay the losses. The term insurance in force amounts to $1,850,000,000, representing 245,000 policies. The excess of payments over premium receipts now amounts to approximately $7,200,000 a month. The amount of accumulated premium receipts, together with the previous appropriation, will fall short by the amount recommended in the bill of meeting the payments required for the current fiscal year. For the fiscal year 1924 these premiums will fall $90,000,000 short, and we have provided that $90,-000,000 in the 1924 appropriation bill.

There are a great many things about which I would like to speak, but I do not see that I will have much time to do that. I want to say, however, as to the Department of Justice and the appropriations here provided for that department, that there were 72,000 cases started in the courts of the United States in the fiscal year 1922, and 37 per cent of those were prohibition cases. Forty-four per cent is the average time of the district attorneys of the United States taken on prohibition work, so that the largely increased funds for the Department of Justice may be fairly attributed to this additional business. Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield at some point in his remarks?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes; I will be glad to yield to the gentleman a little later. I think the bill will be found in every particular to be justified. We have made no recommendation which the facts did not justify to the committee. While the bill carries $154,000,000, which seems a very large sum, all of the $153,000,000 except about $9,000,000 is in six items and mainly attributable to years that are gone. I thank the committee for their attention. [Applause.]

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois has consumed 40 minutes.

I will take another minute to answer the Mr. MADDEN. gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I was out of the room when the gentleman was discussing these refunds. I have several contreaty by France. The expenses to be defrayed from the stituents who are interested in cases of that kind, and they complain about the delay. I should like to ask the gentleman if the pile of papers before the gentleman are claims for refunds? This is one single case. Mr. MADDEN.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. There is one bundle there that is more than 2 feet thick.

Mr. MADDEN. That is a typical case.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That is 30 inches thick. Mr. MADDEN. Yes; more than that. This is one of the smaller cases. Some of these consolidated cases have a whole wagonload of papers. Every document has to be properly audited and conclusions reached as to the law and the facts in connection with every phase of the case.

Mr. HILL. May I ask the gentleman a question about the war-risk insurance?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. HILL. I understood the chairman of the committee to say that in 1924 the war-risk insurance would cost $90,000,000.

Mr. MADDEN. For term insurance. The gentleman is correct about that.

Mr. HILL. When the war-risk insurance policy was adopted, was it not understood that that would probably take care of Mr. MADDEN. I am not certain about that. It will cost $90,000,000 next year for term insurance.

Mr. HILL. Another Democratic scheme gone wrong.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. Kelley of Michigan having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Cravens, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bills of the following titles:

H. R. 7967. An act granting certain lands to Escambia County,

Fla., for a public park;

H. R. 10003. An act to further amend and modify the war risk insurance act:

H. R. 5918. An act for the relief of the Michigan Boulevard Building Co.; and

H. R. 7053. An act to grant certain lands to the city of Canon City, Colo., for a public park.

The message also announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2984) for the relief of Thurston W. True, had asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Capper, Mr. Spencer, and Mr. Robinson as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the following titles:

S. 1405. An act for the relief of William Collie Nabors;

S. 1599. An act for the relief of the estate of David B. Landis, deceased, and the estate of Jacob F. Sheaffer, deceased; S. 3594. An act for the relief of Anton Rospotnik and the exchange of certain lands owned by the Northern Pacific Railway Co.;

S. 107. An act for the relief of Robert Edgar Zeigler; S. 3351. An act for the relief of G. Dare Hopkins; and

S. 2632. An act to correct the military record of Martin Cletner.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I wish to discuss subject that has been very prominent before the people of this country for the past two years. In the statement that I shall make to the House I hope that the Members will indulge me and not interrupt me until I am through. If at that time they desire to ask any question, and I have the time,

I will be very glad to respond.

Mr. Chairman, this bill carries an appropriation of $500,000 for investigating the sources of crude rubber and the possi-bilities of developing the rubber-plantation industry in the Philippines and in Latin America. As originally submitted by the Budget, with the approval of the President of the United States, it provided solely for an investigation on the question of rubber and our rubber supply. The suggestion was made in committee that the provision be broadened, and it now applies not only to rubber but also authorizes the Secretary of Commerce, through the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, to investigate the conditions of rubber and the marketing of other essential raw materials for American industries, including nitrates and sisal and related problems in the development of the foreign trade of the United States in agricultural and manufactured products.

The United States is the largest buyer of rubber in the world. There is consumed in this country more than 75 per cent of the world's supply of rubber. Formerly the most of it came from wild rubber in Brazil. But a number of years ago British capital, with its usual foresight, and anticipating the enormous increase in the demand for rubber, established rubber plantations in the British East Indies. The result is that at the present time British capital in the British East Indies produces more than 72 per cent of the entire world's supply. This with the other supply under control makes about 85 per cent of the production acreage absolutely under the control and domination of British interests. Through a rubber growers' association, the British interests have a monopoly of the entire world's supply. They have formed an association, organized expressly for the purpose of limiting the production of rubber and increasing the market price, and they limit the production by an export tax. which increases as the amount of exports from the British East Indies increases, so at the present time, by reason of the monopoly on the part of the British interests, consumers in this country are paying 35 cents a pound for rubber, and Secretary Hoover says there is no telling the extent to which it may go. You know that the increase in the demand for rubber is constantly growing. Most of it is used in tire production. are 10,488,632 motor vehicles registered in the United States, and it is estimated that there will be 45,000,000 tire casings produced in 1923, as compared with 37,500,000 last year. So it is important that something be done in order to develop other fields in the interest of the American consumer. The President of the United States and the Secretary of Commerce have very wisely asked Congress to make this appropriation of $500,000 in order to enable the department to investigate the opportunity and facilities for American capital to make investments in South America and the Philippines for that proper purpose.

ANALOGY BETWEEN BRITISH CONTROL OF RUBBER AND NITRATES.

Mr. Chairman, the analogy between British control and monopoly of rubber and nitrates consumed in the United States is most striking. The paramount necessity of both of these products is evident, but it must be conceded that of the two nitrates are vastly more important, because they are essential in agriculture and are necessary in food production. Rubber is necessary for transportation both in war and in peace times. Nitrates are necessary for explosives in times of war and fertilizer in times of peace. Nearly all of the world's supply of the natural product of nitrate comes from Chile, and it is absolutely controlled by British capital, acting in conjunction with Chilean interests. Now that Germany, since the war, supplies her own nitrates, the United States is the world's largest buyer of Chilean nitrate, consuming at the present time nearly one-half of the total production. There has been imported from Chile since the beginning of exportation about 15,282,197 long tons of nitrate, for which the American consumer has paid $982,562,000, of which $188,626,000 was collected by Chile as an export duty. This is 18 cents per pound for nitrogen. To meet our needs it should be available at 5 cents per pound. From 50 to 60 per cent of the Government revenue of Chile is derived from the export tax on nitrate, and it will be seen that the American consumers are contributing about 25 per cent of the income of the Chilean Government. Think of it! The American farmers, in addition to the high taxes they pay in this country, are compelled to pay one-fourth of the entire expenses of the Chilean Government in order to secure the nitrates necessary for their soil. Is it surprising that the farmers all over this country are complaining that the President and this Congress have not taken some step to relieve this situation and bring about the production of nitrogen in this country, as is being done in Germany and as is now being undertaken in France?

England controls the Chilean nitrate industry under a priceflxing agreement, restricting production, and allotting output; and, as in the case of rubber, London quotations control the nitrate markets all over the world. British control of the nitrate industry is exercised through the association organized by the English companies in 1899 as the Nitrate Propaganda Committee, and later known as the Chilean Nitrate Producers' Association. Its purposes are, first, to fix prices; second, to limit and apportion the production; third, to promote consumption of nitrate of soda abroad; and, fourth, to secure favors and protection at home for the producers. There does not exist a more grasping and dominating trust, and to this foreign monopoly and combination the American farmer is compelled to pay tribute on account of the inaction of Congress.

The President readily responded to the appeal of the great rubber companies of this country, and pursuant to his request Congress is about to make an appropriation in the effort to secure relief for the rubber industry of the United States. Just when will the President and Congress recognize the plight of the American farmer with reference to the high cost of fertilizer and take steps to free him from the grasp of foreign monopoly of the world's nitrates, which are so essential to the greatest possible productivity of his soil? In view of the British control of rubber and the fact that the United States consumes threefourths of the world's supply, does anyone doubt that if our climate were adapted to the growing of rubber and the United States had a large rubber plantation in southern Texas, or even at Muscle Shoals, steps would not have long since been taken to make its supply accessible to domestic needs, thus relieving the American consumer of the excessive price he is now compelled to pay by reason of British control or monopoly? Why is it that the President and Congress, who have responded so quickly to the appeal of the great rubber companies, have refused the appeal of the farmers for the utilization of the hydroelectric energy which can be developed at Muscle Shoals for the production of nitrogen from the air, and which we are assured would ultimately result in the farmer getting his fertilizer for onehalf the price he is now compelled to pay to the Fertilizer Trust?

OTHER COUNTRIES PROVIDING RELIEF FOR THEIR FARMERS.

For some years Germany has been taking nitrogen from the air and selling it to her farmers in the form of fertilizer, we are told, at one-half the price which the American farmer is compelled to pay for his fertilizer. We are told that France, although burdened with an overwhelming war debt, is planning to operate a 50,000,000-franc nitrogen and synthetic ammonia plant as an aid to French agriculture by renting the Toulouse gunpowder plant to a private corporation and subscribing for one-half the capital stock out of her treasury. And it is stated that if an operating private corporation is not formed within four months, then the Government will operate the plant for the benefit of the French farmer. But when the American farmers point to the great possibilities of water-power development at Muscle Shoals and ask the President and a Republican Congress to use it and free them from the shackles of British monopoly of nitrates and the Fertilizer Trust, a deaf ear is turned

The great water power at Muscle Shoals gives the United States the advantage of Germany and France and all other countries in the fixation of nitrogen from the air. war the erection of a dam and nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals was begun for the manufacture of munitions, with the idea of utilizing the plant after the war for the manufacture of nitrates When the war came to a close more than $89, for fertilizer. 000,000 had been expended. The dam had not been completed, and when an appropriation was asked to complete the dam, so as to make the plant and the investment available in peace times for the purpose for which it was intended, opposition, which had not dared to show itself during the war, arose. The necessities of agricultural interests were ignored and we were solemnly told that this huge investment should be scrapped. The British interests, through the Alabama Power Co., an English-controlled corporation, the Fertilizer Trust, the Aluminum Trust, and other allied interests began to send out propaganda over the country to the effect that nitrogen could never be successfully produced and the investment should be charged off as a war loss.

I was a member of the conference committee which in Feb-1921, had under consideration an appropriation of $10,000,000 to continue the work on the dam, and I recall that the then Republican chairman of the Appropriations Committee deliberately and arbitrarily withheld the conference report for days from the House, confessedly because he feared that a majority of the House would override him and make the appropriation, and it was not until he was certain that there were sufficient votes to defeat it that he made the report. say, parenthetically, that this unjustifiable action of the former chairman is parallel with the action of the present chairman of the Committee on Rules in refusing to allow the House to vote. It but shows to what length the opposition to the development and utilization of the water power at Muscle Shoals will go. The work was stopped and the large organization dis-banded and scattered. Since then public pressure has resulted in the work being resumed, and the present investment of the United States in the plant is more than $107,000,000.

OFFER OF MR. FORD AND METHODS ADOPTED TO DEFEAT IT.

In July, 1921, Mr. Henry Ford, at the invitation of the Secre tary of War, submitted a proposal to take over and operate the plant. The terms of his proposal are well known and I have not the time to discuss them, except to say that he proposed to lease the plant for 100 years and to pay 4 per cent interest on the money necessary to complete the dam, and by the time of the expiration of his lease to pay to the Government every dollar expended in its construction, together with the amount of money necessary, year by year, to maintain and operate the locks for navigation purposes. He agreed to produce 40,000 tons of pure nitrogen, which is equivalent to 2,000,000 tons of fertilizer, and to sell it to the farmer at cost, plus 8 per cent

Forthwith a campaign began to defeat his proposition. Other offers from mysterious sources were finally made, including one from the Alabama Power Co., which has employed a former Member of Congress and paid lobbyists to defeat the Ford offer. None of these opposing offers were regarded as even worthy of serious consideration. Then they said Mr. Ford could not make nitrogen as he had agreed. He says that he can, and he is willing to back his judgment with all of his millions; but despite the fact that this offer has been pending for nearly two years the House has been denied the right to even vote as to whether or not it will accept or reject it. has been denied this right through the action of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Campbell], the chairman of the powerful Committee on Rules, supported by the majority leader, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. Mondell]. But let it be said that the chairman of the Committee on Rules could not have succeeded in denying the House the opportunity to vote if he had not been supported by the Republican members of that committee, for the Democratic members were unanimously in favor of the proposition. Nor would the majority members of the committee have so acted without the sanction of the Republican steering committee, and for whose action the Republican majority in the House must be held responsible.

In the strangle hold of the majority leader of the House and the chairman of the Rules Committee to choke off a vote on the Ford offer, the chairman of the Rules Committee has told the House that he represented and spoke for the "responsible majority of the Republican side of the House." I deny it. The chairman of the Rules Committee no longer has any legislative responsibility in the House of Representatives people of his district took that responsibility away from him at the last election, and he misrepresents the House before the country in using his power, along with the majority leader of the House, to overthrow and override the majority on both sides of the House, for if the chairman of the Rules Committee had been willing to be fair and let the Members of the House vote, the Ford offer would have been accepted by a majority of two to one, and maybe more than that. [Applause.]

STATEMENT OF SECRETARY HOOVER AND DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.

Secretary Hoover, who is conceded to-be perhaps not only the ablest economic authority in his party, but one of the best-informed men in the United States on domestic and foreign trade, was selected by the President as a member of his Cabinet because he is an acknowledged authority on all trade questions. When he was before the Committee on Appropriations last Saturday, in answer to a question put to him as to what his views were as to Muscle Shoals, Secretary Hoover said:

I know what we are sparring about here, and I will tell you I am in the habit of talking straightforwardly. I am in favor of the development of Muscle Shoals for making nitrates. I would like to see Mr. Ford do it if that will suit anybody. I do not know whether Mr. Ford's terms are the terms that Congress ought to adopt. I could not speak as to that, but I would like to see anybody who has the capital take Muscle Shoals and turn nitrates out of it to-morrow, and I would be especially more than pleased if we would take hold of this four-million horsepower in Arizona and make nitrates out of that, but Muscle Shoals is nearer production than the other and we can start right there.

Mr. Byrns I take it you are like everybody else in this room; you are not in favor of Government operation if it can be done by private enterprise.

Secretary Hoover. I am not in favor of Government operation of anything of that sort.

Secretary Hoover may not speak for a majority of the Cabinet of which he is a member, but he does speak as one of the ablest members of the Cabinet, who is willing to be responsible and respond to the appeal of the farmers of the country for relief.

The Secretary of Commerce in presenting to the Appropria-tions Committee the facts about British control of the rubber trade of the world has also furnished to the committee members interesting and illuminating information about the British control of the Chilean nitrate production; and the Department of Commerce has sent a statement, addressed to the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, which is very illuminating, and I wish to read it:

Nitrate of soda, of which large quantities are imported into the United States and used principally as fertilizer for cotton, is a natural monopoly of Chile, the principal west-coast country of South America. The war of the Pacific, between Chile on one side and Peru and Bolivia on the other, was really caused by disputes over Chilean interests in the nitrate fields, which were at that time divided between Peru and Bolivia. As soon as it had acquired these deposits by conquest, Chile attained a greatly increased importance, and the subsequent exploita-tion of this industry has been the principle means of paying Govern-ment expenses and supporting the agriculture and other industries of the ment expenses and supporting the agriculture and other industries of the country.

The Chilean policy has been one of protection to foreign investments, and outside capital, especially British, was not slow to enter the nitrate field. At the present time companies incorporated in Chile produce on the average nearly 50 per cent of the annual total of nitrate; British corporations account for from 35 per cent to 40 per cent, and the balance is controlled by German, Jugo-Slaw, Spanish, Italiau, American, and Peruvian capital. It is to be observed that the Chilean and British companies are preponderant. The two American companies which have producing plants—the Grace Nitrate Co. and the Du Pont Nitrate Co.—produce about 3 per cent of the annual output.

The British influence in the nitrate industry is really stronger than is indicated by the figures just given. Many of the Chilean companies have British stockholders or have British banks represented in their directorate. Recently there has been a tendency to claim company omiciles in Chile, thus avoiding British taxation, although the stock control might be British. Other British influences relating to the industry are as follows:

"Ownership of the principal enilosads which carry nitrate from the domiciles in Chile, thus avoiding British taxation, although the stock control might be British. Other British influences relating to the industry are as follows:

"Ownership of the principal railroads which carry nitrate from the interior to the seaports; ownership of a large part of the water supply, needed in large quantities in the process of nitrate extraction; practical control of fuel and other supplies through the British commercial houses established at the ports; quotation of prices in sterling; which means that all business is financed by means of 90-day drafts on London, regardless of the destination of shipment; control of the iodine business; the principal by-product of altrate."

In 1919 nitrate producers formed a cooperative selling association, as a result of the centralized buying instituted by the Ailles during the war. Statutes provide that the association may be removed each five years, with the consent of 80 per cent of the voting power (votes are based upon production, each company having the number of votes equivalent with its productive capacity). On the whole the association has given satisfaction to the producers, although there have been complaints from individual members who have felt themselves injured by measures considered necessary for the general good. The Chilean Government is represented by delegates who meet with the governing board of the association, with voting power. The association fixes prices at which nitrate will be sold for each year beginning July 1; may change these prices if it seems desirable; prescribes standard forms for sales contracts and other documents; impects and grades the nitrate delivered on orders; allocates sales among the producers; and devotes a certain sum of money each year to the maintenance of offices abroad which report on foreign conditions and distribute publicity.

The principal purposes of the association are to eliminate competition are maintenance of offices abroad which report on foreign conditions and distribute publicity.

The princi which amounted to a subsidy totaling £392,050 paid to them by other members of the association. In the same year strong efforts were made for the wear that are the presentatives in Chile pleading the impropriety of their being forced into an organization clearly lilegal according to our Sherman law.

Sherman law in a comparative of aircrate as fixed by the association are lower than these received during the times of speculation that followed the end the war, but they are not yet down to the pre-war basis. The price of the times of the times of speculation that followed the end they are not the fixed of the war, but they are not yet down to the pre-war basis. The price of the times of speculation that followed the end they are not the fixed previously the same of the following arguments: Pirstly, that the importance of the following arguments: Pirstly, that the importance of the fixed production costs and the expenses of the association were able to supply the German strong that the fixed production costs and the expenses of the association were able to supply the German strong that the fixed production costs and the expenses of the association would not permit. In association expenses are included the sum of £342,050, taking the fixed production costs and the expenses of the association would not permit. In association expenses are included the sum of £342,050, taking the fixed production costs and the expense of the association and price as the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation and the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation and price as the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation and price as the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation and price as the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation and price as the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation and price as the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation and price as the fixed production costs and the expense of the sasociation a of the Ford offer, which, if accepted, would put an end to British interests fixing the prices of Chilean nitrates sold to American farmers.

Who are the allies supporting the Ford offer and who are the allies of the opposition? Those allied together and begging the House for a vote on the Ford offer are the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the Farmers' Union, the American Federation of Labor, and others; while the allies of the opposition are the British, led by the Alabama Power Co., British owned, and standing with these British allies and the Alabama Power Co. are the leader of the majority of this House and the chairman of the Rules Committee. [Applause.]

They say that all these organizations supporting the Ford offer who are begging the House to vote on it are fooled. Let us see if they are.

STATEMENT OF MR. GRAY SILVER, OF THE AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDER-ATTON.

At a hearing before the Committee on Agriculture of the House on January 29, 1923, Mr. Gray Silver, the Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, in a statement made to the committee, presented to the committee a detailed explanation of how the price of Chilean nitrate is fixed for the farmer and controlled by the "pool" of nitrate buyers in London in agreement with the London nitrate committee of the Chilean Nitrate Producers' Association. His statement appears on pages 49 and 50 of the hearings and is as follows:

1. In order to keep the price of Chilean nitrate after the war as nearly as possible up to war prices, in January, 1919, the Chilean Nitrate Producers' Association was formed—a price-fixing trust of the nearly as possible up to war prices, in January, 1919, the Chilean Nitrate Producers' Association was formed—a price-fixing trust of the most extreme type.

2. The American-owned plants in Chile, which produce less than 3 per cent of the total Chilean nitrate production, are not actually members of the Chilean Nitrate Producers' Association, and were permitted to remain outside of the association on the plea of the American antitrust laws, but the American Chilean nitrate operators have continued to work without friction with the association and have not been guilty of selling nitrates under the prices fixed by the association or in competition with it.

3. The first trust business done by the association was to push the price of nitrate in 1919 up to 18 shillings per Spanish quintal, which at the normal exchange is $96.77 per long ton, which was the highest price ever known for Chilean nitrate, not excepting the war period.

4. The association allots the quotas of production to every nitrate plant in Chile, fixes the prices of nitrate, and makes all sales effective. It cases where plants can not produce nitrate at the prices fixed by the association these plants are allowed to sell their production quotas to more efficient organizations; and the larger operators, in order to have their plants work to capacity, pay the small and inefficient plants a bonus of $4 per ton actual exchange, and these large operators are very glad to pay this bonus to the inefficient operators, as the large and efficient operators get all of the bonus back and more from the consumer.

5. The German nitrate owners and operators in Chile are second.

farmer is paying his one-half of this amount on each ton he buys of farmer is paying his one-half of this amount on each ton he buys of Chilean nitrate.

12. Finally and in the meantime, with this arrangement in Germany, the German farmer gets his nitrogen fertilizers for about one-half what the American farmer pays.

13. The American farmer also pays the English coal miners for the power that produces his nitrates in Chile, when his power for producing nitrates could be generated from water power at Muscle Shoals, The American farmer pays freight on the coal from England to Chile on English ships, and then when the nitrates are ready for shipment from Chile he pays $11.20 export duty to Chile; and when his Chilean nitrate starts from a Chilean port he pays a toll for his nitrate to pass through his own country's canal, which he helped to build—this toll being kindly arranged for him by English diplomacy.

14. Yet with all this, some say there is no trust and no price fixing.

15. As a further nitrate aid to the American farmer, the ammonium-sulphate producers get $5 per ton protection against the German importations—and forthwith the Chilean nitrate producers step up the price $5 per ton.

FARMERS NEITHER IGNORANT NOR FOOLED.

The farmers fooled! No: they have been buncoed by the majority leader of the House and the chairman of the Rules Committee.

Henry Ford is an American and the allied influences and organizations supporting his offer are Americans, but the opposition to his offer is supported and applauded by the British and Chilean nitrate interests, the leader in the fight against the and chilean intrate interests, the leader in the fight against the farmers of this country to be relieved from this practice being the Alabama Power Co., British owned.

The Ford offer and its American allies and supporters may be denied; they have been denied a vote by the majority leader of the House and the chairman of the Rules Committee; but Henry Ford's offer and its American allies are Henry Ford's offer and its American allies are only delayed; they are not defeated; and when the next Congress meets a vote will be had in the House, led along with others on the Republican side by such men as the two gentlemen from Illinois, the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Mr. Madden, and the acting chairman of the Military Committee of the House, Mr. McKenzie, and Henry Ford's offer will be accepted and the British interests and their allies will be defeated, as some of their allies in this House were defeated in the last election.

[Applause.] The responsible Republican majority of this House have rejected the wise advice of such distinguished and able leaders as the lamented Mr. Mann and Mr. Madden of Illinois, both of whom have urged the acceptance of the Ford offer. Only a short while ago the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] delivered a masterly and convincing address in favor of the Ford offer in which he clearly demonstrated that as a plain business proposition it should be accepted-a speech which no one has dared to attempt to answer. Neither of these gentleman came from agricultural constituencies. They came from Chicago, but they had the vision to see that this is a national and by no means a sectional question, and that it is one which vitally concerns not only the farmer but the consumers in the cities who desire greater production and cheaper food. You have rejected the advice of such able men in your party as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. McKenzie], the acting chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, which conducted an exhaustive investigation of this and other offers, and of the gentlemen from Michigan, Mr. Kelley and Mr. James, and others. These gentlemen had the statesmanship to rise above sectionalism, misrepresentation, and false propaganda, and any possible difference they may have with either the public or private views of Mr. Ford and to consider this question as one of broad, national You have preferred to follow the leadership of the importance. gentleman from Kansas, backed by the majority leader from Wyoming. But do not deceive yourselves. Do not imagine that the farmers are ignorant of what is going on; that they are not aware of this betrayal of their interest; that they do not know why they have not been given this relief. You need not cloak yourselves with any such idea for they will tear that cloak off of you when they have opportunity at the next election.

RELIEF MOST NEEDED BY THE FARMERS.

You have told the farmers that you were giving them relief in the extension of their credits. That is all very well, but I wish to call your attention to the fact that, while extension of credit is important, after all the farmers are more interested in the ways and means to avoid going in debt. They wish above all else for legislative and administrative action which will enable them to produce at less cost, something which has been denied them by the refusal for nearly two years to permit a vote on the proposition of Mr. Ford. They vastly prefer to avoid debt by increasing their production and by being afforded markets for the products of their labor. If I had the time I could show you a chart which shows that the expenditures of farmers for fertilizers in the last 10 years has, with the exception of three or four of the smaller States, increased all the way from 100 per cemt to nearly 1,500 per cent. The great agricultural State of Kansas, which is so badly misrepresented on this question by the gentleman from Kansas, stands second on the list. The expenditures of Kansas farmers for fertilizers in the last 10 years have increased 1,200 per cent. Do you not think the Kansan farmer knows something of what is going on here?

As proof of that fact the lower house of the Kansas Legislature a short while ago unanimously adopted a resolution asking Congress and asking the chairman of the Committee on Rules, who hails from Kansas, to permit the representatives of the people to have a vote upon the proposition of whether or not Mr. Ford's offer should be accepted. That is not the only legislature which has so acted. A number of legislatures throughout the country have urged Congress to at least permit a vote on this proposition. I hold in my hand a copy of a resolution adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Missouri, adopted unanimously in the house and with only one dissenting vote in the senate. That resolution is as follows:

only one dissenting vote in the senate. That resolution is as follows:

Whereas among the most important lessons of the World War is that any nation which is not prepared to supply its own nitrogen for explosives is unprepared for war and national delense; and
Whereas the preservation and increased fertility of the soil of the farms of our country is an economic necessity, as well as a national duty; and
Whereas the total cost at our ports of imported Chilean and Peruvian nitrates to the industries and to agriculture in our Nation since 1831 amounts approximately to the staggering sum of $1,000,000,000,000,nearly all of which has been paid since 1867; and
Whereas the fertilizer bill of the farmers of our country increased from 1910 to 1920 $211,517,259, or 184 per cent; and, as an example of States, the purchases of fertilizers by the farmers of Missouri in the same decade increased 487 per cent; and
Whereas several tenders were submitted the Federal Government for the lease and purchase of the Muscle Shoals project, all of which tenders were discarded by unaximous votes of the committees of Congress, except the one offered by Henry Ford, thus leaving his as the only alternative to governmental operation of this gigantic undertaking; and
Whereas Henry Pord's offer, given at the invitation of the Federal Government, for Muscle Shoals proposes and guarantees to keep nitrate plant No. 2 in a state of readiness for the war needs of the Nation and to produce nitrogen for agricultural purposes equal to about half of the nitrogen contained in the importations from Chile in normal years preceding and following the World War; and
Whereas the Ford tender, though made first on July 8, 1921, and finally submitted to the Congress of the United States more than seven months ago, still stands as the only proposal except that of governmental operation for the utilization of the Muscle Sheals project, with no action taken by either House of the Congress; Now, therefore, be it Resolved, That having full confidence in the fertili

As the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Almon] has suggested, the Legislature of the State of Nebraska passed similar resolutions, and a number of other State legislatures have done the The request and demand that Congress should at least vote upon this proposition is not confined to any one section of the country. It comes from every section of the country; not only the South, but the North, the East, the West. As a sample of some of the editorials appearing in every section of the country I read from an editorial in the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram dated February 12, 1922:

MUSCLE SHOALS, THE SAME YESTERDAY, TO-DAY, AND-

It is apparent that the situation with regard to Muscle Shoals will be the same when Congress adjourns as it was when Congress met. That is, all the talk and all the argument over the great plant has come to nothing so far as its completion or disposal is concerned. As long as there was not an offer made for it Congress was constantly insisting that something be done toward its disposal. Then when something was done and Mr. Ford came with his offer Congress stopped insisting that something be done and began insisting that nothing be done. The result was that the Ford offer was blocked, and now the status of Muscle Shoals is the same as it was a year ago.

Yet the United States Government will not complete the plant at Muscle Shoals. It is not advisable that it should. It is advisable that the plant should be completed and then operated as a private enterprise.

prise.

But the moment any plan is put forward looking to that end Congress takes attitude reminding of the fable of the dog in the manger, regards that offer with suspicion, apparently thinks the Government is to be done out of vast sums of money, and insists on continuation of do-nothing policy.

A good deal of water has gone over the dam at Muscle Shoals since Congress began to consider and to pick to pieces proposals to have it taken off the Government's hands. A good deal more water will go over the dam at Muscle Shoals before anything will be done toward accomplishment of the transfer to private enterprise if in the future the policy of the present Congress toward any proposal made is continued.

The offer of Mr. Ford, which, if accepted, would relieve in large measure the farmers of this staggering burden of expense by reducing the cost of fertilizer through competition with foreign nitrate interests and the Fertilizer Trust of this country, may be defeated in this Congress solely by the action of the majority leader and the chairman of the Committee on Rules, who have taken advantage of the rules of the House to prevent a vote; but I wish to repeat that this proposition will be accepted in the next Congress, as it would have been in this if a vote had been permitted.

INTEREST OF THE NATION DEMANDS RELIEF FOR THE AMERICAN FARMER. Mr. Chairman, we are passing through a dangerous period. The wisest statesmanship and the most unselfish patriotism is needed to guide our country along the road of happiness and prosperity. Congress can not afford to neglect the interests of agriculture. The prosperity of all classes of our citizenship is dependent primarily upon the farmer, for as he prospers so will the country prosper. Before the war 30 per cent of our population lived on the farm. Now only 24 per cent dwell on the farm. The effect of such a falling off of our farming population is manifest. It is certain to increase the cost of living, and the prosperity of the country is bound to suffer unless something is done to change this condition of affairs. Something must be done to attract people to the farm, and this can only be done by increasing the productivity of our soil, thus making farm life more profitable. We must not overlook the fact that the standard of living of the American farmer is higher than that of the farmers of other countries. Certainly no one would have it otherwise. We now produce a surplus of farm products for foreign markets. But if other countries, as some of them are now doing, make it possible for their farmers to get cheaper fertilizer, thus increasing the productivity of their soil, and our Government fails to do so, then the time will come when we will not only not produce enough for export but we will not even produce enough for domestic consumption. No greater blow can be struck at the foundation of our Nation's prosperity than to deny to the farmers the remedial legislation and relief which they seek and have the right to demand. [Applause.]
Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Langley].

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I am in hearty sympathy with the sentiments expressed by my friend from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] regarding the merits of the Muscle Shoals proposition, and I intend to vote for the Ford proposition if I ever get an opportunity to do so.

Unlike my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan], who spoke awhile ago, I am going to claim your attention for a few minutes on a subject which is not included in this bill, I regret to say, viz, an appropriation for public buildings throughout the country. Some of my colleagues have indicated they may desire to ask me a question or two, but I trust they will defer their questions until I have brought out two or three points I desire to cover, and then I shall be glad to yield, if my time will permit.

It has now been 10 years since we passed an omnibus public buildings bill, and I feel that the conditions in various parts of the country warrant me in saying that the enactment of another omnibus bill has already been much too long deferred. [Applause.] As most of you are aware, I have been an earnest advocate of the passage of such a bill during this Congress; but upon second thought we concluded that it would not be possible to secure its enactment into law now in view of existing conditions, and so we finally decided not to insist upon reporting such a bill this session since it would involve a large amount of unnecessary work and the collection of data, which in many instances would probably be more or less antiquated when the time arrives for passing a bill. I think this is the attitude of practically all the members of our committee. We do not feel that anything beneficial can be accomplished by butting a brick wall merely for the sake of butting. As gentlemen are aware, about $13,000,000, authorized by the act of 10 years ago, remain unexpended for the reason that the advance in the cost of labor and materials due to the World War made it impossible in more than 100 cases to get bids within the limits of the act. In addition to that, the postal business throughout the country has more than doubled in the last decade, and in many instances emergencies have arisen requiring the erection of public buildings for housing Government ac-tivities which were not and could not have been anticipated 10 years ago.

It is interesting to note in this connection the report of our committee four years ago on an omnibus bill which did not become a law because of the financial condition of the Treasury resulting from the World War:

[Report to accompany H. R. 15987.]

Committee four years ago on an ombus bill which did not become a law because of the financial condition of the Treasury resulting from the World War:

The last general public building bill passed by Congress was approved the property of t carried in the bill, $36.625,300 represents items which Congress must provide for or else repeal the law under which they were originally authorized, and in addition allow the business of the Government to continue to be inefficiently done and these buildings to go to ruin for the lack of needed repairs. As the amount last named is made up of matters which Congress is obligated to provide for under previous legislation, we submit that in all fatness that amount should not be continued to the continue that in all fatness that amount should not be continued to the continued of the total amount carried in the bill, $23,233,000 is carried for the purchase of new sites and the erection thereon of new buildings and $4,120,000 is carried for the purchase of new sites and the erection thereon of new buildings and $4,120,000 is carried for the purchase of new sites of the what is really chargeable to the bill, and these items are justified and new that it is addition to the amounts for the marine hospital, the quarantine station, and the armory, and we respectfully submit that this is what is really chargeable to the bill, and these items are justified and new forms of the continued of the continued of the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for a building at any place where the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for a building at any place where the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for a building at any place where the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for a building at any place where the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for a building at any place where the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for a building at the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for a building at the postal receipts were less than $6,000 per annum, nor have we provided for the postal per second with the

we are carrying in this bill a provision for the relief of certain contractors, but as a separate bill has already been reported to the House covering that subject, we think it only necessary to refer to the report which accompanies that separate bill.

The committee reports the bill with the recommendation that the same be passed without amendment.

Since this report was made the need for public buildings has grown steadily worse and with increasing rapidity.

Some time ago I made the statement that an immediate apsome time ago I matte the statement that all immediate appropriation of less than $100,000,000 would not be adequate to meet the most pressing needs of the Government. That statement was attacked not only by newspapers and magazines, but was extensively exploited in the late congressional campaign as another attempt to raid the Treasury with a pork barrel bill. There are some people in this country who manifestly think that a Congressman who votes for an appropriation of millions of dollars for the erection of monumental buildings in the great civic centers is a patriot, while those who insist that the smaller cities should likewise be provided for in accordance with their needs are merely pork-barrel advocates. In a recent issue of Collier's Magazine there appeared a two-page article attacking my suggestion for a $100,000,000 bill, and containing a number of statements that were wholly inaccurate and entirely unwarranted by the facts. The author of that article was one Byron R. Newton, a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. I presume some of you remember him. While he was in that subordinate position he seemed to think that the solvency of the United States Treasury rested upon his shoulders, and since his retirement he appears to look with amazement upon the fact that the Government at Washington still lives and that the Treasury Department is still solvent although he is no longer connected with it. I shall not attempt to answer that article except to say that that portion of it which refers to me ignores the explanation which I made in the House at the time the bill in question was under consideration. Our committee is tolerably familiar with the conditions in various sections of the country. I have personally collected figures showing the amount of annual rental now being paid by the Government for buildings, many of which are insanitary, nonfireproof, and wholly inadequate to meet the requirements. This annual rental amounts to approximately $21,000,000, between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000 of which is expended by the Post Office Department alone. At the prevailing rate of interest at which the Government could borrow money, at least $500,000,000 could be expended on the construction of needed public buildings and still a net saving could be made in the item of interest alone, to say nothing of the added advantage of having substantial, roomy, sanitary, and fireproof buildings for housing Government activities. I have here a letter addressed to me as chairman of the committee by the Postmaster General outlining the general situation, which he describes as acute and urgent. I can not place the situation before you as concisely and accurately as the Postmaster General does, and I shall include this letter as a part of my remarks.

Referring to a previous communication sent to the Congress on August 21 last, the Postmaster General says:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL, Washington, D. C., December 11, 1922.

Hon. John W. Langler,
Chairman Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds,
House of Representatives.

My Dear Mr. Langley: On August 21, 1922, I had the honor to send to your committee a communication concerning the ownership by the Government of such new postal buildings as must of necessity be erected from time to time to accommodate the rapidly expanding volume of Basing my recommendation wholly on principles of business economy, I cited the fact that the department is constantly compelled to secure additional postal buildings by contracting for leases of structures not in existence but to be erected by private capital. Although such leases are negotiated with the greatest care and through the best competition available, they are usually made on an investment basis of from 8 to 16 per cent.

in existence but to buildings by pointracting for leases of structures not are negotiated with the greatest care and through the best competition available, they are usually made on an investment basis of from 8 to 18 per cent.

This state of affairs arises from the fact that; generally speaking. Congress in the past has followed the policy of appropriating moneys for the leasing of postal buildings, but has not appropriated for the construction and ownership of such buildings as they become necessary. The Postal Service must be maintained. Mail is received in such volume as the public business requires. It must be housed, transmitted, and delivered in safety. The department can not decline to negotiate leases on new buildings. They must be had; otherwise valuable mail is exposed to the elements and ruined in transmission.

Under the law as it exists to-day the department is absolutely compelled to execute leases on the best terms it can get, whether they are reasonable or otherwise.

Entertaining the belief that Congress would change this policy as soon as it could come to a complete understanding of all facts, I have refrained from completing contracts for the erection of certain buildings, although their urgency is great.

It is the purpose of this letter to present those cases to your consideration which are just now particularly pressing and which will become exceedingly acute before buildings can be constructed.

It is also the purpose of this letter to explain to you more fully constantly expiring, presenting almost daily so thus in the constantly expiring, presenting almost daily so thus in the constantly expiring, presenting almost daily so thus in the particularly pressing cases as they occur by ownership, just as under the pressing cases as they occur by ownership, inst as under the pressing cases as they occur which the will be come exceedingly shall be adopted by Congress, the logical method, in my opinion, would be to take care of the pressing cases as they occur they will be come exceedingly and

NEW YORK CITY.

NEW YORK CITY.

The proposition at New York has been under investigation for more than a year and, as you no doubt will recall, is practically a duplication of the present central post office on Thirty-fourth Street. The requirement is for 800,000 square feet. The site is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad and is said to be available at $2,000,000. We do not have definite information as to the cost of the proposed structure, but it is generally estimated at around $6,000,000. The average rental for such a building by the lowest bidders is approximately $1,000,000 per year. While these bids contain various options for purchase the cost of the proposed structure is no legislation by which such purchase could be made effective. The department has approved of plans and specifications but has declined to enter into any contract for a lease of this proposed building until Congress shall have acted in the matter.

DETROIT, MICH.

Another proposition which demands immediate action is that of a parcel-post station at Detroit, Mich., to contain approximately 55,000 square feet of floor space on two or three floors. Negotiations for the construction of such a building through the lease method have been under way for several months and are now ready for decision. A lease can be obtained on the proposed building when erected for $52,000 per year. I am not satisfactorily informed as to the cost of such a building, but believe the entire expense, including the lot, would be from $300,000 to $500,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

In this city 150,000 square feet of floor space in a new building must be provided forthwith. This proposition is under investigation, and while the need is well known, I have not the details with sufficient ac-curacy to submit them to you herewith, but will do so in a later com-

DALLAS, TEX.

Here a new building must be provided as soon as possible containing $5,000 square feet of floor space on two or three floors. This case has been under careful investigation and negotiation for several months, and the best proposition for a lease now in sight is for a building to be constructed for the department and rented at $84,250 per year. My information is that such a building would cost in the vicinity of $700,000. It would, however, enable us to discontinue two smaller stations which we are leasing at $9,000 each.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The department is now considering what would be necessary to do here at the Flatbush Station when the lease expires on April 1 next. The old rental was $5,000 per year, but the premises are inadequate, and the proposition to take its place will cost about $20,000 per year.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

At this place a garage must be provided to accommodate the motor vehicle service. It must contain about 30,000 square feet of floor space. On a rental basis it will cost $30,000 per year for a building which we are informed can be erected for $175,000.

Let me remind you, in closing, that this list of cases is but the beginning. They are the ones which are at this moment on my desk pressing for decision. If the policy of constructing post-office buildings is to begin, it is apparent that we must discontinue to take care of the acute cases by leasing. There may be many other situations in the country as much in need of additional facilities as some of those in this list, and when our investigations have been sufficiently completed we will present them to you, together with the situations as they occur from time to time when leases expire.

Let me also call to your attention the fact that the business of the Post Office Department, doubling every 10 years, can never be placed on an efficient and stabilized basis until the erection of suitable buildings at suitable places is planned not only on an economic basis but from a scientific and service viewpoint.

Very truly yours,

HUBERT WORK, Postmaster General.

Since I received this letter from the Postmaster General I have had several conversations with that most capable official, in each of which he stressed the great urgency of immediate action by Congress. Recently he and the Secretary of the Treasury have addressed two different joint letters to the Speaker of the House, which letters have been referred to our committee. One is dated December 30, 1922, and the other February 8, 1923. I shall insert these here as a part of my remarks:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, December 30, 1922.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SIR: The attention of Congress is respectfully invited to the urgent need for larger Federal buildings for housing the service in many cities throughout the country. Provision has to be made not only for increase in Government business due to the normal growth in population but for new activities, the most important of which are the establishment of the parcel post, the development of the rural carrier system, the collection of direct taxes, the enforcement of prohibition, and the establishment of the Veterans' Bureau. The demand for office space by these activities has far exceeded the space available in many of the Federal buildings, in consequence of which much space has had to be rented in the large cities at a great annual cost to the Government.

has had to be rented in the large cities at a great annual cost to the Government.

The postal business has had an abnormal growth during the last 10 years. Parcel post, established in 1913, has expanded rapidly. Of the three to three and one-half billions packages handled annually, the average weight is 4 pounds each, or approximately 7.000,000 tons.

Each of these packages during its progress must be received in one building and distributed from another building, so that the aggregate space required is enormous. Other branches of the Postal Service have kept pace with the business progress of the country and the results are that the workrooms in many of the post offices have become so crowded that it is impossible to properly handle the vast volume of mall. With funds appropriated during the past four years for remodeling and enlarging public buildings, relief has been given in some places, generally by building frame mailing sheds in which to handle the parcel post and by constructing mezzanines, and in some cases making part of the second story available for postal business by installing lifts. In cases of extreme necessity resort has been had to utilizing basements, boiler rooms, and swing rooms for the handling of the postal business, which, of course, has proved very objectionable.

The health, comfort, and efficiency of more than 250,000 postal employees is dependent upon the physical conditions under which they work, so that one of the big problems confronting the Post Office Department at this time is the providing of sufficient working space. The Post Office Department at this time is the providing of sufficient working space. The Post Office Department believes that the minimum for efficient mail handling, including spaces taken up by cases, parcel-post packages, trucks, etc., is 100 square feet per employee. With a unit space of 60 square feet, the worknooms become so congested as to greatly retard the work and necessarily reduce the efficiency. Yet there are great numbers of buildings where the unit rate is below 60 square feet, running in some cases even below 40.

Next to the Post Office Department, the Internal Revenue Service has been the greatest sufferer on account of lack of space. Since 1913 there has been added to its activities the collection of direct taxes under the sixteenth amendment of the Constitution and the enforcement of prohibition under the eighteenth amendment. This has added so greatly to the personnel that in many buildings part of the internal-revenue business is transacted in public corridors, to the great detriment of efficiency and the health of the employees. Notwithstanding the maximum use of Federal buildings, this bureau alone is now paying $459,272.63 rent annually for commercial space.

The Veterans' Bureau, coming into existence with the Great War, has had to rent quarters for branch offices in nearly all the large cities where the Government owns buildings because it was found absolutely impossible to crowd any further activities into these buildings.

The following table gives a concrete idea of the extent to which the Government is now paying in rent throughout the country:

Total number of leases.

Rents paid as follows (approximate):

Rents paid as follows (approximate):	8, 368
	$11, 660, 056 3, 586, 301 158, 903 2, 212, 970 226, 063 828, 781 405, 795 1, 751, 324
Total	20, 830, 193

complete data ca Atlanta, Ga. Baltimore, Md. Boston, Mass. Brooklyn, N. Y. Clneinnati, Ohlo. Cleveland, Ohlo. Chicago, Ill. Dallas, Tex. Detroit, Mich. Even if it wer ubmitted.

Fort Worth, Tex.
Jacksonville, Fla.
Los Angeles. Calif.
Louisville, Ky.
Minneapolis, Minn.
New York, N. Y.
Newark, N. J.
Norfolk, Va.
Pittsburgh. Pa.
lent financially, to Philadelphia, Pa. Salt Lake City, Utab. San Francisco, Calif. Seattle, Wash. St. Louis, Mo. Scranton, Pa. Worcester, Mass.

Detroit, Mich.

Pittsburgh. Pa.

Even if it were prudent financially to relieve all this congestion in one year it would be impracticable from a construction standpoint to undertake so much at one time. It would therefore seem wise to map out a program covering a period of years, relief to be provided first in places where the congestion is greatest and where the Government is paying out large sums for rent of space in private buildings.

The foregoing is submitted with the understanding that nothing contained therein is intended to supplant the recommendations made by the Postmaster General in his letters of December 11 and 18, 1922, to the Joint Commission on Postal Service, copies herewith, relative to the Government ownership of buildings for the use of the Postal Service instead of securing them under lease as at present, but the recommendations made in those letters should stand and be considered independently of those contained herein.

Respectfully,

Hubert Work,

Postmaster General.

Hubert Work,
Postmaster General.
A. W. Mellon,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DECEMBER 18, 1922.

Hon. Charles E. Townsend, Chairman Joint Commission on Postal Service.

My Dear Senator Townsend: On the 11th instant I addressed you a communication in regard to the department's policy with reference to the Government ownership of buildings to be occupied by post offices and post-office stations rather than securing them through the leasing system, as is generally done at present, and furnished therein a list of post offices and stations which, in my opinion, deserve immediate attention.

On the same date you wrote me regarding this matter and in the second paragraph of your letter requested this department to advise you if there are any other cities where it is thought that there is an emergency and which should be included in your report to Congress for new offices.

Availing myself of that invitation I am submitting herealth a sur-

Availing myself of that invitation, I am submitting herewith a sup-plementary list as follows:

NEW YORK CITY, STATION J.

This is a substation on which the lease expired October 1, 1922. The quarters are outgrown. For the next 10 years we shall need fully 3,000 square feet additional. The landlord will renew the lease and add the additional 3,000 feet for a term of 10 years for $54,000 for the first year and $34,000 for each of the succeeding 9 years. We have been paying $16,300 a year for 18,630 square feet.

There will always need to be a station of some sort in this immediate vicinity, and it is believed that it would be the best policy for the Government to build what it needs and own it.

NEW YORK CITY, STATION G.

The lease on the quarters occupied by this station expired July 1, 1922, but it has since been extended for a period of one year from that date. To properly maintain the service at this point during the next 10 years we shall need at least 30,000 square feet of floor space. A proposition has been secured to lease 31,032 square feet, at $59,500 a year. Under the present extension we are paying $30,000 a year for 11.574 square feet.

The needs of the Postal Service at New York will always require the provision of station facilities in this neighborhood, and it is my opinion that it would be advantageous to the Government to erect a building for the housing thereof.

DETROIT, MICH., NORTH END STATION.

The lease on the quarters occupied by this station expired October 1, 1922. We have obtained a proposal to lease 9,706 square feet for 10 years, at an annual rental of $15.875. The rental under the former contract was made at the rate of $3,500 a year for 5,520 square feet. This station is the largest in Detroit and serves a population of 201,232 people. It is imperative that it be continued in operation, and it is believed that it would be a wise step to provide a Government-owned building, containing between 15,000 and 20,000 square feet above the basement, for its use.

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) STATIONS A AND W

The lease on Station W, which is at the rate of $6,000 a year, will expire May 1, 1923, and that on Station A, at $7,200 a year, will expire June 1, 1923. Proposals have been received for new quarters to be occupied on the dates stated; for Station A, 10,764 square feet at $16,500, and for Station W, 15,024 square feet at $27,500, or a total for the two stations of 25,788 square feet at $44,000. Inasmuch as these stations serve territory adjoining each other, it is believed to be possible to consolidated them in one station at a central point. That, however, can only be determined after a careful investigation, which will be undertaken immediately after the holiday season. If the consolidation of the stations is found feasible, it is believed that it would be in the interest of economy and good service for the Government to erect a building, containing not less than 35,000 square feet of floor space above the basement, for the use of the station established as a result thereof.

Sincerely yours,

Hubbert Work.

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL, Washington, D. C., December 11, 1922.

JOINT COMMISSION ON POSTAL SERVICE,

Washington, D. C.

My Dear Sirs: On August 21, 1922, I had the honor to send to your commission a communication concerning the ownership by the Government of such new postal buildings as must of necessity be erected from time to time to accommodate the rapidly expanding valuum of mail erected from t

Government of such new postal buildings as must of necessity be erected from time to time to accommodate the rapidly expanding volume of mail.

Basing my recommendation wholly on principles of business economy, I cited the fact that the department is constantly compelled to secure additional postal buildings by contracting for leases of structures not in existence but to be erected by private capital. Although such leases are negotiated with the greatest care and through the best competition available, they are usually made on an investment basis of from 8 to 15 per cent.

This state of affairs arises from the fact that, generally speaking, Congress, in the past, has followed the policy of appropriating moneys for the leasing of postal buildings, but has not appropriated for the construction and ownership of such buildings as they become necessary.

The Postal Service must be maintained. Mail is received in such volume as the public business requires. It must be housed, transmitted, and delivered in safety. The department can not decline to negotiate leases on new buildings. They must be had, otherwise valuable mail is exposed to the elements and ruined in transmission.

Under the law as it exists to-day the department is absolutely compelled to execute leases on the best terms it can get, whether they are reasonable or otherwise.

Entertaining the belief that Congress would change this policy as soon as it could come to a complete understanding of all facts, I have refrained from completing contracts for the erection of certain buildings, although their urgency is great.

It is the purpose of this letter to present those cases to your consideration which are just now particularly pressing and which will become exceedingly acute before buildings can be constructed.

It is also the purpose of this letter to explain to you more fully the entire leasing situation, showing how leases now in existence are constantly expiring, presenting almost daily problems as to whether they shall be renewed or not. But if the pol aggregate annual rental for leased quarters is about $12,000,000. Unless a building policy is adopted, this will increase by large amounts from year to year.

These leases are expiring almost daily, and whenever one expires it presents a new problem of what shall be done in a given locality. Renewals are made at increases of from two to four times the old rate, although careful study is made in each case and every possible effort made to secure the best terms. The popular objection to changing the location of post offices, particularly in the smaller cities and towns, militates strongly against a good trade for a lease.

The greatest actual and imperative demand for new buildings comes from the larger cities and from rapidly growing cities, where parcelpost stations, substations, and garages must constantly be added. Another class of cities where the building problem is acute are those having a single Government-owned building which is no longer adequate for the needs of the office and where men are obliged to work in insanitary cellars or basements.

The department has for more than a year been investigating this problem of buildings and has been making a careful survey to determine the adequacy of space in postal buildings. Since it requires from one to two years to construct buildings, it is necessary to anticipate to that extent the needs of each case.

While we have reliable information from more than 100 post offices that the space for the postal business is wholly inadequate and the conditions unsuitable, and while these cases are being more carefully studied to determine which are the most pressing. I desire for the moment to present for your information certain cases which have been delayed awaiting your policy, where the demand for the same is extremely acute but where we still think it would be advisable to decline to lease and to begin a program of Government ownership.

NEW YORK CITY.

NEW YORK CITY.

The proposition in the city of New York has been before your committee for more than a year and concerning which you have had the details. This, as you will recall, is practically a duplication of the present central post office on Thirty-fourth Street. The requirement is for 800,000 square feet. The site is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad and is said to be available at $2,000,000. We do not have definite information as to the cost of the proposed structure, but it is generally estimated at around $6,000,000. The average rental for such a building by the lowest bidders is approximately $1,000,000 per year. While these bids contain various options for purchase, there is no legislation by which such purchase could be made effective. The department has approved of plans and specifications but has declined to enter into any contract for a lease of this proposed building until Congress shall have acted in the matter.

DETROIT. MICH.

Another proposition which demands immediate action is that of a parcel-post station at Detroit, Mich., to contain approximately 55,000 square feet of floor space on two or three floors. Negotiations for the construction of such a building through the lease method have been under way for several months and are now ready for decision. A lease can be obtained on the proposed building when erected for $52,000 per year. I am not satisfactorily informed as to the cost of such a building, but believe the entire expense, including the lot, would be from $300,000 to $500,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

In this city 150,000 square feet of floor space in a new building must be provided forthwith. This proposition is under investigation, and while the need is well known, I have not the details with sufficient accuracy to submit them to you herewith, but will do so in a later communication.

DALLAS, TEX.

Here a new building must be provided as soon as possible containing $5,000 square feet of floor space on two or three floors. This case has been under careful investigation and negotiation for several months, and the best proposition for a lease now in sight is for a building to be constructed for the department and rented at $84,250 per year. My information is that such a building would cost in the vicinity of $700,000. It would, however, enable us to discontinue two smaller stations, which we are leasing at $9,900 each.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The department is now considering what would be necessary to do here at the Flatbush Station when the lease expires on April 1 next. The old rental was $5,000 per year, but the premises are inadequate, and the proposition to take its place will cost about $20,000 per year.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

At this place a garage must be provided to accommodate the motorvehicle service. It must contain about 30,000 square feet of floor space. On a rental basis it will cost $30,000 per year for a building which we are informed can be erected for $175,000.

Let me remind you in closing that this list of cases is but the beginning. They are the ones which are at this moment on my desk pressing for decision. If the policy of constructing post-office buildings is to begin it is apparent that we must discontinue to take care of the acute cases by leasing. There may be many other situations in the country as much in need of additional facilities as some of those in this list, and when our investigations have been sufficiently completed we will present them to you, together with the situations as they occur from time to time when leases expire.

Let me also call to your attention the fact that the business of the Post Office Department, doubling every 10 years, can never be placed on an efficient and stabilized basis until the erection of suitable buildings at suitable places is planned not only on an economic basis but from a scientific and service viewpoint.

Very truly yours,

Hubert Work, Postmaster General.

HUBERT WORK, Postmaster General.

LIST OF 140 CITIES WHERE INVESTIGATION SHOWS THAT THE FLOOR SPACE IN THE FEDERAL BUILDING IS INADEQUATE.

The proposed relief measures and estimated cost are given in each se. Where legislation is pending it is noted by the words "Bill miding". case. Wh pending." Alabama:

$85,000

500, 000

Arizona: Phoenix, extension and remodeling	50, 000	Indiana—Continued. Terre Haute (bill pending)— Additional land New building on present site	00 00 - $385, 000
California: Sacramento— New site Building for post office 67	5, 000 5, 000	Vincennes— Additional land 20, 96 Extension and remodeling 130, 00	0 0 - 150,000
Stockton (bill pending)— Additional land Extension and remodeling 15	2,000,000	Iowa: Iowa City— Additional land————————————————————————————————————	0 111 000
Colorado: Boulder (bill pending)— Additional land 1 Extension and remodeling 7	3, 000 5, 000 88, 000	Marshalltown— 10,00 Extension and remodeling—— 125,00	0 0 - 185,000
Connecticut: Bridgeport (bill pending)— New site	0, 000 0, 000	Mason City (bill pending)— New site————————————————————————————————————	0 0 - 225, 000
Hartford (bill pending)— New site————————————————————————————————————	0, 000 0, 000 2, 000 2, 000, 000	Kansas: Hutchinson— Additional land $55,00 Extension and remodeling 145,00	0
New Britain— Additional land Extension and remodeling 177	0,000	Lawrence, extension and remodeling Pittsburg, extension and remodeling Kentucky: Newport	- 200, 000 - 115, 000 - 115, 000
New London— Additional land 2: Extension and remodeling post office 22:		Additional land 30, 90 Extension and remodeling 85, 00 Louisiana: Shreveport (bill pending), extension	- 115,000
Torrington— New site— Post-office building 220	250, 000 0, 000 0, 000	and remodeling Maine: Houlton (bill pending)— Additional land 5,00 Extension and remodeling 55,00	250,000
Extension and remodeling post-office	250, 000 0, 000 25,000	Lewiston, extension and remodeling Portland (bill pending) New site Post-office building 750, 00	115, 000
District of Columbia: Georgetown station— Additional land————————————————————————————————————	625, 000 5, 000 0, 000	Maryland: Cumberland (bill pending)— Additional land Extension and remodeling 245, 90	- 1,450,000 0
Georgia: Savannah (bill pending) New site. 17: Post-office and office building 32:	5, 000 5, 000 5, 000 5, 000	Massachusetts: Brockton Additional land New building on enlarged site 325, 00	- 800, 000 0
Illinois :	5, 000 5, 000	Fitchburg, extension and remodeling Gloucester (bill pending) New site Building 275,00	- 350, 000 - 125, 000
Belleville— 11 Additional land 11 Extension and remodeling 11	5, 000 0, 000 125, 000	Haverhill (bill pending)— 100, 00	- 835, 0 00
New post-office building 300	5, 000 0, 000 875, 000	Lawrence, extension and remodeling Lynn— New site— 100,00	175,000
Extension and remodeling post-office	0, 000 5, 000	Building	- 500, 000 0
Decatur— Additional land	135, 000 5, 000 	Pittsfield— 25, 00 Extension and remodeling 175, 00	- 700, 000 0
Extension and remodeling 70	5, 000	Taunton, extension and remodeling Michigan: Ann Arbor, extension and remodeling Battle Creek, extension and remodeling	200, 000
Galesburg (bill pending)— Additional land	5, 000 0, 000 135, 000	Jackson— New site 75, 00 Building 375, 00	9
Jacksonville, extension post-office building Kewanee, extension post-office building Oak Park (bill pending) Additional land Demolition of present structure and except	75, 000 65, 000	Kalamazoo (bill pending), extension and remodeling	450, 000 200, 000 145, 000 250, 000
Demolition of present structure and con- struction of new post-office building 276 Ottawa, extension post-office building Pekin, extension post-office building	300, 000 50, 000	Duluth, post-office bullding on site acquired Fergus Falls, extension and remodeling Mississippl: Hattiesburg (bill pending) Additional land Extension and remodeling 165, 00	100,000
Rockford (bill pending) Additional land or new site 100 New post office and office building 400 Streator, extension and remodeling post-office building 100	0, 000 0, 000 500, 000	Missouri:	100,000
Indiana: Fort Wayne (bill pending) New site	0, 000	Sedalia (bill pending)— New site	290 000
Hammond (bill pending), extension and remodeling	1,000,000 200,000 95,000	Montana: Butte, extension and remodeling Nebraska: Norfolk, extension and remodeling Nevada: Reno (bill pending), extension and remodeling New Hampshire: Nashua, extension and remodeling New Jersey:	_ 60,000
Muncle, extension and remodeling South Bend (bill pending) New site Building 425	675, 000	Atlantic City (bill pending)— Additional land Extension and remodeling 350, 00	525, 000

The state of the s
w Jersey—Continued.	Pennsylvania—Continued, Lebanon—
Additional land $20,000 Extension and remodellug 355,000	75,000 Additional land $26,000 124,000 51
	75, 000 McKeeppart and remodeling 124, 000 $10
Perth Amboy-	50,000 McKeesport, extension and remodeling 12 New Castle 12
	Additional land 100,000 Extension and remodeling 250,000
Trenton. Will report later.	Pottsville (bill pending) -
Albany— Additional land————————————————————————————————————	New site
2,00	no one Washington-
Austerdam (bill pending)— Additional land	Extension and remodeling 18,000 130,900 Williamsport (bill pending), extension and remodeling20
Binghamton— 25, 000 Additional land— 25, 000 Post-office building 475, 000	Wilkesbarre (bill pending) — 30,000 Additional land — 30,000 Extension and remodeling 250,000
- 00	85, 000 Rhada Teland : Pawtucket (bill panding)
Gloversville, extension and remodeling 1:	25, 000 New site 100, 000 Building 400, 000
Additional land 25, 000 Extension and remodeling 150, 000	South Carolina: Spartanburg (bill pending), ex-
Nawhurgh_	75,000 tension and remodeling 12
New site 75,000 Building 225,000	Aberdeen, additional land, extension and re- modeling 36
Niagara Falls (bill pending)-	90, 900 Watertown— Additional land 20, 900
Additional land 12,000 Extension and remodeling 150,000	Extension and remodeling 100,000
	S2,000 Texas: Houston, extension and remodeling
Plattsburg (bill pending), extension and rebuilding 1	40, 000 Newport News
Peekskill, new building on present site	Extension and remodeling 180, 000
Schenectady—	Portsmouth—
Additional land $30,000 Extension and remodeling 270,000	Additional land 25,000 Extension and remodeling 175,000
rth Carolina :	00, 000 Roanoke (bill pending) — 20
Asheville (bill pending)—	New site or additional land 275, 000 New post-office building, or remodeling
Building 560, 000	and extending present building 325,000
	Alexandria (bill pending)—
Greensboro (bill pending)— 100,000	Building 225, 000
rth Dakota: Fargo, building on acquired site 60	00, 000 Petersburg— 50, 000 lo: Akron, additional land to site acquired and new building; increase authorization by 77	73,000 West Virginia: Will submit report later
New site	73, 000 West Virginia:
60	00, 000 New site 150, 000 Bullding 400, 000
Hamilton— Additional land————————————————————————————————————	Wisconsin:
Extension 225, 000	Appleton (bill pending)— Additional land— Extension and remodeling————————————————————————————————————
Lima-	Beloit—
Building 325, 000	Additional land 14,000 Extension and remodeling 135,000
Marion— Additional land 25,000	Janesville, extension and remodeling 12
Extension and remodeling 150, 000	Kenosha (bill pending)— New site————————————————————————————————————
Springfield—	And the second s
Additional land 100,000 New building on enlarged site 400,000	Oshkosh (bill pending) — 50,000 Oo,000 New building on enlarged or new site_ 200,000
Zanesville— 56	00,000 New building on enlarged or new site 300,000 Manitowoc— 35
Extension and remodeling 185, 000	00, 000 Additional land
egon: Astoria, new building on present site 30
Eugene, extension and remodeling 15	00,000 Racine (bill pending), extension and remodeling 15 20,000 Sheboygan (bill pending), extension and remodeling 10 Stevens Point, extension and remodeling 10 Wausau (bill pending), extension and remodeling 10
nasylvania: Allentown— Additional iand 50,000	Wyoming: Casper—
Extension and remodeling 250,000	Bullding 275, 000
Chester—	35
Additional land or new site 125, 000 New building 375, 000	TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Washington, February 8,
Erie—	The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
New site 100, 000 Ruilding for post office or extension and	Sin: Reference is made to department letter of December 30, remodeling of present building with nurchase of additional land for same	(H. Doc. 523), submitting for your consideration a number of throughout the country where extreme congestion in Federal ings exists. Further investigation has been made in some of the mentioned in the list of 25 for which no estimates were included the previous letter, and the departments are now able to amount 500, 000	mentioned in the list of 25 for which no estimates were included the previous letter, and the departments are now able to the omitted information. 25,000 About $2,500,000 is paid annually for rent in the cities of attached list for activities that could be housed in Govern modeling owned buildings. Of this amount over one-half is expended by the Post Office Department for space other than substations.

Because of the failure of the Government to keep pace with its building needs in the larger cities, the Post Office Department has been forced in a number of instances to enter into agreements for leased quarters in buildings to be specially constructed for the purpose. The rent paid in such cases is frequently at a rate to absorb the original costs during the term of the lease, leaving the Government at the expiration of the leases with no equity in the buildings. Furthermore, the buildings so leased by the Post Office Department naturally do not provide space for other activities, its appropriations not being available for providing such additional accommodations. Space for this purpose, however, could be provided at a comparatively small increase in cost in connection with buildings, or extensions to buildings, constructed by the Government.

In some of the cities mentioned in the list the rent is not an item of great expense at this time, but the congestion in the Federal buildings is bad and is increasing at a rate which will result in a few years in the rental of space unless the Government provides additional housing for the service.

As previously stated, it would seem wise to map out a program covering a period of years whereby relief would be provided first in places where the congestion is greatest and where large sums are being paid for rented space in privately owned by the Government, making of surveys, preparation of plans, etc., will require considerable time; therefore it would not be necessary to appropriate a large initial amount to commence the work of relief if the authorizations should be made.

In the list transmitted herewith there appear the following places not included in the previous list: Alexandria, La.; St. Paul, Minn.; Springfield, Mass.

Respectfully,

· Hubert Work,
Postmaster General.
A. W. Mellon,
Secretary of the Treasury.

2,000,000

4,000,000

2, 250, 000

$900,000

650, 000

1, 150, 000

1, 750, 000

$400,000

List of 19 cities where the Government-owned buildings are inadequate to house the Federal service and suggested relief measures, with estimated cost.

$6,000,000 1,500,000 3, 000, 000 of cost of.

Amounts previously authorized for acquisition of site in acts of May 30, 1908, and March 4, 1911, hereby made available toward total limit of cost stated herein.

(b) Alteration and renovation of post office and courthouse, including mechanical equipment and mail-handling apparatus. 10, 000, 000

750,000

Detroit, Mich.:

(a) Demolition of the customhouse, etc., and construction of Federal office building on the site.....

(b) Acquisition of site and construction of a postal 2, 500, 000 Los Angeles, Calif.: Acquisition of site and construction of posts office and office building.

Louisville, Ky.: Acquisition of site and construction of a postal station Minneapolis, Minn.: Extension and remodeling of the postoffice building for post office, courthouse, and office purposes 750,000 3, 000, 000 560,000 office building for pest office, courthouse, and office purposes

Newerk, N. J.: Amendment of previous legislation so as to authorize acquisition of site and erection thereon of building for post office, courthouse, and other Government offices, at a limit of cost of.

Upon completion of said building the present building and site to be sold at such time and upon such terms as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem to be to the best interests of the United States.
Pittsburgh, Pa.: Construction of post office and office building on site authorized.
Salt Lake City, Utah: Acquisition of site and construction of an annex or extension to the post office and courthouse, including remodeling and renovation.
San Francisco, Calif.:

(a) Sale of subtreasury; acquisition of a site and construction of a Federal office building.

(b) Acquisition of a site and construction of a postal station.

2,000,000 1, 350, 000

3, 250, 000

(b) Acquisition of a site and construction of a postal station

Seattle, Wash.:

(a) Acquisition of a site and construction of a postal station and office building

And that the $300,000 authorized by act of March 4, 1913, and subsequently appropriated be made available for the project.

(b) Extension and remodeling of the courthouse, customhouse, and post-office building.

Scranton, Pa.: Acquisition of a site, with surface rights only, if necessary, and construction of post office and office building, and sale of present post-office site and building. Springfield, Mass.: Acquisition of site and construction of post office and office building.

Worcester, Mass.: Acquisition of site and construction of a postal station.

The following places are additional to these included in the 650,000 The following places are additional to those included in the list of 25:

Alexandria, La.: Demelition of present building and con-struction of building upon the site thereof for post office, United States courts, and other Government offices. Amount previously authorized by act of March 4, 1913, for extension, etc., to be made available toward total limit of cost.

Cincinnati, Ohio: Acquisition of site and construction of postal station.

St. Paul, Minn: Acquisition of site and construction of postal station. $1, 150, 000

Attached to the first letter is a list of 140 cities which the department had up to that time inspected, in which it is stated that the floor space in the Federal buildings at these points is wholly inadequate, and the total expenditure estimated to meet these cases alone is $45,343,000, which, added to the amount estimated in their second letter covering 19 cities, makes a grand total of nearly $90,000,000; and this, they state, is only a partial list of places where new public buildings and additions are needed, and does not cover a single case that has not a Government building of some sort. Among other cities included in this list, they took a shot at Kentucky, but the bullet ricocheted and glanced only a suburb of Cincinnati. [Laughter.]

Of course, Congress needs all this information which the Post Office and Treasury Departments are furnishing us, and we could not intelligently frame an omnibus bill without such information, but I do not think that we should act on these propositions until a general public-buildings program for the entire country is determined upon and included in one bill. It has been suggested to me from high sources that good business principles require us to have the money in sight to pay for the work before we begin the erection of additional public buildings. I do not concur in that proposition, because most of the business of the country now is conducted upon a credit basis.

I do not refer to any public official in particular, legislative or executive, when I say that it is manifestly the purpose, in certain quarters at least, to take care of the great civic centers where the business of the Government is necessarily enormous and conditions more congested, and after that is done they will, to express it in common parlance, tell the balance of us to go to the devil. In the documents to which I have referred it is set forth that by reason of the inaction of Congress in the construction of public buildings, it has become necessary enter into contracts with private persons to construct suitable buildings upon a rental basis; and as the Postmaster General has correctly stated, this is a most undesirable method, not only because of the excessive rentals which it is frequently necessary to pay, but because in most instances the buildings at the expiration of the lease would revert to the owners, so that the Government would be left in a worse situation than it is now. I think also that this idea of side-stepping Members of Congress and making contracts with private individuals to build colossal buildings in big cities and leaving the small cities out is wrong in principle and certainly discourteous to the legislative branch of the Government, and if I can do anything to stop the practice it shall not continue. [Applause.]

It has been correctly suggested that this information is being furnished for the guidance of Congress, which is a co-ordinate branch of the Government and can do as it pleases. I heartily assent to that, but I wish to add that so long as I have any say in the matter I shall do what I can to prevent Congress from becoming a subordinate branch of the Govern-ment in this particular. [Applause.]

I note in the morning papers that the Joint Postal Commission has submitted, or is going to submit, a recommendation that a public building program be adopted by Congress which will involve the expenditure of $20,000,000 a year for some years to come, relief being first given to the large cities, where there is the greatest congestion.

In the first place, I wish to say that this suggestion is utterly absurd. It is in direct conflict with the views of the Postmaster General, expressed to me both verbally and in writing, and also in conflict with the recommendations contained in the two joint letters from the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Treasury, which urge immediate action in a number of cases which they cite and which of themselves involve an expenditure of $90,000,000, although it is conceded by these two officials that there are still other cases equally emergent that they are proceeding to investigate and will later submit an additional list to Congress. Moreover, the expenditure of $20,000,000 a year will not be equal to the annual rental which we are now paying, so that such a program would not relieve us of this burdensome and excessive rental for a good many years to come. I do not recall how this Joint Postal Commission was created, nor am I acquainted with its personnel; but from what I have seen and read of its attempts to function, it is my opinion that it is just about as useful to the Federal Government as the appendix is to the human body; and I suggest that a speedy surgical operation is advisable to separate it from our Federal machinery before suppuration sets in. [Laughter and applause.]

We shall, of course, be compelled to wait until the next session of Congress before any relief can be given in the way of authorizations and appropriations to relieve this situation which is destined to become little short of a public scandal unless something is speedily done. My own opinion about it is that we should immediately upon the convening of the next Congress pass an omnibus public buildings bill providing for a general building program, and that this bill should be so phrased that the localities that have not a public building but are in need of one shall not be ignored until certain favored localities are taken care of, so that we may have, as far as it is possible economically to do, all our Government activities ultimately housed in Government-owned buildings.

I think this building program should involve a standardization of public buildings so that one set of plans and specifications may be utilized for the construction of all buildings of similar size and to meet similar public necessities. This of itself would greatly expedite the carrying out of the sort of program I have in mind. From what information I have been able to gather, I am also of the opinion that this program could be further expedited by throwing antiquated plans and specifications into the discard and adopting uniform and up-to-date methods.

The Postmaster General tells me that in numerous instances he is losing 40 per cent of the efficiency of the force by reason of the crowded conditions, to say nothing of the danger to the health of the employees as a result of their insanitary sur-roundings. I see in the last estimate submitted by the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Treasury, which totals the sum of $44,260,000, that two, three, and four millions of dollars are estimated for certain cities, including Newark, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Los Angeles, and $6,000,000 for Boston, and the princely sum of $10,000,000 for Chicago. Those of us who do not live in these great civic centers are entirely willing to give them whatever the needs of the situation demand, but only upon condition that they help us take care of our own sections of the country at the same time. I do not mean that every little village should be provided for, but I have in mind now the places where the business of the Government is such that it would be a matter of economy in the end to construct Government-owned buildings instead of renting them.

I am willing to concede that millions are needed in some localities where thousands would suffice in others, but I insist that the smaller places where governmental activities are not provided for with a Government-owned building, need relief just the same as Boston needs six millions and Chicago needs ten

I know of many situations that have been brought to the attention of our committee where even $25,000 or $30,000 would afford ample accommodations. I am not an advocate of the construction of colossal or monumental buildings. I mean, rather, the construction of substantial, fireproof buildings of the factory type, such as commercial interests are constructing to-day. The difficulty is to determine where to draw the line. I can give you Ten years ago two or three instances to illustrate what I mean. provision was made for the construction of a building at Jasper, Wyo., a town of 1,700 inhabitants, and the Senator who secured it was subjected to much criticism, but he knew it was a rapidly growing town and that a building would be indispensable to meet the situation by the time it could be erected. To-day it has a population of 20,000 and the business of the Government is such that that building, constructed after much delay, is inadequate to meet the requirements. In my own district, to give you another illustration, in the last omnibus bill which passed the House but was not taken up in the Senate because of the World War, I had included the city of Hazard, which, according to an antiquated census, had a population of less than 600, and Hazard was made more or less a town of national reputation because of the criticism heaped upon me for that action. the Hazard post office supplies at least 25,000 people living in and around the city, and it is fast becoming one of the industrial centers of our State. The same is true of Pikeville, my home city, and of Paintsville, and I might also mention Jenkins, in my district, the site of which was covered with timber when I was first elected to Congress.

To-day it is the center of a great coal field and has a population of 8,000 or 8,000, a second-class post office, one of the largest artificial lakes in the world, and all sorts of up-to-date facilities too numerous to mention; and yet, as a result of the persistent insistence upon delay in reporting an omnibus bill over our protest, the facilities for the transaction of Government business are wholly inadequate in each instance; and although I have been a member of this committee for 10 years and chairman of it for four years, it has not been possible thus far to get a single public building erected in my district. You may, therefore, very well understand why I feel as I do on this subject.

I could give scores of cases that have been brought to the attention of our committee, most of which are not included in the lists submitted by the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Treasury, but which are nevertheless equally emergent, and in which the Representatives from the districts where these are located have repeatedly and persistently appealed to our committee to report legislation to relieve the situations, which has not been done because of existing conditions and the operation of influences against the reporting of any public-building legislation during the Sixty-seventh Congress.

Take, for example, the case of Oakland, Calif., where the conditions surrounding the transaction of the postal business are simply deplorable. A few other cities in California are in the same condition, and one can readily understand the situation in that State when I tell you that in a number of places the population has doubled in the last 10 years.

I might mention many other cities throughout the country where the conditions are equally deplorable, such as Steubenville and Circleville, Ohio; Sheboygan, Kenosha, and Racine, Wis.; Asheville, N.C.; Chandler, Okla.; also at Houston, Tex., where the parcel post is handled on the sidewalk and in the street, and I have a photograph on file for the committee showing this. Facilities are wholly inadequate in cities like Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Boston, Lawrence, and Peabody, and even in Chicago. I am reminded also of the city of Syracuse, N. Y., whose able and industrious Congressman has repeatedly urged the relief which is needed there. The first step toward meeting this situation there was in 1906, but outside of the acquisition of a site and the razing of buildings thereon and the partial appropriation contained in the act of March 4, 1913, nothing has been done and an entire block in the heart of the city is inclosed by an unsightly board fence. But I could go on almost indefinitely citing these cases where the facilities are so inadequate for the transaction of the public business that it is discreditable to a great Nation like ours

To repeat myself somewhat, we ought not to have unnecessarily ornate buildings; they ought to be in keeping with the architecture of the surrounding buildings in the city in which they are constructed. I think also that we should have a standardization of all buildings, so that, instead of drawing the plans and specifications for each, there should be a general type of buildings for cities of a certain size and with a similar volume of public business. I think this would greatly expedite this construction work, which is most desirable and indeed of immediate and pressing importance.

There is another matter that I wish to mention briefly, and that is: When we do enact an omnibus bill, and we must do it at the next session of Congress if we wish to avoid the just indignation of the people in those localities throughout the country to which I have referred, we should so legislate as to provide adequate facilities for the prompt erection of these buildings in order that, when a Member of Congress secures an authorization for a building, he has a reasonable assurance of seeing the building completed and occupied while he is yet living. [Applause,]

Mr. MADDEN, Mr. Chairman. I yield 18 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Tinkham].

Mr. Tinkham. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TINKHAM. Mr. Chairman, criminal charges of a very serious nature are about to be presented to a New York grand jury against one William H. Anderson, who is a member of the national legislative committee, national executive committee, national board of directors, and is New York State superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America. All of the State officers of the New York Anti-Saloon League are being examined to-day in Albany for violations of the New York corrupt practices act.

In view of these facts and the added fact that this organization has dominated and controlled the Congresses of the United States for nearly 10 years and has attempted to dictate appointments to the Federal judiciary and controls completely the present administration, the following correspondence from an unimpeachable source should be interesting both to the House of Representatives and the country. It is between William Dudley Foulke, vice president of the National Civil Service Reform League, and S. E. Nicholson, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League of America:

DECEMBER 22, 1922.

S. E. NICHOLSON, Secretary Anti-Saloon League, Washington, D. C.

S. E. NICHOLSON,

Secretary Anti-Saloon League, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: In yours of December 18 you say "When the Volstead law passed neither the Anti-Saloon League nor any other agency could have gotten into that law a civil-service provision." It was not necessary to get into that law any such provision. The civil service law itself would have taken care of that, but in the bill you supported there was put in a provision that the places should be excepted from the civil service law. For putting that in your league can not shirk the responsibility. It was well recognized you were behind that law and doing your utmost to secure its passage with that provision.

You add that Congressmen took the view that civil-service requirements would have eliminated some old internal-revenue men who would make the best enforcement officers because of their experience; that most of your Anti-Saloon League people did not agree with this, but it would have been useless to have opposed it. This is quite different from what Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler told us in his reply to my address at the civil-service meeting in Washington, for he said that the objection to including these places in the civil service was because in that case only men with two years previous experience in Investigating crime could be admitted and that many of these men were regarded by the league as not suitable. You say it was because experienced men would be excluded, and he said it was because such experience was improperly required. Which is it? The fact is that neither of these statements is true. Mr. Wheeler's was not correct because an either the Civil Service Commission nor any authorized body had made any rule requiring two years' qualification, or anything of the kind, and your statement can hardly be correct because experienced internal-revenue officers, if they could show their qualifications under civil-service rules, would be appointed. The plain fact is that the Congressmen wanted the plunder and you let them have ft.

You say that it would have

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts yield?

Mr. TINKHAM. I can not yield.
Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order, Mr. Chairman, that it is improper in debate for a Member of Congress to accuse his own party of buying officials who are employed to perform their duties with patronage positions. That is the substance of the gentleman's statement, and it casts a reflection upon his entire party.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is overruled, and the gentleman from Massachusetts will proceed.

Mr. TINKHAM (continuing):

Mr. TINKHAM (continuing):

But suppose that your excuse was well founded and that you had to agree without remonstrance to the wicked clause in order to obtain the larger good; in other words, that you believed in the principle that the end justifies the means. Suppose that were true and the bill were passed in that way, what then? You could at least do your utmost to have this iniquitous provision removed and appointments placed under civil-service rules as soon as possible. Many years have passed since that time. What have you done? The National Civil Service Reform League, through its president, Richard H. Dana, showed at once where this clause would lead and we have protested over and over again, at our annual meetings in speeches and resolutions. We have repeatedly sent our representative to confer with enforcement officers and have drafted a bill providing for the classification and reexamination of all persons in this branch of the service, yet you never lifted a finger to stay the abuses you had created, and to substitute a nonpolitical system for the party plunder you had introduced.

yet you never litted a linger to stay the abuses you had created, and to substitute a nonpolitical system for the party plunder you had introduced.

When the Wilson administration ceased and the Republicans came into power, and when the maxim "turn the rascals out" was more deservedly applied to the enforcement bureau than I ever knew it applied before, would not that have been a good time to substitute nonpolitical and competitive tests for the appointment of those who were to succeed the men dismissed? Yet you never budged.

Even if you regarded it as well nigh impossible to secure this, should not your own self-respect have impelled you to make some effort or at least some gesture of an attempt to remove this demoralizing system from the service. Where and how did you make it? For you knew perfectly well that wherever the spoils system entered corruption and incompetency followed in its train, and the enforcement bureau under the Volstead Act has given a finer illustration of that than any other case in history. What has been its record? In Rhode Island the corruption was so great that the entire Federal organization from top to bottom was thrown out by the authorities at Washington. The changes in New York have been kaleidoscopic. There have been seven different supervisors and directors, the corps of gubordinates has been changed correspondingly. Hardold L. Hart, chairman of the Broome County Republican committee, who was appointed director soon after Harding took office, resigned in October, and thereafter was indicted for fraud; withdrawal permits had been issued during his administration and many millions due the Government were absorbed by illegal transactions. Favorable rulings from Director Hart were secured by William A. Orr, another Republican politician afterwards indicted. There was one director after another of the same caliber. Ralph A. Day refused to waive immunity when called by the grand jury investigating liquor fraud, refused to permit inspection of the books of R. A. Day & Co., of which he was president.

Herbert G. Catrow, former assistant prohibition director of New Action of the control of the contr nity when called by the grand jury investigating inder fraid, refused to permit inspection of the books of R. A. Day & Co., of which he was president.

Herbert G. Catrow, former assistant prohibition director of New York, was indicted last April with 15 other officials.

In Pennsylvania W. C. McConnell, former director, was indicted last March for conspiracy in the fraudulent withdrawal of liquor. Men were actually dismissed from the service in Pennsylvania because they insisted on the enforcement of the law. The cases in these various States all hang fire amid interminable delays. Attorney General Daugherty says his department can not properly press for their trial to the prejudice of other cases. A few men, however, have been tried and convicted. Thomas Delaney, director of Wisconsin, was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $10,000, as well as Joseph Ray, one of his inspectors, and another of a year, while Robert L. Grillion, director in Detroit, was sentenced to three years in prison. The prohibition director from Montana has recently been indicted.

I could give you lists by the score of subordinates involved in these frauds. Liquor is openly sold in some of the largest New York restaurants and other public places in the country and statements made as to how much is paid to the inspectors for permission to make these sales. Liquor is imported daily in enormous quantities from the Bahamas, Canada, and elsewhere in violation of law. The service is corrupted from top to bottom by a set of depraved political officials appointed under the spoils system which you promoted.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, may I make a point of order?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, may I make a point of order? The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that what is known as the ship subsidy bill is now dead, and it is no longer necessary to read these dry essays before the Congress

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order. Mr. TINKHAM (continuing):

Mr. TLAKHAM (continuing).

Even those who seem anxious to enforce the law are so ignorant and inefficient that they make illegal searches and arrests in violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution as recently decided by one of our Federal courts. I could go on for hours with the details, but why do so? President Harding himself announced in his message that they had become a national scandal and calls upon the governor for help in that for which the national force, if decently administered, ought to be adequate.

Federal courts. I could go on for hours with the details, but why do so? President Harding himself announced in his message that they had become a national scandal and calls upon the governor for help in that for which the national force, if decently administered, ought to be adequate.

It will not do to say that the national prohibition force can not be kept from corruption, since the Harrison antinarcotic bill, dealing with a precisely similar subject, has been adequately enforced without serious scandal by employees appointed from top to bottom under the civil-service system. Indeed, I understand that you yourself do not claim that the Volstead Act can not be enforced. Why, then, have you not done something to get it enforced under the system which has been successful?

I have been for many years in a very small way a contributor to your organization. I believe that national prohibition, if adequately enforced, would be a great benefit to the families of workingmen and others who have suffered from the evils of intoxication; but in view of your past course, I am entirely through with you and believe that you have brought nothing but discredit upon the cause you support, and that some better organization ought to take your place. [Applause.]

In my speech at the Washington meeting of the National Civil Service Reform League I said, "I here accuse the Anti-Saloon League that in so long permitting without a protest the enforcement bureau to become and remain the spoils of degenerate political plunderers, they have themselves been guilty of an immoral and wicked course." In your letter to me you say that I did the Anti-Saloon League an injustice, and that I am doing violence to the prohibition cause in attacking its enforcement; that the blame does not lie wholly with the enforcement department. In this you admit that a great deal of it does lie just there. You accuse wet propagands in the news papers and movies, but what better support could such propagands have than the generally, if not universally violated?

made in just that way. She further said that, although the actual power to appoint was not in his hands, yet it was his recommendations which decided—just as the recommendation of the local postmaster generally decides the appointments made in his office by the Postmaster General in Washington. So that the charge in its substance was absolutely true and the excuse was a mere dishonest eyasion.

Mr. Wheeler also insisted that the last election, instead of showing dissatisfaction with prohibition enforcements, showed that it was increasingly supported by the people. This is not the way that your own papers, like the American Issue, looked at the election, a paper which admitted the dangers it portended, and insisted that you must be on guard now as never before. Mr. Wheeler is entitled to all the comfort and delight which that election is so well calculated to produce. But voters do not closely discriminate. Their disgust for Volstean, leading to his just and salutary repudiation, and for the corrupt gang with which his act infected the country, soon expanded into disgust for all temperance legislation. Many who were conscientious supporters of prohibition, seeing how it works, and the general demoralization caused by the lawlessness it encourages, say, "We favored prohibition and we would favor it still if you would enforce it; but the vile thing we have now is worse than the evil we sought to abolish." And now they seek—mistakenly, I believe—rather the repeal of the whole system than the effort to enforce it by removing it from politics.

Mr. Wheeler urged at the meeting that we should now try to get ish." And now they seek—mistakenly, I believe—rather the repeal of the whole system than the effort to enforce it by removing it from politics.

Mr. Wheeler urged at the meeting that we should now try to get together for the best civil-service law we would get, and when I tried to pin him down to what law he meant he said it was Senate bill 3274. He mistook the number, it was 3247, and I read it to the audience. It provided that the field service and prohibition agents should be transferred to the classified service without any further examination. That would include in the classified service very derelict whom the bureau now has in its employ. No test of their qualifications was to be imposed. If the bureau had a decent, efficient service now that might do, but with the corrupt gang that now fills the positions this provision would only render more permanent the present abuses. But worse than all, section 3 provides that nothing should restrict the exclusion from civil-service methods of all executive officers having immediate direction of the enforcement of the act, and also the persons authorized to issue permits, including officers employed under the commissioner and directors. By this provision all the miscreants at the head of this corrupt organization would still remain political plunder as at present. The condition of the service would actually be worse than it is to-day, and all the discredit attached to its inefficiency after it has been thus degraded would naturally fall on the competitive system itself.

You say in your letter "the bill which would bring enforcement agents under prohibition (I suppose you mean civil service) has been reported favorably. It may not be all that you and others desire or that we desire. It has not been, however, our policy in the past to reject everything because we could not get at the particular time all we want. We of the Anti-Saloon League feel now that with the experience of the past two or three years the sentiment in Congress has changed sufficiently for us to ge Saloon League is throwing itself into the fight for all that it is worth."

That is exactly what I would suppose you would do with such a measure. These spoils Congressmen now hope to keep even more permanently than before the vile retainers they have foisted upon the public and you are backing them up now just as you did at the beginning in their iniquitous purposes. I am glad that your letter arrived simultaneously with one from the secretary of our league, Mr. Marsh, who tells me he has already stirred up some opposition to this bill but that "Wheeler and the Anti-Saloon League are undoubtedly behind it and that is enough to put it through." I am glad to transmit this correspondence to him and I expect to urge him to leave no stone unturned to show the world that we repudiate it utterly. We do not intend to have the civil-service system discredited by "covering" into it a bureau which you have permitted to be thus defiled when the only effect will be to perpetuate and increase the uncadurable stench which now permeates the olfactories of the Nation. We want the scoundrels eliminated before the civil-service system shall be held responsible.

I wrote to Mr. Wheeler on November 20, 17 days before our meeting and told him my criticisms of your league and asked him to tell me, since I did not wish to do the organization an injustice, what it has done to prevent the exception from the civil service law being included in the Volstend Act; what protest your league had made against the spoils system and what efforts to eradicate it. To these questions I have had no answer down to the present moment. Mr. Wheeler said he had been out of town but I can hardly commend the efficiency of an office which does not permit that a communication of this kind should reach him during all of that time. If you hope to get any better enforcement of the law you will have to act with more celerity than this. If I am doing you any injustice now it would be better to let me know in less than 17 days for I shall not wait that long before

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE.

Thus, Mr. Chairman, the House of Representatives should apprehend what criminal, unprincipled, and mendacious leadership it has followed for 10 years and added to the Constitution of the United States the eighteenth amendment and enacted the Volstead Act, both of which have brought to our country revolution against Government and revolt against all law.

Under leave to extend my remarks I desire to print an address delivered by Nicholas Murray Butler, president Columbia University, of New York, before the Ohio State Bar Association at Columbus, Ohio, on January 26, 1923.

The address is as follows:

LAW AND LAWLESSNESS.

[An address delivered before the Ohio State Bar Association at Columbus, Ohio, on January 26, 1923, by Nicholas Murray Butler, president Columbia University, of New York.]

In this presence of a distinguished and representative company of American lawyers and men of affairs it would be quite easy to speak once again with appropriate rhetorical flourishes those sonorous platitudes concerning the law and its supremacy with which we are all familiar. One who does not venture beyond the limits of common consent may gain universal applause, but he does not contribute to progress. My preference is to raise, with such definiteness as the time at my disposal will permit, some fundamental and doubtless disputed issues which I conceive relate directly to the subject under disputed issues which I conceive relate directly to the subject under discussion.

That disregard of law, disobedience to law, and contempt for law have greatly increased and are still increasing in this country is not to be doubted. Similar happenings are taking place in other parts of the world, but one may wonder whether the unenviable supremacy of the people of the United States in this field is not fixed for the time being. In all parts of the country judges and lawyers are discussing the prevalent spirit of lawlessness, and usually end by asserting emphatically that the law must be and shall be enforced exactly as it is written without fear or favor. This has a fine sound and is universally applauded, but it contributes absolutely nothing to an understanding or solution of the grave problem which widespread lawlessness has raised. An examination of the proceedings of the recent annual meetings of bar associations throughout the country establishes the fact that almost all of them have been hearing discussions of this topic. Its importance, therefore, and its nation-wide character may be taken for granted.

It is rather a sorry outcome of our century and a half of existence standing or solution of the grave propiem which wavespread inwershear along risks and standing of the proceedings of the revert annual that almost all of them have been hearing discussions of this topic. Its importance, therefore, and its nation-wide character may be taken for granted.

It is ration, a corry outcome of our century and a half of existence that the proceeding the propies of the propending to the world the discovery of the best possible method of providing for liberty under law, that we should now be pointed to as the lawbreaking nation part excellence. At the meeting of the American Bar Association beld in San Francisco and the process of the second of the second part of the control of t education. A quick effect, and indeed an almost unconscious effect, of the practice of such a doctrine is to displace discipline and to arouse in the mind of youth contempt and disregard for those things which he has not chosen to know, regardless of what may be the opinion of others concerning their value and importance. In this way the individual learns to separate his own tastes, his own interests, his own occupations from those of the community of which he is a part, and only to prefer and to follow his own. That subtle and many-sided influences would in this way be set in motion to make for lawlessness seems obvious.

and and sold chosen to know, reasonless of wan, has been well as well as the second of the community of which he is a part, which he is a part of the profer and to follow his own. That subtice the second of the profer and to follow his own. That subtice the second of the profer and to follow his own. That subtice the second of the profession of the second of the s to law which no possible system of law enforcement can ever bring about. Through centuries a habit of obedience to the Ten Commandments may be built up among men, but the Ten Commandments can not be enforced by all the governments and armies in Christen-about. Through centuries a habit of obelience to the Ten Commandments may be built up among men, but the Ten Commandments can not be enforced by all the governments and armies in Christendom.

This is but one more phase of the never-ending struggle between reason and force in human life. Civilized states, and particularly those which rest upon a basis of popular government, are always steadily alming to widen the area in which reason rules and to narrow that in which force controls, both as to their internal policies and the secondary policy of widening the area where force controls, and this is justly resented by a very large number of Americans. Their resentment leads naturally, in the case of not a few, to lawlessness in one of its many forms. It is no answer to say that these statutes and these administrative orders are made in pursuance of law, and that at bottom they rest, through the medium of our representative institutions, on the will of the majority. The will of the majority is under precisely the same limitations as was the will of the monarch. In the process of gaining freedom it has never been the force of a substitute a grant will make a grant will make a grant will make a grant will make a grant will be a grant will make a grant will make a grant will make a grant will be a grant will make a grant will be a grant will make a grant will be a g cated and secured the adoption of these two amendments was excellent, but they did not stop to deal with the realities of politics and of public morals.

When the thirteenth amendment abolished slavery, and when the fourteenth amendment provided for the reduction of the representation in Congress from any State which abridged the right of any citizen to vote, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the matter might well have rested there. All that was needed was the courage and the public opinion to enforce the fourteenth amendment, and speedily the several States would have made provision for their own protection by which the intelligent colored man would have been permitted to vote. Gen. Robert E. Lee himself testified in this spirit before the reconstruction committee of the Congress. The Civil War had but just ended, however, and passion ran high. Therefore the fitteenth amendment was proposed and ratified, and the right of suffrage was given a national basis and protected by a national guaranty. What has been the result? After a half century the colored man votes in those States where he voted when the fitteenth amendment was passed, but he rarely votes, and certainly does not freely participate in public life, in those States where he did not vote then. Every attempt to enforce the fourteenth or fitnenth amendment has been denounced as a force bill. Oddly enough, it has been so denounced by those very Senators and Representatives who will go to any length to enforce the provisions of the eighteenth amendment. The practical question is not whether or not the colored man should vote in the Southern States, but whether the American people will frankly face the problem presented by the nullification throughout a large part of the land of a most important provision of the Constitution of the United States. Everyone knows what political results follow from the Southern States; but everyone with the American people will frankly face the problem presented by the nullification throughout a large part ment were repealed and the fourteenth amendment were enforced, the political and social condition of the colored man in the Southern States would not be vastly improved. Certainly a powerful and continuing cause of lawlessness would have been eliminated and the political condition of the colored man would be no less advantageous than now.

The situation with regard to the eighteeath amendment is even worse, because the revoit against it is not confined to men and women of intelligence and moral sensitiveness in one section alone, but is nation-wide. It will not do to attempt to slience these persons by abuse or by catch phrases and formulas of the hustings. These men and women dissent entirely from the grounds upon which the case for the eighteenth amendment was rested, and they regard its provisions and those of the statutes based upon it as a forcible, an immeral, and a tyrannical invasion of their private life and personal conduct.

They have no possible interest in the liquor traffic, and they are without exception opposed to the saloon. But they are equally opposed to making the Constitution of the United States the vehicle of a police regulation affecting the entire country, and dealing not alone with matters of public interest and public reference but with the most intimate details of personal and private life, including feed, drink, and medical treatment. The moral sense, as well as the common sense, of very many people is affronted by a policy which will expend millions of dollars and use the methods of Czarist Russia and of the Spanish Inquisition to enforce one provision of law while others of far greater significance and public importance are accorded conventional treatment or less.

It will startle many excellent people to hear the following sentences.

very many people is affronted by a policy which will expend millions of dollars and use the methods of Czarist Rassia and of the Spanish Inquisition to enforce one provision of law while others of far greater significance and public importance are accorded conventional treatment of less.

It is the recent book of Outspoken Essays, second series, written by the Dean of St. Paul's Catholic Cathedral, London. The author, Doctor linge, is one of the most learned and most eminent of English churchmen. "Suppose," says Dean Inge, "that the State has exceeded its rights by prohibiting some harmless act, such as the consumption of alcohol. Is smuggling, in such a case, morally justifiable? I should say yes; the interference of the State in such matters is a mere impertinence." (Inge, William Ralph: Outspoken Essays, second series (New York, 1922), p. 134. be may find with increasing frequency expressions like these manimously adopted by a recent group expressions like these manimously adopted by a recent group in the community which has long been known as the City of Churches. Referring to the existing laws for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment this grand jury expressed itself as follows:

"Whatever may be our individual ideas upon the subject of temperance and prohibition, we believe that there can be no doubt but that this law tends to debauch and corrupt the police force. It interfers with the liberty and private life of moral, law-abiding citizens. It even goes so far as to brind go men felous, because in they find no harm. It has not checked the misuse of intoxicating liquors, but it has seriously hampered their proper use. We feel that it can never be enforced, because it lays down rules of private conduct which are contrary to the intelligence and general morality of the community. It is an attempt by a body of our citizenship, thinking one way, to interfere with the private conduct of another body, thinking another way." (New York Globe, December 29, 1922, p. 2.)

These are not not repressed and purpos any such fortunate outcome of the unhappy conditions that how confront us.

Speaking for myself, I may say that my first political activity in my native State of New Jersey was in cooperation with colored men and on their behalf and in support of movements to restrict and to abolish the saloon or public bar. In my own congressional district there were large numbers of colored voters who were eager, intelligent, and public-spirited. To see colored men of that type participate freely in the public life of other districts and other States would be a great satisfaction. But it is now plain to me that the road which was taken to that end was a wrong road. It has delayed, not hastened, the political participation of the colored man in the public life of the United States. Similarly, it was my fortune, as a member of the committee on resolutions of the New Jersey State Republican convention of 1886, to give the casting vote in favor of the platform declaration which declared war on the saloon. That platform declaration is supposed to have cost the Republican party that election, but it was a sound and true declaration none the less. Later, in the State of New York, it was my lot to work vigorously with those who attempted to drive out the saloon by use of the power of taxation. Therefore I am personally committed through many years of practical political action to the cause of universal suffrage and to the abolition of the saloon. Perhaps, for that very reason, I feel so strongly as I do the disastrous mistakes that have been made and the evil consequences that have followed and are certain long to follow in the life of the people of the United States. Surely there can be no more distressing and no more distintegrating form of lawlessness than that which arises from the resistance of intelligent and high-minded people, on grounds of morals and fundamental principle, to some particular provision of law.

The American people must learn to think of these things and to give up that unwillingness, which seems so characteristic, to discuss or to deal with the disputed and the disagreeable. We have almost gotten to a point where public men, and those who should be leaders of opinion, hesitate to speak until they know what others are likely to say and how what they say will probably be received by the press and the public. There are not so many as there should be who are willing to take the risk of being unpopular for the sake of being right.

During the delivery of the above speech,
The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.
Mr. TINKHAM. I would ask the honorable Representative from Illinois for two additional minutes

Mr. MADDEN. I have not the time; the gentleman can extend his remarks.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Did the gentleman ask permission to extend his remarks, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman at the opening of his remarks was granted that permission.

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman— The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. I rise to make the point that nothing but his own remarks can be added to where the gentleman quit réading.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Oh, no. Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson]. [Applause.]
Mr. Dickinson, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Chairman, I was interested this morning in the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GALLIVAN] with reference to the tender mercies extended to a man in Wyoming who felt himself in need of a stimulant. He made light of the proposition and he put on a very old vaudeville act here for about 45 minutes to which we can not get time to reply. The time should be limited, and I am willing that my time shall be limited, but I want you gentlemen of the committee here now to contrast with the lightness of the proposition put up by the gentleman from Massachusetts this morning the seance that took place on the end of a bridge out at Laurel, Md., a night or two ago where a young lady, an employee of our Government, went riding with a motorist who was intoxicated, and he ran into the edge of the bridge and she was thrown over the railing, instantly killed, and left there, covered with a coat by a drunken driver. The Washington Post refers to the matter and reports the finding of the coroner's jury, as follows:

DEATH CHARGED TO MORRIS.

The coroner's jury last night handed down the decision that Miss Sullivan met her death in an automobile accident caused by the careless driving of Benjamin F. Morris, who, it was charged, operated the ma-chine while under the influence of liquor.

Those are the things that have brought the prohibition law into this country and are going to keep it here by the acts of Congress. [Applause.] The idea of men getting up here and saying we do not have sufficient funds to enforce this law and it ought to be repealed because it can not be enforced! Are we to repeal the law against murder because men committing murder are not always convicted, because it costs money in order that they shall be convicted in this country? Why, the cost of enforcing the prohibition law is absolutely an infinitesimal amount compared with the amount of good it will do if men and women will open their eyes here in this country and see what benefit it is bringing to this country, even if there are a few thirsty men who do not want to see it imposed upon the country. [Applause.] Now, I want to suggest a few things here that I think will materially assist in the enforcement of the prohibition act. I have heard that it can not be enforced up in Massachusetts, but I will tell you how it can be enforced. I remember when the Volstead Act was being passed by this House and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Borrs] put in an amendment on this floor that gave the right of abatement by a court of equity by reason of a declaration that the sale of intoxicating liquor constitutes a nuisance; and if you go up into the city of Boston and get a judge up there who believes in the prohibition law and wants to see it enforced, assisted by an attorney similarly minded, and institute the right form of equity proceedings for abatement and levy a tax against the real estate in a proper proceeding, the Hebrew brothers who own that property and lease the same to the Irishman who wants to run a bootlegging joint, you will soon see that the prohibition law is enforced in Boston. [Applause.]

The last register of the Department of Justice shows that The last register of the Department of Justice shows that there are approximately 500 persons on the official and clerical force in Washington. In the division of Assistant Attorney General Willebrandt, who has charge, among other things, of all prohibition matters, there are employed 16 persons. In addition to handling prohibition, Mrs. Willebrandt has charge of all prosecutions arising under the so-called minor acts to regulate commerce, such as the food and drugs act. late commerce, such as the food and drugs act, the safety appliance act, the animal quarantine laws, and also directs the conduct of tax cases. The liquor matters handled by this division do not all arise out of the prohibition act, as many cases are still brought under the old internal revenue laws, and the customs laws still account for a number of cases.

Though it may be said that a larger part of the time of United States attorneys and assistant United States attorneys is devoted to liquor cases than is given to any other single subject, this is not a test from which it can be unqualifiedly concluded that prohibition should be charged with a larger per-centage of the cost of maintaining United States attorneys' offices than is to be marked up against any other class of crimes. United States attorneys' offices were maintained before prohibition, and there were employed therein many assistants. a good deal of work has been placed on them by prohibition, a large number of these assistants would have been employed without prohibition. In 1917 there were on the rolls of the Department of Justice approximately 119 assistant United States attorneys; in 1919, 170; in 1920, 190; in 1922, 210; in 1917 there were employed approximately 100 special assistant attorneys; in 1919, approximately 200; in 1920, 280; and in 1922, 200. The number of United States attorneys is, of course, stationary, there being 1 for each judicial district, there being 88 in the continental United States. The total number of officials and employees connected with the Department of Justice has shown a small increase in the course of the last five years, the number in 1917 being 5,700; in 1919, 5,722; in 1920, 7,800; in 1922, 6,000.

Another source of revenue which it is thought has not been referred to is the sale of liquors and materials seized as contraband. Under authority of the national prohibition act liquor which has been forfeited and condemned may be sold to permit holders for medicinal purposes under order of court. also some revenue accruing from the sale of scrap copper out of which stills were made and empty barrels after the contents have been disposed of. A sample of what may be done also along this line is to be found in the conduct of the United States marshal for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, Frank Mathues, who has turned into the Treasury of the United States thousands of dollars in the past two years received from the sale of condemned liquors and forfeited materials.

On June 30, 1922, there were pending 17,834 cases arising under the national prohibition act and other liquor traffic laws. On December 1, 1922, there were on the dockets of the various district courts approximately 21,850 cases undisposed of. About 3,000 cases a month are being reported to and acted upon by the various United States attorneys. This figure, it is believed, is the high point, as the present tendency is to make and report fewer cases and to make them better and stronger. As the investigating officers become acquainted with the decisions of the courts on various phases of the law and the legal evidence necessary to sustain a case the work of United States attorneys will to some extent decrease. At present a large part of the time of United States attorneys and their assistants is being taken up either in holstering up a case which has been made by agents unacquainted with the quantity of evidence necessary or in instructing the agents in what they should do in particular cases in order to make them presentable to the court. the work of the investigating agents becomes methodized, better and stronger cases will be presented to United States attorneys and their work on liquor matters accordingly decreased so that more of their time may be given to other matters.

The subject of the congestion upon the dockets of the Federal courts and the time used by the courts to enforce prohibition has but recently been considered by Members of this Congress. H. R. 9103, approved September 14, 1922, Public Laws 298, provided for the appointment of 24 additional United States district judges and 1 additional circuit judge. At the time this bill was under consideration the entire matter was investi-gated. The committees to whom this bill was referred had presented to them the facts with reference to the conditions. The testimony before these committees was given by the officials of the Government who have immediate charge of the subject.

They were in a position to be acquainted with the true conditions. In addition to this, the matter was the subject of a careful survey and study by a special commission of judges and district attorneys acting at the request of the Attorney General. At the hearing before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate when this measure was pending Attorney General Daugherty said:

Daugherty said:

After a month or so of consideration I conceived the idea of assembling what I tetmed a commission of trial judges and two district attorneys to confer among themselves, to study this situation, and I might say, considering their experience, in connection with trying to solve this proposition. I had no authority to do this, but I found gentlemen on the bench who were willing, and many others I might have asked would no doubt have been willing, and many others I might have asked would no doubt have been willing, and many others I might have asked would no doubt have been willing, and these two district attorneys were willing, and I asked Judge Sater, of my State, who has been selected as the chairman of the commission, Judge Grubb, of Alabama, Judge Pollock, of Kansas, Colonel Hayward, district attorney of the southern district of New York, and Mr. Clyne, district attorney of the northern district of Illinois, to act as this commission. They met with me, and I laid my troubles before them, and they generously gave me the benefit of their advice and experience. We had several meetings, and the whole situation was thoroughly discussed.

About two months ago, or probably a little less, the Chief Justice was chosen, and I asked him, as soon as his name had been announced as the new Chief Justice, to meet this commission and myself for the purpose of going over this situation, and I found him enthusiastically willing to render any assistance that he could in the matter.

The Attorney General further said:

The Attorney General further said:

We have prepared charts and statistics, information which we expect to submit in full detail to the committee, and we are willing to secure any further information the committee may desire in connection with the consideration of this question. There is nobody more anxious than the Department of Justice, as it is now constituted, to clean up the situation in the United States in regard to any kind of business the Department of Justice has to do or that the courts are expected to deal with.

In such a comprehensive study of the situation and its causes the question of the effect of the adoption of the Volstead Act was naturally considered. Mr. Chief Justice Taft

The Volstead Act, of course, added greatly to the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, but that is only one step. I am told—doubtless you will hear the statistics given with exactness, but I am told—that the Volstead Act adds only about 8 per cent to the business of the courts. But the business is far backward and the arrears are increasing rapidly, and something has to be done if we are not going to be swamped.

One of the difficulties of the achievement of the dispatch of business has been the variation of conditions in the different districts and circuits. In some places there would be a judge who had but half his time occupied; in another place there would be a judge who would be overwhelmed with work. This bill introduces a reasonable system of watching and supervising conditions by the judges of the courts of appeals, with a view to having them get at the actual facts as to where the arrears are. You geutlemen are all familiar with the fact that dockets are quite misleading in the number of cases that they seem to show. There is a lot of stuffing in the docket. Many of the cases ought to be dismissed.

Senator Reed questioned the Chief Justice relative to the Senator REED questioned the Chief Justice relative to the effect of prohibition upon the business of the Federal courts, and pointed out the growth in population and general business of the country. Senator REED said:

Another thing that is undoubtedly permanent is a constant growth in the population of the United States, and a constant increase in business. I think you will agree that business is increasing more rapidly than population right along; that multiplication of business is a thing that is with us and goes with civilization.

Chief Justice Taft. Senator, to illustrate that, at the beginning of the Government the intrastate commerce was 75 per cent of all the commerce of the country. Now the interstate commerce is 75 per cent of all the volume. Of course the interstate commerce law has been passed since, because of that and other things, and that has naturally increased greatly the jurisdiction of the Federal court.

Senator Reed. Yes; but the general business of the country has increased. For instance, a farmer used to raise his own pigs and kill them and make his own bacon. Now, just to take a very simple llustration, to-day he raises his hogs and ships them to market and they are killed by a packing house and they are sent back to a butcher and they are sold to the farmer back on his farm. In that there are five different transactions, and it is all business; and I think all the business in the United States is increasing in that way. There is your permanent condition. They are going to be with us.

In speaking of the effect of prohibition upon the dockets of

In speaking of the effect of prohibition upon the dockets of the Federal courts, Attorney General Daugherty said:

the Federal courts, Attorney General Daugherty said:

The Volstead Act—the prohibition act—is much dwelt upon in connection with the reason for this request for increase. That has something to do with it. I believe that the experience the country over in the prosecution of violations of the prohibition law will be the same as it was in the counties where prohibition was first put in force, and in States where it was later put in force. It has been my observation and experience that in the outset the impression was that this law could not be enforced when it was applied to counties and when it was applied to States. I have seen that fear dissipated in counties and in States. I expect, by the aid of the courts and the aid of the public sentiment and the aid of everybody who want to see the laws enforced, to see the criminal business fall off. I think it is at its peak now, so far as prohibition laws are concerned, and if the people are impressed with the fact that it is the intention to enforce this law, that it will gradually fall off; but that as it falls off, probably in greater figures the civil business will increase; because when the country gets to going along again in a normal way I am satisfied that the civil business will increase in greater proportion than it has in the last year, and it has increased considerably in the last year.

Senator STERLING. Mr. Attorney General, do you not think that there will be an increase of business arising from the enforcement of the prohibition law, for a time, yet?

Attorney General DAUGHERTY, I do not think there will be an increase. I may be mistaken about it, Senator, but my judgment is that it is at its peak, and it wants the exhibition of determination on the part of people who believe that laws ought to be enforced, to start it down from the peak.

The prohibition law increases this business not to the percentage that the general public is led to believe or that an effort is made to lead the general public to believe, that it has increased. You must understand that there are these new tax laws and other laws. There are seven or eight thousand cases in New York growing out of the selective draft.

draft.

Mr. Hayward. Over 7,000 left.

Attorney General Daugherty. And other things make this necessary as well as prohibition. That is a contributing part.

Senator Shields, Mr. Attorney General, I think you could well make the statement you did, that later there may be a decrease in the violations of the prohibition law; judging by the experience in the States. I think the law is pretty well enforced. I think at first there were a great many violations, but later it was accepted better, and probably the Federal laws will follow the same course.

Judge J. E. Sater, chairman of the commission requested by the Federal laws will follow the same course.

Judge J. E. Sater, chairman of the commission requested by the Attorney General to study the question, said relative to the congestion upon the dockets of the Federal courts:

Judge Sater. The manner in which this committee was called together has been stated. We limited ourselves to a single, narrow proposition, without considering some other matters which other people desire to have passed by the House and the Senate.

During the war, civil business died very largely all over the country. Criminal business increased wonderfully.

Following the close of the war there has been a very marked increase in civil business. The work that breaks the backs of judges is the civil business on the law and the equity sides.

We have occasional cases, and very troublesome ones, growing out of postal frauds, occasional cases of defalcations of banks, and the like of that; but ordinarily the criminal side of the court is the easy side for a district judge.

We found about 142,000 cases on the dockets of the United States courts, and 102 judges to dispose of them. We recognized the fact that the mere number of cases does not always indicate the real situation, because one district may have a good many cases that are quite easily disposed of and a very large number of cases, while some other district may have a more limited number, but which involve a good deal more work because they are of a different character, and it is, after all, the business side of life that brings the hard work to the judges. But there is an average of about 1,400 cases to a judge, which is entirely too many.

We found districts in which the judges did not have work enough to occupy all their time. In other districts the work is so great that the judges are hopelessly in arrears, and in order to get the work up it was evident that there had to be a substantial increase in the number of judges. The business in the criminal work in the last half dozen years has been very great. I am not prepared to give the p

Judge Sater pointed out that in some districts the State courts under State laws are taking care of the prosecutions for violations of the liquor laws, with the result that in such instances there are relatively few cases pending in the Federal courts under the Volstead Act.

As the district attorney says, we have a law that is the same as the Volstead Act, and the result is that we have in our district but very few cases pending under that act; in the whole district about 20 or 25, according to the statistics.

He then pointed out some of the other kinds of criminal cases which had tended to delay the speedy administration of justice. He said:

cases which had tended to delay the speedy administration of justice. He said:

Now, we realize that this is at present a rather critical situation. There are many thousands of cases against slackers, for instance, and other cases which arose under the war acts. We realize that every month added to the life of those cases means an increasing number of them that must fail, because the witnesses die, they move away, they can not be located, the evidence is dissipated, and after having gone to the trouble of indicting these persons, no matter how guilty they may be, a large number of cases are constantly failing because we fall now to reach them in time. Now, how to get rid of this quickly was the question.

Then, again, on account of the shipping interests, under various other war acts that arose, we have found that there is a large class of cases, and they are still coming in and will continue to come in, arising out of these war acts.

The Government has vast sums of money tied up on account of these tax laws, and in admiralty cases, generally taking a good deal of time, and the sooner these cases are disposed of the better it would be for the Government and the greater will be the respect of the people for the law. If men are guilty of a crime, if they are guilty of cheating the Government, the quicker that is found out and the more certainly they will have to account the greater will be the regard of the people for the enforcement of the law.

So that we felt that here are conditions that are permanent. The business of the United States courts is increasing and will continue to increase, because the country is growing: but there is a temporary situation that ought to be met. Take Massachusetts, for instance, with about 7,000 cases on the docket only. Four thousand five hundred of them are slacker cases. The longer they hang there the fewer convictions there will be.

New York has 7,000 slacker cases—2,000, I believe, in the Brooklyn district.

Judge Pollock, of the commission, pointed out the effect of the war. He said:

The war occasioned much of this present congestion—different war measures—and the extension of the Federal judicial power. Now, we have thought that if these judges could be presently created, they could take hold of this congestion and get it where the litigants or the defendants could get justice in the courts speedily, and then you gentlemen here could go to work and build up these different districts so as to take care of the matter later on. But this is a mere emergency matter to take care of the congestion that has grown out of this war and all the troubles that have gone with it.

The trial of offenses against the Volstead Act, except where unusual features are involved, consumes relatively little time of the courts as compared with other forms of criminal prosecutions. Many of these liquor cases are prosecuted by the filing of informations, without the necessity of indictment, and in a very large percentage of them the defendants plead guilty and waive a trial by jury. Col. William Hayward, United States district attorney for the southern district of New York, the largest district in the country from the standpoint of the number of cases, said upon this point in his testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee:

of the number of cases, said upon this point in his testimony, before the Senate Judiciary Committee:

There is another thing I think the committee would be interested in. I presume that we have more of these prohibition cases than in any other district, but I do not say that it is the most burdensome feature at all. The burdensome features with us are the mall-fraud cases and prosecutions under the Sherman antitrust law. Those cases run into weeks and weeks and weeks. The liquor cases, so called, are reasonably short and reasonably simple, except when complications may arise, such as the seizure of a vessel or something of that sort; but I brought to the committee the records of our own office for the months of August and September.

When we took that office over there were 800 cases pending.

Senator Overman. This year?

Mr. Hayward. Yes; this year. I went into office on the 4th of June and I found 800 cases waiting, some of which had been waiting for more than a year.

Senator Shields. Volstead law cases?

Mr. Hayward. They were cases of violations of the liquor prohibition act. I may say that Governor Miller and the New York Legislature had passed a "State Volstead Act," as we call it—the Mellin-Gage bill—and the police were quite active in the State courts along this same line, which it is my present opinion they should be in all the States. As the result of that there had been a slight cessation of the number of new cases being filed in the Federal courts. Taking advantage of that situation—which was unhappily temporary, because they are now coming on again very rapidly—I disposed of 607 cases before one Federal judge in two months.

Senator Bhandsche How many of those were liquor cases?

Mr. Hayward. Five hundred and six were on pleas. We got them all in, and we said to them, "Now, you can plead or you can go to trial to-day." Five hundred and six of them pleaded guilty. In those two months we had 29 jury trials, in which we got 13 convictions, 15 acquittals, and I disagreement.

Senator Shields. How man of the court?

Mr. HAYWARD. Not to compare to these other things. There are a good many habeas corpus actions, resulting perhaps from an exclusion, or something like that; but I do not consider that one of the timetaking features of the office at all.

Senator SHIELDS. Under what statutes do the greatest number of offenses arise?

Mr. HAYWARD. The present docket in that particular office has about 11,000 cases. It is only fair to say, however, that you can not judge of the quantity of business by mere number of cases, because of that 11.000 approximately nearly 7,000 are draft-evasion cases that were left over from the war, and I worked very hard on those cases.

The greatest portion of the time of the Federal courts is consumed in the trial of civil cases; in suits between individuals and in bankruptcy matters, in which the Government is not a party at all. This is shown by the testimony of Mr. M. F. Clyne, United States district attorney for the northern district of Illinois. Mr. Clyne was one of the commission acting at the request of the Attorney General in the preparation of the survey. The district spoken of by Mr. Clync contains the city of Chicago. This is one of the largest from the standpoint of the volume of business. The conditions of the docket there should be illustrative of the proportion of prohibition cases to other cases on the docket. Mr. Clyne said:

other cases on the docket. Mr. Clyne said:

Mr. CLYNE. That is the grand total on the 1st day of July. Then the number of cases to which the United States is a party, criminal, 1,108. Then the total number of civil cases to which the United States is a party is 229. I can go on and subdivide them, further. Of the criminal cases, the criminal internal-revenue cases are 94; post-office cases, 105; interstate commerce, 20; prohibition (so designated), 236; civil prohibition, 39. But I indicated some time ago that that has been increased, so that the number has been considerably increased, and there are now about 339 of those cases.

Of the cases to which the United States is not a party, there are, admiralty cases, 10; bankruptcy cases, 1,322; and other miscellaneous cases to which the Unitel States is not a party, 863; making a grand total, as I indicated, of 3,582.

The following statement by Mr. George E. Strong, special assistant to the Attorney General, made to the Senate Judiciary Committee gives the proportion of prohibition cases pending in the Federal courts of the country at the time as compared with other cases of all kinds. Mr. Strong said:

Mr. Strong. Exhibit "H" has particular reference to prohibition. Many people had the impression that prohibition alone is responsible for this congestion. Reports went out to the newspapers to that effect; and this is a short statement showing a comparison between 1921 and 1915, showing that the criminal business is 40 per cent in 1921.

in 1921.
Senator Shields, You mean the prohibition business?
Mr. Strong, No; the criminal business is 40 per cent of the total business pending on July 1, 1921, as compared with only 8 per cent in 1915. That is one reason on which I base my statement that We have not reached the peak of the civil cases, because the grand total was about 130,000 cases pending in 1915, and criminal business was only 8 per cent of that total, whereas in 1921 we have a total of 40 per cent as criminal business.

Of the total cases pending, only 8 per cent is attributable to prohibition; and it shows that even if you eliminated the prohibition altogether, you would still have 35 per cent of the cases pending due to criminal business, in 1921.

Exhibit "H" as filed with the Senate Judiciary Committee is as follows:

EXHIBIT "H."

The total number of cases pending July 1, 1921, was 142,402, of which number 57,112 are criminal, or 40 per cent. The number of criminal prohibition was 10,365, or 18 per cents of the total criminal. If the prohibition cases pending were entirely eliminated from the 1921 figures the proportion of criminal business would still be 35 per cent, showing that prohibition alone is not responsible for the congested condition, but has only aggravated an already alarming condition. A comparison with 1915 shows that the criminal cases pending were only 8 per cent of the total, and that even if the prohibition cases pending for 1921 were added to the criminal business of 1915 the total criminal would only be 16 per cent. These figures indicate that even if prohibition were eliminated there would yet be such an increase in civil and criminal business as to require an immediate increase of Federal Judges. The figures for 1921 do not represent the high tide of civil business, because the war discouraged litigation and the abnormal prices and prosperity relieved the civil docket, but indications are that the tide of civil business is rapidly mounting and that the report for 1922 will show this increase. 1922 will show this increase.

The foregoing statements by representatives of the Government after a careful study of the situation to determine the nature and causes of the congestion upon the dockets of our Federal courts, as well as the statistics compiled from official records, show that the conditions are not attributable selely to the Volstead Act. It is a condition resulting from many causes, including the growth of business due to increase of population, the multiplication of instances in which Federal courts have jurisdiction owing to the more complex character of advancing civilization, litigation attendant upon or growing out of the war, and the gradual extension of Federal jurisdiction by legislation, such as the white slave law, the Harrison narcotic law, the migratory bird law, antitrust laws, and the Volstead

According to the press of this morning, it is reported that a representative of the Justice Department who appeared before the Appropriations Committee, at the request of Mr. Tinkham, submitted a report which indicated that the national prohibition act is causing about 90 per cent of the increase in the business of the Federal courts. There are some strange inconsistencies between this statement and the statements made by the Attorney General of the United States, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the special commission of United States judges and district attorneys who made a careful survey of this question at the request of the Attorney General.

Emphasis is laid upon the fact that there has been a decrease In the amount of fines collected for prohibition violations from $2,418,000 in 1921 to $2,377,000 in 1922, from which fact the inference is apparently drawn that the law is not being as efficiently enforced in 1922 as it was the year preceding.

This is apparently a mistake, as the figures which were furnished me by the Treasury Department indicate that the amount of Federal fines collected for violations of the prohibition act during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, were $2,824,685.01; amounts paid in compromise, $1,739,622.80; amounts collected in taxes and penalties, not including taxes on legal manufacture and legal sale of intoxicating liquors, $239,964.14; making an aggregate received during the year of $4,084,271.95.

Furthermore, attention is called to the fact that the statistics here given do not include the figures from the Territory of Alaska, although the appropriation which was made for enforcement also covered this Territory. The mere difference in the amount of fines collected is no criterion by which to determine this question. Everyone knows that a concerted effort has been made to secure the imposition of jail sentences upon violators of the prohibition law, rather than the imposition of a mere fine, as it was realized that a nominal fine to the man engaged in this business was less than a license and that such offenders can only be deterred by being deprived of their liberty. Furthermore, a large number of the States are cooperating through the enforcement of their State laws, and in many instances the prosecutions are being brought in the State courts, which tends to reduce the number of convictions in the Federal

The latest information from the Department of Justice for the year ending June 30, 1922, is as follows:

Fines collected for violations of the Federal prohibition laws, $2,468,863.38.

While this is somewhat different from the figures presented formally by one of the agents of the Department of Justice and from the figures given by the Treasury Department, these figures are the official figures from the Department of Justice.

In addition to this I am informed that the Justice Department has insisted upon utilizing the provisions of the national prohibition act which provide for the abatement of nuisances by injunction, rather than through repeated prosecutions of the same offenders through the criminal machinery of the courts. While it is true that in many instances there is congestion upon the dockets and there are large numbers of prohibition cases which should be disposed of, this condition could be speedily remedled if the United States attorneys and United States judges in these districts would avail themselves of the method provided in the Volstead Act for proceedings in equity to abate places where the law is being violated as a nuisance.

This provision in the national prohibition act is similar to the one which we have in the Iowa prohibition law. It gives the court the right to enjoin a place where liquor is sold as a public nuisance, and also the individual bootlegger. If they continue to sell after that time, they may be punished for contempt of court. This provision in the law is based upon our statutes relating to abatement proceedings which have been in effect since the beginning of the Government. If a district attorney and a United States judge and comparatively few industrious. Federal agents will use this section of the law in New York, Chicago, or any other great city where there is now trouble with law enforcement, it can be stopped. It is not a question as to whether or not it can be done; it is simply a question as to whether or not the Federal judges and United States district attorneys will use the authority now in the law to bring about its enforcement.

COST OF PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

The cost of prohibition enforcement through the Prohibition Bureau amounts to about $9,000,000. The total appropriation of $9,250,000 covers the enforcement of the law against narcotics as well as intoxicating liquor. The returns to the Government through penalties, seized property, and so forth, is shown by the following report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922:

Action has been taken on the forfeiture of bonds of $3,000,000. Over $130,000,000 of special assessed taxes have been placed on the tax list, a considerable portion of which will be collected.

As a matter of fact, it is costing the Government practically nothing to enforce prohibition. Bootleggers, rum runners, and illicit dealers are paying for their lawlessness through these fines and penalties. Even if $5,000,000 more were added, if the internal-revenue collectors and other Federal officers would use the power they have to impose penalties upon these illicit dealers, it would bring back in dollars to the Government twice as much as it costs. If the income-tax division and the revenue collectors would do their whole duty, the Government would collect $5 for every $1 it costs to enforce the law, even though the alleged added amount spent by the Justice Department were all counted in. In Ohlo the State prohibition commissioner, under the State law, made his report for 22 months, showing that with 1 commissioner and 22 assistants it cost the State $216,000 to enforce prohibition. There was returned to the State, county, and local treasuries $2,600,000 which bootleggers and rum runners paid for their experiment in lawlessness.

But even if there were no compensation and the Government did not get one dollar back, it would furnish no good reason why the law should not be enforced. To spend $9,000,000 to enforce prohibition for 110,000,000 people means about 8 cents per head.

For an average family of five this is 40 cents.

Proper reply was made to the recent address of President Butler in an editorial of the Philadelphia North American, as follows:

Many Americans who believe in and practice law observance were surprised a few days ago when President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, in a public speech assailed the eighteenth constitutional amendment and the Volstead Act, and offered a casnistical defense of violators of those chactments. Doctor Butler has been known as a political supporter of the liquor traffic; when he was a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, one of his principal assets was his strength with the wet forces in the party. But it was not generally expected that he, the head of a great university the majority of whose students are of foreign extraction, would make a calculated effort to justify and incite definance of the laws of the United States.

Doubtless it was in part because the doctor has become habituated to the use of textbooks prepared by others that he merely transmitted in his address arguments that have been worn threadbare by the bootleggers and their lawless patrons. In fact, his utterance embodied so little that was new or weighty that if it had been delivered by a citizen of less prominence it would have attracted no attention. Incidentally, one must marvel at his hardihood in selecting a session of the Ohio Bar Association as the scene of his oratorical exploit. It was the judicial section of the American Bar Association that declared that "those who scoff at this law are aiding the cause of anarchy and promoting mob violence." And it was Ohio which last fall voted by a great majority for strict enforcement.

Naturally, Doctor Butler affirmed with unction that he and other advocates of nullification are "opposed to the saloon" and thoroughly approve its banishment. Here he makes two interesting admissions—first, that there is a dry sentiment throughout the Nation so strong that it has outlawed the saloon, and, second, that he is now against that agency of "personal liberty." But in adopting the canned arguments of the liquor advocates he lent his name and influence to the most dishonest proposition in the whole wretched propaganda of booze. While professing to abhor the saloon, he knows, as one familiar with law and legislation, that if the demanded modifications of the Volstead Act were to be made, so as to legalize the sale of "light" intoxicants, restoration of the saloon would be a matter of course and necessity. The places where the intoxicants were sold would have to be licensed, regulated, and taxed.

But if his condemnation of the saloon decire of laws by Syncuss. Thiane, Johns Hopkins, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Vale, Chicago, St. Andrews, Manchester, Cambridge, Wesleyan, Williams, Harvard, Dartmouth, Breslau, Brown, Toronto, Strasburg, Prague, Nancy, Paris, and Louvain Universities.

It would be unjust to the abilities of an expert with 22 LL. D. degrees to ignore the fact that Doctor Butler enriched his excuses for law defiance with some striking epigrammatic phrases. Thus he held it an "illusion" that "enactments duly made by a legislature and upheld by a competent court are part of the law." They are such, he explained, "only if general public opinion supports and upholds them," if they are ratified by "a silent referendum in the hearts and minds of men." We hope the law schools and the courts will take due note of what should be known in American jurisprudence as the Butler referendum, as distinguished from the species provided by our imperfect constitution. More characteristic is his definition of those for whom he particularly pleads. We have read affecting arguments for the right of the worker, of the allen-born citizen, and of the "poor man" to "personal liberty," as embodied in booze, but Doctor Butler is concerned for a very different class. The law, he says, is "not obeyed by large numbers of highly intelligent and morally sensitive people." "the perceives "nation-wide revoit" among "men and women of intelligence and moral sensitiveness"; he grows emotional over "lawlessness which arises from the resistance of intelligent and high-minded people."

In this plea the surpassingly literate doctor is true to his traditions. He has frequently shown that he deplores legislative interference with the business interests and personal desires of the "highly intelligent and high-minded people."

This is a familiar doctrine; it has been invoked by the Butlerian countries of cunning against society, and promote social and industrial justice. When laws were passed against secret railroad rebates, food adulteration, the exploitation of women and chi criminality by the cultured. Thus says Justice Taft, of the United States Supreme Court:

"This is a democratic government, and the voice of the people, expressed through the machinery provided by the Constitution, is supreme. Every loyal citizen must obey. This is the fundamental principle of free government.

"It is dangerous doctrine for any citizen to attempt to excuse lawlessness. It is doubly dangerous when done by men in prominent positions."

While we would not deprive Doctor Butler of a single one of the degrees that give luster to his name, we must pronounce the opinion that for a highly intelligent and morally sensitive LL. D. he makes deplorable use of his honorary distinctions.

Trend of the times is shown in a recent article in Collier's

A RING AROUND THE ROSY.

The great Mid-West is joining hands with the far West and the South in the movement to make America bone dry. The eighteenth amendment is an accepted fact almost everywhere west of the Allegheny Mountains. Iowa, Nebraska. Kansas, the Dakotas, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee, and other States that I visited in the last few months are dry—the sentiment is dry, and there is a growing respect for the Volstead Act. None of these States is bone dry as yet, but they are on their way.

I was loath to admit it even to myself, but there is an abundance of evidence that a great "dry wave" is rolling eastward, slowly but surely grinding down opposition to prohibition. And riding the crest of this wave are the clean, substantial citizens of the Nation—the John Smiths and the Tom Browns—and, always, their wives and sisters and mothers are riding at their sides.

Some day we wets are going to awaken to find that an overwhelming majority of the people of the United States are weary of bootleggers and dry-law violators. Some day, and that day is not far distant, these people are going to rid the country of the bootlegger and the rum runner just as the vigilantes of the fifties rid the California mining camps of undesirable gamblers, gunmen, and prostitutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON]. [Applause.]

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, after hearing for 50 minutes to-day the villification of the enforcement of law in this country and the villification of those agencies that stand most prominently for law and order, I wish that I could have more than two minutes. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Galli-VAN] in his attack first tried to besmirch every Member of this House by claiming that the Anti-Saloon League was trying to have every Member of Congress followed and searched out as to his habits of drink, charging it to the Anti-Saloon League and stating it was in the Washington Times.

I hold in my hand the article in the Washington Times. gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan] is in the front seat; I challenge him to find one word in that relating to the Anti-Saloon League; one word saying that the charges are to be directed against dry Members of Congress. [Applause.] is all a part of an attempt to besmirch and besmudge; it is a case where truth does not matter; facts do not handicap. is only to put on here a good vaudeville stunt. It is all right here, where we know this sort of performance.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CRAMTON. No; I can not.

It is a question that the country takes more seriously. wish the gentleman from Massachusetts would put in some facts about prohibition that are nearer home. I wish he would tell you what it accomplishes, as well as how much it costs. We are going to have the eighteenth amendment enforced, and if to get enforcement in this country it is necessary to spend more than $14,000,000, we are going to do it. [Applause.]

We are going to have enforcement, and Massachusetts will be the happier when we get it. In the United States the death rate in the years before prohibition rule was never below 13.6 to the thousand per annum, and in the three years since prohibition it has never been that high. In 1921 it went down to 11.6. Five hundred thousand lives have been saved in three years. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Give him some more time, Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. GALLIVAN. I object.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman one additional minute.

Mr. CRAMTON. Thank God, I have been able to say in two

Mr. GALLIVAN. No; you can not—Mr. CRAMTON. That will answer the statements of men who have spent 50 minutes; that I can state enough facts to put to shame men who for 50 minutes have besmirched law and order in this country and who do not dare to let me put more facts in the Record. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.
Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. UPSHAW].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, first of all I wish to pay my respects to the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallavan], who said that "the gentleman from Georgia" recently made the statement that half the Members of the House drink. Mr. Gallivan's declaration is not borne out by the facts; the gentleman is either ignorantly or maliciously mistaken; this thing that is not a fact is absolutely false. Of course the gentleman does not wish to make an untrue statement. Listen, and I will read you the exact language from my recent speech:

Some of these governors—most of them, let us hope—are men of sobriety and positive patriotism, and most of the Congressmen and Senators, I am glad to believe, practice the prohibition which their votes profess. But there are enough who do not to cast an ominous cloud on the official sky.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? In

Mr. UPSHAW. I do not yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. UPSHAW. I want to say another thing, that even prizefighters make themselves agreeable to certain amenities. It is not a brave thing for the gentleman from Massachusetts to stand here for 50 minutes with his vaudeville antics and innuendoes and plead the cause of the discredited liquor interests of this country and then to deny to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Cramton], who only spoke three minutes, the oppor-tunity to extend his remarks. No brave man will do a thing like that. [Applause.]

I remind you that liquor was outlawed because it poisoned and debauched American citizenship. Real patriotism will abide by the American verdict. If what we have just seen and heard from the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan] is Democracy, then I am not a Democrat. His utterances do not spell Democracy—they are the creed of "boozeocracy." Prohibitionized Democracy drove the saloon out of the South, and a prohibitionized Americanism will keep that devilish institution out of America.

The gentleman from Boston made much of the fact that dry States are spending more time on the enforcement of our prohibition law than the State of Massachusetts. No wonder, with such "wet" leadership as Gallivan, Tinkham, and company! I say to you that this fact, which was emphasized by Mr. Gallivan, simply shows that the ideals of sobriety in the dry States, which long ago outlawed the liquor traffic, are far higher than in the wet States like Massachusetts, where wet Boston rules the roost. [Applause.]

And I say to you again that such loyal, wholesome efforts as are being put forth by the dry States for the enforcement of this law are only struggling against the depraved tastes and the low, lawbreaking ideals and appetites that were begotten in the dry States by the darling saloon, which the gentleman from Massachusetts has advocated so long. [Applause.] And God knows, if I were as smart as Mr. Gallivan is supposed to be [laughter], and if I had the ability to really entertain people like he can do, I would not prostitute my eloquence, my learning, my time, and my high official position by defending the debauching liquor traffic-that saloon, that was so long the legalized breeder of idleness and crime, the trysting place of anarchy, the companion of the brothel, and the gateway of hell.

[Applause.]
Mr. GALLIVAN. I might say to the gentleman that he would not get paid for it.

A STRIKING, PITIFUL CONTRAST. Mr. UPSHAW. To-day's labored diatribe of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Tinkham] against the Anti-Saloon League is only one of the many from the same apostle of Boston "wetness" which we have heard on this floor. It is another illustration of the way in which "wet" leaders tell only one side of the story. He throws up his hands in holy horror because the Anti-Saloon League, which came into being for the express purpose of fighting liquor at the polls and in halls of legislation, has lived up to its contract with the American people. With the friends of prohibition long divided and getting nowhere toward the legal destruction of the saloon, the Anti-Saloon League was born in the brain and heart of Dr. Howard Lee Russell, an honored and beloved Congregational minister, for the great purpose of bringing together Republicans and Democrats, Protestants and Catholics, Jews and gentiles—all who loved the American home better than the protected American saloon. Thus presenting a solid front to the organized liquor traffic, the legal overthrow of the devilish thing was accomplished. Supported by the voluntary contributions of the friends of the cause, these same friends have determined that the league shall not go out of business as long as some three dozen liquor organizations continue in business for the express purpose of nullifying our prohibition law. What foolish fools the "dry" forces would be if, having taken the first-line trenches, they should go off and leave the field to the enemy. I know the princely man, Wayne B. Wheeler, on whom aspersions have been cast, as a keen, clean patriot and statesman. I have known all these leaders many years, and I thank God they have justified my fullest faith in their unselfish, patriotic integrity. And look at the other side. I give here a crushing, pulverizing array evidence concerning the corrupt practices of brewers, distillers, and saloon keepers. It comes from the official record, and it should be enough to make every friend of the outlawed liquor traffic hang his head in shame.

LEST WE FORGET.

The disloyal, vicious, and criminal activities of the brewery and liquor interests, whom some would recall to their corrupt power, is established upon the evidence presented to a subcommittee of the Committee of the Judiciary of the Senate, which was unanimously approved by the whole committee and accepted by the Senate, condemning these organizations and their partisans in unmeasured terms. The following extract from the committee decision, published in the Congressional Record, September 5, 1919, page 5187, says:

September 5, 1919, page 5187, says:

The allegations and charges made in said Resolution No. 307, hereinbefore set out, in regard to the brewing and liquor activities, were substantially sustained, as will appear from the printed record, volumes 1 and 2, herewith transmitted.

Your committee in entering upon the investigation directed by said Resolution No. 307 interpreted that resolution as requiring an inquiry into two subjects, to wit:

1. The conduct and activities of the brewing and liquor interests, political and otherwise, was specifically demanded; and

2. A general inquiry into pro-German propaganda and activities was required. The testimony taken having been printed, a review thereof is deemed unnecessary. Complying, however, with the mandate of the resolution requiring a report of the results established by the investigation, the following findings are herewith submitted for the information and attention of the Senate:

and attention of the Senate:

I.

With regard to the conduct and activities of the brewing and liquor interests, the committee is of the opinion that the record clearly establishes the following facts:

(a) That they have furnished large sums of money for the purpose of secretly controlling newspapers and periodicals.

(b) That they have undertaken to and have frequently succeeded in controlling primaries, elections, and political organizations.

(c) That they have contributed enormous sums of money to political campaigns, in violation of the Federal statutes and the statutes of several of the States.

(d) That for the purpose of influencing public opinion they have attempted and partly succeeded in subsidizing the public press.

(f) That to suppress and coerce persons hostile to and to compel support for them they have resorted to an extensive system of boycotting unfriendly American manufacturers and mercantile concerns.

(g) That they have created their own political organization in many States and in smaller political units for the purpose of carrying into effect their own political will, and have financed the same with large contributions and assessments.

(h) That with a view of using it for their own political purposes they contributed large sums of money to the German-American Alliance, many of the membership of which were disloyal and unpatriotic.

(i) That they organized clubs, leagues, and corporations of various kinds for the purpose of secretly carrying on their political activities without having their interest known to the public.

(j) That they improperly treated the funds expended for political purposes as a proper expenditure of their business and consequently failed to return the same for taxation under the revenue laws of the United States.

(k) That they have subsidized authors of recognized standing in literary circles to write articles of their selection for many standard periodicals.

(m) That for many years a working agreement existed between the brewing and distilling interests of thei

The American people have not forgotten that these disloyal and criminal interests camouflaged their activities behind names that sounded innocent to their ear and that breathed of liberty. In the published report of the investigation made by Congress of the activities of the German-American Alliance, the list of these "civil liberty" leagues, "manufacturers and business men's associations," "liberty and independence leagues" is given on pages 833 to 838:

John Koren was retained by the United States Brewers' Association for $5,000 a year (58, 87) to furnish statistical advice. Mr. Koren furnished data for the answer to the article by W. A. White in the Saturday Evening Post (111) and wrote articles for the Atlantic Monthly (87). Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce and Labor; Ira Bennett, of Washington; and L. B. Namier were paid contributors of the American Leader (577). Mr. Nagel received $125 an article (579).

Michael Mouchaeu was paid for special writing and for articles in his own pamphlet, Phoenix (103, 7).

Senator Nelson asked Mr. Feigenspan, president of the United States Brewers' Association, whether they had employed Mr. Koren. Following is the evidence:

"Senator Nelson. Did you hire editorial writers to write articles for the magazines?

the magazines? FEIGENSPAN, Not editorial writers, but we hired writers to "Mr. Feigenspan. Not editorial writers, but we hired writers to write up certain subjects.

"Senator Nelson. Did you employ John Koren to write articles in the Atlantic Monthly?

"Mr. Feigenspan. Mr. Koren was not engaged by me, but was employed by the association while I was chairman. He was engaged as statistician. * * I did not know who originally retained him. But he was retained by the United States Brewers' Association while I was chairman of the publication committee.

"Senator Overman. How much was he paid?

"Mr. Feigenspan. I think it was $5,000 a year. I would not be positive as to that amount, but that is my recollection."

When Mr. Koren's articles were used extensively as the original investigations of a great authority and independent research specialist he had the indorsement of influential educators and prominent men; all this time he was simply the paid agent of the liquor interests at $5,000 per year.

$5,000 per year.

TRYING TO POISON LABOR.

Labor was to be controlled through members or officers of labor organizations who were on the pay roll of the brewers' association (pp. 85, 411, 829).

The brewers' association supplied funds to the German-American Alliance, joining the forces of disloyalty to America and the liquor interests in a partnership of traitorous activity never before paralleled. On pages 329, 330, and elsewhere is the evidence of the financing of the German-American Alliance by the brewing interests. Of this alliance, thus financed, the House Judiciary Committee, in making its report recommending the repeal of its charter, said:

There is no place in this country, certainly in this day, for a strongly organized agency, where those of any foreign blood who are unwilling to become whole-hearted Americans can carry on their campaign to injure this country. We have probably been too tolerant in the past toward those agencies that have endeavored to tear down or undermine our institutions. They have abused the liberty which our Government has given them. Since there is abundant evidence that the German-American Alliance have abused the privileges granted to them in this charter, we should withdraw those privileges and immediately repeal the congressional act.

Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian at the time of the investigation, and later Attorney General of the United States, said:

That the organized liquor traffic of the country is a vicious interest because it has been unpatriotic, because it has been pro-German in its sympathies and its conduct. Why, you and I know perfectly well that it is around these great brewery organizations owned by rich men, almost all of them German by birth and sympathy, at least before we entered the war, that has grown up the societies, all the organizations of this country intended to keep young German immigrants from becoming real American citizens. It is around the saengerfests and the saengerbunds and organizations of that kind, generally finance by the rich brewers, that the young Germans who have come to America are taught first the fatherland and second America (p. 10).

LIQUOR'S TRAIL OF CRIME.

You have to almost hold your nose as you read these official revelations of the devilish activities of the allied brewery and saloon interests which these gay Bostonians would recall to legal guardianship in America. Go get the camphor bottle and then read some more:

then read some more:

The National Association of Commerce and Labor was formed by the United States Brewers' Association October 3, 1913, to unite industries whose business was largely dependent upon breweries. It was through this association that the brewers piled their insidious stamp tax, compelling these allied influstries to help support their fraudulent political campaigns. (95, 369-400!)

The organization bureau was formed November 1, 1907, by the United States Brewers' Association, with John A. McDermott as manager (839-9). It employed speakers and "took an active part during the last two years in State and local campaigns throughout the country." It gave personal service in 46 States and Territories and won substantial victories in 23 State campaigns in 1910 (789-809). Mr. Gardiner estimated that from 1911 to 1914 this bureau had expended $500,000 (329).

The Interstate Conference Committee and the Interstate Executive Association were formed by the United States Brewers' Association to unite and coordinate breweries and local organizations throughout the United States (798-808).

The American Hotel Protective Association, a national organization, was financed in part by the United States Brewers' Association for purposes shrewdly defined.

"Major HUMEs. Have you assisted in financing these activities?"

"Mr. Fox. Yes. That is, we entered into an arrangement with Mr. Gehring to try—well, there were two things. One was to try to interest hotel people in an organization of their own, and the other was to try to convert hotel people to the beer and light-wine idea."

"The National Investors' Protective League," Mr. Fox says, "was was to try to convert hotel people to the beer and ligat-wase local.

(317.)

"The National Investors' Protective League," Mr. Fox says, "was rather an ambitious personal scheme of a certain attorney who was interested in some breweries around New York to try to form a sort of organization of the stockholders in breweries," (314.)

The German-American Alliance was used as a camouffage and extensively financed by the United States Brewers' Association, Mr. Andrea devoting much time and money to organization of local branches for political purposes, as explained elsewhere in this digest.

Labor's Peace Council, an organization maintained by the German Government to keep us out of the war (194), Labor's Emergency League, and the American-Hungarian Liberty League (9659, 711, 731) were also encouraged.

Doubtless many of the 40 organizations with high-sounding names, like "Self-Determination League," "Molly Pitcher Club," and so forth, are in the same class.

In politics, they sought by complete surveys of candidates to obtain all the information which would enable them to bring pressure upon leaders in public and private life. Here is a pressure upon leaders in public and private life. Here is a copy of one such survey, as given on page 1263 of the report:

1. Full name and address? George F. Burgess, Gonzales County.

2. Age? Fifty-five.

3. Married or single? Married.

4. If married, does wife exercise any undue influence in regard to his business or political affairs? No.

5. Polities? Democrat.

6. Is he popular or unpopular in his community? Very popular.

7. Schooling? High school.

8. Business? No other business outside politics.

9. Financial standing? Good; worth about $20,000.

10. Where is his banking business, commercial and private, transacted? Dilworth Bank of Gonzales.

11. What position does the bank (or banks) assume on the wet and dry questions? Wet.

12. Is candidate known as a liberal or dry man? Liberal.

13. Was he ever a candidate for any political office? Yes; county attorney and Congressman. Was elected to both offices without opposition. He can probably be Congressman as long as he wishes to hold the office.

14. Elected or defeated? Elected.

sition. He can probably be Congressman as the office.

14. Elected or defeated? Elected.

15. Elected by how many? Without opposition.

16. Defeated by how many?

17. Number of votes in the city? Eight hundred and fifty.

18. Number of votes in the county? Three thousand.

19. Religion? He is a member of no church. Was put out of Bap-

19. Religion? He is a member of no church. Was put out of Baptist Church,
20. To what fraternal organizations does he belong? Masonic;
Knight Templar.
21. Recreation? Nothing in particular. Congress occupies his time.
22. Name some of his closest associates. C. S. Dilworth, Dilworth Bank, Gonzales; John H. Garner, Congressman; W. T. Bagby, Hallettsville; W. J. Rainboldt, Gonzales.
George A. Burgess was elected from the old tenth district. At that time it included Galveston. It was represented by a Republican previous to his election. He took his seat in 1900, serving his seventh term now, and will run again. He will have no opposition. He used to be "one of the boys," played cards, and drank a little. His health falled, but he is still popular "with the boys." This report was taken from his most intimate friend, W. J. Fainboldt, (1263.)

HOW ORGANIZED LIQUOR CAPTURES CANDIDATES.

HOW ORGANIZED LIQUOR CAPTURES CANDIDATES.

Let those "wet triplets," Messrs, Tinkham, Gallivan, and HILL, who indict the Anti-Saloon League for political activities in behalf of dry candidates, read the pledge sought from candidates. It is illustrated by a sample, signed by William H. Thomson, mayor of Chicago, and received by Anton J. Cermak, recently elected to the county board in Cook County:

Thomson, mayor of Chicago, and received by Anton J. Cermak, recently elected to the county board in Cook County:

The undersigned respectfully represents that he is a candidate for the office of mayor on the Republican ticket of the city of Chicago at the election to be held on Tuesday, April 6, A. D. 1915.

That he favors and will promete in every way the objects for which the United Societies for Local Self-Government were organized, namely: Personal liberty, home rule, and equal taxation.

That he believes every citizen should be protected in the full enjoyment of all the personal rights and liberties guaranteed him by the Constitution of the United States and the State of Illinois.

And that if elected mayor of the city of Chicago he will use all honorable means to promote such objects:

1. That he will oppose all laws known as "blue laws," and that he especially declares that he is opposed to a closed Sunday, believing that the State law referring to Sunday closing is obsolete and should not be enforced by the city administration. And that he is opposed to all ordinances tending to curtail the citizens of Chicago in the enjoyment of their liberties on the weekly day of rest.

2. That he is in favor of "special bar permits" until 3 o'clock a. m. being issued by the city of Chicago to reputable societies or organizations for the purpose of permitting such societies to hold their customary entertainments:

3. That as mayor he will use his veto power to prevent the enactment of any ordinance which alms at the abridgment of the rights of personal liberty or is intended to repeal any liberal ordinance now enacted, especially one repealing or amending the "special bar permit" ordinance now in force.

4. That he will oppose the further extension of the prohibition territory within the city limits, unless such extension is demanded by a majority of the residents in a district in which at least two-thirds of the building lots are improved with dwelling houses.

5. That he is unalterably opposed to having the antisal

ANTON J. CERMAR,
Secretary of the United Societies for Local Self-Government and the Liberty League.

Before high heaven, I ask: What name can one give to a movement which pledges public officials to violate their oaths of office? How many of the minority here who are endeavoring to nullify the Constitution and are fighting for beer and liquor to-day have signed such a pledge? Or, more likely, perhaps, we may suppose that the Baltimore and Boston "triplets" do not have to "sign up"—for their fundamental and habitual "wetness" is too well known to require a pledge. By boycott of unfriendly business interests they sought to compel the silence, if not the aid, of influential men. Through the subsidizing of the press they attempted to poison our channels of public information at the source. Millions of dollars were expended by them for these purposes. In Pennsylvania alone the brewers' association had $1,400,000 on deposit in a single year (p. 424):

Major Humes. This is the Pennsylvania State association. The bank accounts of the United States Brewers' Association were offered yesterday showing that the highest deposit in any one year was $1,400,000. Senator Overman. This is the Pennsylvania State association? Major Humes. This is the Pennsylvania association summary showing the amount raised within the State alone. That was outside of and, of course, in addition to, the money that went into the treasury of the United States Brewers' Association.

These huge sums were obtained by deductions of the amounts given by members of the association from their tax returns, thus stealing from the Government to use the stolen funds to corrupt the political life of the Nation (p. 1077). The state-ment of the Pennsylvania Brewery Association to the Commis-sioner of Internal Revenue is as follows:

The association has been advised that under the rulings of the department that such contributions are not proper deductions of such contributions in making their reports, and that while the association is unable to give the information asked in respect to contributions of its members for the reason above set forth, it will immediately advise all of its members to make amended returns in respect to such contributions to the association as have been deducted in previous returns and upon which an excise or income tax has not already been paid, and it will advise its members to pay without delay such taxes as may be properly assessed in respect to the same without protest or claim for abatement or refunds or to execute such waivers as may be deemed necessary or desirable by the department.

THE TRAGEDY OF LIQUOR PAPERS.

Remembering the measureless opportunities and responsibilities of newspapers in creating public sentiment and molding character for good or ill, what an unspeakable tragedy it is to contemplate the surrender of so many leading dailies to the blandishments of liquor money!

The leading newspapers and magazines of the country were induced to publish as unbiased and authoritative studies articles which were propaganda furnished through the brewers' association (pp. 60, 61, 62). Other newspapers were bought outright with brewery money and used to support the twin causes, liquor and Germany, in the war (pp. 11, 754-755, 940-941, 38-50, 70-73).

Chautauquas, centers of light and inspiration to many of our people, were to be made centers for the brewers' spokesmen, who sought entrance into Chautauqua meetings and in churches, colleges, lyceums, etc. (p. 1082)

The foreign-speaking press was controlled in large degree by the brewers' association, who secured the publication by papers with a circulation of 7,500,000 of articles on "personal poisoning the minds of the foreign-speaking people of the country against the ideals of America and making them dupes of the liquor traffic (p. 456) and making them increasingly dangerous to our American civilization.

In the report of the hearings we find this:

Major HUMES. I call your attention to the confidential report of the publication committee that was in executive session in 1915, that romes from the office of the United States Brewers' Association, as follows:

And yet, and yet, and yet! The "wet" crowd, with consummate gall (I can think of no other word to express it) "virtuously" cries out against the organization and political activities of the "drys."

May the Lord forgive their guilty, inconsistent souls.

A DEVILISH, DANGEROUS DEFIANCE.

This is the history of the brewery and liquor organizations in the past. I submit it to you lest we forget the kind of enemy with whom we have to deal. It has violated every regulative, restrictive, or prohibitory law that has ever been placed on the statute books. It has corrupted politics, debauched its patrons, and defied the Government. Why should any special privileges be extended to the brewers in the face of this kind of record? Have they reformed? Most of those who have continued as cereal beverage dealers have been violating the law.

The logical successor of such organizations is the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Like some of the other organizations referred to heretofore, it assumes respectability by claiming that it is in no way connected with the brewers. Murder will out. Following the recent S O S appeal by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment for a war chest of $7,000,000 for their campaign to elect a wet Congress and a wet President in 1924-witness this letter from their office here in Washington-evidence has accumulated that this organization is simply the tool of the old brewery and liquor crowd which has defied law in the past and is violating the Constitution today, and using this camouflage organization to hamstring law enforcement and finally to repeal the eighteenth amendment itself. In view of the pious representations and the repudiations of the brewers and liquor dealers by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the following documents and letters sent out by these master organizations are interesting and conclusive as to their connection with the liquor trade.

This claim of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that it has no connection with liquor manufacturers or dealers and that it depends upon the $1 per member annual dues is disproved by the following letter from the Wisconsin

MILWAUKEE, Wis., October 6, 1922.

GENTLEMEN: In view of the fact that the "Wisconsin Division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment" has done such wonderful work during the last primaries, having been positively instrumental in securing 8 "wets" out of the 10 congressional candidates, and all of which facts and results were praised and confirmed by Mr. Dietrichs, of Chicago, at our meeting held yesterday, it was unanimously decided to give them further financial aid in order that the association might be able to complete the work they have set out to do.

To this end we permitted ourselves to become assessed for half of the amount contributed at our previous meeting, namely, at the rate of 5 cents per 1,000 bushels of steeping capacity.

In as far as the money is needed now, will you not be kind enough to forward immediately to the undersigned your check for $-?

We are sorry, indeed, that some of the malters found themselves unable to attend the meeting, as Mr. Dietrichs gave us such an excellent exposition of facts and conditions as exist all over the entire country at the present time.

Very truly yours,

Wisconsix W.

WISCONSIN MALTERS' CLUB, Per Walter A. ZINN, P. O. Box No. 47.

P. S.—It is expected that a meeting of the old malsters burean of statistics will be called shortly, and in as far as matters of both importance and interest to the malting trade will be discussed, it is hoped everybody will be able to be present.

(Copy of blue ticket inclosed:)

No money for our soldiers Unless you Bring Back Beer: Moonshine pays no taxes.

The use of figureheads-persons whose names are widely known-copied from the activities of the United States Brewers' Association and the German-American Alliance, is indicated in the following letter from the Wisconsin Anti-Prohibition Association, which later changed its name to Wisconsin Division, Association Against the Prohibition Amendment:

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Dr. C. W. Collver,

President Citizens' Bank, Clinton, Wis.

Dear Sir: The Wisconsin Anti-Prohibition Association is planning to organize your county. We are writing you to ask if you will not suggest to us the names of five prominent citizens in your county, not connected with the liquor interests nor actively engaged in politics, who are in sympathy with our movement and are qualified to serve on your county executive committee.

We need men who are not only leaders in the county but are also boosters for the cause.

If for any reason you do not feel at liberty to suggest such names may we ask you to advise us of the name of some one in your county who would be qualified to recommend prospective committee members?

To acquaint you with the aims and purposes of our association we inclose a copy of our circular letter setting forth these matters.

Please accept our thanks in advance for your courtesy.

Yours very truly,

The Wisconsin Anti-Prohibition Association,

THE WISCONSIN ANTI-PROHIBITION ASSOCIATION, J. J. SEELMAN, President.

USING "A LIQUOR LIE" TO STIR UP PREJUDICE.

In face of the fact that all religious denominations have backed the Anti-Saloon League from the beginning, just read this bold, bare-faced prevarication:

The first of the "General rules of the association" reads as follows: "The association is nonpartisan and nonsectarian." Attributing to one single Protestant church practical control of the Anti-Saloon League, the association in the following letter attempts to organize religious jealousy and church antagonisms to further its cause:

MILWAUKEE, WIS., August 22, 1922.

Rev. WM. C. HAYES, Milwaukee, Wis.

REVEREND Sig: It it generally understood that the nomination of candidates by the committee of 44 was dictated by the Anti-Saloon League. This league is also actively engaged in securing the election of State senators and assemblymen who are in sympathy with their

The Anti-Saloon League is essentially a religious organization; in fact, all of its activities are carried on through the Methodist Church. The integrity of the fundamental principle of religious freedom is dependent upon all religious denominations respecting the dictum that the church should be kept out of politics and politics out of the church the church should be kept out of politics and politics out of the church.

When, then, a portion of a certain religious denomination, even though it be under the cloak of the Anti-Saloon League, makes an attempt to control the politics of the State, does it not become incumbent upon other religious denominations to enter the political arena and enforce a proper respect for the sanctity of our institutions?

Many of the tenets of the Anti-Saloon League's church are fundamentally at variance with those of other churches. What may these churches expect if the Anti-Saloon League succeeds in its brazen attempt to capture the executive and legislative offices of the State, will they be satisfied when they have been successful in enforcing that one tenet of their religion, the total abstinence of alcohol, or will they then select another of their restrictive doctrines and proceed to secure its enforcement by law?

The chief source of the Anti-Saloon League's strength lies in the support it receives from radical Methodist churches. In justice to these churches it should be said that many fair-minded Methodists resent this unwarranted activity.

But the fact remains that a portion of the Methodist churches, through the Anti-Saloon League, are attempting to obtain political control of the State. What are you going to do about it?

We have a plan. We will with your assistance beat them at their own game. We are going to try to enlist the support of all fair-minded heads of churches throughout the State in our movement against radical prohibition and for sane temperance.

We are therefore inclosing herewith a blank which we will ask you to fill out and return to us. With a large number of these blanks in our files we will be able to neutralize the fear which the Anti-Saloon League, through its church backing, has been able to instill into the minds of politicians and legislators.

Our plan has the indorsement of prominent members of the local clergy.

Will you not help us by filling out and returning your blank at once?

Clergy.

Will you not help us by filling out and returning your blank at once?

Very truly yours.

WISCONSIN DIVISION, ASSOCIATION AGAINST THE PROHIBITION AMENDMENT.

J. J. SELLMAN, President.

Gentlemen of the Congress, never in all my acquaintance with political propaganda have I read such an unmitigated, unfumigated lie. I am a Baptist myself of the old-fashioned deep-water kind—the kind who just love to "play up and down Jordan's banks"-but I have long been an active member of the Anti-Saloon League and an honorary member of that great forwardlooking company of the handmaidens of God, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and I know that I have had priceless fellowship with the leaders of all religious denominations who have united on one platform: "Up with the home—Down with the saloon.

This attempt to make it appear that prohibition was adopted by the Anti-Saloon League, which got its chief source of support from radical Methodist churches, is a sample of the unreliability of practically everything that this wet organization says. Anyone who is familiar with the history of the Anti-Saloon League knows that its founder was a Congregational minister, that two of the great denominational leaders who helped to plan its work were Bishop Kynett, of the Methodist Church, and Archbishop Ireland, of the Catholic Church. It is a source of power to that organization that it has now the consecrated backing of the churches. It is fundamental to its organization that it is controlled by representatives chosen by the representatives of the various denominations themselves. A few of the denominations do not elect delegates or representatives upon the Anti-Saloon League boards of control, but leaders of those denominations are on those boards.

THE FELLOWSHIP OF A COMMON PURPOSE,

Some of the denominations which have affiliated with and helped to control this organization, or which have leaders of the denomination on the boards, are as follows: Congregational, United Brethren, Methodist Episcopal, English Lutheran, United Presbyterian, Presbyterian, Baptist, Church of God, Evangelical, Disciples, and Friends. Leading Catholics, Episcopalians, and Mormons, and prominent men in various other denominations have taken an active part in the Anti-Saloon League movementuniting their efforts on the things of common interest and not on the things that divide.

But Congress did not submit the national prohibition amendment nor did the States ratify it simply because the Anti-Saloon League was for it. It was because that organization represented the dominant public sentiment of the Nation concerning this criminal traffic that its leadership has been so successful and its leaders so maligned by "wet" papers and wet" politicians. Men and women inside and outside of the churches helped to win the victory. If any wet organization thinks any one church denomination brought about the adoption of national prohibition they will realize their groundless, foolish mistake when they attempt to muster the votes to elect a Congress and State legislatures to repeal it.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan] declared that the patriotism of those who would repeal the eighteenth amendment or modify the Volstead law has been assailed by dry leaders. Not a word of it. The wets have never been denied the right of peaceful efforts to repeal. But the drys do protest that such incendiary utterances as we often hear, as we have heard to-day on the floor of this House, are utterly unfair to a new-born law, and we further protest that they are being made nine cases out of ten by the lifelong arch enemies of prohibition, who have never shown the spirit of real democracy by accepting for a day the well-earned verdict of a consecrated constitutional majority.

The gentleman from Massachusetts talks with great anxiety about the money that is being taken from the pockets of the people for the enforcement of this law-$9,000,000 in a year, if you please; and he said it is nearly doubled by the amount spent in the Department of Justice. The fact that liquor violators almost pay for their own condemnation through the income from the confiscated property of bootleggers, who are encouraged by every speech like that of the gentleman from Massachusetts, or those of the two gentlemen from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan and Mr. Tinkham], if you please, brings an indictment of criminality against the illicit-liquor seller which no other criminal "enjoys." But never mind if it were twenty millions or fifty millions or even a hundred millions a year until this mighty task is completed. Remember that the drink bill of America, liquor and beer sold over the counter, was two billion five hundred millions a year under the saloon régime, to say nothing of the terrible cost of prisons and asylums, almshouses, and shattered homes, in addition to the millions of men and women whose earning capacity was tragically depleted by their contact with liquor. The cost, the cost,

God save our country completely and forever from the greatest highway bandit that ever robbed the American people. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Quin].

[Applause].

the cost!

Mr. QUIN. Mr. Chairman, it is a matter of extreme regret to me that the Members of this House have been compelled to listen to such utterances as the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan] made on this floor to-day. Is it possible, after the people of the United States have passed judgment on this great question, not only a majority of the people but three-fourths of them through their constituted authorities, have amended the organic law of this Republic and then placed enforcement legislation on top of that-is it possible that the gentleman, representing what used to be considered the hub of intelligence and patriotism of the United States, the city of Boston, would on this floor humiliate the American people, the God-fearing, law-abiding, liberty-loving men and women of the United States by such utterances as he has made on this floor to-day? [Applause.] He need not uneasy about any waste of money by the people of the United States in enforcing prohibition legislation. What we have to be uneasy about is such as he, clothed by the vote of the people with authority to stand in a high place, who villify those who respect the law, and that he should do his utmost to make his sort have a contempt not only for the law and the right-thinking people of these United States but to have a contempt for the Constitution itself. [Applause.]

In my judgment, it is reprehensible for a man occupying such an exalted position as that of a United States Congressman to endeavor to degrade the position that he holds by such utterances. [Applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. THORPE].

Mr. THORPE. Mr. Chairman, I would not take up the valuable time of this House to-day if it were not for the fact that wish to warn my Republican colleagues of impending disaster [applause]-just a little premature, gentlemen-and also wish to refer my Democratic friends to their own inglorious history. [Applause and laughter.] During the last days of the old year which has just passed away the news was published in the leading Washington papers and the report was sent by the Associated Press to the four corners of the earth that the Democratic National Committee would begin immediately after the first of the New Year a relentless warfare on the Republican Party; that there would be a mighty gathering of the unterrified to agree on the "new paramount issue." Reference was made to the fact that the party chiefs had not fully agreed as to whether the League of Nations would be resurrected from the scrap heap of political oblivion, where it was consigned by over 7,000,000 voters in November, 1920, and made the battle cry again, or whether a new shibboleth would be manufactured by the hungry horde of disgruntled self-styled politicians who turned this Government over to its true friends-the Republican Party-a little over two years ago, crushed, bleeding, and almost bankrupt, with national honor at its lowest ebb and wreck and ruin facing the people of this fair land of ours on every

So I have scanned every line in every newspaper published in Washington for several days for the message that would strike terror into the hearts of the Republicans, and on January 9 the battle cry was sounded. "The new paramount" issue was proclaimed, and in order that there may be no dispute about its authorship I will read a telegraphic message published in the News, a Washington, D. C., newspaper, and request that It be inserted in the Congressional Record as a part of my address.

BRYAN'S HAT IS IN.

CHICAGO, ILL.—William Jennings Bryan served notice to-day that he is still in the political running.

The commoner denied he had given up politics for preaching. He predicted a Democrat would capture the White House in 1924, and indicated he was once again prepared to lead the forces of "Progressive Democracy."

"The country is getting dryer every day through more efficient enforcement" he said, "And as a political issue prohibition is playing out." Darwinism just now is the "acute" question, Bryan added.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am personally acquainted with this man Bryan, and I presume that most of you have heard of him before. He and I formerly lived in the same city, and it per-haps is not good manners to speak of my former townsman in the way I am forced to do. I realize that my remarks may be viewed by many as ridiculous, but I am sure they are no more ridiculous than many of the positions assumed by my friend Bryan on many public questions in the past.

Mr. Bryan ran a paramount issue factory in Lincoln, Nebr., for many years. He was the sole manager and reaped enormous profits from his enterprise, but never paid any cash dividends to the stockholders, who were the Democratic Party. [Laughter.] The first district of Nebraska sent Mr. Bryan to Congress; likewise the first district of Nebraska sent me here. Many years ago we were both known as "boy orators"— he as the "boy orator of the Platte," while I was known as the "boy tramp orator." [Laughter.] And the Democratic Party brought us both into political notoriety—he as a prophet of populistic propaganda and I as a defender of the Republican faith. I never admired my political creators very much, although

I have never denied the soubriquet which I acquired in the troublesome times of the Cleveland administration.

Mr. Bryan's first "paramount issue" was the "robber tariff." His old constituents and many others in various parts of the country well remember his chief weapons of defense, a tin cup, a butcher knife, and his most eloquent tongue, and I am also sure that there are many present here to-day who well remember that the voters of this country listened to these false prophets. Then came Grover Cleveland's administration, the Wilson-Gorman tariff bill, Coxey's army, closed factories and work shops. Banks breaking everywhere. Business of all kinds paralyzed and 4,000,000 tramps roaming the country who formerly, under the McKinley tariff law, were well employed. It may seem rather strange to this august body of men to hear me say that I was one of this motley herd who was turned out during this reign of terror. I remember many nights that I had nothing but the earth as a pillow and nothing but the dark mantle of night as a cover, the stars of heaven shining as the only ray of hope to a benighted pilgrim that some day the tides of fate might turn the tables of despair into a happy return to an honorable place amongst my fellow men and that the infamous rule of the iniquitous Democratic Party might end. But all at once this same Bryan manufactured and decreed another paramount issue from the "Lincoln factory," "No crown of thorns," "No cross of gold," "Free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1," but a distressed and ruined citizenship revolted and prosperity returned through the election of the martyred President, William Mc-Kinley, the wheels of industry moved, factories opened, the sound of the loom and the spin of the wheel were heard, the farmers awakened from their lethargy, and prosperity reigned on every hand. A new tariff law, the "Dingley bill," was written. The national debt was reduced, and peace reigned throughout this land of ours, but, Mr. Speaker, it would take days and weeks for me to recite the glorious history of the Republican Party, and time will not permit. I believe the majority of the people of this country are Republicans. They ought to be, at least. It is with pride that a Republican speaker can refer to Abraham Lincoln, Ulysses S. Grant, James A. Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, and Warren G. Harding. [Applause.] Dare any Democratic Member stand here in the face of their history of waste and ruin and defend the administration of Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson? If they dare attempt it, the history of these 16 years of misrule will rise up to condemn

The only real abiding place the Democratic Party has is in the Southland, and I want to say right here that I have no malice in my heart for my Democratic friends who come from south of the Mason and Dixon line. I do not believe in waving the bloody shirt. The Civil War settled all questions of national unity between the States. I have traveled the South for years. I have friends by the thousands down in Dixie. I love them, but I would like to see them awaken from their hypnotic dream and take their place in the onward march of an enlightened civilization. The Southland is near and dear to me. My mother and my mother's people were southerners, and so in material construction I am about 50-50. But the South has had many tribulations cast upon it in the last 60 years and the toll has been heavy; it has been visited and controlled by three dangerous and deadly diseases. First, the smallpox, which took thousands of its citizens at an enormous expense; second, the yellow fever, most deadly in its work; and last of all the most terrible disease, the Democratic Party. Now, I am aware that many of you who are present will challenge my statement that the Democratic Party is a disease. I agree with you that the statement sounds rather ridiculous, but I am sure that political parties are supposed to have life and action; they are supposed to be concrete bodies who will function for the good of mankind and bring about results in governmental affairs that will make men and women and children happier and more prosperous. Can this be said of the Democratic Party? No, Mr. Speaker. I pronounce it a deadly cancer which has four times fastened its fangs deeply into our national life since 1860. The Democratic Party is not a constructive party; it never has been. It is the party of negation; it is the party of obstruction to national progress. Its chief asset is opposition to every great principle that the Republican Party advocates. It slumbers like a venomous serpent, ready at all times to strike its blow, but never offers any solution of impending evils, going back to its self-praised history. It believed in the divine right of slavery.

It stood aloof on the question of State rights and for years and years advocated a fiat and unsound system of currency. It has eternally fought the principles of a protective tariff, and whenever an opportunity has been given since the dark days of 1861 to 1865 it has lowered the great American standard, the Star-Spangled Banner, with a policy of "watchful waiting" or "He kept us out of war."

Mr. Chairman, I have never believed that Mr. Bryan or any of his family have descended from the monkey, although he has taken years on the platform trying to deny it and again says it is the most acute question of the times. I, however, do know that for more than 20 years he has made a monkey out of the Democratic Party with his paramount issues and acute ques-tions, and also that for 16 years under Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson the Democratic Party made menkeys out of the American people, so sometimes I am constrained to believe that there is some relationship between the Democratic Party and Darwinism; so perhaps for once Mr. Bryan may be right on a paramount issue or acute question and yet give to the world the true origin of our national enemy, the Democratic Party.

But soon after Mr. Bryan's declaration was made Gov. Smith, of New York, Senator Edwards, of New Jersey, and the silver-tongued, silver-haired veteran statesman, the Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN, of New York, served notice to the country that the next battle would be fought over the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. Shortly thereafter Bainbridge Colby, ex-Justice Clarke, and the late-defeated James Cox, of Ohio, sent forth the call to rally round the old standard, "The League of Nations'

So now, my Republican colleagues, the battle cries have been sounded for 1924-Bryan and Darwinism, Colby, Clarke, Cox and Wilsonism, Smith, Edwards, Cockran and alcoholism, and, William G. McAdoo, with pure and undefiled McAdooism. And now, my Democratic friends, I am going to let you rest here in peace. I hold no malice against any of you. I only hope for a peaceful end for each of you and that the people of this country shall ever in the future be saved from the waste and ruin that has ever attended your attempts to run this Government.

For 26 years I dreamed of the day that I could take my seat in this historic Hall and be a Member of the American Congress,

It had been my life's ambition, and on last November 7 my dream came true. Although I only have the privilege of serving my district a bare four months, I have formed some associations here that I shall cherish as long as I live. I have met many old friends in this House whom I have known for years. I have met others whose records I have watched for years. It is my priviledge to form an opinion of Congress and its workings, and it is my privilege to express that opinion even though I may be criticized for it by the Members on both sides of this House, but I am aware of the critical condition that prevails in many parts of our country, and I would be untrue to my constituency if I did not raise my voice in protest at the lethargy shown here. On December 8 President Harding made a masterful address from this rostrum. He emphasized the pressing needs of the 29,000,000 farmers who have daily had their eyes on this House looking for some legislation that might give them a ray of hope. He spoke plainly on the great question of transportation, and yet weeks have passed and no relief is yet in sight. Ancient history tells us that Nero fiddled while Rome was burning. clare here that the American Congress fiddles while millions in this country are suffering for relief that the leaders of this House could easily bring about.

have seen hours and days wasted here between distinguished Members on both sides as to whether the right word to use was tweedledum or tweedledee while legislation representing millions and billions of dollars to the farmers and stock growers was tied up in committees in order that a $30,000 bridge might be built over Podunk or Pogues Run.

Now, I can hear some of you call me a notoriety seeker; but I am not. I had the notoriety before I ever came here. may call me a radical, an alarmist, a progressive, a farm bloc, or a blockhead and it matters not to me. I have been a Republican all my life. I believe in the grand old Republi-can Party. It is the best instrument of government the American people have ever had. But now is the crisis. Oh, men of the party of Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, and Roosevelt awaken to your duty and victory will be ours in 1924.

Remember, Nero fiddled while Rome burned. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Ton] is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, if I had to be one or the other of the two I would rather be a wet Congressman voting liquor on other a dry ticket than a dry Congressman voting liquor on other people. [Applause.] If it were not for three Members of the House, the two gentlemen from Massachusetts and the distinguished rider of the great white charger from Baltimore [laughter] this House practically would be unanimously dry. They are the only real wets I know of in the House of Representatives

I do not believe that you can find in the whole United States In any one class of men 96 who are more sober than the Members of the United States Senate. I do not believe that in the whole United States you can find in any one class of citizens 435 men more sober than the membership of this great body. [Applause.] Then why all this noise against the Constitution? I have heard it before. I hear it every time a bill comes up that involves prohibition. To listen to the noise you would think there would not be a dry vote in this House, but when the roll is called you hear only once in a while a wet vote, but there is always an overwhelming dry majority

Let me state that my three friends now sitting there together are three of a kind. [Laughter.] And you could draw to that three from now until eternity and you will never fill your hand. [Laughter.] They have to sit together for company.
Mr. HILL. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. UPSHAW. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BLANTON. I have only three minutes, but I will first yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. UPSHAW. Does not the gentleman from Texas think that it comes with poor grace from these "wet" triplets [laughter | here to reflect on the Anti-Saloon League as the active representative of the prohibition forces-

You have to have the three together to make Mr. BLANTON.

one. [Laughter.]
Mr. UPSHAW (continuing). To reflect on the money-raising measures of the dry forces for legitimate purposes when I hold in my hand a letter from the Association Against Prohibition trying to raise $7,000,000 to dynamite the Constitution and nullify our duly constituted law? [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. I can not yield for a letter. Now I will yield to my friend the distinguished gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. HILL. I simply wanted to say to my distinguished friend that we expect to draw a full house to our three in the next Congress.

Mr. BLANTON. Your grandchildren will all be 80 years old before you do that. [Laughter.] The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired. All time has expired, and the Clerk will read the bill, The Clerk read as follows:

For payment to Stanley H. Kunz for expenses incurred as contestee in the contested-election case of Parrillo v. Kunz. audited and recommended by the Committee on Elections No. 1, $2,000, to be disbursed by the Clerk of the House.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

Page 2, line 20: "For payment to Dan Parrillo for expenses incurred as contestant in the contested election case of Parrillo v. Kunz, audited by the Committee on Elections No. 1, $2,000, to be disbursed by the Clerk of the House."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the employment of competent persons to assist in continuing the work of compiling, codifying, and revising the laws and treaties of the United States, $4,000, to be expended under the direction of the Member-elect to the Sixty-eighth Congress who was chairman of the Committee on the Revision of the Laws of the House of Representatives during the Sixty-seventh Congress, and to remain available until June 30, 1924.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against this section for the reason that it is legislation on an appropriation bill and unauthorized by law.

MADDEN. The Sixty-sixth Congress passed an act authorizing this work and continuing it until it was completed.

We have acted under that act.

Mr. BLANTON. I am sure when the gentleman reflects on this he will concede that it is out of order. If the Chair will refer to the act authorizing this work to be done, he will see that it made provision for certain expenses that have already been appropriated for. The work has been done. It has been completed for nearly two years. That bill was passed in this House without objection—a bill containing hundreds of pages without even being read. The House passed it nearly two years ago, and it has been slumbering in a pigeon hole at the other end of the Capitol for two years.

I am not now complaining about the additional appropriations which run up into large sums in various bills last year and this. They might have been necessary, but this is an additional sum that runs on until June 30, 1924, and is unnecessary. I want to submit that it is not a deficiency, it is not paying for something that could be spent under the authorization of the It is clearly unauthorized by law, and I hope the gentleman will not insist on this provision in the bill. There is not a man here who is a closer friend of Colonel LITTLE than I am. I like and admire him as much as anybody does, and would like to do anything I could for him personally, but when it comes to taking money out of the Federal Treasury that is not needed, when the bill has been passed and completed for two years and would have become a law if it were not for the action of another body, we ought not to make this appropriation of $4,000 when it is not needed.

Mr. MADDEN. The act authorizing this work was passed in the Sixty-sixth Congress. It provided that this work should be done and continued to be done until it was completed. The work so far done has only been brought up to the Sixty-sixth Congress. This appropriation is to continue under the act. It is a work in progress. There is nothing for us to do except to provide the means to carry out the law. We are not violating the law, we are not appropriating money to accommodate Colonel LITTLE. We have no interest in Colonel LITTLE. We are performing our duty under the law. Here is what the law says:

Resolved, etc., That the Committee on Revision of the Laws in the House of Representatives is hereby authorized to print additions and amendments to H. R. 9389, or other bills covering the same subject, if in its judgment necessary, in the style and form in which said bill is now printed, with such variations thereof as the said committee deems in the interests of efficiency and economy, and to so continue until final enactment thereof in both Houses of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MADDEN. Yes. Mr. STAFFORD. I remember when the act of this Congress was passed authorizing a clerk to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws at $4,000 it was seriously contested by our friends on the other side. I understood that under that resolution the authorization for that clerk was to expire with this Congress. The purpose now is to continue the provision that we passed in the early part of this Congress, which was so seriously contested by the Democratic side.

Mr. MADDEN. They have used only $100 of the money then appropriated.

Mr. STAFFORD. That was for the authorization of an additional person, with a salary of $4,000. Mr. MADDEN. Yes; but they have used only $100 of it.

Mr. BLANTON. Then there is $3,900 still available? Mr. MADDEN. But that lapses.

Mr. STAFFORD. What were the provisions of that authori-

Mr. MADDEN. The work has to be gone on with under this act. The gentleman in charge of the work is ready to go on with it now. It is a continuing work, and I think there is no question about it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman is for economy, I know.

Mr. MADDEN. Yes. Mr. BLANTON. Suppose the Senate passes that bill tomorrow or the next day. I understand that it is passing bills over there now at the rate of about one a minute. In that case what would be the use of appropriating this $4,000?

Mr. MADDEN. The work still would have to be continued and carried down.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. MONDELL. There is no danger of the Senate passing that bill. The Senate has had the bill for a year and a half. So far as those of us who have made anxious inquiry have been able to discover, practically nothing has been done in the Senate in respect to that bill. Very recently, however, in answer to inquiries they have insisted that there were quite a number of errors in the measure as it passed the House. have not pointed them out specifically and definitely, but they insist that they exist. They use that statement as an excuse for not passing the bill. They have notified all those who have made inquiry that nothing more will be done with the measure in the Senate this session. It will be necessary in the next Congress to take up this bill anew, reexamine it with a view to determining whether the errors that have been referred to in the Senate actually exist, and to correct them if they do.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman will recall that the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Revision of the Laws, Mr. LITTLE of Kansas, stated that the bill now pending in the Senate brought the revision down only to March 4, 1919, and that with this appropriation he could entirely complete the work by December 1 and bring it down to date from March 4. Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes. Mr. MOORE of Virginia, Mr. Chairman, I happened to be a member of the Committee on Revision of Laws soon after coming here and cooperated with the then chairman of the committee, who is still the chairman of the committee, in making the compilation which embraces the laws in effect on the 4th of March, 1919. That compilation is included in a single bill, to which the gentleman has been referring and to which the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. Mondell] just now referred. That bill has been pending in the Senate for a long time. I take advantage of this opportunity to again say that I do not think there has been any sufficient explanation given of the failure of the other body to act. There have been some very general and vague assertions that there are defects in the bill, but those defects have never been specified. If there are defects, it was the business of the Senate committee in charge of the bill to indicate them and give opportunity for a hearing, and that has never been done up to this good hour.

I have become so hopeless of any action in the Senate at this session and so doubtful about future action that I have taken the liberty of suggesting to the president of the American Bar Association that he refer this matter to a committee of his organization for the purpose of examining the bill and seeing whether there is any ground whatever for the statement that the bill is in any material way defective, and I hope very much that before we meet here again we may have a report from the bar association on that subject, because it is really of great importance that there should be a codification, not only for the use of the administrative officials of the Government, but for the use of the courts and for the use of the public generally.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, by reason of the fact that our friend Colonel LITTLE is about a half Democrat, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. ALMON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend and revise my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LITTLE] has been congratulated, but the work was so well done that I think he and those who work with him should be congratulated again. If I caught the statement of the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] correctly, the bill will die in the Senate although we sent it over there about a year and a half ago. If that is the case, I would like to have the chairman of this committee, who is up on all these matters, state about how much it will cost to have this work republished, reprinted at the next session of Congress?

Mr. MADDEN. It is already published. Mr. SEARS. But the bill will have to be reintroduced, and rereferred to the committee and it will have to be reprinted.

Mr. BLANTON. It will cost $12,000.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not know how much it will cost.

Mr. SEARS. If the majority leader is correct in his statement that the Senate will not pass the bill at this session, think when we pass it at the next session the Senate should refer the bill to another committee and not put this expense upon the taxpayers. The bill has been over there a year and a half and it certainly could have been reported out and some action taken in that time. If the chairman of that committee has failed to act during all these months we may expect no action will be taken if the bill should again be referred to his committee.

Mr. MADDEN. I have not any idea how much it will cost. Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment for the purpose of making this one statement: There was assembled in Washington yesterday a group of the leading jurists, lawyers, and judges of the United States, all of whom are interested in the subject of a better codification of the laws of the United States.

It is proposed to organize an American law institute, with headquarters in the National Capital. It is to be hoped that this organization after its completion will have sufficient influence to help to secure the final passage of the work for which this House has provided up to the present moment. done, it will not be necessary to continue this expenditure any longer.

One of the main purposes of the American law institute will be to simplify and clarify the law and to seek to obtain uniformity of legislation and judicial interpretation throughout the country. A first necessary step in a movement of so great scope and importance is the proper assembling of all the statutes passed by Congress, which are now in force, into a publication which is reliable and accessible to all. Its authenticity will be guaranteed by its enactment by Congress as an entirety-not merely a compilation by authors, however able, whose work would not itself have the force of law.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

To continue the employment, under the direction of the Clerk of the House, of the person named in the resolution of February 13, 1923, from March 4, 1923, to June 30, 1924, inclusive, $3,305.56.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amend-

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. May I ask what employee that is?

Mr. MADDEN. Which one?

Mr. BLANTON. Lines 15 to 18.

Mr. MADDEN. That is Mrs. Donnelly, former secretary of the late James R. Mann.

Mr. BLANTON. That is all right. I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] have consent to revise and extend his remarks made a while ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan have consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows:

Mr. CRAMTON. Under the leave granted me by the House at the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] I insert the following:

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan] is concerned about the cost of law enforcement. Whatever its cost, a democracy can not afford not to enforce its fundamental law.

But America can well afford to enforce the eighteenth amendment. Enforcement of prohibition will bring to our country greater prosperity, greater happiness, greater progress than ever known before. Even under uncertain conditions of these first years of dry rule prohibition is daily proving its case.

VERDICT OF THE WORLD UPON ALCOHOL.

Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart recently said that one of the good reasons for the Volstead Act "is the enormous harm that has been done by drink." Such was the world-wide verdict upon the liquor traffic after terribly costly experience throughout recorded history and ages before-drink has done the world enormous harm. How much was most eloquently, as most suc-cinctly, stated a dozen years ago by one T. M. Gilmore, then publisher of Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular, a champion of the distillery interests, and president of the National Model License League. In an exchange of letters on the question of prohibition with the late Dr. Lyman Abbott, published in the Outlook Magazine, March 19, 1910, Gilmore said:

The people in the country consume 114,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits every year for beverage purposes * * * and this does not include imported brandles, Scotch whiskies, etc. * * The people in this country consume per capita 1.30 gallons of distilled liquors and 22 gallons of fermented liquors a year,

Doctor Abbott answered:

If the distilled liquors are used to the extent that your figures indicate, and I must assume their accuracy, that use would go far to account for the disease, the poverty, and the crime, which are three of the great burdens which the Nation is carrying.

And Gilmore said:

I agree with physicians that the excessive use of alcohol is a prolific cause of disease; with sociologists that it is a prolific cause of poverty; with penologists that it is a prolific cause of crime.

Thus was summed up by a friend and champion of the liquor business the essence of the world's verdict after thousands of years of sad experience. With this before them the people of the United States three years ago entered upon a tremendous experiment, entered upon it in the most solemn and formal way possible and with full notice to all the world-an effort of this great democracy, created as it was to secure for all its people their fullest welfare and happiness, an effort to rid its hundred million people of that which has been proven such a prolific cause of crime, poverty, and disease. This effort is written in our fundamental law, the Constitution of the United States, and before all the world this people is committed to it. Throughout the drink-crazed, crime-fettered, poverty-stricken, disease-burdened world, populations are looking to the success or failure of this great experiment. Success for prohibition in America means the world-wide doom of the liquor traffic. Failure here would be rewelding the fetters of crime, poverty, and disease on all humankind.

WORLD-WIDE DRIVE AGAINST ALCOHOL.

The President of France and the King of Italy are teetotalers. Sections of industrial Germany are declaring against liquor. England and Scotland are watching America. The two Ameri-England and Scotland are watching America. cas are alive to the importance of the experiment.

The program for the Fifth International Conference of American States soon to convene in Chile carries for the first time this topic:

XVIII

Consideration of measures adapted to secure the progressive diminu-on in the consumption of alcoholic beverages.

In connection with this the statement carried in the handbook prepared by the Pan American Union shows that prohibition measures are pending in the Argentine National Congress and in the Colombian National Congress; that the State of Sonora, in Mexico, went dry in 1915, and certain zones of temperance in Paraguay in 1919, and in Uruguay the navy and the army are ordered on the water wagon; that the supreme health council of Salvador is urging relief from the evils of increasing consumption of alcohol; that prohibition has been decreed in certain industrial sections of Chile and Honduras; that prohibition agitation is rife in Bolivia and Chile; and that more stringent regulation of the traffic or restriction thereof is in effect in Chile, the Dominican Republic, the State of Oaxaca in Mexico, Peru, and Uruguay, and is proposed in Costa Rica.

GIVE PROHIBITION A FAIR TRIAL.

The success or failure of prohibition will take time for its full exemplification. For every thousand years of the world's recorded experience with the curse of liquor we should allow at least a year of experience with prohibition.

The Detroit News in its leading editorial a few days ago said: The period of trial has been too short and the verdict entirely too indecisive to warrant any supposition that the country has changed its mind completely in a little more than three years. Ten years would appear to be a fairer test. That would permit a more solid growth of sentiment on the subject. * * * This is probibition's probation period. * * * Prohibition will try its own case if given

It is too early to ask a full account from the eighteenth amendment. Prohibition is carrying heavy burdens cast upon it from liquor days-appetites enslaved, habits dominated, and souls mortgaged.

The eighteenth amendment is founded upon experience. is not visionary idealism. It is practical idealism founded upon our own experience. Here a town, there a county, here a State, and there another-so were the people experimenting until the sentiment of the Nation, fortified by experience, inaugurated the great experiment. A bare three the nation-wide experiment has now elapsed. Comprehensive statistics are not available even for that period, but a partial report can be made. In a general way the results sought are realized. The millennium has not arrived, enforcement has not approximated the desired degree, and crime, poverty, and disease still have Alcohol in their service. But we can report progress, and most encouraging and convincing progress.

Whether prohibition is proving a failure or a success, can reach the right conclusion only by facts rather than prejudice and propaganda. I have gathered such facts as are now available from official sources concerning the result of this new policy of government and I believe it will be of value to the Members of this House to know that national prohibition, which originated with the vote of more than two-thirds of the Members of this House for submission of the eighteenth amend-ment, later ratified by 46 out of the 48 States of the Union, is à success.

THE SALOON GONE FOREVER.

Nobody loves the saloon any more. It has not a friend in the world who will say a kind word in public for it. Not even the bartenders' union has come out to say, "He was a good fellow when he had it." From advocates of personal liberty, brewers' propagandists, wine interests, from the whole group of outlawed liquor interests, there comes one word and one only, Beer and light wines now; the saloon, never.

It all seems curious to the onlooker, for the old-time saloon was frequently a place well lighted, comfortably warmed in winter, nicely cooled in summer, equipped with comfortable chairs, convenient tables, doors that would swing to and fro at a touch, with even a rail placed at just the height best fitted to rest a weary foot. It had its attendants ready to gratify the whim of workingman or plutocrat alike. It was better furnished and more attractive by far than the homes of many of those who were its most prodigal customers.

But there was always this to be said about the old-time saloon; It was a place where they sold beverages which intoxicated, including wine and beer. Not the polished mahogany bar, not the glittering mirror nor the oil paintings which suggested how closely Bacchus and Venus are allied-none of these things made a room into a saloon. It took the beverages they sold there to do that. In Webster's words a saloon is "a place where intoxicating liquors are sold and drunk; a grog-shop,"

When the eighteenth amendment became effective 33 States were already dry; out of 3,032 counties in the United States 2,338 were dry; over 90 per cent of the area of the Nation forbade saloons, over 60 per cent of our total population lived in such arid area. And yet the eighteenth amendment outlawed 177,790 of these places. Time was, before prohibition got under way, the total number of saloons in the United States was over half a million. But the grand finale closed 177,790 of them.

We were warned it would injure business. If the undertakers, gravediggers, monument makers, and allied trades are not allowed to speak, no legitimate business has been injured. these, their business would have been increased by 500,000 more funerals if the death rate of 1917-using the last completely wet year's figure as a basis for our estimate-had continued through the three years of prohibition. If the policemen, court officers, jailors, and drivers of patrol wagons are not allowed to speak of work reduced many per cent in handling drunken men and women, brawlers, and the host of offenders who constituted over 50 per cent of the cases booked on blotters in police stations; if detectives, lawyers, court officers, hangmen, or penitentiary guards keep silent about the decrease in their work because the drop in the homicide rate for the country with the coming of prohibition has meant 634 fewer murders per year for the three years prohibition has been in effect; if pawnbrokers, loan sharks, lessors of property to brothels, or disreputable cheap hotels offer no word about the clients who now have no need of them; if social-welfare workers volunteer no explanation of the burdens they are no longer called upon to carry for the destitute wife or mother and children; if all these hold their peace, then none can speak of any legitimate business or tasks performed by man which have decreased with the closing of the old-time saloon.

The saloon was not only a place to supply the demand for intoxicating liquors, but was also a place to create and increase the demand for such liquors. It is universally admitted now to have been an ulcer on society, or, as Governor Osborne of Michigan once called it, a "social saprophyte," destructive of that which was best physically and morally. It was also the worst enemy of good government, being everywhere the resort of criminals and the center of political corruption. Never a political machine anywhere that was not in alliance with and controlled by the saloons.

Tammany and Tammany's governor do not like prohibition. There is a reason. Without the saloon there never would have been any Tammany. With enforcement of prohibition New York will learn to govern itself without any Tammany. The metamorphosis is under way inside Tammany itself.

The New York Times of February 25 carries this story:

The New York Times of February 25 carries this story:

That stirring Tammany leadership fights have passed never to return was indicated a few days ago when Charles H. Hussey was elected Democratic leader of the north end of the third assembly district, on the lower west side.

No disorder marked Hussey's campaign or that of his opponent. Hussey's victory revealed that henceforth leadership contests will be conducted without the expenditure of anywhere from $30,000 to $75,000. This was not unusual over a period of more than 30 years.

Men familiar with the inner workings of Tammany explained that the elimination of the saloon under the Volstead Act was the reason for the changed conditions. In the old days, they explained, contests for Tammany leaderships were financed almost exclusively by saloon keepers, with sums varying from $250 to $2,500 each, according to the interest of the individual saloon keeper in a particular contest.

While the followers of the rival candidates attached the old importance to the leadership, they openly expressed the view that "the day for the rough stuff had passed, and it was a case of let the best man win."

DISEASE.

The public health has so increased that the Census Bureau issued August 7, 1922, a report on the increased expectancy of human life, from 50.23 years in 1910 to 53.98 in 1920 for males and from 53.62 to 56.33 for females. Kansas, long dry, still holds the record: 59.73 for white males and 60.89 for white females.

We may expect to live longer than our fathers because the plague spot of the saloon no longer breeds contagion to the world. The last year for which mortality data has been compiled in 1921, when the death rate for the entire country, which began its drop with the coming of prohibition, reached what the Census Bureau termed "the lowest rate recorded in any year since the beginning of the annual compilations"; 1921's rate was 11.6 per 1,000 of the population. This was a marked reduction from the previous year whose rate was 13.1. But 1920 was below the rate of 14 per 1,000 in 1916 or 14.4 in 1917, both wet years. The influenza epidemic makes 14.4 in 1917, both wet years. 1918 unfair for comparison.

This decline in the death rate which has paralleled the development of prohibition has not been entirely due to the prohibition law, but the decline was so sudden and so striking, especially in such great cities as Chicago and Philadelphia, as to indicate a direct and startling effect of the dry policy.

The death rate in the United States for various years before and after prohibition, which went into effect July 1, 1919, is as follows:

Death rate, all causes, per 1,000 population in registration area.

1910	15.0	1916	14.0
1911	14. 2	1917	14.3
1912	13. 9	1918	18. 1
1913	14.1	1919	12. 9
1914	13.6	1920	13. 1
1915	13.6	1921	11.6

These figures are from the Department of Vital Statistics. Bureau of the Census. The figures are, of course, only for the registration area.

The death rate in six leading cities of the United States for the years 1917 to 1921, inclusive, indicates the general city situation very accurately and is of particular interest.

Death rate per 1,000 in leading cities which were wet in 1917.

	1917	1918	1919	1920	1921
Chicago, III. Baltimore, Md. New York, N. Y. Philadelphia, Pa. Pittsburgh, Pa. Boston, Mass.	14.8	16. 9	12.5	12.8	11. 1
	18.5	25. 7	15.7	15.4	13. 8
	14.6	17. 9	13.3	13.0	11. 2
	16.9	24. 1	14.3	14.4	12. 7
	18.6	26. 8	16.1	16.4	14. 1
	17.4	23. 6	15.7	15.4	13. 5

I commend to the attention of the gentlemen from Massachusetts [Mr. Gallivan and Mr. Tinkham] the figures for their own city of Boston. The lowered death rate for 1921 as against 1917 means 1,000 fewer deaths in 1921 in each of the two districts represented by them. The per capita cost of Federal enforcement of prohibition, even if there were no return to the Treasury from fines and forfeitures, would be less than 15 cents per capita each year, or about $37,500 for Mr. Gallivan's district. I trust the lives of 1,000 of his constituents are worth $37.50 each, had the cost been so great and had no other good been accomplished.

We have similar cause for appreciation of prohibition in Michigan.

Dr. W. F. Deacon, head of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of Michigan, says:

Prohibition is to be credited with reducing the death rate from tuberculosis from 93.1 per 100,000 in 1917 to 71.6 in 1921.

The doctor also said:

With the agitation over death from alcoholic poisoning to-day it should be remembered that a few years ago legitimate beverages caused more deaths and that more children died from malnutrition and tuberculosis than at present.

Insanity commitments in three principal institutions in New Jersey show average decrease 50 per cent in three dry years as compared with last three wet years and commitments in all State institutions decrease 18 per cent.

Prohibition went into effect in Montana December 30, 1918. Four years have thus elapsed since its adoption. Montana: Deaths from diseases commonly associated with excessive use of alcoholic liquors are as follows:

	1916	1917	1918	1919	1920	1921
Bright's disease	73. 8 113. 4 - 86. 0 94. 4	71. 7 102. 8 124. 0 94. 6	61. 7 90. 9 60. 0 93. 3	49. 1 90. 3 10. 0 83. 0	48. 9 56. 6 10. 0 76. 7	49. 5 61. 8 22. 0

Upon an estimated population of 600,000 there died in Montana during the last three wet years from alcoholism 1,520 persons; during the first three dry years 252 died of alcoholism. Prohibition thus saved the lives of 1,268 persons in three years. From 1915 to 1918, 98 more murders were committed than from 1919 to 1921.

Of interest are the figures showing the rate of deaths from alcoholism. I give these figures for the years 1910 to 1921. inclusive. It will be noticed that the rate is practically uniform until 1918, in which year the war restrictions on alcoholic liquors and the absence of many men affected it. With the coming of prohibition it declined remarkably and is at present a very low figure.

(Rate p	per 100,000 population.)
1910	5.4 1916 5. 8	2
911	4. 9 1917 5. 5
1912	5. 3 1918 2. 7	7
913	5. 9 1919 1. 6	201
1914	4. 9 1920 1. (2
1915	4.4 1921 1.5	ALC:

The death registration area in 1921, on which above figures are based (exclusive of the Territory of Hawaii), comprised 34 States, the District of Columbia, and 16 cities in nonregistration States, with a total estimated population on July 1, 1921, of 88,667,602, or 82.2 per cent of the estimated population of the United States.

In California deaths from alcoholism in the two years immediately following the beginning of prohibition averaged 53 a year, while in the five years preceding the average was 205. In Michigan such deaths were, in 1917, 247 and in 1921 only 94.

The following table shows the total deaths from alcoholism in 14 great American cities under the two license years, 1916-17, and the two dry years, 1920-21:

Alcoholism, chronic and acute.

	1916	1917 1920	1920	1921	Average.
City.	1910	1914	1920	1921	1916-17	1920-21
New York	687	560	98	119	623. 5	108.5
Chicago	345	187	46	99	216.0	72.5
ChicagoPhiladelphia	187	217	11	18	202.0	14.5
Boston	161	166	31	70	163. 5	50.0
Detroit	120	137	27	28	128, 5	27.5
Pittsburgh	85	103	17	26	94.0	21.5
Cleveland	80	77	11	42	78. 5	26. 5
St. Louis	36	73	8	11	54.5	9.5
San Francisco	55	39	4	5	47.0	4.5
Cincinnati	45	37	4	7	40.0	5. 5
Baltimore	28	37	4	15	32.5	9.5
Washington, D. C	28 25	21	3	3	-24.5	3.0
Milwaukee	25 19	10	3 5 7	5 7	17. 5 17. 5	5. 0 7. 6
Total			19.7	32, 4	124, 2	26.0

DECREASE, 78.9 PER CENT.

The average number of deaths from alcoholism in 14 great American cities in 1916-17 was 124.2, over six times the figure

The years 1916 and 1917 were compared with 1920 and 1921 because the influenza epidemic made mortality statistics of 1918 abnormal; 1919 was neither license nor prohibition for the entire year.

In New York the admissions to the alcoholic wards of Bellevue Hospital in 1917 numbered 6,443 men and 1,767 women, a total of 8,210. In 1921 they numbered 1,931 men and 450 women, a total of 2,381. Deaths from alcoholism in Bellevue averaged 237 per year in the last 9 wet years. In 1920 there were only 10 and in 1921 just 8. New York City did not ever have less than 560 deaths yearly from alcoholism in the last 9 wet years. In 1921 there were 141.

Counting in wood alcohol and alcohol poisoning deaths, the yearly average in New York City was 634 for the last 7 wet years and 134 for the first 2 dry years. In the nation at large, according to the figures in the Census Bureau, the number of deaths from wood alcohol poisoning in 1920 were 0.4 per 100,000 and 0.2 in 1921. Even adding these to the total deaths from alcoholism in the country at large would not bring 1921's figures anywhere near one-half the ratio for the wet year 1917.

Better home conditions, sober parents, elimination of beer from the diet of nursing mothers, these with a multitude of other beneficial factors cut the death rate for infants to the low-record mark of 76 per 1,000 living births. Until this rate was recently announced by the Census Bureau, we felt that 1920's rate of 86 per 1,000 was good. Alcohol was the arch-Herod, slayer of the innocents.

DRUNKENNESS.

Arrests of women for drunkenness has been reduced one-half. The brothel is rapidly disappearing. Arrests for offenses against chastity show by their decline the close relationship between the social evil and the saloon. The drop in the number of cases of venereal diseases reported to the board of health in State after State reveals the beginning of the end of a dread plague. The death rate from syphilis in the registration area, according to the Department of Vital Statistics, Bureau of the Census, fell from 10.4 per 100,000 of population in 1917 to 9.1 in 1920, and if the States whose reports have been compiled for 1921 are a fair average, it fell lower yet in 1921. The saloon and the brothel have dovetailed in the past. Wherever statisticians have charted a city's police statistics, the drunkenness curve, the curve of arrests for offenses against chastity and, in the later years since reports of venereal diseases have been made compulsory, the curve representing such diseases have all three been parallel. With the outlawing of the saloon the brothel is disappearing and venereal disease is les-

Why should Massachusetts complain of a little money spent in behalf of prohibition in view of the blessings she in return That State has been surveyed, and her official reports for the first three dry years compared with the seven last wet years. Comparison of annual averages for these periods show the following reductions:

For the city of Boston:
Arrests for drunkenness	49
For the entire State:
Arrests for drunkenness	46
To woman's reformatory— Total committed
For drunkenness Reformatory for men—	84
Total committed	31
For drunkenness State farm—	69
Total committed For drunkenness	78 80

Warren F. Spaulding, assistant secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association, in a study of women offenders and drunk, just published in the Scientific Temperance Journal, says:

"In the 32 years from 1885 to 1917, the population (female) had increased nearly 90 per cent; the arrests of women for all offenses had increased not quite 79 per cent, and the arrests for drunkenness only about 73 per cent. In other words, all the forces that were working for the reduction of crime, and especially to abolish public drunkenness among women, had only succeeded in slightly improving conditions, so that crime and drunkenness were a little less prevalent in proportion to the population than they were in 1885. Actually, there were 8,207 women arrested for drunkenness in 1917, the largest number ever known in the State, a startling fact for Massachusetts to consider. "The downward pull of the forces of evil had almost overcome the forces or righteousness.

"In the next 18 months there was some decrease in crime and drunkenness, but no important improvement was made until Federal prohibition began to produce its results.

"Then came, practically in a moment, a great change in conditions—almost a revolution. There are no monthly statistics of arrests of women in towns, but for cittes they are complete. In June, 1919, 424 women were arrested in them for drunkenness, a little less than the average (472) for the previous year. In July the number dropped immediately to 112, and the next twelve months the average was but 129 per month. In the next February and March there were only 60 and 67 arrests of women for drunkenness in this great State, containing nearly 2,000,000 women. The salcons had closed and the bootleggers organized, there was a slight increase to about 200 per month. Yet in the year ending September 30, 1921, there were in cities and towns but 2,634 arrests of women for drunkenness, compared with 8,207 in 1917, with a smaller population.

"In 1917, when crime among women was at its maximum, there were 14,726 arrests of women in Massachusetts. There is every reason for believing that the proportion of children to arrested women is substantially the same as the proportion of all the children of the State to all the married women of the State.

"If that be true, nearly 17,000 Massachusetts children had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested during the year; 9,500 of them had mothers who were arrested for crime have decreased to 8,725 in 1921; the arrests of women for drunkenness have decreased from 8,207 in 1917 to 2,634 in 1921.

"That the influence

in 1921.

"That the influence of the homes has not been overestimated is seen in the fact that there has been a decrease in juvenile delinquency with the decrease of drunkenness among women. The number of delinquent children committed to the State Board in 1918, when the homes were worst, was 191. In 1920, with fewer arrests of mothers and few bad homes, the number of delinquent children put in the care of the State Board fell to 141, and in 1921 to only 98."

In Connecticut 14 cities show a decrease of 33 per cent in the number of arrests for drunkenness in 1922 compared with 1918, the last wet year.

In New Jersey, in 40 cities answering questionnaires, arrests for drunkenness show a decrease of 21 per cent the past three years, as compared with the three years before prohibition, and for vagrancy the decrease is 33 per cent.

In New York, comparing the annual average of the first two dry years with the last eight wet years, these decreases are

Per cent decre	ase.
Arrests for drunkenness	67
Women in court for drunkenness	81
Assaults, misdemeanors	55
Penal commitments	33

Philadelphia had 37 per cent fewer arrests for drunkenness in the average of the first two dry years than the last two wet years, 51 per cent fewer cases in disorderly conduct, 76 per cent fewer arrests for prostitution.

Rhode Island's six cities, containing 71 per cent of the population of the State, had 37 per cent fewer persons arrested for drunkenness or for offenses connected with drunkenness in the average of the first two dry years than the average of the last four wet years. One might cite State after State to the same effect.

The average number of arrests for drunkenness in California declined from an average of 27,308 in the three years prior to 14,485 in the three years subsequent to prohibition. (Report of State Prohibition Director S. F. Rutter.)

In Baltimore (from official reports of police commissioner to governor), eight wet years, 1912-1919, arrests of drunks averaged 12½ per cent of total arrests; three dry years, 1920-1922, 61 per cent.

Michigan, located upon the Canadian border, has its own problems, but its officials have very generally sought to meet their responsibilities. Detroit, fourth in population among all American cities with 993,739, and one of the world's great industrial centers, presents the following.

Arrests for drunkenness 1917, the last year Detroit had sations, and 1922.

Number of	arrests.
1917	18, 488
1922	9, 168

The table of arrests for drunkenness in Grand Rapids, Michigan's second city, for the same years follow:

Number of a	rrests.
1917	1,900
1922	1, 388
	-

Grand Rapids had a population of 137,634 in 1920.

In 90 cities of Ohio for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, the total arrests for drunkenness were 33,800; for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, the total arrests for drunkenness were 17,655.

In considering these figures it should not be overlooked that in the days of the saloon a man had to be totally helpless or making a nuisance of himself before he was taken on a drunk charge, whereas an arrest for drunkenness is now made if a man shows signs of intoxication.

CRIME

Since the war there has been a world-wide tendency toward the more serious crimes, such as always follow as a part of the aftermath of war. That America has not suffered from this as other countries is due in large part to prohibition.

In a recent issue of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, Judge William M. Gemmill, for 16 years judge of the Municipal Court of Chicago, speaks with the authority of his position in regard to the effect of prohibition on juvenile and adult crime:

"Twenty per cent of the jalls of the United States have been without prisoners since prohibition went into effect," says Judge Gemmill, and he continues: "I have collected the prison statistics for the last seven years in several of the leading States, and everywhere the number of prisoners had been decreased since prohibition. In New York the total number of prisoners in 1915 was 6,939; 1916, 6,685; 1917, 5,356; 1918, 5,264; 1919, 4,903; 1920, 4,783; 1921, 5,129. In Indiana, total number convicted and imprisoned in county jails: 1914, 18,130; 1915, 14,644; 1918, 4,641; 1919, 3,555; 1920, 2,192; 1921, 3,596. In all prisons: 1914, 19,207; 1915, 17,380; 1918, 6,745; 1919, 5,609; 1920, 3,991; 1921, 6,597. In Massachusetts, prisoners in all prisons: 1915, 6,663; 1918, 3,701; 1919, 2,896; 1920, 2,352; 1921, 3,252. Total arrests for drunkenness in Massachusetts: 1917, 129,455; 1920, 37,160; 1921, 59,585. In Wisconsin, total prison population: 1917, 1,299; 1919, 998; 1921, 937. Population Chicago Bridewell, January 1, each year: 1917, 1,818; 1918, 1,888; 1919, 1,214; 1920, 717; 1921, 1,087. In Iowa, Fort Madison, total prisoners: 1917, 600; 1919, 465; 1920, 465. In California, total in State prisons: 1917, 331; 1920, 2,898.

"I have not found a single State or a single prison where there was not a marked decrease in the prison population in 1919 and 1920. In most of the States there was an increase in 1921 over the year 1920, but with that increase the prison population is still from 20 per cent to 25 per cent less than it was before the war. From the last year before the prohibitory act went into effect to the first year following its enactment, the population of the Chicago Bridewell decreased over 50 per cent. During the year previous to the enactment of the prohibitory law 169 persons died in the hospital at the Bridewell from alcoholism. Last year one person died in the same hospital of the same cause."

In conclusion Judge Gemmill says:

In conclusion Judge Gemmill says:

Never before were American citizens as clean and law-abiding as they are to-day.

Juvenile offenses have decreased; the population of reformatories, State farms, almshouses, jails, and prisons have decreased materially. In California the average for the first two dry years compared with the average for the last four wet years showed a decrease of 45 per cent in all arrests in San The penal population of the State was 201 per cent less in 1922 than in 1917. The average number of commitments to prison in Connecticut was 18 per cent less for the three dry years than for the last three wet years. Cook County, Illinois, including Chicago, sent 19 per cent fewer persons to jail and 31 per cent fewer to the house of correction in dry 1922 than in Indiana has been dry for five years. Comparing the average of these years with the averages of the five preceding wet years, she notes these decreases in commitments to her various institutions: Jails, 44 per cent; prisons, 30 per cent; woman's prison, 57 per cent; boys' school, 4 per cent; girls' school, 39 per cent; or, to all institutions, 42 per cent.

The 1922 report of the District of Columbia workhouse at Occoquan is interesting. It shows the daily average number of prisoners (petty criminals sentenced for terms of one year or less) to have been as follows: 1910, 435; 1911, 448; 1912, 534; 1913, 620; 1914, 644; 1915, 622; 1916, 634; 1917, 631; 1918, 373;

1919, 433; 1920, 334; 1921, 208; 1922, 269.

The population of the District in 1910 was 331,069, and in 1920, 437,571, making the decrease in petty crime the more striking. The Board of Charities and Corrections say of this in their annual report for 1922:

in their annual report for 1922;

No special significance should be attached to such an increase or decrease for a single year, but it is a significant fact that for five years now successively the average population of the workhouse has been just about one-half what it was prior to 1918. The drop in population followed immediately the enactment of the prohibition law, which became effective November 1, 1917. The board has expressed its opinion that the enactment of the prohibition law and the increased demand for labor of all kinds attendant upon the war were the factors most largely responsible for the decrease in the number of prisoners sent to the workhouse. Now that four years have elapsed since the armistice was signed and we have passed through a period of a general increase of unemployment without any noticeable increase in the number of prisoners, it would seem almost certain that the enactment of prohibition was the potent factor in lessening the number of petty criminals who were sent to the workhouse. The experience of the District of Columbia in this regard has been paralleled by that of other communities generally throughout the country so far as we are advised.

In Ohio the number of men sent to the workhouse was 10,000 less than that of the last year during the open saloon.

Prohibition Director Rutter, of California, said recently the effect of prohibition enforcement in California, based on his survey of juvenile court statistics and testimony of prohibition officers, divorce courts, judges, and welfare commissioners ' most apparent in that broad region between private domestic happiness and public prisons rather than in the records of more serious crime.

The Bureau of the Census has completed an enumeration of prisoners in the penal institutions of the United States as of July 1, 1922, and 1917. This enumeration covers a period before and after the United States went into the war and the period before and after the establishment of national prohibi-

Mr. Hastings S. Hart, president of the American Prison Congress for 1922, and director of the department of child helping of the Russell Sage Foundation, has commented upon the advance sheets of the summary of this enumeration in a statement which is illuminating as to the real situation:

The summary shows (omitting a small number of prisoners for whom the returns are uncertain) for 1922, 150,131 prisoners and for 1917, 140,186 prisoners, an increase of 7.1 per cent. The foregoing includes United States prisoners; omitting these, we have a total of 144,591 for 1922 and 137,163 for 1917, an increase of 5.4 per total of 144,591 for 1922 and 137,163 for 1917, an increase of 5.3 percent.

Two opposite forces have operated to increase and decrease the prison population. War always breeds crime by loosening moral restraints, by disturbing social relations, and by cheapening human life, It is difficult to measure this influence in the present case because it is obscured by the opposing influence, but as we shall see, its influence is plainly apparent in the case of certain States of the Union, Prohibition has manifestly operated to diminish petty crimes and misdemeanors, but there is no evidence in the returns that it has diminished the number of felons sentenced for high crime to State prisons.

misdemeanors, but there is no evidence in the returns that it and diminished the number of felons sentenced for high crime to State prisons.

Fifteen out of 46 States show a decrease in the population of the State prisons, but only six, as distinguished from jails and workhouses of these, show a decrease of more than 17.5 per cent and on the whole there is an increase of 10.1 per cent. Some people have imagined that in some mysterious way prohibition would change the character of criminals so that he who stole would steal no more. On the contrary, sobriety increases the efficiency of a burglar, a forger, or an automobile thief. But prohibition does diminish mightily such petty crimes as vagrancy, assault and battery, drunkenness and disorderly conduct, with a corresponding diminution of the population of workhouses, county jails, and police stations.

The effect of the war in increasing crime is seen in 20 States which adopted State prohibition before July 1, 1917. These States are Alabama, Arizona. Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Mississippi, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia. They had already reaped the advantage of prohibition in diminishing the number of petty criminals before national probibition was adopted. Every one of these 20 States except Arizona shows a large increase of the prison population. The total number of prisoners in the 20 States was 33,230 in 1917 and 44,025 in 1922, an increase of 10,795, or 32.2 per cent. This increase shows the effect of the war in these States.

On the other hand, the majority of the 28 States which did not have prohibition before 1917 show a marked decrease in 1922, the net decrease for the 28 States being 3.2 per cent. I note the following examples:

State.	1922	1917	Decrease.	Per cent.
Connecticut Illinois Massachusetts Missouri New York	1, 657 8, 286 4, 447 3, 958 14, 903	2, 494 8, 775 6, 438 4, 505 17, 494	837 489 1,991 547 2,591	33. 6 5. 6 30. 9 12. 1 14. 8
Total, 5 States	33, 251	39, 706	6, 455	16.3

The State prison population of these 5 States was 17.723 in 1922 and 17,801 in 1917, showing a difference of only 78 prisoners. The decrease of 6,455, therefore, occurred entirely in the county and city prisons, and was due chiefly to the effect of prohibition.

If it had not been for prohibition, these 28 States, like the 20 prohibition States, would doubtless have shown a very large increase in consequence of the war.

The extremists who believed that prohibition would do away with nine-tenths of the crime will have to revise their expectations in the light of actual facts; and the extremists who have maintained that prohibition had no effect whatever in reducing crime will have to revise their opinion in view of the manifest reduction in the number of petty criminals in many wet States.

Incidentally, these figures do not sustain the popular impression of an extensive crime wave. The report of the Census Bureau shows that there were 72.4 convicts in State prisons out of every 100,000 population in 1917, and 74.5 in 1922, an increase in the ratio of less than 3 per cent.

CRIME COST TO SOCIETY.

